In this little volume we have a necessarily brief but compendious sketch of the Arctic voyages of discovery undertaken by American and English explorers from 1818 up to Hall's last voyage in 1864. Beginning with the efforts of the British government, which sent Captains Ross and Buchan in 1818 to discover a passage to the Pacific by northwest or northeast through the Arctic ocean, we read of the voyages of Parry, Sir John Franklin, the search for his last ill-fated expedition, the Grinnell expeditions, Dr. Hayes' voyage and the journeys of George Francis Hall. The stories of all these intrepid enterprises is happily told. Perhaps some succeeding volume will give us the later voyages of the Herald and Greeley expeditions, which are among the most thrilling of all in their incidents.

The address of Pres. C. A. Blanchard before the Massasoit Club of Northwestern University, is being delivered to those who have ordered copies. It is a handsome pamphlet, and ably discusses some of the fundamental questions of the reform. "A masterly argument of great power, because of its fairness," it should be read and pondered by all our young men and women. Price, 5 cts per copy; thirty for $1.00.

In the California series of the April Century, Mr. Julius H. Pratt gives a graphic description of the emigration to California by way of Panama in '49. The pictures are very striking, having been drawn by Gilbert Gaul, after originals made from life by an artist in 1850. In this connection is a paper of great historical value by the late General J. C. Fremont on his own part in the "Conquest of California." Life in another war prison, at the North, is described by a Confederate soldier, Dr. John A. Wyeth, now of New York City. He shows that "Cold Cheer at Camp Morton," Indianapolis, included hardships bordering on the worst phases of cold and hunger. Mrs. Amelia Gere Mason's papers on the "Women of the French Salons" are supplemented in this number by an account of the "Salons of the Revolution and Empire," in which she discusses such famous characters as Madame Roland and Madame de Stael. There are papers on two separate expeditions to Mount St. Elias, one expedition being that of Lieutenant Schwatka, and the other that of the National Geographical Society and the U. S. Geological Survey. "Fetishism in Congo Land" is an interesting contribution to a great subject by Mr. E. J. Glave, one of Stanley's pioneer officers. "The Wordsworths and De Quincey" is the title of a very interesting paper of literary biography containing unpublished letters of the poet and of the opium-eater.

One of the most striking features of the April issue of the Arena is Prof. Jas. T. Bixby's contribution on "Buddhism in the New Testament." It is a reply to Dr. Felix Oswald's paper on the same subject, and is probably the ablest presentation of the Christian side of this problem which has yet appeared. E. P. Powell writes on Alexander Hamilton as a popular leader. This paper traces the analogy between the position of Mr. Hamilton and that of the extreme wing of the Republican party of to-day. Thomas G. Shearman, the legal prop of the "single tax" movement, in a paper of great strength, sets forth his views on the evils and injustice of indirect taxation. This contribution will command general attention. Its valuable tables of statistics should be preserved by those interested in the problem of taxation.

The April St. Nicholas opens with a delightful illustrated sketch by Mrs. Foote, "The Gates on Grandfather's Farm"—reminiscences of a New England farm suggested by the associations with its old gateways. It is full of feeling, and while not beyond the young readers will be fully appreciated only by their elders. Mr. Welles gives us further autographs from his remarkable collection, especially a complete set of the President's signatures, and a charming letter from Thackeray, hitherto unpublished. Mr. Frank S. Woodruff describes some "Busy Corners of the Orient," and shows us the primitive forms of industry in Syria.

The Converted Catholic for April begins a serial entitled "Our Scarlet Prince," by a writer well known in literature as the author of "An American in Rome" and of "Our American Cardinal." Rev. John Lee closes his able reply to Cardinal Gibbon's book, "Our Christian Heritage." This document should be issued in popular and permanent form. Rev. R. T. Wylie of Newark, N. J., contributes an able and original examination of the "Rise of the Papacy."

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Terms:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. ☞A liberal discount to dealers

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian, seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

Masonic Salvation, as taught by its standard authors. This pamphlet is a compilation from standard Masonic works, in proof of the following proposition: Freemasonry claims to be a religion that saves men from all sin, and purifies them for heaven. 111 pages, price, postpaid, 20 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

1. Historical Sketch—National Christian Association.
3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
5. President C. G. Finney on the duty of Christians towards the Lodge.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
18. Despotic Character of Freemasonry.
19. Freemasonry, a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Nathaniel Colver, D.D., on Masonry.
33. Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
44. D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.

Chapters in American Politics.
Masonry vs. Prohibition.
Decline of the G. A. R.
Christianity and Odd-fellowship. Part 1, 4 pages; part 2, 4 pages.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

New England Department.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

Washington Department.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washngton, D. C.

Western Department.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

Pacific Department.—Rev. M. H. Nichols, 520 Kearney St., San Francisco, Cal.

College Agent, Rev. S. F. Porter, Cynosure office.

State Agents.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.
Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.
Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

Other Lecturers.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Berea, Ky.
Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Annawan, Ill.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)
—AND OFFICE OF—
The Christian Cynosure,
221 West Madison Street, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

President—Bishop Milton Wright Dayton, O.

Vice President—Rev. Geo. R. Milton, Elgin, Ill.

Cor. Sec'y and Treasurer—W. J. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Rec. Secretary—Rev. E. R. Worrell, Washington Heights, Ill.

Directors—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, J. M. Hitchcock, Jerome Howe, G. R. Milton, Wm. Pinkney, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, W. W. Wait, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell.

The object of this Association is:
"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

New England.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves Harris, Mass.

Connecticut.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willmantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

Illinois.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

Iowa.—Pres., S. A. Gilley, Marengo; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

Kansas.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Lecompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

Maine.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

Massachusetts.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

Michigan.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas. Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

Minnesota.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

Missouri.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

New Hampshire.—Pres., Simon Rowe, Guilford; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Isaac Hyatt Gilford Village.

New York.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

Ohio.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor. Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville.

Pennsylvania.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant, York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

Wisconsin.—Pres., J. W. Wood, Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper cover, 50 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison Street, Chicago, Ill.

The Christian Cynosure.

J. BLANCHARD, Editor.
HENRY L. KELLOGG, Associate Editor and Publisher.

CHICAGO. THURSDAY, APRIL 9, 1891.

Our readers will find in the article by Prof. Curtis in this number, a theme for joyful, thankful meditation. A most important topic is also introduced by our Armenian brother, who, when he was a student at Wheaton and in this city, Anglicized his name to Gregorian. And if, accepting his conclusions, we look upon sectarian teachings as evil in Asia, are they not equally so in America? The chairman of our N. C. A. Board writes with such truthful as well as fervid poetry that we think it would both comfort Mr. Blaine and instruct King Humbert. And not the least, we must introduce to our readers a new friend who will occasionally write for them. Dr. E. P. Thwing is well-known for his scientific and medical writings as well as religious, and those who recall his charming books of travels, will deem themselves fortunate in reading from the same pen in our columns.

DR. J. N. NORRIS.

We give below extracts from a brief biographical sketch of Dr. Norris from the Birmingham (Iowa) Free Press, published at the home where he has lived from youth to age; let us hope and pray that God will give him the health and vigor and long life granted to Moses, Caleb and Joshua, who wholly followed the Lord. He has promised to such men, Psa. 91, "I will be with him in trouble; I will deliver him and honor him. With long life will I satisfy him, and show him my salvation."

It is now some years since we had the pleasure of being Dr. Norris's guest, and listened, rapt, to his early experiences of prairie life; and we wish we could give our readers the thrilling interest which his narrative gave us. His long night rides, with wolf-howls for his music; his finding and fastening a huge wild beast, a panther or mountain lion, in his log stable, etc., etc.,—but several years crowded with memories disenable us to do anything like justice to the theme. We remember, with greater distinctness, his encounters with the human beasts envenomed by the liar and murderer whom they worship in their lodge-dens.

Dr. Norris, like most great minds, is gentle, brave, and loving, and, like old sea captains accustomed to wrecks, and benevolent physicians of long practice, his native goodness and compassion for suffering, of which he had seen so much, hardened into habit, has become his second nature. Yet, when he began to oppose the lodge as he had opposed slavery, wretches for whom in their sickness and that of their families he had braved prairie blizzards without sleep to give them repose, and risked his own life to save theirs,—envenomed by lodge virus, like rabid dogs who bite the loving hands that fed them, turned on him with rancor more than brutal. Rival doctors, too, who had joined the lodge to get practice, and who envied his success, turned on him the venom of their tongues. He was reported insane. He was shot at in his night-rides from the brush; and when invited to lecture in a large town which would have been civilized but for its secret lodges, though his address was manly, his style ornate, and his argument candor and strength, he was hissed and hooted and howled, and drummed, and trumpeted, while city lodge officials looked on; and editors who dared not suppress the facts, for fear of losing popular confidence as reporters, stoutly declared, "The lodge had nothing to do with the suppression of free discussion!" The prevalence of anti-secret sentiments, as did the prevalence of Abolitionism, has cowed and silenced such demonstrations; but neither Satan nor his worshipers have changed their nature. Their only change is that of the bandit and vendetta, when they become priests, and exchange the stiletto for the cup.

The mass of American church-members are by no means as bad as their neutrality in such cases would imply. Their indifference is due to "the ignorance that is in them." Even the mob that crucified Christ "knew not what they did." Thousands of that rabble, like Saul of Tarsus, who stood sponsor for the mob-murder of Stephen, afterward embraced his faith. This has been the strength of Dr. Norris. He has not lost faith in Christ, nor in the Christians and citizens of Iowa. He has not erred as poor Mr. Garrison did. He believes in the Sabbath, votes, and prays, and waits for the coming of Christ. The vast majority of men, even those in the posts of leader, have the minds of followers; and when leaders quail before popular opinion the masses follow them. Nor is this all.

> "Nam vitiis nemo sine nascitur, optimus ille est, > Qui minimis urgetur."

"None are born without faults. He is the best who has the least of them." Wesley said, "Bad men say all manner of evil of me, and good men believe them." If we may believe Cowper, it was said even of Whitefield:

> "His crimes were such as Sodom never knew,
> And perjury stood up to swear all true."

And it is equally true of Dr. Norris.

> "Hence a demeanor blameless and unspect,
> And the world's hatred as its sure effect."

But the mass of men are so conscious of their own sins that they are ready to believe ill of others, and the god of the lodge is a "liar" and "accuser," from the beginning. Christ, too, saw Satan move with the celerity of lightning. Hence a lie travels around the globe before the truth gets boots on. Yet the lie is sure to be overtaken and destroyed. The world's indebtedness to such men as Dr. Norris can never be computed; but their recompense, though late, is yet sure.

SKETCH FROM THE FREE PRESS.

The subject of this sketch was born near Bath, in Steuben county, N. Y., June 7, 1816. His parents moved to Millersburg, Ohio, in 1818; and in 1837, in company with his brother-in-law, Dr. William Miller, he came to Iowa. In Februrary, 1838; they located adjoining present site of the town of Birmingham, where he has resided ever since. At the age of 21 he began the study of medicine under Dr. Miller and has now been a practicing physician for over fifty years. Dr. Norris is a man of noble appearance and pleasant address, having a kind heart and a sociable manner to all. As a citizen, Birmingham has had few if any who took so deep and intelligent an interest in the general welfare. As a physician he has been eminently successful.

The greatest effort, sacrifice and success of Dr. Norris' life has been in behalf of moral reforms. Christ has been his leader and example. He looks upon Christianity as one grand system of reformation. If Christ was manifested that he might destroy the works of the devil, then those works should be opposed by the Christian and they must eventually be destroyed. Thus he reasoned and on this principle he has always acted. Though liquor was so plenty and its use so common in his early days, yet he always shunned and abhorred the intoxicating cup. He has always held that the State should protect its citizens against the destroying curse of intemperance, and his vote has coincided with his words and prayers every time.

When the slavery question began to agitate the minds of the American people he was one of the first to declare himself an Abolitionist. Even when the cause was unpopular and when his neighbors would turn from him with scorn and disgust because he was a friend of the "niggers," still he stood by his principles because he knew they were RIGHT. Some of the very men who then held their noses and turned their faces away from the Dr. as they met him on the street, because he was opposed to slavery, are now drawing big pensions for small disabilities and shouting: "Give us the offices."

Probably to no other reform, however, has he given so much aid and support as to oppostion to secret societies. When he was ten years old the Masons murdered Morgan not far from his birthplace in New York. At the age of twelve he read Morgan's book and he has been an Anti-mason ever since. Very few have stood as faithfully by the cause as he. Lodgemen have tried to injure him and his practice in every way possible, but it has not moved him in the least. How often have weaker souls said: "Yes, I am an Anti-mason, but I am not an Anti like old Dr. Norris." They are "Antis" up to the point where it costs something in money or reputation, then they are on the fence. His influence for good in this cause has been great both at home and abroad.

IS "THE SHEKINAH" DEPARTING?

We wish to recur to and call the special attention of our readers to the article on the Shekinah, on the first page of the Cynosure of last week. The writer, Mr. J. W. Wood, has been a professor in the University of Michigan, and his last week's article is written with signal ability, and evinces much knowledge of the Scriptures.

From beginning to end of the Bible, whenever there has been a manifestation to us mortals of the next world or its inhabitants, the vision has been in light. The angels have been angels of light; not natural light, or of the sun, moon, or planets; but supernatural, as that which attended the descent of the Holy Ghost at Pentecost, and which overspread the Saviour when witnessed to from heaven. So supernatural light overwhelmed Saul and his party on their way to Damascus. So John, when permitted to look into eternity, saw "no night there," and they needed no sun, or moon, or light of a candle; "for the Lord God giveth them light," and "the Lamb is the light thereof."

A like supernatural light was seen "by all that were in the council," beaming from the face of the martyr Stephen. It appeared at the transfiguration of Christ; and as he appeared "in bright clothing" to Cornelius, and to John in the Revelation.

The argument of Mr. Wood's article is that that light which dwelt between the cherubim, above the mercy-seat, was gradually withdrawn from the Ancient Church, as false worships began to be practiced in that temple; and that war, pestilence and other judgments of God followed its withdrawal. And the inference is that similar calamities are now impending and sure to fall on the churches and people of the United States, brought on by the same cause, viz., the introduction of false altars among the people and false worships into the churches of God. We commend the judgments of God, the causes which produce and the means of averting them, to the devout consideration of the proposed Christian Conference to be held in Chicago.

SECRET POLITICS.

The man who, is in our judgment, most to be desired for mayor of Chicago, among the several candidates to be voted for on Tuesday of this week, is Mr. Washburn, whose manly letter we printed last week. He is neither a lodge man nor bound to lodge men, but a strong support comes from secret societies of the Know Nothing order. He was nominated and supported by two bodies, the Citizens' Non-partisan committee and the "Citizens' Committee of One Hundred." One has no connection with other organized bodies; the other is the political machine of the so-called "American" societies, which are the Know Nothing lodges. Their ticket is called the "C. C. C. ticket," and was distributed to all probable voters last Saturday. These secret lodges are: The American Protective Association, American Protestant Association, Junior Order of American Mechanics, Loyal Orange Lodge, Senior Order American Mechanics, British American Association, and the Sons of Liberty. These are the names given in the Inter-Ocean. The Patriotic Order Sons of America is omitted, and the National Videttes or United Order of Deputies is said to be defunct. These orders are represented in the committee of One Hundred, and they, by an executive committee at whose head is B. P. Reynolds, a drunken Freemason, of high degree, and late head of the Orangemen here.

Now, whatever hopes may be indulged for the prosperity of the city if Elmer Washburn is elected, he must surely be handicapped by such a load of oath-bound secretists, to whom he will be under obligation if he is successful by their aid.

N. C. A. BOARD MEETING.

A called meeting of the National Board was held at the Cynosure office Saturday forenoon. There were present Messrs. Worrell, Thomson, Hitchcock, Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, Whipple and Richards; also Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Dr. C. E. Evald, pastor of Emanuel Swedish Lutheran church, who were requested to sit as corresponding members. The record of last meeting showed that the proceeds of a farm in Kansas, donated by Miss Cynthia Derbyshire, and ordered to be sold, be relied upon to furnish $500 for the expenses of the proposed Conference. It was voted that the Corresponding Secretary visit the Kansas farm in order to facilitate the sale.

The report of the Secretary on the efforts for the Conference was made; and it was voted, after fully discussing the merits of the Auditorium and other halls, to engage Central Music Hall unless 2,500 tickets could be sold for the Auditorium. It was agreed to hold the Conference May 14 or about that time, and a number of names were suggested as speakers and some topics noted as important to be discussed.

It was voted that requests be sent to all the pastors of the city asking them to preach on the lodge on the Sabbath before the Conference, give a notice of the meeting, and aid in increasing the attendance. Adjourned after prayer by Dr. Evald.

—The Lutheran Volksblatt (German) of Lebringville, Canada, publishes a sketch of Capt. William Morgan with some account of his great work against Masonry and martyrdom by lodge enemies, with a portrait.

—The Chicago Industrial Home for Children, founded by Rev. T. B. Arnold, was removed from the northwest part of this city to Woodstock, Ill., on the 19th of March. The removal to a wider range of country lawn and pure air will be of great benefit to the children. A company of devoted Christians assist Bro. Arnold in this benevolent enterprise.

—Bro. J. P. Stoddard's letter this week is of thrilling interest. He literally sowed beside all waters in his late trip to Willimantic and Providence. He spoke three times in the first-named place on Sabbath the 29th ult., visited Putnam and held a parlor meeting in Boston on Monday. Tuesday evening he held a parlor meeting at Wellesley, the home of Miss Flagg.

—A note from President C. A. Blanchard informs us that the spring term at Wheaton opened with an excellent attendance, larger in fact than at any corresponding time of which there is any record. The courses of study are being revised in preparation for the annual catalogue, and a literary course is being planned for those who wish a thorough course in modern languages, but do not care for the ancient. The next Commencement anniversary occurs, as announced in the advertisement, on June 25th.

—Geo. C. Needham, the well-known English evangelist, for several years pastor of the Moody church in this city, has been preaching in Immanuel Baptist church, during the absence of the pastor, Dr. George F. Lorimer, on sick-leave in Europe. His doctrine has not always been conformed to the theories of the eminent Knight Templar Mason and "Grand Orator" pastor. For instance, on one occasion in an address to the young men of the church he urged them to beware of the theatre, the card-table, and the secret lodge, as means whereby young men were lured to their destruction.

—Bro. L. G. Jordan writes from Indianapolis, Ind., where he has been lecturing to enthusiastic audiences on temperance, that at a meeting of the colored pastors of the city on the 30th ult, the lodge question came up. Rev. L. M. Leonard offered this resolution: "Resolved, that secret societies are detrimental to the church of Christ." It was adopted and the mover is to read a paper discussing the topic April 13th. Bro. Jordan presided at the meeting, and addressed it on the same subject, and all, with one single exception, agreed with him. He regards this opening as very favorable, and encourages these colored brethren to continue their inquiry and lead their churches into the light.

—Mr. Ronayne raises a question respecting the time of the resurrection of our Lord in his letter on the Sabbath. Taking the words of Matthew and arguing that the same Greek words must always mean the same thing irrespective of their connection, he endeavors to prove the rising of Christ about sundown of the seventh day. But Mark, Luke and John are more explicit about the visit of the women to the tomb. All say it was on the first day of the week. Mark says: "when the sun was risen" (Old ver., "at the rising of the sun"). Luke: "very early in the morning." John: "early while it was yet dark." These terms are too explicit for contradiction; and the ablest of those who hold that the rising was in the afternoon, explain that the women went twice, first about sundown of the seventh day and then next morning. We cannot continue a controversy on this seventh-day question, but must simply say that, so far as the New Testament is concerned, the reading that seems most manifest, and uncomplicated with difficult questions is that generally accepted, placing the rising about daybreak of the first day which the Christian church by degrees accepted as their Sabbath a century or two before Constantine was born or his decrees thought of.

PERSONAL NOTES.

—H. W. Steele of Ames, Iowa, was among the callers at the Cynosure office last week.

—Rev. H. H. Hinman, after visiting a number of points in northern Illinois, in behalf of an Industrial department of Berea College, returned to Berea by way of Oberlin, Ohio, where he stopped for a brief visit with his family.

—Rev. C. C. Foote of Detroit celebrated his 80th birth-day at the house of his inseparable friend, George W. Clarke. These two old brother reformers, dear to each other, to God, and to all good men, live about a block apart in the central part of Detroit.

—Rev. Joel Martin, president of the Michigan Wesleyan Conference, has resigned that position. He writes to the Wesleyan Advocate that he intends to continue the evangelistic work. Rev. J. H. Canfield will probably assume the duties laid down until the meeting of the Conference.

—Rev. J. W. Morton, general missionary of the Seventh-day Baptist church, whose headquarters have been for some years in this city, is removing to North Loup, Neb., where he becomes pastor of a local church. He retains still three months for missionary work. He preached his farewell sermon on Saturday afternoon on the reasons why Sabbath observance is declining.

—Robert M. Hatfield is a name long known and esteemed among the Methodists of this country. For many years he was pastor of the largest churches of the denomination in this city, Cincinnati and Philadelphia. He died in his 73d year at Evanston, Ill., last week Tuesday. Dr. Hatfield had quite a local reputation as a Methodist reformer. If any pastor of that church dared attack the theatre, the card-table and the dance in his pulpit, it was he. He was also opposed to the lodge and the saloon, though he did not speak publicly against the former, and did not believe in the Prohibition party.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Easter and Fast Day—The Transcript on the Endowment Orders—A great hindrance to reform—A common standard of age.

Americans, when they adopt any fashion, particularly if it is a foreign fashion, never seem to have any just idea how far to carry it. Morally speaking they seem to have little sense of "values," as a painter would say. Along with the general observance of Easter by the churches, one cannot fail to notice that the day has come to be as much a matter of trade as of religion. Think of coupling the wonderful event of our Lord's resurrection with a grand display of spring millinery! It ought to jar upon a refined sensibility, even if one is not especially religious. Perhaps it is the universal tendency of any attempt to keep days and seasons not appointed by the Word of God, that they will always become more or less secularized. Our Puritan Fast Day has suffered almost equally with the Romish Christmas in this respect. There seems to be a general feeling that it ought to be given up unless it can be better observed. One Boston pastor did not read the proclamation, announcing merely the service and the day, but leaving out entirely the governor's exhortation to keep it; which it must be acknowledged, has a very farcical sound in view of the fact that nobody thinks of paying it any particular regard. There have been movements in the direction of having it fall on Good Friday, and Connecticut has already adopted this custom; but aside from the Romanizing tendency of the thing, what would be gained by linking the two together, except to still farther secularize both? If our rulers encourage this tendency to go to Canossa, I fear another generation may see us there. Even Catholics themselves have their own opinion about Protestants, who not only ape, but carry to such ridiculous extremes, observances that are no part of the Protestant creed whatsoever. "I, of course, believe in keeping Lent," said an educated Catholic lady to me the other day; "but not in making a parade of it." And she went on to describe the rosaries, each with a big cross hanging therefrom, worn by two Protestant women of her acquaintance as a regular part of their street costume during the Lenten season. In fact, when a Protestant has the ritualistic craze he, and especially she, if it be a woman, is apt to carry it so far as to gain only ridicule from the intelligent class of Romanists, who see how inconsistent are rosaries and crosses with the creed they profess.

A late number of the Transcript has another of its outspoken editorials, which ought to enlighten any conscientious person who has been caught in the trap of the endowment, otherwise known as "fraternal benefit orders," in regard to their real character. "The 'fraternal' feature," says the Transcript, "is best indicated by the fact that under the system it is made for the pecuniary interest of every member to induce as many as possible of his brothers outside the order to come in, and those inside to drop out." Speaking of the Iron Hall, the progenitor of them all, the Transcript further adds: "The doctrine of chances teaches the promoters that of between eighty and ninety per cent in number, contributing between sixty and seventy per cent in amount, will fail to maintain their payments for seven years, which is the period fixed by the Iron Hall. Every one who enters is led to believe that he will surely be among the ten or fifteen per cent elected to persist and receive $1,000 in return for $350. This is gambling pure and simple, and it is only in the length of time it takes to play out the game that it differs from unlimited poker or the Louisiana lottery." This is plain and truthful language, but unfortunately the literary and high-toned Transcript is read little by the classes most in danger.

Another of Rev. J. P. Stoddard's parlor meetings was held at Wellesley last evening, and his talk on Odd-fellowship listened to by a small but very appreciative audience. Bro. Stoddard is one of those rare speakers who can be as eloquent with an audience of a dozen as with hundreds. He also seems to me to speak with an added spiritual power—a Holy Ghost inspiration; and this of itself is a wonderful agent in giving interest and vividness to even a worn-out theme, which it is needless to say is not the case with the lodge yet in New England, where the orders still continue to multiply like the Scripture tares against the day of final judgment.

Somebody pertinently asks, "Why won't the churches unite to fight their common enemy, the devil, and stop fighting among themselves?" Never was there a time when the ecclesiastical mind was more exercised over petty heresies than now. But this is one of the cunningly diabolical ways, as the venerable senior editor of the Cynosure has often remarked, in which Satan fights reform. Any student of the Reformation must have noticed how, as soon as the Protestant cause seemed likely to triumph, the leaders, as if inspired by their evil genius, began to quarrel among themselves over trivial points of doctrine. The strange thing is that the church will still continue to allow the same game to be played by her arch enemy, and yet not grow apparently any wiser. But there is practically no end to human inconsistencies. Why is it that a politician never ages more than half so fast as a minister of the Gospel? I notice that the Young Men's Republican Club has been in quite a quandary at what age to limit admittance, but has decided that every man not over 50 is entitled to be called young. And yet for a minister this is the dead line when he has outlived his usefulness, and must consent to be permanently shelved; while to speak of "a young woman" of 50 or even 40, might induce serious doubts of one's sanity. And, by the way, I have often wondered why the Sorosis, or some other Woman's Club, has never taken up the subject of equal rights for women as regards this matter. It is to be noticed that reformers also, if they are of a radical type, are apt to get the adjective "old" prefixed to their names before a gray hair appears on their temples. One W. C. T. U. worker laughingly tells me that though scarcely turned of 30 this is the favorite term by which she is mentioned among those to whom her crusade against tobacco and the lodge, have made her distasteful. Why can't we have one standard of age as well as of other things? It would certainly be very convenient, and in the case of ministers at least, save the perpetration of a great moral wrong. Elizabeth E. Flagg.

The Home.

HAVE YOU NOT A SWEET WORD FOR JESUS?

"O Lord, open thou my lips; and my mouth shall show forth thy praise." Psa. 51:15.

Have you not a word for Jesus? not a word to say for him?
He is listening through the chorus of the burning seraphim:
He is listening: does he hear you speaking of the things of earth,
Only of its passing pleasure, selfish sorrow, empty mirth?
He has spoken words of blessing, pardon, peace and love to you,
Glorious hopes and gracious comfort, strong and tender, sweet and true;
Does he hear you telling others something of his love untold,
Overflowings of thanksgiving for his mercies manifold?

Have you not a word for Jesus? Will the world his praise proclaim?
Who shall speak it if ye are silent?—ye who know and love his name.
You, whom he hath called and chosen his own witnesses to be,
Will you tell your gracious Master, "Lord, we can not speak for thee?"
"Can not!" though he suffered for you, died because he loved you so!
"Can not!" though he has forgiven, making scarlet white as snow!
"Can not!" though his grace abounding is your freely promised aid!
"Can not!" though he stands beside you, though he says: "Be not afraid!"

Have you not a word for Jesus? Some, perchance, while ye are dumb,
Wait and weary for your message, hoping you will bid them "Come;"
Never telling hidden sorrows, lingering just outside the door,
Longing for your hand to lead them into rest for evermore.
Yours may be the joy and honor his redeemed ones to bring,
Jewels for the coronation of your coming Lord and King.
Will you cast away the gladness thus your Master's joy to share,
All because a word for Jesus seems too much for you to dare?

Yes, we have a word for Jesus! we will bravely speak for thee,
And thy bold and faithful soldiers, Saviour, we would hence forth be:
In thy name set up our banners, while thine own shall wave above,
With thy crimson name of mercy, and thy golden name of love.
Help us lovingly to labor, looking for thy present smile,
Looking for thy promised blessing, through the brightening "little while."
Words for thee in weakness spoken, thou wilt here accept and own,
And confess them in thy glory, when we see thee on thy throne.

—Francis Ridley Havergal.

WHAT THINK YE OF CHRIST?

This is the question of questions asked by Christ himself. It is a question which must be answered, which is answered by every person to whom it comes. If one shall say, I think nothing of him, it is answered. If another shall say, I think he was a fanatic, it is answered. If another shall say, I think he was a good man, it is answered. If another shall say, he was the eternal Son of the eternal God, it is answered. No matter what view is taken of his character and career, all who have ever heard of his name answer in some manner the great question, What think ye of Christ?

It is admitted also that he made an impression upon the world that in depth and extent and beneficience has never been equaled by any other man. This is seen and acknowledged by the ablest and most cultivated thinkers, who do not receive him as their Lord nor trust in him as their Saviour. It may be well at the outset of the discussion, and as a proof of its importance, to recall what some of the many in the ranks of unbelievers have said concerning him, when brought face to face with the question, What think ye of Christ?

WHAT UNBELIEVERS SAY OF CHRIST.

Theodore Parker, an infidel, wrote: "Measure Jesus by the shadow he has cast into the world; no, by the light he has shed upon it. Shall we be told such a man never lived? the whole story is a lie? Suppose that Plato and Newton never lived. But who did their works, and thought their thought? It takes a Newton to forge a Newton. What man could have fabricated a Jesus? None but a Jesus."

Rousseau, an immoral infidel by his own confession, said: "It is more inconceivable that a number of persons should agree to write such a history, than that one should furnish the subject of it. The Jewish authors were incapable of the diction, and strangers to the morality, contained in the Gospel. The marks of its truths are so striking and inimitable, that the inventor would be a more astonishing character than the hero."

Napoleon Bonaparte, who was anything and everything but a Christian, declared to his companions on St. Helena: "I know men; and I tell you that Jesus Christ is no mere man.....Everything in him astonishes me. His spirit overawes me, and his will confounds me. Between him and whoever else in the world there is no possible term of comparison. He is truly a being by himself. His ideas and his sentiments, the truths which he announces, his manner of convincing, are not explained either by human organization or by the nature of things. His birth, and the history of his life; the profundity of his doctrine, which grapples the mightiest difficulties, and which is of these difficulties the most admirable solution; his Gospel, his apparition, his empire, his march across the ages and the realms—everything is for me a prodigy, a mystery insoluble, which plunges me into reveries I cannot escape; a mystery which is there before my eyes, a mystery which I can neither deny nor explain. Here I see nothing human."

Strauss, an infidel with the acutest intellect of all the host, expressed the conviction that "as little as humanity will ever be without religion, as little will it be without Christ.....He remains the highest model of religion within the reach of our thought, and no perfect piety is possible without his presence in the heart."

Renan, a French infidel, with his wearisome French bombastic style, exclaims, "Repose now in thy glory, noble founder! Thy work is finished! Thy divinity established!.....Between thee and God there will be no longer distinction. Complete conqueror of death, take possession of thy kingdom, whither shall follow thee, by the royal road which thou hast traced, ages of worshipers. .....Whatever may be the surprises of the future, Jesus will never be surpassed. His worship will grow young without ceasing; his legend will call forth tears without end; his sufferings will melt the noblest hearts; all ages will proclaim, that among the sons of men, there is none born greater than Jesus."

John Stuart Mill, so fierce an atheist that he declared "the God of the Bible should at least never extort from him the homage of love, to whatever else he might compel him," was yet constrained to say of Christ: "Who among his disciples, or among their proselytes, was capable of inventing the sayings of Jesus, or imagining the life and character ascribed to him?.....Nor even now would it be easy, even for an unbeliever, to find a better translation of the rule of virtue from the abstract into the concrete, than to endeavor so to live that Christ would approve his life."

Mr. Lecky, the rationalistic historian of rationalism, tells us, "Christ has exerted so deep an influence that it may be truly said that the simple record of three short years of active life has done more to regenerate and soften mankind, than all the disquisitions of philosophers, and all the exhortations of moralists." M. M. Noah, a prominent Jewish lawyer and politician of New York City, said in a published address, "When 150,000,000 believe in Christ's divinity, and we see around us abundant evidences of the happiness, good faith, mild government, and liberal feelings which spring from his religion, what right has anyone to call him an impostor? That religion which is calculated to make mankind great and happy cannot be a false one."

Rabbi Raphael of the same city said, "You have heard me style Jesus the great 'Teacher of Nazareth,' for that designation I and the Jews take to be his due. No enlightened Jew can or will deny that the doctrines taught in his name have been the means of reclaiming the most important parts of the civilized world from gross idolatry, and making the revealed Word of God known to nations of whose very existence the men who sentenced him were ignorant."

Disræli, another Jew, said, "The wildest dreams of their Rabbis have been far exceeded. Has not Jesus conquered Europe, and changed its name to Christendom? All countries that refused the cross wilted, and the time will come when the vast communities and countless myriads of America and Australia, looking upon Europe as Europe now looks upon Greece, and wondering how so small a space could have achieved such great deeds, will find music in the songs of Zion and solace in the parables of Galilee."

Charles Dickens, who caricatured Christianity in his novels, when he came to die directed the confession to be mentioned in his will, "I commit my soul to the mercy of God, through our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and exhort my dear children humbly to try to guide themselves by the teaching of the New Testament."

Thomas Carlyle, who told Froude that a miracle is a mathematical impossibility, speaks of Christ as "our divinest symbol. Higher has the human thought not yet reached. A symbol of quite perennial, infinite character: whose significance will ever demand to be anew inquired into, and anew made manifest."

Froude, who seems to be in thorough sympathy with his master in the rejection of miracles, asserts that "the most perfect being who has ever trod the soil of this earth was called the Man of Sorrows," and that "the Bible thoroughly known is a literature of itself, the rarest and richest in all departments of thought or imagination which exists."

Jean Paul Richter says of Christ, "The holiest among the mighty, and the mightiest among the holy, lifted with his pierced hand empires off their hinges, turned the stream of civilization out of its channel, and still governs the ages."

Spinoza, described by Bayle as a "systematic atheist," and who probably did more than any other man to unsettle the faith of Germany, said, "Christ was the temple of God, because in him God has most fully revealed himself."

Ralph Waldo Emerson, a philosopher and poet of incomprehensible style, said, "Jesus is the most perfect of all men that have yet appeared."

Charles Sumner, a painstaking literary man and politician, but not much in the way of logic, said, "I believe that Christ lived when and as the Gospel says; that he was more than man—namely, above all men who had as yet lived, and yet less than God. I pray you not to believe that I am insensible to the greatness and goodness of his character."—Rev. Jas. H. Brookes, D.D.

HOW DOROTHY HELPED.

"If you was only a boy now!"

"If I only was," Dorothy sighed sadly. "But you ain't, and so there's no use thinking about it. The house'll have to go, for I can't lift a finger to save it, and no more can you, neither. If you was only a boy, you could have been earning many a dollar by this time; but girls is sort of worthless stock, make the best of them you can. I ain't saying that you are any more useless than the most of them," the complaining father added, realizing that patient little Dorothy did a woman's work about the house, and had waited on him and nursed him as but few women would have had patience and strength to do, since his long attack of inflammatory rheumatism. "You do all you can, I know. It ain't your fault that you can't earn a cent, but if you was only a boy now!"

Dorothy had heard that plaint many and many a time before, and always felt rather culpable, as if she might have been a boy just as well as not, if she had not been inconsiderate enough to be a girl. She would have been glad enough to be a boy, and just now she wished more than ever that she could transform herself by some process into an embryo lord of creation.

"Hard times" were the usual thing at the little brown house at the foot of the hill, but just now things were in worse plight than usual. Dorothy did not know exactly what a mortgage was, but she regarded it as being as inseparable from a home as its roof or walls. It was one of the first things she ever remembered hearing people talk about, and whenever any treat or luxury had been spoken of, it always had to be given up at last, however reluctantly, because of the mortgage. When she was a very little girl, indeed, she had a dim fancy that it was a very hungry monster, that had to be fed all the time, or it would gobble up their little brown house for a lunch some day. She knew better than that now, but still she knew it was as insatiable as the monster of her childish imagining, and it assuredly did make life a very hard, cheerless struggle for the little family of two.

Now it seemed as if the mortgage was going to make a meal of the home at last, in spite of the years of hard work to save it. The father had been taken ill early in the summer with inflammatory rheumatism, and though late fall had come, he was only just able to sit in his big chair and worry and fret all day. It was hard for him, poor man, but nobody ever knew how hard it was for patient little Dorothy, who had all the nursing added to her other cares, and, besides the close confinement to the house, and the work which was really beyond her strength, had to listen to the continual lament that she was not a boy, so that she could earn money enough to save the house. As steadily as any woman she went about the house, doing the daily work, and when at last everything was in scrupulous order, and an old neighbor had dropped in to have a pipe with her father, she looked wistfully out of doors, where a bright November sun was glorifying even the mellow stubble in the corn fields, and ventured to ask if she could not go out for a little while.

"Oh, yes, I suppose I can get along without you," her father answered rather reluctantly. "Girls always want to be gadding, so I am used to getting along without you. Don't be gone long, though."

"No," promised Dorothy, and in a few moments she was trudging along the road, enjoying the fresh air, which was a treat to her, after her long confinement to the house with only an occasional outing. She had to cross the railroad track, and in the distance she heard the whistle of the express, which always stopped here to water. Dorothy paused to watch it come thundering along. She liked to see it come gliding along the shining rails, and stop with a noisy whistle, that made her jump a little, though she was expecting it.

While she was standing there, a lady opened one of the car windows, and, looking out, beckoned to her. "Do you know whether there is any place where I can get any apples or ginger nuts, or anything for my little boy?"

"No, there isn't," Dorothy answered. "I am sorry, and I would have brought something for him if I had known."

"That's very kind in you," said the lady, smiling at the earnest little face, and Dorothy's willingness to be obliging. "It would be a good business for some one to have something to sell here, I should think."

She put down the window again, and Dorothy went on her way, but there was an idea in the brown thatched head that had just found a place there. Why should not she have a little basket of shining red apples that grew on the tree behind the house, and some little paper bags of ginger nuts, and herhaps popcorn?

Dorothy gave a little hop and a skip and jump at the thought. She had been on the cars once with her father, and had looked wistfully at the tempting basket that the train-boy carried along the isle, and she knew she could fix just as tempting looking a basket. When she went home full of her scheme, she found her father ready to admit that perhaps this was a way in which she could make a little money, if she was a girl, and he was quite willing for her to make the little necessary outlay to have the crisp, delicious ginger nuts, and the snowy popcorn in white bags, all ready to sell. The basket was ready by train time the next day, and, fairly quivering with excitement, Dorothy went to meet it. She passed along from window to window holding up her basket, and either the bright eager face, glowing with the wind and excitement, or the good things in the basket were more inviting than the passengers had seen before that day, for there was no lack of customers, and when she ran gaily homeward the basket was empty, and her little bag was full of silver dimes and nickles.

To be sure, there was not so very much in the basket, and some people might not have thought that there was a fortune in the leather bag, but it was the first money Dorothy had earned, and it seemed more than all the wealth of the Indies to her. One dollar and thirty-four cents! Why, if she could feed that hungry mortgage at that rate every day, the little brown house would not be gobbled up after all. It was nearly all profit, for she had raised the popcorn herself, and the little red apple tree had borne unusually well that year, and she could fill many a basket from the barrels in the cellar.

"Well, you couldn't have done much better if you had been a boy," said her father.

"Could I have done any better?" asked Dorothy imploringly? This was a supreme moment in her life. If her father would only admit that she was as good as a boy, her cup of happincss would overflow.

"No, I will say for you that you couldn't have," said her father magnanimously. "In fact, if you had been a boy, you might not have thought of it in the first place, and then again, if you was a boy, you couldn't have made the ginger nuts."

There was a steady market for the little business woman, and, as her apples were always polished to the highest degree of shininess, and her popcorn was of the snowiest, and the ginger nuts perfection, her wares were always in demand. The mortgage was satisfied, and the little brown house was safe, not only for that time, but for always, for as months went by and still Dorothy prospered, she formed the ambitious plan of possessing that mortgage herself. She did pay it all off at last. It was a long task, but Dorothy had learned patience long ago.

She was very happy when the day came that made the little brown house their own, but I think the keenest part of her satisfaction came when her father said: "Well, really, Dorothy, you are every bit as good as a boy, and a deal better than most of them."—Interior.

TEMPERANCE.

AN AWFUL LIFE.

Edgar Wakeman, in his tour of Britain, has made special study of the barmaid, having inquired the history of about 1,700. She is found in the United Kingdom to the number of 200,000. "These are as a class the prettiest and tidiest women in the three kingdoms." The barmaid appears in black gown, white apron, and "the glory of the rose on cheek and lip. She is, in fact, just as most men love to see women—suggestive of domesticity in her raiment, charming in figure and face." Such is her appearance. What is her real life? "She lives with the publican's family. She goes to a room not fit for a dog's keeping, snatches a few hours' sleep, and is again at her post behind the bar to cheer and wheedle the trembling drunkards of the early morning hours. Her meals are snatched between ferocious rushes of customers at the bar. She must know everybody, be cognizant of something about everything, have a soothing word for rum-bedeviled tempers, placidly listen to discussions of herself like those upon an animal; accept direct and infamous insult with invitation in her eyes and honeyed words upon her lips, sympathetically receive confidences of the most sacred or damnable kind.

"For all this she receives from six to twenty shillings per week and 'keep.' The inconceivable degradation of her calling can only be hinted at in the statement of the fact that there is but one place in great Britain—at the refreshment bars of leading railway stations—where refusal to serve one who insults her would not lead to her immediate discharge without a 'character.'" Many die at an early age from lung diseases, caused by their foul surroundings.

"No honest man can speak of them unkindly as a class. The power behind them is responsible for the evil they accomplish. That is incalculable. Because of their presence, countless British women find it easy to become drunkards. Because of their agreeability, sympathetic kindliness and outright blandishments, all grades and conditions of men are more and more enriching the British dramshop with all that should preserve and sanctify the British home."—Bulletin.

THE LIQUOR RECORD.

There was sent out lately from the Woolner distillery, Peoria. the largest shipment of spirits ever made, beating the world's record. There were fifteen car-loads or 1,000 barrels of spirits, containing 82,490 taxable gallons. The tax collected by the government on this single shipment was $74,241, and the entire days' business represented a deal of $100,000. The goods went to New York, Cincinnati and Philadelphia.

At Barnum, Iowa, two saloon-keepers have a new scheme for evading the liquor law. During the holidays they had constructed a saloon buildings in sections so that it could be taken apart and stored away. Recently the District Court granted an injunction against the saloon, and the other night the proprietors took down their building and stored it away in a warehouse, so that when the sheriff of Webster county comes to serve the injuction he will find no saloon.

The Man and the Arm—Last Tuesday evening an engineer on the Northwestern road found a human arm lying beside the tracks at the intersection of Artesian avenue. It was turned over to the police and was taken to Klaner's undertaking establishment, on Milwaukee avenue, where it still reposes on ice. A mystery surrounded the finding of the arm. A scarch was instituted, but no one was found with a missing member. Two detectives worked two whole days without avail. The owner could not be found. At first it was thought that it may have come from some surgical college, but the fact that it was mutilated at the elbow led to the belief that some one had been grouud to death beneath the wheels of the cars. A thorough search was made, and for nearly two days the country for miles around was scoured to ascertain from whence the mutilated member came. Wednesday night the West Chicago ambulance was called to a saloon on Clybourn place and a man was taken to the county hospital suffering from a number of cuts and bruises. His left arm was gone at the elbow. He was beastly intoxicated, and could not or would not tell where he had met with his accident. It developed on inquiry that he had been around to a dozen saloons in the vicinity soliciting drinks. He would enter a place, and throwing the mutilated stump of his arm on the bar all covered with clotted blood, would implore the bartender for a drink. Thus he got his load of whisky. Yesterday his arm was amputated at the shoulder at the hospital. He survived the shock all right, but it will probably always remain a mystery as to how the accident happened. His name was ascertained to be William J. Hand, a frequenter of South Clark street lodging-houses.—Inter Ocean.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE OLD TESTAMENT.

LESSON III.—Second Quarter.—April 19.

SUBJECT.—Jonah sent to Nineveh.—Jonah 1: 1-17.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Preach unto it the preaching that I bid thee.—Jonah 3: 2.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

Daily Readings.—M.—Jonah 1: 1-17 T.—Jonah 2: 1-10. W.—Nah. 1: 1-10. T.—Ps. 107: 23-30. F.—Ezek. 33: 1-11. S.—1 Kings 13: 11-24. S.—Ps. 139: 1-12.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The flight from duty.—vs. 1–3. Of Jonah we know very little. He is mentioned in second of Kings as inciting Jeroboam by his prophecies to war with the Syrians and recover the territory of which they had despoiled Israel. He was a patriot with a stern hate of his country's enemies, and had he been sent to proclaim the unconditional destruction of Nineveh, it is doubtful if any thought of personal danger would have turned him aside. Five centuries after we see the same spirit manifested by the people of Nazareth, who were ready to mob Christ for intimating that other nations besides Israel would be included in the Gospel invitation; and in Acts, 18th chapter, vs 21, 22, we see that Paul's simple statement of his mission to the Gentiles aroused his before quiet audience to the wildest fury. Jonah's fancy that he could flee from the presence of God by going to a heathen land, was a part of the same narrow idea. He believed that once outside the coasts of Israel the haunting voice would be still, as God only manifested himself among his chosen people. By going to Tarshish, Jonah hoped to put himself outside the pale of any conscious communication from Jehovah. How many are seeking to-day to flee from the presence of the Lord! They shun the sanctuary and the prayer-meeting, religious books and conversation, or plunge into worldly pleasures with the deliberate purpose of stifling God's warning voice in their souls. Even Christians, when they hear the call to go out into the world and do a personal work for the Lord, will sometimes "flee to Tarshish." They will immerse themselves in business, or in other ways seek to drown the call.

2. An unwilling missionary.—vs. 4–7. God has many ways of arresting the disobedient. Jonah had succeeded in stilling the Divine voice in his soul. We can imagine him as passing more than one sleepless, troubled night before he made up his mind to go to Tarshish, but once decided and fairly embarked on board the ship, without doubt his first feelings were those of instant ease and relief. Hence he could sleep in the midst of a raging tempest when every one else was in an agony of terror. Nothing more quickly stupefies the conscience than an act of deliberate disobedience; but a stupefied conscience is not a dead conscience. One can be awakened, the other cannot. Jonah soon found that though he might have barred himself from that sweet communion with God that he had enjoyed in times past, he could not put himself outside the pale of Divine Providence. How foolish to think of fleeing from One who could command the waves and make the stormy winds his ministers! "What meanest thou, O sleeper!" What right had he to be sleeping, careless and unconcerned, when the whole ship's crew was in danger of perishing! "Awake, thou that sleepest!"—is a cry that ought to pierce to the heart of every Christian who slumbers in careless security, for he knows not how many souls he puts in peril. He may not be consciously fleeing from any call of duty; he may be simply neglecting to let his light shine, but the consequences are the same. One important lesson that we learn from this story of Jonah is that it is as impossible to flee from our duty as to flee from God. Like an accusing angel it will rise and confront us at the most unexpected times and places. It must have been a bitter cup to one so full of national prejudices, to have to confess his sin to these heathen mariners. But the first step God takes to bring his children to repentance is always to humble them; and certainly nothing could have been more humbling to Jonah than to be thus made an unwilling missionary to the very Gentiles he had so despised; to be thus forced involuntarily to take up the work he had been at so much pains to avoid. How much better to have obeyed at first, like a loving child, than thus to be scourged to his duty like a slave!

3. Jonah cast into the sea.—vs 11–17. Jonah's willingness to bear the punishment of his sin is good evidence that he was penitent. He did not seek to excuse himself or lay the blame on anybody else. On the other hand we can see the signs of genuine conversion in these heathen sailors. (1) Their humanity. They tried to save Jonah, though he belonged to a hostile nation, and was the self-confessed cause of all their trouble. (2) They "feared the Lord exceedingly," and the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. (3) They were grateful for their deliverance, and they did not let their gratitude cool; they offered a sacrifice of thanksgiving at once, and vowed more when they should land. Jonah was a type of Christ in freely offering himself to save the lives of others, and his living death in the belly of the fish was used by our Lord as an illustration of his own death and resurrection. We see here one of the marvels of divine grace—that this sinning, disobedient prophet should be honored by being made to typify in his life the wonderful story of Redemption.

REFORM NEWS (Continued from 5th page).

warned the children of God to have no fellowship with them.

These testimonies will be of immense value to the cause of Christ, not only in their direct and immediate effect, but in stimulating a discussion of the subject in the regular ministrations of the city.

I am just now distributing 5,000 tracts containing the testimonies of Joseph Cook, Wendell Phillips, Geo. F. Pentecost, D. L. Moody, and Miss E. E. Flagg's "Answer to Masonry," with a portrait of Joseph Cook on the front page. Five thousand were sent out in the March issue of the Home Guard, and the publisher is receiving favorable responses from many quarters.

As next Sabbath is to close Mr. Moody's labors for the present in Boston, I am moving in the direction suggested by Dr. Gordon, to keep the question before the people.

On last Sabbath, Dr. Graham, in speaking of Romanism, made some very forcible remarks on the subject of secret societies. Reading from the Reformed Presbyterian Articles of Faith, the testimony of the church, he said in substance:

"I don't believe any member of this church belongs to a lodge, but some of you in the congregation may, and you won't like what I am saying. Well, I have my message from higher authority and a commission to deliver it, and I am going to do it. Some of you will say we must join the Orangemen, and these patriotic secret societies, to fight Rome with her own weapons. But you make a sad mistake. Secret societies are poor weapons to fight the devil with. He will get the best of it every time. I wish every Romish priest in Boston would come in here and hear all our plans. I'd be glad to give them all my signs, grips and pass-words and let them make the most of them. God's children are of the day, and they do their work in the light, and they lose ground and give the devil the advantage every time they adopt his tactics."

A STRONG CONTRAST.

SCOTCH PRESBYTERIANS AND THE LATEST EDITION OF MONKERY.

Washington, D. C., April 2d, 1891.

Dear Cynosure:—If Pittsburg is properly called the Jerusalem of United Presbyterianism, Washington county, Pa., and the region round about, is the Judea. It seemed as though the cattle on the thousand hills in that section belonged largely to those of Presbyterian faith. I don't know why the Scotch and Scotch Irish settle on the hills and mountains unless it is because they sing so much about them in the Psalms.

Houstonville, Pa., is a new town. It has but one church. Rev. E. E. Douglass, its pastor, is much loved. Many who knew not Christ have been lead to accept him through his ministrations. It was my pleasure to share his hospitality and address his people on Wednesday evening of last week.

On reaching Venice I found Rev. A. R. Anderson had not only announced my lecture, but urged his people to attend as far as possible. About two hundred gathered; some coming four or five miles through mud, on a dark night. As he has been pastor of this people for more than thirty-one years, and ever stood true to unpopular reforms, his people never question his sincerity.

Protracted storms and the health of those at home, caused my return from this promising field sooner than anticipated. A man calling himself "Father Ignatius, a British monk," was announced to preach on "Christ Only," in the Masonic Temple Sabbath afternoon. I went over, but felt sorry I had done so, as I counted one in making his congregation. While saying much that was true, he mixed it with the false. Like those who appeal chiefly to ignorance and superstition, he clothed himself strangely and went through many foolish antics. He wore a robe resembling that of a clown, a Masonic or Catholic priest. With the exception of a rim about an inch wide his hair was shaven off. As he played the organ or read his prayers his performance was as strange as a Masonic funeral. He read his prayers without regard to fitness. Among other things, he read the prayer that God would bless the governor of this State. This so-called prayer evidently had not been manufactured for the District. In places, he said, the people had given them hundreds of hundreds of dollars, but they had not been so fortunate here. He hoped the Lord would put it into the heart of those present to contribute liberally. Women were sent around with baskets having his hymns, etc., to sell. A fellow having his head similarly shaven and wearing a black gown, was stationed at the door to hold the basket for the collection of those who were leaving. I was told he charged admittance to all services during the week. He said he would tell those who should hear him in the evening, why he was a monk. Barnum says the American people like to be humbugged.

So evident was it that he was acting like a monkey for what he could make out of it, that any might understand. Humbugs are always disgusting, but a religious humbug seems the worst.

Thousands of poor souls will reverence that which appears mysterious and uncommon. Masonry and Catholicism, all false religions, and religious teachers appeal to such. O that God would reveal his spirit more and more that people may be saved from Satanic delusions!

W. B. Stoddard.

—President David Beaton of Redfield College, South Dakota, makes his home now in Chicago. He enters upon his labors as pastor of the Lincoln Park Congregational church.

Religious News.

—The trustees of Dartmouth College have made the biennial offer, open to all persons, of the Richard Fletcher prize of $500 for the best essay on a religious subject, the theme in the present instance being the "Right Observance of the Sabbath."

—The attendance at Dr. Pentecost's meetings in the Calcutta Opera House keeps up well though the crush, which at first ensued, has subsided. After-meetings were commenced at the commencement of the second week, and on every evening souls were brought into the light. Dr. Pentecost is interesting himself in the Calcutta mission work generally, speaking at meetings of various kinds. On Sunday he commenced open-air work, preaching on the maidon in the early morning and in the Opera House to men in the evening as before.—Bombay Guardian.

—In the March number of the American Missionary, a writer describes a "revival" in the Great Smoky Mountain region as follows: "As the shouting and preaching went on, the usual number of those who were impressed and wanted to 'jine' took their places on the 'mourner's bench,' and a bottle of whisky was passed among them. Thus revived, they were baptized and received into the church. I have this from members of the church who themselves drink, but who thought it was going too far to drink on the 'mourner's bench,' and to leave the same 'drunken and cursing.' At a party held a short time later, three of the young women, then members of the church, became intoxicated with the others." The writer very justly concludes that statistics from this quarter may lie.—Sabbath Recorder.

—Says Messiah's Herald: "There are at this time two ladies in this country who have spent seven years as missionaries in Ceylon. They are Misses Mary and Margaret W. Leitch. They spent some time in England before coming to this country. They are endeavoring to raise funds with which to endow Jaffna College and General Medical Mission in North Ceylon. This institution is undenominational, and with its worthy advocates is endorsed by leading men in different evangelical denominations both in England and in this country. The Misses Leitch are the particular friends of H. L. Hastings, who has been acquainted with them for several years. They will answer calls to lecture or assist in missionary meetings.

—The Thirty-third Annual Convention of the Illinois State Sunday-school Association, will (D. V.) be held in the city of Danville, May 19th, 20th and 21st, 1891, in the First M. E. church. Each county in the State (except Cook) is entitled to ten delegates to be chosen from the active Sunday-school workers in the county. The representation from Cook county is unlimited. The limitation as to the number of delegates from a county applies only to the offer of hospitality, and the number of votes a county may cast in the convention. All Sunday-school workers who believe in the divinity of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Ohrist, and in the inspiration of the Scriptures as the Word of God, are cordially invited to participate in the exercises of the convention. The churches and citizens of Danville offer hospitality to all accredited delegates whose names are received by their committee previous to the convention. The chairman of this committee is Mr. E. H. Palmer, to whom all communications should be addressed. Particulars concerning railroad arrangements will be announced, but the usual deductions of one-third may be expected.

FOR APRIL ONLY.

To help all our local and traveling agents in working for subscribers, we give to all new yearly subscribers during the present month a copy of Prof. Henry Drummond's latest work, "Love, the Supreme Gift; or The Greatest thing in the World." There is now an immense demand for this work. It has been issued by some publishers at 20 cents per copy; by others at 35 cents, and $1.00 for an illustrated edition. We will send it to every new subscriber that can be obtained before May 1st, whether by agent or directly. Considerable theological controversy has arisen over this work of Prof. Drummond's, and for its size it has attracted as much attention as the same author's famous "Natural Law in the Spiritual World." Dr. A. J. Gordon of Boston, has written a supplementary pamphlet on Faith, "The First thing in the World." Messiah's Herald of Boston, says: "There has been no work of its size issued during the last decade that has been more severely criticised than Drummond's 'Greatest thing in the World.' Many have warmly commended it, and thousands of copies of the work have been sold. The great objection to the work has been that Prof. Drummond paid little attention to the value of faith." Dr. Gordon makes up this deficiency.

We have secured a special rate on this work. Free to new subscribers for a year or more from this time to May 1st.

News of the Week.

CHICAGO.

Chicago will have a $700,000 permanent art building on the lake front. The council granted the site by a vote of 57 to 9, and as the funds are already guaranteed by the World's Fair directory and private subscription, the building is assured.

April 1 was a red-letter day in the sugar market. The bonded period expired at 12 p. m. March 31, and the scene at the Anchor line docks and at the various warehouses was one of indescribable rush and confusion. Wholesalers had their teams on hand at midnight, and truckload after truckload of sugar was carted away and shipped. It is estimated at the headquarters of collector of customs that in the neighborhood of 70,000 barrels of sugar, on cars and in warehouses, were released in this city.

THE ITALIANS.

The notice of the withdrawal of the Italian minister at Washington Wednesday, was startling news. Subsequent correspondence between our own and the Italian governments quieted the warlike alarm.

The New York Sun states that after Baron Fava had presented his letter of recall at Washington on Wednesday he found upon returning to his lodging a cablegram from his government instructing him to withhold the letter of recall. The message came too late, however, and Italy was left without means of concealing its blundering diplomacy.

Charles H. Cramp, head of the great shipbuilding firm, does not think that the Italian warships, even should they be able to cross the Atlantic, would be in a condition to do much damage on this side of the Atlantic.

Dominick C. O'Malley, the private detective who figured so prominently in the Hennessy assassination case and who would have been lynched if he had been found within a week after the killing of the Italian prisoners on the 14th of March, caused a sensation Friday by quietly walking into the Criminal court and surrendering himself to answer the indictments against him.

Upon the railroad lines known as the Camden system in the center of West Virginia, 700 Italians are working. At Alton the report of the New Orleans riot was received, and while the Italians were discussing it among themselves, the foreman of the gang, a Scotchman named McCauley, said the citizens of New Orleans did just right. The Italians became enraged and killed McCauley. They then mutilated his body in a horrible manner. The excitement among the Italians when they read the particulars of the killing of their countrymen was intense.

Superintendent of Immigration Weber at New York, says the immigration from Italy is rapidly increasing, in fact, leading that of all other countries. The figures for March are: Italy, 7,869; Germany, 7,087; Great Britain and Ireland, 4,386; Hungary, 3,588; Austria, 3,484, and Russia, 2,923; total, 29,338. Sixteen hundred and seven Italians were landed at the barge office Thursday.

During March 5,324 immigrants from Italy landed at New York, nearly double the number that landed February.

The Superintendent of Immigration at New York Friday ordered that twenty Italian immigrants who arrived Tuesday shall be returned. Pauperism and loathsome diseases are given as causes for the order.

Italian quarry laborers near Kingston, N. Y., after adopting some denunciatory resolutions concerning the New Orleans lynching, hoisted an American flag and then riddled it with bullets. The quarry-owners discharged the foreigners.

THE EPIDEMIC.

At Fort Wayne, Ind., the physicians report 2,000 cases of la grippe Friday, but they are of a mild type, although five deaths have occurred within a few days.

The public schools of Council Bluffs, Ia., closed on Thursday on account of the prevalence of contagious diseases. The complaints mostly prevailing are the grip and measles, but there is some scarlet fever and diphtheria. In the Washington Avenue school alone 225 pupils are unable to attend on account of sickness, and in the whole city are nearly fifteen hundred in this condition. One-third of the teachers are unfit for duty.

During the last week there were 1,100 deaths in New York city against 895 for the preceding week. There were fifty-six deaths from la grippe against ten from a similar cause the week before. The police department has 244 of the force on the sick list.

There are said to be over 3,000 cases of grip in Racine. Every factory and place of business is crippled. One doctor alone has over 500 cases to attend to. Few cases have been fatal.

There were 146 deaths in New York, Tuesday, seven being from the grip. There are 196 New York policemen on the sick list.

The record for last week in Chicago up to Saturday was: Sunday 185, Monday 194, Tuesday 165, Wednesday 166, Thursday 132, Friday 99; total exclusive of Saturday, 941. The total of the week before, only a few short of 1,000, and it is likely that this week's list will reach 1,040.

During the month closed there were 3,220 deaths in Chicago in a population of 1,100,000—which is an annual death rate of more than 35 per 1,000. The average annual death rate for many years has been less than 20 per 1,000.

LABOR LODGE RIOTS.

At Chester, Pa., Wednesday night, William Brown, a striking molder, was shot through the heart by a non-union man whom Brown and others had attacked on the street.

Mount Pleasant, Pa., March 30.—To-night Mount Pleasant is trembling with excitement. The people fear an explosion. Nobody is willing to go to bed. There is more confusion than there has been since the bloody riots of 1886. At midnight fully a thousand men are gathered on the hills surrounding the coke works. Sheriff Closson has increased his force to 200 men. All are armed

(Continued on 16th page.)

DONATIONS.

For Southern Ministers' Fund:

Eld. J. C. Cheever	$ 1 50
C. A. McMillan	1 33
Wm. Matthews	80
Previously reported	680 18
	$683 81

For Current Expense Fund:

E. and A. E. Hinsdale	$ 5 00
D. L. Auspoken	5 00
C. Carrette	50
A. H. Hiatt, Jr	5 00
Mrs. A. Lewis	1 50
W. O. Norval	5 00
E. Whipple	2 00
Previously reported	1,425 88
	$1,449 88

W. I. Phillips, Treasurer.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from March 30 to April 4, inclusive:

Mrs J Wrighter, Mrs M A Waterman, W J Pierson, E A Cook, J Kerr, F A Noe, Mrs Haviland, A J Millard, J H Keyes, J T Osborn, W Shust, W Parson, J Smith, G McKerrow, L Powers, D Glaspie, E A Washburn, A S Grindon, G W Clark, F Manter, E P Chambers, O A Chillson, Rev G W Cooper, Rev H C Steup, W Amidon, E J Chalfant, D Cameron.

What a debt of gratitude the world owes to such men as Drs. Ayer and Jenner—the latter for the great discovery of vaccination, and the former for his Extract of Sarsaparilla—the best of blood-purifiers! Who can estimate how much these discoveries have benefitted the race!

Spring Medicine

Is so important that great care should be used to get THE BEST. Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven its superior merit by its many remarkable cures, and the fact that has a larger sale than any other sarsaparilla or blood purifier shows the great confidence the people have in it. In fact

Hood's Sarsaparilla

The Standard Spring Medicine

Is now generally admitted to be Hood's Sarsaparilla. It speedily cures all blood diseases and imparts such strength to the whole system that, as one lady puts it, "I seem to be made anew." Be sure to get

Hood's Sarsaparilla

We have never claimed anything for this medicine which it has not honestly performed; all our statements are within bounds and without exaggeration; all our testimonials are genuine and reliable.

A Point for You.

If you decide to take Hood's Sarsaparilla for your Spring Medicine do not buy any substitute.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

GAIN ONE POUND A Day.

A GAIN OF A POUND A DAY IN THE CASE OF A MAN WHO HAS BECOME "ALL RUN DOWN," AND HAS BEGUN TO TAKE THAT REMARKABLE FLESH PRODUCER,

SCOTT'S EMULSION

OF PURE COD LIVER OIL WITH Hypophosphites of Lime & Soda

IS NOTHING UNUSUAL. THIS FEAT HAS BEEN PERFORMED OVER AND OVER AGAIN. PALATABLE AS MILK. ENDORSED BY PHYSICIANS. SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS. AVOID SUBSTITUTIONS AND IMITATIONS.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office.

H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St., N. Y.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING

45 RANDOLPH STREET,

CHICAGO.

$3000 A YEAR! I undertake to briefly teach any fairly intelligent person of either sex, who can read and write, and who, after instruction, will work industriously, how to earn Three Thousand Dollars a Year in their own localities, wherever they live. I will also furnish the situation or employment, at which you can earn that amount. No money for me unless successful as above. Easily and quickly learned. I desire but one worker from each district or county. I have already taught and provided with employment a large number, who are making over $3000 a year each. It's NEW and SOLID. Full particulars FREE. Address at once, E. C. ALLEN, Box 420, Augusta, Maine.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

COMMENCEMENT THURSDAY, JUNE 25TH, 1891.

Full College Courses, Preparatory School, Business School, Musical Conservatory and Art School. Fifteen Professors and Instructors.

Send for Catalogue.

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." 25cts each.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 326 pages; cloth, $1.00.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring		94½@	1 02
Winter	1 00		1 03½
Corn—No. 2		68½@	70
Oats—No. 2		54 @	56
Rye—No. 2		87
Bran per ton	18 50
Hay—Timothy	11 00	@15	00
Butter, medium to best		12 @	27
Cheese		05 @	12½
Beans	1 75	@ 2	25
Eggs		17
Seeds—Timothy	1 17	@ 1	28
Flax	1 17	@ 1	20
Broom corn		03 @	04½
Potatoes, per bu		95 @	1 18
Hides—Green to dry flint		05 @	09
Lumber—Common	10 00	@13	00
Wool		15 @	34
Cattle—Choice to extra	5 20	@ 6	30
Common to good	1 75	@ 5	15
Hogs	4 00	@ 5	50
Sheep	4 00	@ 6	25

NEW YORK.

Wheat	1 02½	@ 1	26½
Corn	77½	@	79½
Oats	57	@	65
Eggs	21
Butter	12	@	27½
Wool	14	@	39

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	2 50	@ 5	85
Hogs	3 20	@ 4	80
Sheep	2 75	@ 4	35

Home and Health.

HOLD YOUR BREATH.

At a recent meeting of a woman's club, where a paper on "Exercise and Gymnastics" had been read and discussed, one of the members gave her fellow-members the benefit of an experience of her own. It was her habit, she said, when walking, to take as few inhalations as possible and hold them to the last second. "I draw a deep breath, walking very rapidly when I have filled my lungs, and do not take another until I have reached a certain point in the block. By practice I am able to get on with perhaps three inhalations through a long block. The result is exactly as if I had been running hard. My blood tingles all over me and seems to have brought every nerve and muscle into active play. In this way a short walk, if only to the elevated station or to catch a car a block away, gives me a great deal of condensed exercise."

A second member of the club supplemented this with the case of a well-known physician who told her that he made it a practice invariably to hold his breath when crossing a street. He had become so addicted to the habit now that he did it instinctively—filling his lungs involuntarily as he stepped on a cross walk. Some months of this practice had noticably expanded his chest measure.

"If a moderately healthy person will slowly sip a pint of warm water just before retiring at night, and an equal quantity an hour and a half before breakfasting the next morning," said the same physician, "he can eat or drink almost anything with impunity." This is an extreme statement, but any one who has ever tried this system fairly will bear testimony to its great usefulness. There is no doubt that, in one way or another, from three pints to two quarts of water might profitably be drunk by everybody daily. It is pretty well established that much water drinking with meals is bad for the stomach, besides being disagreeable to see. Very cold water produces too low a temperature in the system, and gives it too great a shock for health. Very hot water hardens and renders inactive the delicate linings of the digestive canal. If moderately hot water, of about blood heat be sipped slowly, it will not nauseate, and is, perhaps, more beneficial than at any other temperature. It should never be taken within an hour and a half or two hours of a meal. In traveling or when removing from one place to another, too great care cannot be exercised about drinking new water. Nothing will upset a delicate system more certainly than subjecting it to the unrestricted action of water to which it is not accustomed.—The Congregationalist.

POWDER FOR SORE FEET.

From Germany comes a bit of information for policemen, carriers, collectors, and others whose occupation requires them to be on their feet a great deal. No matter how comfortable and roomy their shoes, such persons are almost always more or less troubled with chafed, sore or blistered feet. The difficulty may be easily overcome by the use of a powder, which is a necessary part of the German army equipment. It is known there as "Fusstreupuleer," and consists of three parts of salicylic acid, ten parts starch, and eighty-seven parts pulverized soapstone. It keeps the feet dry, quickly heals sore spots, and prevent chafing. A powder of pulverized soapstone is also good.—American Druggist.

THE EGG A REMEDY FOR DYSENTERY.

The egg is considered one of the best remedies for dysentery; beaten up lightly, with or without sugar, and swallowed at a gulp, it tends by its emollient qualities to lessen the inflammation of the stomach and intestines, and by forming a transient coating on these organs, to enable nature to resume her healthful sway over a diseased body. Two, or at most three eggs per day would be all that is required in ordinary cases; and since eggs are not merely medicine, but food as well, the lighter the diet otherwise, and the quieter the patient is kept, the more certain and rapid is the recovery.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Has Cured Others
Will Cure You.

The Superior Medicine

AYER'S Sarsaparilla has cured others and will cure you. It will cure you of Indigestion; it will cure you of Liver and Kidney Complaints; it will cure you of any disease originating in impure blood. AYER'S Sarsaparilla is the best medicine to take during the months of MARCH, APRIL, MAY. It is pleasant to the taste, powerful in its action, and always efficacious. It relieves that tired feeling, restores the vigor of health, and makes the weak strong. It quickens the appetite, aids digestion, and is the best—THE SUPERIOR MEDICINE—for all diseases peculiar to SPRING. Take AYER'S Sarsaparilla. Don't be induced to believe that anything else is just as good. Remember AYER'S Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which it is said, HAS CURED OTHERS, WILL CURE YOU.

EVERY WATERPROOF COLLAR OR CUFF

THAT CAN BE RELIED ON

BE UP TO THE MARK

Not to Split!
Not to Discolor!

BEARS THIS MARK.

TRADE ELLULOID MARK.

NEEDS NO LAUNDERING. CAN BE WIPED CLEAN IN A MOMENT.

THE ONLY LINEN-LINED WATERPROOF COLLAR IN THE MARKET.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.
Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entir Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33d inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated'

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated' comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

THE BEST.

EVERITT'S MAN-WEIGHT

HOE, CULTIVATOR PLOW, ETC., SINGLE AND DOUBLE WHEEL.

Will Revolutionize Hand-Power Cultivation—Makes Keeping a Horse an Unnecessary Expense in Many Cases.

This new Invention is a Great Boon to all Cultivators of the Soil, and must be Classed with the Great Inventions of the Age, yet it is so simple that the natural question with every one is, "Why did I not think of that?" And so nicely does it fill a want existing with thousands of gardeners, nurserymen, seedmen, florists, and farmers, that after the first trial they invariably conclude to "never do without it."

All other Garden Tools, Seed Drills, Rollers, etc., can be attached and run with our propeller with many times the power and greater ease than by hand power.

SINGLE WHEEL cultivator, with attachments, price $6.00. W't, 15 lbs.

DOUBLE WHEEL, with attachments, $8.00. W't, 20 lbs.

With every Double Wheel Machine the extra parts are furnished necessary to convert it into the single wheel machine, without extra charge. Thus practically giving the two machines for the price of one.

This best of all hand cultivators to every worker for the Cynosure free as follows:

Two-wheel for 15 new subscribers. ($22.50.) Single-wheel for 12 new subscribers. ($18.00.)

Two-wheel machine, 1 renewal and one new subscriber for $8.50. Same for two new subscribers.

Single wheel and same for $7.00. Express or freight extra.

THE COSMOPOLITAN,

The Cheapest Illustrated Monthly in the World.

25 CENTS A NUMBER.
$2.40 PER YEAR.

EDITION FOR DEC. '90, 100,000 COPIES.

The Cosmopolitan is literally what the New York Times calls it, "At its price, the brightest, most varied and best edited of the magazines."

SUBSCRIBE. SUBSCRIBE. SUBSCRIBE.

An Unusual Opportunity

For New Subscribers for one year only.

The Cosmopolitan, per year	$2.40
The Christian Cynosure	1.50
The price of the two publications	3.90
We will furnish both for only	3.00

This offer is only to new subscribers to both the Cosmopolitan and the Cynosure, and only for one year.

To an old subscriber to the Cynosure who is new to the Cosmopolitan	$3.25
To old subscribers to both	3.50

A Splendidly Illustrated Periodical at a Price hitherto deemed Impossible.

TRY IT FOR A YEAR.

Mention this paper.

books

New Books every week. Catalogue, 132 pages, free; not sold by Dealers; prices too low; buy of the Publisher, John B. Alden, 393 Pearl St., New York.

Farm Notes.

FARMER'S BARN-YARDS.

Some day, when you have nothing else to do, take a ride through the country and count all the neatly-kept barn-yards you see. Even if you have other duties, go, if for no other reason than out of curiosity. In a ride of twenty miles you will not see ten half neatly-kept barn-yards, and not more than two—more likely not one—as it should be kept. You will see a wagon here, another there, over there a sled and in another place a hay-rack, flat on the ground, all ranged about the middle of the lot; and besides all these things you will see plows, corn-planter, harrows, small hay-stacks, piles of boards, rails, posts and many other things I cannot now enumerate, thrown around in a haphazard way that ought to put any farmer to shame. Not a blade of grass to be seen, when there should be a well-sodded yard.

In thinking of the many, many farmers I have known, I can remember but one who has a well-kept barn-yard. And, as the yard indicates, he is a very methodical farmer. "A place for everything and everything in its place," is his motto, and the entire farm shows that his motto has become a reality, not a mere theory.

When he drives into the lot his wagon has a place of its own; each piece of machinery has its own place. Nothing is left in the center of the lot for a horse to run over and perhaps cripple itself. This barn-yard furnishes pasture for two work horses during the summer nights, and for four or five calves through the entire summer; yet it does not contain over two acres. But the horses are never allowed to run in it when the ground is soft. Of course, it never becomes cut up and rough. The farmer has hauled plenty of gravel about the barn, and little or no mud is found there.

As most barn-lots are along the road in line with the house-yard, one would suppose as much care would be taken to keep them in order as is used on other premises. There is just where you are mistaken, as a ride will convince you. The house-yard may be perfectly neat and the adjoining barn-lot may be a perfect slough of filth and disorder.

Why do not these men realize that their lots are but blots on an otherwise lovely picture? Why not use a little forethought when driving in with machinery and vehicles? It takes no longer to drive a wagon to the same place each time, than it does to unhitch wherever the horses may happen to stop.

"But," says one, "I haven't room."

You think you have not room simply because your lot is in such a confused jumble that you do not know yourself how much room you have until you "size up," as the housekeepers say. Just try it once; if not for your own satisfaction, do so for the pleasure of the people who pass your place. At first they may make remarks and be inclined to wonder what can have taken possession of you, it is so unlike you to have order in your barn-yard. But never do you mind their talk; when this systematic plan has become a habit with you, others may be led, seeing your "light," to "go and do likewise."—Farm and Fireside.

In the seventh annual report of the Wisconsin Experiment Station, 1890, Prof. Goff reports a trial of potatoes in which the following varieties were the most productive of the named kinds in 122 entries: Rose Beauty, Monarch, Duplex, Late Hebron, (Late Beauty of Hebron), Mulally, Alexander, Red Jacket, (Seneca Red Jacket), White Hebron, (White Beauty of Hebron) and Wisconsin Beauty. These varieties in order of quality, stand as follows: Alexander, White Hebron, Late Hebron, Duplex, Monarch, Wisconsin Beauty, Red Jacket, Rose Beauty and Mulally. Various methods of cutting were tried with another confirmation of the old result that the heaviest seeding gives the heaviest yield.

A test of strawberries showed the Gipsy to be very early and the Gandy, Welch and Carmichael very late. For market, the following are particularly good: Warfield No. 2, Haverland, Jessie, Wilson, Sharpless, Burt, Eureka, Gipsy, Gandy, Welch, Downing, Cumberland, Lady Rusk, Bubach, Cloud, Carmichael. For home use, these appear to be best: Jessie, Haverland, Gipsy, Sharpless, Warfield No. 2, Eureka, Wilson, Gandy, Burt, Downing, Welch, Cumberland, Bubach, Cloud, Lady Rusk, Carmichael.

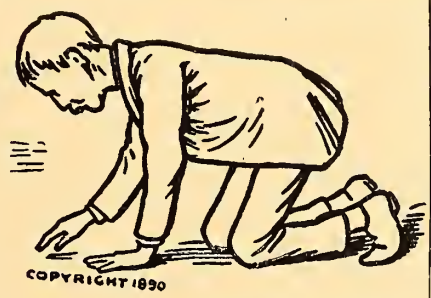
"THE CAT IN GLOVES

catches no mice," and so is the business man handicapped who suffers from sick headache, biliousness and dyspepsia, unless he makes use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

For men or women of sedentary habits, there is nothing equal to them as a gentle laxative to the bowels, and as a regulator of the entire digestive system. No griping, no pain, they are as gentle as Nature herself in their action.

Persons whose business gives them little physical exercise, will do well to always keep a vial in their vest pocket, to ward off all attacks of indigestion.

One little "Pellet" a dose as a laxative; three or four as a cathartic.



Being purely vegetable, they operate without disturbance to the system, diet or occupation. Put up in sealed vials, hence always fresh and reliable, which is not the case with pills put up in wood and pasteboard boxes.

The "Pleasant Pellets" are the only Liver Pill sold, by druggists, under a positive guarantee from their makers, of their giving satisfaction in every case, or price paid for them (25 cents) will be refunded.

They're the cheapest pill sold, because you only pay for the good you get.

Can you ask more?

World's Dispensary Medical Association, Manufacturers, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

Something is lost when you use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It's Catarrh. No matter how bad your case, or of how long standing, you can be cured. Incurable cases are rare. It's worth $500 to you, if you have one. The manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Remedy are looking for them. They'll pay you that amount in cash, if they can't cure you. It's a plain square offer from a responsible business house, and they mean it. It seems too one-sided, too much of a risk. It would be—with any other medicine behind it. But incurable cases are rare—with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

In the Spring.

A TENNYSONIAN ECHO.

In the spring the poet tells us, lapwings crest themselves anew;
In the spring Parisian bonnets make of nothing, much a due.

In the spring the timid lover grasps with firmer hold his pen,
Linking epithets romantic, only in a lover's ken.

In the spring the poet lingers over rhymes of endless age,
Covering many an ancient fancy, to the editorial rage.

In the spring the wise man counteth out his closely hoarded tin,
And he takes Hood's Sarsaparilla till his system's cleansed within.

Then he seems another being, what to him is sun or clime?
Oh, what evils might be spared us if we treated them in time!

Bent on philanthropic deeds he buttonholes his fellow-men,
Saying "Thro' Hood's Sarsaparilla Richard is himself again."

Saying "How ourselves we torture, like the anchorites of old,
By neglecting simple measures, 'tis by every druggist sold.

"And the ills that flesh is heir to, yield before its magic spell; Say, old fellow, buy a bottle! Set you up and make you well."

L'ENVOI.

If in spring the weary tides of health and strength seem running low,
Take Hood's Sarsaparilla till your veins anew with vigor flow.

Grayness, baldness, dandruff, and all diseases of the scalp, and falling of the hair can be cured by using Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer.

Beecham's Pills cure Sick-Headache.

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Green, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. 25cts each.

The St. Louis Sermon.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

Hundreds have been ordered, and many have been the commendations. All orders will be filled (D. V.) on or before the 15th of April. A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover.

Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

WILL SELL FOR

Regular Price.		Selling Price.
	FIVE CENTS.
$ .15	"A Woman's Victory, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp.	$ .05
$ .10	"Washington Souvenir." Portraits of Geo. Washington and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freemasonry. Size 18x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home.	$ .05
	SIX CENTS.
$ .10	"Secret Societies." A Lecture delivered at Oberlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Paper, 36 pp.	$ .06
$ .20	"Reasons Why Secret Societies cannot be Fellowshiped by the United Presbyterian Church." By Rev. J. W. Bain. Pages 149.	$ .06
	TEN CENTS.
$ .15	"My Experience with Secret Societies." By a Traveler. Paper, 51 pp.	$ .10
$ .25	"Sketch of the Life of James G. Birney." His relation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in history. By General William Birney. Paper, 32 pages.	$ .10
	TWENTY CENTS.
$ .30	"Songs for the Times," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohibition and W. C. T. U. meetings. Boards, 152 pages.	$ .20
	TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.
$ .75	"Berea College," Kentucky. An interesting history of the founding of that College for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 87 pages.	.25
	FIFTY CENTS.
$1.00	"National Suicide and its Prevention." The following will show the drift of the book: Measure or Standard of Value; What is Honest Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lumry. Cloth, 224 pp.	$ .50
$1.50	"History of Secret Societies in France," or "The Cradle of Rebellions." By Lucien De La Hodde. Translated from the French by Gen'l. J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp.	$ .50

Sent postpaid to anyaddress on receipt of the selling price.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

SEE THIS!

The latest, most complete edition
Over 235 choice

Reform Songs for the Times.

Only 30c a copy, or 20c by the 100

—AND—

"THE TOBACCO MANIA."

$1 per 100.

For sale here and by the author,

GEO. W. CLARK,
76 W. Montcalm St., Detroit, Mich.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

BUSINESS.

NEW AND OLD.

The Cynosure will continue to supply all its subscribers, new or old, who send $1.50 for the paper, with the Health Calendar and Ropp's Commercial Calculator, as follows: The paper and the Calculator, leatherette bound, No. 1, (publisher's price 50 cents) for $1.70. Morocco bound (price $1.00) for $2.00.

The paper and Calendar (publisher's price 30 cents) for $1.65. The Calculator (No. 1.) or a Calendar free to every old subscriber sending $3.00 for renewal and a new subscriber.

The Calculator is a book of great value for every farmer, mechanic or business man.

The Calendar contains a temperance bill of fare for every day, and hundreds of good recipes. It hangs on the wall in constant sight.

NEW OFFERS.

The Cynosure and the Cosmopolitan Magazine (publisher's price $2.40) to new subscribers only $3.00. To others $3.25.

The Cynosure and Pres. C. A. Blanchard's new book "Educational Papers" for $1.70 to all subscribers.

NEWEST AND BEST.

Read the advertisement of the Manweight Cultivator on another page.

This grand machine which everybody should have who has a garden, whether farmer or gardener or not, we are able to offer at excellent rates to Cynosure subscribers.

We will send the cultivator free to every one who will send us a club of 15 new subscribers at $1.50 each; or the single wheel for a club of 12 new names.

For $8.50 we will send the two-wheel cultivator and the Cynosure two years to new subscribers or a year each to a new and an old. This gives two subscriptions for 50 cts. The single-wheel machine and the same subscriptions for $7.00. We don't pay transportation.

We would be glad to put 100 of these machines at work killing weeds and raising new subscriptions. It is an investment none will regret.

50,000

SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CYNOSURE would bring our reform to the POINT OF SUCCESS. LET US "KEEP EVERLASTINGLY AT IT."

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

with Winchester rifles, and another attack of the strikers means a desperate and bloody battle.

Scottdale, Pa., March 30.—A mob of 1,500 infuriated strikers swept down on the Jimtown plant early this morning, routed the workmen, assaulted several men and threatened the superintendent's life.

About seventy labor leaders and strikers were arrested in the Pennsylvania coke regions Wednesday charged with rioting. All were released on bail.

Mount Pleasant, Pa., April 2.—Fifteen hundred Hungarians, many of whom were drunk, started shortly after midnight toward the Standard works. Shouting intermingled with pistol shots could soon be plainly heard in the direction of Morewood. At 2 o'clock the storm burst with sudden fury at Morewood. The fight was brief and deadly. Two rounds of cartridges were fired by a band of sixty-five guards and seven of the charging mob of strikers fell dead, while at least forty others were wounded —how badly cannot be definitely learned, as they were taken away by their companions.

Seven of the victims of the Morewood shooting were buried Saturday at Scottdale, Pa. Nearly eight thousand Poles, Slavs and Hungarians were at the depot when the funeral train arrived from Morewood, and many delegations carried banners. The officiating priest delivered an address in Polish in which he advised the strikers to return peaceably to their homes and observe the laws.

COUNTRY.

Governor Markham of California, on Tuesday signed the bill making train-wrecking punishable by death.

A new compulsory educational bill has become a law in Wisconsin. The bill provides that children between the ages of 7 and 13 years shall attend school twelve weeks in a year.

J. B. Grinnell, the founder and foremost citizen of Grinnell, Iowa, died March 31. The funeral was an imposing demonstration.

Directors of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad were indicted at New York Tuesday for misdemeanor in connection with the collision in the Fourth Avenue tunnel, February 20, in which six lives were lost. Chauncey M. Depew furnished bonds in the sum of $5,000 for his appearance in court.

A bloody riot occurred in the Keystone, a fashionable restaurant of Omaha, in which six persons were dangerously injured. The trouble resulted from race prejudice and refusal of the employes to serve meals to two Negroes. The colored men insisted that they should receive meals, when the proprietor ordered the waiters to throw them out. Two policemen defended them.

The storm of the last two weeks in Colorado is the worst known there in many years. One railroad train in the Red mountains was snowbound eighteen days.

In a fire at Rochester, Pa., Sunday night a large frame structure in which an Italian family lived overhead was burned. Four of them lost their lives. Six persons are missing.

FOREIGN.

A dispatch from Manapar, province of Assam, brings news of a disaster to a force of native troops there. The Chief Commissioner of Assam has recently been investigating some serious troubles which have occurred among the native chiefs. While pursuing his inquiries into the disputes between the chiefs he occupied a camp which was garrisoned by a strong force of Ghoorkas, native infantry in the British service. Suddenly this camp was attacked by a number of hostile tribes, led by their chiefs. A two days' battle, during which some desperate fighting took place, followed the onslaught of the tribesmen. The Ghoorkas fought most determinedly against heavy odds, and according to the report 470 of the Ghoorkas were killed.

The Viceroy of India is hurrying troops into the province of Assam in order to punish the hostiles who committed the Ghoorka massacre.

The King of Greece is about to become a guest of the Prince of Wales at Marlborough House. He proposes to acquire an estate in England and to reside there permanently, abdicating the throne of Greece in favor of his son, the Duke of Sparta. He has an immense fortune due to bourse speculations.

In the second bombardment of Iquique, in Chile, by the revolutionists and in the battle that followed nearly four thousand people were killed. The government troops were defeated at Gana with the loss of 300 killed.

Prince Bismarck was 76 years old April 1. He received deputations all day with addresses and floral offerings from all parts of Germany. Among them 3,000 congratulatory dispatches, including telegrams from Emperor William, Prince Henry, Count Von Waldersee, and Count Von Moltke.

Ninety-nine delegates, representing a million miners, are attending the international conference at Paris to discuss measures for the improvement of the condition of mine-workers throughout Europe.

Dr. Koch has returned to Berlin from Egypt. He is much depressed over the non-success of his lymph.

It's sometimes said patent medicines are for the ignorant. The doctors foster this idea. "The people," we're told, "are mostly ignorant when it comes to medical science." Suppose they are! What a sick man needs is not knowledge, but a cure, and the medicine that cures is the medicine for the sick. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures the "do believes" and the "don't believes." There's no hesitancy about it, no "if" nor "possibly." It says—"I can cure you; only do as I direct." Perhaps it fails occasionally. The makers hear of it when it does, because they never keep the money when the medicine fails to do good. Suppose the doctors went on that principle. (We beg the doctors' pardon. It wouldn't do!)

Choking, sneezing and every other form of catarrh in the head, is radically cured by Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Fifty cents. Sold by druggists everywhere.

Puget Sound catechism and its chief city SEATTLE, WASHINGTON Send stamp to Eshelman, Llewellyn & Co., Seattle, Wash.

AGENTS WANTED both sexes. $25 to $50 per week EASILY MADE. SAMPLES FREE. Send for terms. W. C. Wilson, Kansas City, Mo.

CRAZY WORK 60 ass'td beautiful Silk and Satin pieces, enough to cover 500 sq. inches, 20c; best, 25c. Lemarie's Silk Mill, Little Ferry, N. J.

Only $20  ODELL DOUBLE CASE TYPE WRITER

It has 78 Characters, and is the only Type Writer with Check Perforator attachment. Is fast taking the lead of all Type Writers. Special terms to Ministers & S.S. Teachers. Send for circulars. Odell Type Writer Co. 85 Fifth Av. Chicago.

PENSIONS OLD CLAIMS Settled Under New Law. Soldiers, Widows, Parents, send for blank applications and information. PATRICK O'FARRELL Pension Agent, Washington, D. C.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer who will send me their Express and P.O. address. T. A. Slocum, M. C., 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—"Civil Service Gazette."

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins, by Grocers, labelled thus:

JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London, England.

BEATTY'S ORGANS, PIANOS, $35 up. Write for Catalogue. Address Dan'l F. Beatty, Washington, N. J.

Dr. Price's Baking Cream Powder.

Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

My Medical Discovery seldom takes hold of two people alike! Why? Because no two people have the same weak spot. Beginning at the stomach it goes searching through the body for any hidden humor. Nine times out of ten, inward humor makes the weak spot. Perhaps its only a little sediment left on a nerve or in a gland; the Medical Discovery slides it right along, and you find quick happiness from the first bottle. Perhaps its a big sediment or open sore, well settled somewhere, ready to fight. The Medical Discovery begins the fight, and you think it pretty hard, but soon you thank me for making something that has reached your weak spot. Price $1.50. Sold by every Druggist in the United States and Canada.

MONEY SAFELY PLACED for investors on Improved Farms in Eastern Nebraska bearing 6 and 6 1-2 per cent interest. No. 1 Security. Over $500,000 already placed. Best of references given. Address H. C. SMITH, Falls City, Nebraska.

WALL PAPER SAMPLES SENT FREE of spring patterns with borders and ceilings to match. One half million rolls offered at wholesale prices. White blanks 4c to 6c, Gilts 8c to 35c. Embossed Gilts 10c to 50c. I will send you the most popular colorings, and guarantee to save you money. ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant, 147-149 W. Madison-st. Chicago

VASELINE.

FOR A ONE-DOLLAR BILL sent us by mail we will deliver, free of all charges, to any person in the United States, all of the following articles, carefully packed:

One two-ounce bottle of Pure Vaseline	10 cts.
One two-ounce bottle of Vaseline Pomade	15 "
One jar of Vaseline Cold Cream	15 "
One Cake of Vascline Camphor Ice	10 "
One Cake of Vaseline Soap, unscented	10 "
One Cake of Vaseline Soap, exquisitely scented	25 "
One two-ounce bottle of White Vaseline	25 "
	$1.10

Or for postage stamps any single article at the price named. On no account be persuaded to accept from your druggist any Vaseline or preparation therefrom unless labelled with our name, because you will certainly receive an imitation which has little or no value. Chesebrough Mfg Co., 24 State St., New York.

PASTOR KOENIG'S TRADE MARK NERVE TONIC

Recommended as the Best.

LE MARS, PLYMOUTH, CO., IA., May, 1889.

I suffered from temporary sleeplessness from overwork for two years, for which I used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, and can recommend same as the best medicine for similar troubles.

F. BORNHORST.

A GREAT BLESSING.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 1, 1887.

I can most truthfully testify to the fact that here in Cleveland, several cases of epilepsy, which were cured by the medicine of Rev. Father Koenig, of Ft. Wayne, Ind., have come under my personal observation. In other similar cases great relief was given even if up to this time they have not been entirely cured. It would certainly be a great blessing if the tidings were more widely circulated that many could be cured by this medicine.

REV. ALARDUS ANDRESCHECK, O. S. F.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

KOENIG MEDICINE CO.,

50 West Madison, cor. Clinton St., CHICAGO, ILL.

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

Price $1 per Bottle. 6 Bottles for $5.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIII., No. 31. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 16, 1891. WHOLE No. 1,094.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Send all business letters relating to the paper to THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by ex press money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.. 1
The Scandinavian Sects. 8
Albert Pike..... 8
Prof. Curtis vs. Agnosticism..... 9
Personal Mention..... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
A Model Reformer..... 1
The Leprosy of Lodgery. 2
Some Grand Lodge Witnesses..... 2
SELECTED:
Separation from the World..... 3
Alliance Members not Oath-bound..... 3
The Identity of Masonry and the Mysteries..... 3
The Coke Strike in Western Pennsylvania..... 4
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 4
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
Humbling a Christian Church by Pagan Rites; Iowa Field Notes; Lotteries and Lodges; An Open Letter to the National Holiness Association; Pith and Point..... 5,6
THE N. C. A 7
AGENTS AND LECTURERS.... 7
THE HOME.....10
TEMPERANCE.....11
BIBLE LESSON.....12
RELIGIOUS NEWS.....12
NEWS OF THE WEEK.....13
FARM NOTES.....14
IN BRIEF.....15
BUSINESS.....16

SPECIAL RATES, ETC.

Read on last page the latest offers for new and old subscribers.

THE MAY CONFERENCE.

After repeated consultations and a special meeting of the Board of Directors, the Conference has been fixed for May 14, in Central Music Hall. It is the plan to have three sessions, one in the morning beginning at 9 o'clock; one in the afternoon beginning at 2; and the third at 8 P. M.

The first two sessions will be held in Apollo Hall and the third in the main auditorium. This is one of the finest halls in the city and is at the center, so that persons coming from the north, west, or south will not have far to walk.

For the evening session an admission fee of twenty-five cents will be charged in order to defray the expenses of the Conference. We hope that our friends in all towns near Chicago will make up companies to attend this gathering. The program will be presently announced. The cause is that of Jesus Christ against the idolatrous substitutes for the religion which he has given to men. We expect to have a large, interesting and profitable meeting. Will you not help to make it so?

It is said that "General" Booth of the Salvation Army is preparing a protest against the action of the Argentine Republic in prohibiting semi-military displays. The report adds that these displays "are the chief features of the warfare of the Salvationists against Satan." Now, this last clause we are inclined to doubt. It has never, we believe, been anything like a chief feature, and ought not to be. If it were true the Salvation Army movement would be no better than the mockeries of Rome. But the action of General Booth puts a different phase on this question. If a nation, desiring to promote the institutions and customs of peace and to make war distasteful, prohibits military display, every Christian man should rejoice. Mr. Booth should thankfully accept the situation, and endeavor to reach and convert the masses of that country by legitimate means, if that is what he proposes to do. His protesting in favor of the display, however, discredits his whole movement, and magnifies his drumming and parading as if this was the object of the Salvation Army, instead the salvation of souls.

The Massachusetts legislature has received a petition, signed by Joseph Cook and others in large number, against the Sunday paper. It asks that the preparation, printing, publishing, sale and delivery of these conscience destroyers be prohibited. The argument of the petition is, however, that the publishing and sale of newspapers should not receive discrimination from the State over any other form of business or labor on the Lord's day.

The "Daughters of Liberty" is the misnomer given a new secret society, made up of women, and auxiliary to the J. O. U. A. M., or "Junior Order of United American Mechanics." These "Mechanics" have no more to do with the work of artisans than Freemasons have with laying stone and mortar. Their auxiliary is diligent in promoting the liberties of the U. S. by dancing parties. Sixteen dances and a supper is their orthodox program in the holy cause of liberty.

Secret political societies continue to be organized in this country where they are least needed of any place in the world,—nay, where they are doing more injury to the cause of civil liberty, just and peaceful government, and the true religion than could be anywhere else possible. In Lansing, Michigan, a few days ago, a farmers' association, calling itself "the Citizens' Alliance and Industrial Brotherhood of Michigan," was formed. The Alliance is a secret political organization, the members of which are bound not to divulge the name of any member for any purpose. A more foolish promise could hardly be conceived.

While the New Orleans Grand Jury is dragging along its slow investigation of the Maffia massacre, there is time for comment. It is evident in the first place, that we shall have nothing like the ringing denunciation of secret crime which the Clan-na-Gael jury gave in this city. And next, the laws and local politics of New Orleans are a standing invitation to the Maffia, Clan-na-Gael, Freemasons, or whatever secret murder society cares to enforce the penalties of its oaths. It is said that the laws of the State allow emigrants to vote at State elections so soon as they have declared their intention of becoming citizens. In consequence ambitious and rascally Italians, escaped perhaps themselves from punishment due their crimes in Italy, are caressed and protected by politicians who know how to use them for selfish ends. The special occupation of these bandit politicians, says the Italian consul at New Orleans, is "to naturalize newly arrived Italians here." Therefore there is a rush for every emigrant vessel to secure votes, corruption and crime are rampant in a great city, and the whole nation is threatened with war as the result. If our government must suffer for the venality and corruption of New Orleans, why should there not be a way to prevent such a condition in that or any other city?

Miss Florence Kallock, pastor of the Englewood Universalist church of this city, read a paper before the Illinois Woman's Press Association, Thursday evening. Her subject was the *un*dress fashion that prevails among certain females on extraordinary occasions; and she extended her earnest and wholesome remarks to the "nude" in art as well as the nude in nature. This "nude" art business was widely discussed during the Centennial, because some contributions of French artists seemed more appropriate for a brothel than for public exhibit. A protest against a repetition of that gross offense against good sense and good morals, falsely made in the name of "art," is already made in several quarters. The Quaker philanthropist, Josiah Leeds, has written ably on this topic. It is noteworthy in this connection that the Minnesota Legislature has has in hand a law against the shameful theatrical nudities that prevail in all our cities; and an Opera company in Minneapolis thinks to arouse public ridicule by wearing "bloomers." It is a good law, worth enacting and enforcing in every State. It may be also indicative of a healthier public opinion that a leading theatre of New York city, the "Union Square," has been closed for a week, because outraged public opinion and the mayor demanded that a certain play be stopped forthwith.

A MODEL REFORMER.

BY REV. M. A. GAULT.

I feel thankful for the privilege recently of spending a few days in the home of Dr. J. N. Norris, while lecturing at Birmingham, Iowa. I was glad to see once more in the flesh this veteran reformer whose name was so often connected with the anti-slavery reform in the early history of Iowa, and for many years has, more than any other in the State, been connected with the anti-secret reform. He has for some time been afflicted with nervous prostration and dizziness, which confines him almost entirely to the house. Though in his seventy-fifth year, his fine physique seems very little impaired, and he converses upon reform themes with as much interest and clearness as ever. He reads the reform papers thoroughly, especially the Cynosure. He thinks Dr. J. Blanchard is the greatest reformer of his generation, and reads carefully everything from his pen. He is a close and deeply interested observer of reform movements.

Years ago when he began the agitation of the anti-secret question in Birmingham, it was a hotbed of secret societies, and strongly under their influence. Now there is perhaps no town in the State where there is such a strong anti-secret sentiment, and the lodge power is almost entirely broken. They have surrendered their charters and are ashamed to perform their heathen ceremonies at funerals. On the street, and in stores where the lodge question is often the theme of discussion, there are few willing to risk an apology for it. The town has an anti-secret reputation for a hundred miles around. If you remark that you are coming from, or going to Birmingham, lodge men size you up with suspicious glances. Those who know the town best say it is unsurpassed for its orderly, well-behaved people; but at a distance there are all sorts of reports to the contrary.

No one in Birmingham has had so great influence in promoting this anti-lodge sentiment as Dr. Norris. His devoted, consistent Christian life, his judicious, constant agitation, his liberal contributions in supporting anti-secret organizations and lectures, his frequent and pointed contributions for the press—all these have told mightily in creating an anti-lodge sentiment. I was sorry to hear him express the fear that he was nearing the end of life's journey and that his work was nearly finished. But I pray that God will spare him to see the complete triumph of the cause he has so faithfully served. He is a model reformer.

If every town in our country would agitate this question as faithfully as Birmingham under the leadership of Dr. Norris, the secret society question would be solved, and would not now be a danger menacing the very life of the Republic. Every such question must be settled by a war, either of words or bullets, and Dr. Norris would rather take his out in words. If this question ever does crimson our land with blood, as the slavery question did, the responsibility will not rest upon Dr. Norris, but upon those who will not do their part in the agitation.

Blanchard, Iowa.

THE LEPROSY OF LODGERY.

BY REV. J. M. FOSTER.

The names of the secret orders are legion, because they are many. They are the dry-rot on our social body. They are the fretting leprosy in the church. They are the parasite absorbing the happiness and security of the home. They are evil and only evil, and that continually. Secret oath-bound orders are the Giant of Gath defying the armies of the living God. And until our New Testament David smites our enemy with the small stone of Divine truth the church's work will languish.

1. They are a standing menace to our Republic.

Out of 13,000,000 voters at least 2,000,000 belong to secret orders. They hold the balance of power in every closely-contested election. This government does not want its policy dictated from the dark recesses of the lodge. Either we must throttle this monster serpent or like the serpents of Laocoon it will crush us in its coils. The government found it necessary to assail the Knights of the Golden Circle, the White Leagues, the Molly Maguires and the Ku-Klux clans as a means of self-protection. The Supreme Court of the United States has decided that any one who has taken the Endowment House oaths of the Mormon hierarchy should not be naturalized, and if he has been naturalized, should be disfranchised. The highest tribunal in this land has decreed that the secret oaths of that religious fraternity disqualify those taking them for becoming citizens; or, if citizens, for exercising the privileges of citizenship.

The murder of Dr. Cronin in Chicago led to the trial of the order of Clan-na-Gael. Their horrid oaths were exposed just as the wicked oaths of the Endowment House in Salt Lake City were brought to light in the trial over the Idaho test oaths disfranchising Mormons. The courts have declared that these disloyal oaths disqualify those taking them for citizenship.

The secret Mafia came over to us from Italy and showed their nature in New Orleans, in the assassination of Chief of Police Hennessey. The massacre which lately transpired cannot be justified. But a secret oath-bound gang of ruffians and brigands cannot be tolerated here.

The Jesuits are an oath-bound society. They have sworn absolute allegiance to the Pope. The Encyclopædia Btitannica says that "Jesuitism, as a secret oath-bound body is a naked sword with its hilt at Rome and its point everywhere." That sword is brandished against the public schools in our land. Joseph Cook sees the sword and gives timely warning. He says: "Our Republic rests its chief weight on a tripod of which the chief supports are a free church, a free school, and a free State. Break one of the supports and the whole tumbles." The Boston Committee of One Hundred declared that the disloyal oaths of the Jesuits should disqualify the takers for citizenship. These disloyal oaths caused them to be driven from Germany and Italy, and from the South American Republics. And it will be necessary to disfranchise them in our land.

The murder of Morgan by the Freemasons caused forty-five out of every fifty of the members to leave that order. In their indignation they exposed the oaths by which the lodge bound its members. This gave rise to the law which was passed by the Vermont Legislature in 1833:

"A person who administers to another an oath or affirmation or obligation in the nature of an oath which is not required or authorized by law, or a person who voluntarily suffers such oath or obligation to be administered to him, or voluntarily takes the same, shall be fined not more than $100 and not less than $50; but this section shall not prohibit an oath or affidavit for the purpose of establishing a claim, petition or application by an individual or corporation administered without intentional secrecy by a person authorized to administer oaths, or an oath or affidavit for the verification of commercial papers or documents relating to property, or which may be required by a public officer or tribunal of the United States or of any State, or any other country, nor abridge the authority of a magistrate."

In 1839 the penalty was increased to $200. Let the Vermont law be adopted in every State and secret oath-bound societies will be ruined. Massachusetts and New Hampshire adopted the Vermont law. Daniel Webster, the great lawyer and statesman, said:

"All secret associations, the members of which take upon themselves extraordinary obligations to one another and are bound together by secret oaths, are natural sources of jealousy and just alarm to others, and especially unfavorable to harmony and mutual confidence among men living together under public institutions, and are dangerous to the general cause of civil liberty and justice. Under the influence of this conviction I heartily approve the law lately enacted in the State of which I am a citizen, for abolishing all such oaths and obligations."

The Vermont law needs no justification. It carries its own vindication. In 1833 it "repealed the charter of one of these Grand Lodges. It took away from each chapter of that State all power to hold property." Apply that law and Freemasonry would be driven from the Union. Apply that law and every lodge whose members are bound by oaths to secrecy will be swept away. An officer of a Grand Lodge in Missouri in 1867, said:

"Not only do we know no North, no South, no East, no West, but we know no government save our own. To every government save that of Masonry, and to each and all alike, we are foreigners. We are a nation of men bound to each other only by Masonic ties, as citizens of the world, and that world the world of Masonry; brethren to each other all the world over; foreigners to all the world besides."

That is treason. The government must take knowledge of it. Let the Vermont law be applied.

2. The churches, as a matter of self-protection, should disfellowship all members of secret oath-bound societies.

(1) They absorb the church's resources. A minister in Hamilton, O., complained that there were ten lodges represented in his congregation and they took the lion's share of their time and money. If the time and means spent on the lodge were devoted to the church, the world would soon be brought to a knowledge of the Saviour. It is a sin and shame that the professed friends of Christ should waste the resources of his kingdom in such a way. For this sin and scandal they should be suspended.

(2) They administer immoral oaths. Many of the oaths administered in the lodge are blasphemous, and all are immoral. To take an oath is to engage in a most solemn act of worship. To make a solemn appeal to God that we will keep secret something the nature and purport of which is to be learned later, involves gross immorality. Those guilty of it should be denied the privileges of the church.

(3) They exclude Christ from the lodge. There are secret orders of which this may not seem to be true. But many having Jews, pagans, Mohammedans and free thinkers in their membership, do not allow the name of Christ mentioned in their prayers or exercises. For a Christian to go where he cannot take his Saviour is an open and shameful indignity offered to the Lord that bought him. While the Bible is used in the lodge, the passages are mutilated and the name that is above every name is in every case eliminated, involving the curse pronounced upon those who take from the words of "this Book." The church members who do this should be disciplined. They should leave the lodge or be suspended.

In a conversation with Dr. Fairchild, the late lamented president of Berea College, Ky., I asked: "Would you receive a Mason into the membership of the church?" "No," he replied. "Upon what grounds would you refuse him?" "I would show him the evils connected with lodge. And if he still refused to leave the order, would conclude that he was not a child of grace."

Joseph Cook says: "The Christless prayers and mutilated passages of the Bible are sugar-coated pills. A minister may shut his eyes and swallow them. But he does not envy the state of his intellectual stomach, and his breath would not be sweet enough to preach the Gospel for him."

Let us listen to the closing words of Joseph Cook's lecture before the National Christian Association Conference in Chicago, from which the facts here given have been gleaned:

"Let those who are outside of oath-bound secret societies stay out. I exhort you to stay out in the name of personal independence, stay out in the name of patriotism, stay out in the name of Christianity. And to you who are inside oath-bound organizations I say, Come out as patriots, come out as Christians, come out as unmanacled men."

Cincinnati, O.

SOME GRAND LODGE WITNESSES.

SET IN ORDER BY M. N. BUTLER.

"LANDMARK EIGHTEENTH."

"Certain qualifications of candidates for initiation are derived from a Landmark of the order. These are that he shall be a man—shall be unmutilated, free born, and of mature age. That is to say a woman, a cripple, or a slave or one born in slavery, is disqualified for initiation into the rites of Masonry."—Mackey's Masonic Jurisprudence, Great Law Book of Masonry, pages 31 and 32.

"Whenever Freemasonry gets so far down that it resolves its lodges into hospitals for the halt, deaf and blind, and starts out as a humantarian institution, to throw its mantle of relief over the profane world and bring in beggars and cripples with a drag-net, then it is time for it to throw aside its standard as a Royal Art and bury its landmarks out of sight."—Missouri Masonic Grand Lodge Report for 1867.

THE MORGAN AFFAIR.

"Fifteen hundred lodges went down in the strife! The ranks of the craftsmen were reduced in numbers from rising fifty thousand to less than five thousand. The songs of the temple-builders ceased. Grass grew in the quarries."—Iowa Masonic Grand Lodge Report, 1858.

WHOLESALE MASONIC PERJURY.

"But for those lodges that will not make Annual Reports, justice and judgment ought to be invoked. No one thing in all the business of Grand Secretary is so provoking as this sublime indifference to making out and forwarding the Annual Returns. We do not prize the moral worth of such lodges, as thus commit perjury, in violating the law of the Grand Lodge, which they have promised to support and maintain."—Missouri Grand Lodge Report, 1880.

BOGUS MASONRY.

"It is known to many of you that for something like twenty-five years this Grand Lodge has been engaged in an effort to discover and establish a correct standard of work of the several degrees of Ancient Craft Masonry under its charge, and to promulgate the same to all the lodges in its jurisdiction."—New York Masonic Grand Lodge Report, 1880. Also see Missouri Report, 1880.

[Thus since the revival of Masonry just before the war New York Masons have been selling bogus Masonry. Morgan knocked their ritual into smithereens.]

"Bro. Lewis says: 'We remember a case in point. An individual was initiated, passed and raised, not many years ago, in a lodge within a jurisdiction where we were acquainted. Scarcely had he assumed the perpendicular when he was discovered to be the brightest Mason among them, which was possible in that lodge without his learning producing disease of the brain. Inquiries were set on foot as to where he had gathered his remarkable lore. The general supposition was that he had consumed the midnight oil over the literary labors of the renowned Morgan, or had held ghostly communion with the shade of that individual.'"—Missouri Grand Lodge Report, 1868, page 112.

MASONIC GAMBLING.

"From what I have been enabled to learn as regards existing evils in matters of games of chance indulged in by members of our order, I am decidedly of the opinion that this appeal comes to you, my brethren, freighted with human sorrows, mingled with the widow's wail and the orphan's cry, calling aloud for such relief at your hands as may be necessary to arrest the flood-tide of evil by which, it is to be feared, that some even of our own number are going down into the depths of hopeless despair and utter ruin. We endeavor by precept at least, to make the impression that one of our leading objects we have in view is to inculcate sound morality, as founded upon the great moral principles set forth in the sacred volume, ever found upon our altar, which we receive as the rule and guide of our faith and practice, and without which no lodge can have a legal existence. We publish abroad and proclaim to earth's remotest bounds, and call upon all men to witness our sincerity in the professions we make, that our mission in the world is nothing less than the inculcation of a better, purer, higher life among men. But after all, my brethren, professions alone, by whatever high-sounding title dignified, may be nothing more than sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal, for the uninitiated will judge of the institution by the conduct of its individual members."—Florida Masonic Grand Lodge Report, 1881. Also Missouri Report, 1881.

[Freemasonry itself is a game of chance, and buying it is like buying a pig in a poke. Behind its tyled doors gamblers and confidence men find fraternity and congenial fellowship. The thinking, observing, conscientious men, roped into the order, are astounded and stand aghast at the widespread gambling, immorality and dissipation fostered and practiced in lodge circles and associations. Our revised "Grand Lodge Masonry" will be a black chapter on Masonic chicanery.]

Avalon, Mo.

SEPARATION FROM THE WORLD.

MR. MOODY'S DISCOURSE REPORTED FOR MESSIAH'S HERALD.

The church to-day is hand-in-glove with the world. We needn't talk about getting the world into the church. It is in already. Look at 2 Cor. 6: 14–18. Here we are commanded not to be "unequaliy yoked together with unbelievers." Now I am sure that you will not say amen to what I utter. God draws a line between the church and the world. He calls for separation. If you do not intend to separate fully from the world, I advise you to stay in the world altogether. This "unequal yoking" applies to the marriage relation. But you say, "I will marry whom I please. I can lead him to Jesus and into the church." But thousands have found out their mistake.

I asked a Christian lady why she went with her husband to the theatre. She replied: "Because he says, 'If you don't go, I will get some one that will go;'" and thus she is kept under the iron heel of worldliness.

This rule applies to having ungodly men as partners in business. Take a firm of three, and two are ungodly. The two decide to do a wrong thing, and the third, the Christian, has to be responsible for it.

So of the Odd-fellows and Freemasons. You will not have much Holy Ghost power until you get out of them. Why don't you say amen to this? ("Amen!" cried a few.) But you couldn't say amen until I reminded you of it. One man told me he belonged to seven lodges. All his time was given to them. He had none for meetings.

But, you say, "Mr. Moody, don't you think we will have more influence over them if we go and unite with them?" No, I don't. Abraham had more influence in Sodom than Lot had. Jehoshaphat had great power at the commencement of his reign. See 2 Chron. 17: 1–6. "His heart was lifted up in the ways of the Lord," and God blessed him. He sent out Bible readers "throughout all the cities of Judah," "who taught the people." 2 Chron. 17: 7–10. But he formed an alliance with Ahab, the wicked, idolatrous king of Israel. 2 Chron. 18: 1. This nearly cost him his life, as you will see by reading the chapter. Think of Jehoshaphat going down to Samaria and having family worship with Ahab and Jezebel, who were in league with hell.

When the church stoops to the world she loses her power. The church should have no godless choirs. If she has she can have no power. There is a tree in my native town that stands on a border line. That tree gets more stones, clubs and broomsticks thrown into it than any other in the place. The border line is a dangerous place to stay. Either remain in the world, or come clear out. Look at Num. 11: 4–6. The "mixed multitude" did the mischief They forgot their cruel tasks, making brick without straw, and their hard bondage, and longed for the flesh pots of Egypt. So many church members long for the theatre, parties and places of worldly amusement. Such cannot keep in communion with God.

Bro. Moorehouse had a gold chain given him to hand to a friend. He put it in his pocket, and when he took it out it was black. He said he wouldn't give it to the friend, but brought it back to his brother and told him he had been cheated. His brother asked him where he put it, and found that he had lead in his pocket. The lead got on to the gold, but the gold did not get on to the lead.

We can't save the world by going into it. We can't make the ocean sweet by putting a piece of fresh meat into it.

A man gave bread to the sparrows. They flocked about him. They couldn't sing. All they could do was to chirp, chirp, chirp. He had a beautiful canary—a sweet singer. Soon he found that his singer was chirping. He took it away, but it was never fully delivered from its chirping. So with these worldly Christians. All they can do is to chirp, chirp, chirp.

"But, Mr. Moody, don't Christ say that we must stay in the world?" Let us see. John 17: 14–17. He gave them God's Word, and the world hated them. The world is at war with God and always has been. Christ prayed, not that they might be taken "out of the world," but kept "from the evil." The world in the church kills her power.

I live on the banks of the Connecticut river. Many logs float down the river. To have the log in the water does no harm, but when the water gets into the log, it sinks to the bottom. It is water logged—the same with many Christians.

Christ didn't feel the Roman spear as keenly as the wounds received in the house of his friends. Billy Bray was asked about the world, and said he didn't know, as he had not been it for several years.

The Missouri river is very muddy. Where it runs into the Mississippi it dirties the water on one side for miles. But after a while it gains the ascendency, and the entire river is dirtied.

Let a little of the world in and soon all your power will be gone, and your usefulness will be at an end.

ALLIANCE MEMBERS NOT OATH-BOUND.

[From the N. Y. Witness.]

To the Editor:—On first page of the Witness for March 18 is an editorial article condemning the Farmers' Alliance for taking an oath of its members. You ask that if you are not right some member will correct you, as you get your information from the newspapers. I enclose application for membership, and so-called oath, and you can judge for yourself. I like the Witness very much; could not keep house without it. Yours truly, McComb, O. S. F. Leader.

ARTICLE XII.

Sec. 1. Every person upon being admitted to membership in the Subordinate Alliance, shall accept and sign the following obligation:

I, A—— B——, do say that I understand the objects and purposes of the Farmer's Alliance, and that I heartily approve of the same; that I have joined the Alliance of my own free will, and not from any selfish, improper or partisan motive; and I hereby pledge myself upon my sacred honor to labor heartily to accomplish the purpose of the Alliance; and to maintain a Subordinate Alliance; to faithfully attend its meetings; to perform to the best of my ability the duties that may be assigned me as a member of the Alliance; to promptly pay the dues provided for by the constitution of the State Alliance, and not to impart to any unauthorized person any information of the business of the Alliance.

The Farmer's Alliance oath has been frequently referred to in the newspapers, and this is the first denial of its existence that has come under our notice. The newspaper statements referred, however, more especially to the members of Legislatures elected by the Alliance, who were reported to be bound by oath to vote in accordance with the bidding of the Alliance. We would like to know what sort of pledge, if any, the Alliance demands from men whom it nominates for office.

A man who is pledged to obey orders is not a free man, and therefore not fit to assume any share in the government of a free country. The only kind of pledge which any voter has a right to demand from the candidate of his choice is that he will advocate or support certain specified measures or nominations. A man who is conscientiously in favor of the proposed action can make such a promise without resigning his liberty. But a promise of obedience to dictation on matters not definitely specified, whether it be in the nature of an oath or not, is in itself immoral.

Even the modified form of pledge above given is objectionable because it is capable of being construed into an obligation to obey all orders given by the Alliance, and because the obligation to secrecy which it contains is wholly indefensible.

"He that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest," said the Master. But the Farmer's Alliance sets up a different standard, and declares that if you want to do good you must hide behind a vow of secrecy. Men who profess to serve Christ should accept his teaching as the supreme law, and refuse to give any pledge of secrecy.

But apart from any religious issue it is contrary to good morals for an association which undertakes to meddle with public affairs to transact its business in secret. However honest the members of such an association may be and however worthy its object, it cannot fail to produce evil fruit. Because, down at its very roots is this poisonous worm of secrecy, poisoning all the sap that flows through its veins.

No, no, friends of the Alliance, you mean well, but you cannot do well by any such means.

THE IDENTITY.

Though Masonry is identical with the ancient mysteries, it is so in this qualified sense, that it presents but an imperfect image of their brilliancy.—Albert Pike, Grand Commander of the Supreme Council, Sovereign Grand Inspectors-General, in "Morals and Dogma," p. 624.

"The Blue Degrees are but the outer court of the Temple. Part of the symbols are displayed there to the initiate, but he is intentionally misled by false interprctations. It is not intended that he shall understand them, but it is intended that he shall imagine that he does understand them. Their true explanation is reserved for the Princes of Masonry."—(Morals and Dogma, p. 819.)

Acacia, Sprig of. No symbol is more interesting to the Masonic student than the sprig of acacia. . . . . .

It is, lastly, a symbol of initiation.

This symbolism is derived from the fact that it is the sacred plant of Masonry; and in all the ancient rites there were sacred plants, which became in each rite the respective symbol of initiation into its Mysteries; hence the idea was borrowed by Freemasonry.

Adonia. The Mysteries of Adonis, principally celebrated in Phœnicia and Syria. They lasted for two days, and were commemorative of the death and restoration of Adonis. The ceremonies of the first day were funereal in their character, and consisted in the lamentations of the initiates for the death of Adonis, whose picture or image was carried in procession. The second day was devoted to mirth and joy for the return of Adonis to life. In their spirit and their mystical design, these Mysteries bore a very great resemblance to the third degree of Masonry, and they are quoted to show the striking analogy between the ancient and the modern initiations.

Aphanism (to conceal). In each of the initiations of the ancient Mysteries, there was a scenic representation of the death or disappearance of some god or hero, whose adventures constituted the legend of the Mystery. That part of the ceremony of initiation which related to and represented the death or disappearance was called the aphanism.

Freemasonry, which has in its ceremonial form been framed after the model of these ancient Mysteries, has also its aphanism in the third degree.

Cabiri. Certain gods, whose worship was first established in the Island of Samothrace, where the Cabiric Mysteries were practiced until the beginning of the Christian era. They were four in number, and by some are supposed to have referred to Noah and his three sons. In the Mysteries there was a legend of the death and restoration to life of Atys, the son of Cybele. The candidate represented Cadmillus, the youngest o the Cabiri, who was slain by his three brethren. The legend of the Cabiric Mysteries, as far as it can be understood from the faint allusions of ancient authors, was in spirit and design very analogous to that of the third degree of Masonry.

Cairns. Heaps of stones of a conical form, erected by the Druids. Some suppose them to have been sepulchral monuments; others, altars. They were undoubtedly of a religious character, since sacrificial fires were lighted upon them, and processions were made around them. These processions were analogous to the circumambulations in Masonry, and were conducted like them with reference to the apparent course of the sun.

Circumambulation. The ceremony of perambulating the lodge, or going in procession around the altar, which was universally practiced in the ancient initiations and other religious ceremonies, and was always performed so that the persons moving should have the altar on their right hand. The rite was symbolic of the apparent daily course of the sun from the East to the West by the way of the South, and was undoubtedly derived from the ancient sun-worship.

Dionysus. Or Bacchus; mythologically said to be the son of Zeus and Semele. In his Mysteries he was identified with Osiris, and regarded as the sun. His Mysteries prevailed in Greece, Rome, and Asia, and were celebrated by the Dionysiac artificers—those builders who united with the Jews in the construction of King Solomon's temple. Hence, of all the ancient Mysteries, they are the most interesting to the Masonic student.

G. A. O. T. U. A Masonic abbreviation used as a symbol of the name of God, and signifying the Grand Architect of the Universe. It was adopted by the Freemasons in accordance with a similar practice among all the nations of antiquity of noting the Divine Name by a symbol.

[The above quotations are from the Synoptical Index of Mackey's Symbolism of Masonry.]

THE COKE STRIKE IN WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

The most exciting topic just now is the riot among the coke men in the Mount Pleasant coal region. There, for some weeks past, a strike for some alleged grievance, or to obtain some coveted advantage, has been threatening the vast property interests of the coal and coke firms. Some fifteen thousand men, with their families, perhaps fifty or sixty thousand people in all, are arrayed under the leadership of a few official demagogues with high-sounding "Grand Master" (ful) titles and large salaries, against the organized capital that has given them work and much better wages than the farmer gets, or than they could get but for these vast coal firms. Doubtless there are faults on the employer's side, but is this the way to abate them? He compels no man to work for him. The employee, be he skillful or unskillful, his wages high or low, can leave at any time and for any cause. He can go in peace. This, if general among the workmen, would soon bring the capitalist employer to terms. His employees would soon find out just how much they are worth to him, by what he might be willing to pay them rather than have his capital go idle. But no; the modern and popular way is to compel the payment of so much money, and the observance of such and such terms, and by force and opprobious titles hindering those from working who would be glad of the wages, and conditions against which a leader-ridden majority has struck. Until we have laws, not compelling men to work for such and such wages, but punishing those who attempt by force to hinder men from working under the laws, when, where, for whom and for what they please, there is probably little or no remedy for these terrible evils. Yes, "terrible!" Fifty thousand people starving! fifteen thousand men demoralized! the industries of the country crippled! millions of property jeopordized! the industrious workmen of other parts of the country compelled by this secret order to support the idle wrong-doers with their own hard earnings! Terrible! Yes, war itself is scarcely more so. It is war. The declared purpose, and often the reality is to use just so much force and violence as are necessary to "conquer a peace" and compel compliance. War it is, in dead earnest; for while we write, the telegrapher is busy taking off the messages of rioting, bloodshed, slaughter. "Seven killed," "eight killed," "eleven killed," "many wounded," "another attack feared," "the militia called out," etc., etc. Where will it all end? Just where the opponents of all secret societies, from Masonry to the Mafia and the Mollies, around by the Sons of Temperance, Good Templars, and Farmers' Alliance, have always said it would, sooner or later, in a general bloody struggle between the free friends of liberty, and these powers of and in darkness.

Before this reaches your readers the telegraph will inform the country of the immediate damage to life and property.

By the way, what worse is the Mafia that killed Policeman Hennessy in New Orleans than Masonry that killed Morgan in western New York and the Methodist minister in Huntingdon, W. Va.? The Mafia, regardless of law, used only so much and such kind of force as it thought necessary to attain its ends. So did, and so do, the Masons. This, and no less or more is what I. O. O. F., K. P., K. L., S. V., I. O. G. T., F. B. A., G. A. R., J. O. U. A. M., etc., etc., each and all do, and bind themselves, some by oath, some by vow, some by solemn promise on their honor, etc., to do. And this in one form or other they do use, and use it effectually, too. For this, using just so much and such kind of force as they thought necessary, eleven Italians were lynched in New Orleans; and the people say, Amen; the Mafia must be suppressed, even if Italy and America go to war over it. Why should the full-grown Mafia-fox be throttled, and all these little foxes that as certainly, if not as ruthlessly, spoil the vines, be even fed and petted in the highest places and with the best offices and salaries in church and state throughout the land? An echo answers, Why?—Correspondence Christian Instructor.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Ministers and doctors.—A singular advertisement.—The influence of Rome.—A relic of colonial days.—The Farmers' Alliance.—Aggressive work for New England.

Among the wise and witty sayings of Dr. Cheever, none are wiser or wittier than this: that "the readiest way to kill some men is to give them a reputation. They'll spend the rest of their lifes taking care of it." I presume he had the ministerial profession in mind, but timidity in speaking their convictions is not confined to clergymen. How many doctors preach the gospel of hygienic living, of sunshine, fresh air, and plain, wholesome food? How many physicians will tell a fine lady patient that her corsets are a main cause of her ill-health? or that nothing special ails her except the lack of any purpose in life with which to worthily employ her misused because unused energies of mind and body? There may be a larger number who will tell a young man that he is hurting himself with tobacco, because both men and women are more disposed to tell plain truths to each other than to the opposite sex; but neither doctors or clergymen have denounced this vile habit so universally as we have a right to expect of them, considering that they are the guardians, the one of the physical, the other of the spiritual interests of the people.

I was amused the other day by an advertisement in the Transcript, which was somewhat out of the ordinary line. It was under the list of Wanted:

"A young lady competent to edit letters and advertisements; one whose dresses do not trail in the streets, has no birds nor feathers in her hat, but humane generally. Red hair, freckles, humpback (slightly) no objection, but must be good and sensible."

I concluded that this "good and sensible" young person was readily found, as the advertisement did not appear but once. They are plenty as violets on a May morning, but like them they do not flaunt their charms in the eye of every beholder. Brave, gentle, self-contained, with their sweet mingling of modesty and independence,—how many such cross our path every day! And yet foreigners, as well as some of our own countrymen who ought to know better, seem to be perfectly blind to their existence, and recognize only that dreadful creature, "the girl of the period," as representative of America's young womanhood.

The conversion of Rose Hawthorne Lathrop and her husband to the Romish church has been the occasion of much comment by the press, but I doubt whether Hawthorne himself, if living, would have taken it very much to heart. He painted the old Puritan life of New England as no hand had ever painted it before, or ever will again, but it was not because he was personally in sympathy with the Puritan character; for he was intensely conservative, politically a Democrat, and if he did not favor slavery was averse to all agitation of the subject. His appreciation of it was purely of an artistic kind. It gave play to his weird imagination which had throughout a streak of medievalism. In his last book, "The Marble Faun," there is a scene where the heroine, oppressed with the knowledge of a terrible secret, unburdens herself at the confessional, and in spite of her New England birth and training feels great relief by so doing. Perhaps it is not so very strange after all that Hawthorne's children should take to Romanism. But it is passing strange that a man so astute as Gen. Sherman should say to a Washington correspondent, when speaking of his son's becoming a priest, "I had no objection to the girls being under their mother's influence, but I claimed the boys." As if in his own family he had not had overwhelming evidence that a girl can wield tenfold the influence of her brother, either for good or evil! As for the controversy over Gen. Sherman's religious views, it proves, if nothing else, that Rome, like the lodge, has an especial care for noted men when they die.

Speaking of colonial times, there died in 1801, at Kingston on the Cape, a man who linked the opening of this century with the days of the Pilgrims; for he remembered Peregrine White, the first white child born in New England. "Grandfather Cobb," as he was familiarly called, reached the wonderful age of 107, and was born and died in a house said to have been used as a garrison house in the time of King Phillip's war. And now, this old historic building has just been destroyed by fire. One does not like to appeal to Mammon instead of patriotism in such a cause, but these relics of by-gone days are financially worth all the pains that can be taken to preserve them. Every year the stream of summer tourists to New England's historic Meccas is increasing, and it would be money in her pocket if she would arouse to the importance of doing so before it is too late.

Rhode Island's Nationalist candidate for governor received 384 votes. Not a large number to be sure, but no one can prophesy whereto it may grow. The organ of the movement in Boston, the Nationalist, has been obliged to suspend for want of patronage, but its place is taken by Mr. Bellamy's new paper, the New Nation, whose success is by no means assured. In these days, however, if anybody has a new doctrine or theory to propound there is but one thing for him to do; —evoke the mighty power of the press and start another paper.

The Farmers' Alliance is working in New England, I do not know with what success; but if this secret order with its Southern origin and ex-rebel leadership, gets anything of a hold on Yankee farmers who perhaps fought in the civil war or had sons that did, it will be a case where, to revise an old proverb, "the lodge makes strange bed-fellows." A leading daily in commenting on this subject, says, "The people who listen to the blatant voice of the demagogue, will some day learn that wealth is the product of intelligence and industry and not of legislation."

The Springfield Republican states that one of the endowment concerns so common in Massachusetts, which goes by the modest title of the "Universal Order of Co-operation," has been put into the hands of a receiver in Pennsylvania, with a very poor prospect that its 23,000 foolish members will ever get back any of the money out of which they have been swindled; and adds reflectively, "But what a harvest of similar receiverships is in store for this State!"

The establishment of a weekly meeting in Boston for the discussion of the lodge question, is one among the many plans which Bro. Stoddard has in mind for the enlargement of our anti-secret work, and some of the leading pastors in the city have given their voices in favor of the movement.

How long would it take to save our beloved New England from lodge rule if every anti-secretist throughout her length and breadth would rally to support him and his equally noble and self-denying wife with their pocket-books and their prayers! At least let the trial be made.

Elizabeth E. Flagg.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C., April 8, 1891.

Senator Peffer, Kansas, is proving to be an aid to the cause of temperance at the national capital. There are a number of gentlemen who occupy seats in the United States Senate who are temperance men in their own habits, but who, for some reason or other, never speak in public for temperance. Mr. Peffer not only believes in practicing temperance himself, but he believes in preaching it for the benefit of others as often as an opportunity occurs. He has already made a wide circle of acquaintances among our people, and it is constantly widening. But it must be regretted that his first public effort is to be in a Sunday afternoon meeting, held under the auspices of the Good Templars.

It is a matter for congratulation that the only official recognition of the Deity by the Government of the United States—the motto "In God We Trust," upon our coins—is not to be discarded in the new designs for silver coins that the artists of the country have been requested, by circular, to submit to the Director of the Mint; although,—shame to say!—there are people who wish it to be left off. It is not generally known how and why this motto was adopted for our coins. The following synopsis, as told at the Treasury Department, may not therefore be devoid of interest: In November, 1861, a minister wrote a letter to Mr. Chase, then Secretary of the Treasury, calling attention to the fact that this great government did not in any way officially recognize the existence of God, and suggesting that it could easily be done on the coins issued by it. The Secretary favorably endorsed the idea and referred it to the Director of the Mint, who found that the motto upon the coins could not be changed without the sanction of Congress. In December, 1863, the Director of the Mint submitted designs for a new three-cent, two-cent and one-cent piece, on which it was proposed to place one of these mottoes: "Our Country, Our God," "God, Our Trust." Secretary Chase was not pleased with either of them, and suggested "In God We Trust," which was adopted, and appeared first upon the two-cent piece, authorized by act of Congress April 22, 1864. The coinage of the two-cent piece has long since been stopped, but the motto "In God We Trust" is now upon all of our large coins. Instead of being abolished, it ought to have a conspicuous place upon the face, not only of every piece of currency, but upon every official document issued by the United States Government.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union has rented a large building to be used by the Hope and Help Mission and for the headquarters of the local W. C. T. U. This is a concentration that will not only save money in rent, but which will result in materially aiding the work in hand. It is only a coincidence that the announcement of the removal of the local W. C. T. U. from the Wimodaughsis building should have been made just after a meeting had been held in that building for the discussion of the free thinking "isms" of the day, including spiritualism, materialism, theosophy, etc., by a number of ladies and gentlemen, most of them not connected with the organization. Of course the W. C. T. U. do not approve of such things, nor does Wimodaughsis, if one may judge by the anxiety of its officials to publish the fact that their organization had nothing whatever to do with the meeting. Still, if such a meeting could be held there once, similar ones may be held there again; and it is, perhaps, just as well that the W. C. T. U. shall not be compromised by occupying quarters in the same building.

The organization of a colored Young Men's Christian Association here is now an accomplished fact. The new organization starts out with a large active membership and with good prospects of securing a sufficient number of contributing members to make its success a certainty. It affords me pleasure so see that the colored people are also taking an active interest in temperance; an immense meeting held Sunday afternoon was addressed by ex-Representative Langston, one of the best speakers of his race.

A considerable number of the most prominent American inventors are here to take part in the three days' celebration of the centennial of the American patent system, which began to-day with a public meeting presided over by President Harrison. To-night Secretary and Mrs. Noble and Commissioner of Patents and Mrs. Mitchell will hold a reception to the distinguished visitors in the rotunda of the Patent Office. Meetings are to be held afternoon and evening to-morrow, and on Friday there will be an excursion to Mount Vernon in the morning, and a military review by the President and Cabinet in the afternoon. *

—The Baptists of England, as the centenary of their missionary society draws near, have resolved to aim at raising their regular income to £100,000 a year, and of sending out to the heathen one hundred new laborers. The Church Missionary Society contemplates something still more magnificent. It has issued an appeal for "one thousand additional laborers within the next few years!"

CORRESPONDENCE

HUMBLING A CHRISTIAN CHURCH BY PAGAN RITES.

Washington, D. C., April 9th, 1891.

Dear Cynosure:—In company with my father I visited what is called by the Washington Star "the Holy House of the Temple," and there viewed the remains of the late Albert Pike. There were a large number of candles about the coffin and room. Men were stationed with swords and usual regalia as guards. The body is now in the Cathedral on G. street, where the rites of the order are performed.

At midnight to-night, according to the program published in city papers, the remains are to be in the First Congregational church, where the rites of the Knights Kadosh are to be performed. The body will then be taken again to the Cathedral, and from thence to the Church of the Ascension, where Dr. Elliott, the Episcopal rector, will conduct the service. On learning that the Knights Kadosh were to have their midnight rites in the Congregational church of which our esteemed friend, Hon. S. C. Pomeroy, was a member, I called the ex-Senator's attention to it. He at once sent a vigorous protest to his pastor, Dr. Newman, 915 Rhode Island Ave. I called on the Dr., expressed my surprise at seeing the notice of a midnight service over the remains of an ex-rebel general, by an order whose very name indicated their heathen origin, from which members of the church were excluded, and this in the First Congregational church of Washington!

The Dr. explained, that members of his church belonged to this rite, and the use of the church had been extended out of courtesy to them. I asked if the use of the church was granted with his approval. He replied that it was. I then inquired if a Mohammedan should die, and persons of that faith desire a midnight service in his church, excluding him from the same, if he would favor granting them the church? Reply, "I do not wish to discuss the matter!" And this is the First Congregational church in Washington!

What would those all over the country who gave of their frugal means to found this church in dark days of slavery think, could they know how their money was being perverted to build up an institution as much worse than human bondage as eternity is longer than time?

Would the American Missionary Association have loaned them money to build a church edifice had they known it was to be granted for the use of a heathen rite held at midnight over the remains of one who did all in his power to keep the late slaves in bondage, and tear down the American flag? Surely times change! God grant that there may be sincere repentance for such a desecration of a house set apart to the worship of the only true God.

W. B. Stoddard.

KNIGHTS AND EASTER.

Phœnix, A. T., April 2, 1891.

Editor Christian Cynosure:—I enclose program of exercises held by the Knights Templar on Easter Sunday evening in the First Baptist church in this place. At 7 o'clock the house was crowded, standing room being above par. At 7:30 the Sir Knights filed in, in their uniforms, hats on, etc.—the Baptist divine being one of them. When they reached the seats in the front of the church which had been reserved for them, the "Eminent Commander" ordered them to halt, present arms, etc. The exercises proceeded, and as the minister read the prayer, the Sir Knights all kneeled, and having a copy of the prayer in their hand, in the proper place responded "Amen and Amen."

In the address the minister was very elaborate in his praises of "the beautiful ritual," etc. He stated that they were looking forward to a great strife between the powers of darkness and Christianity, and when it was at hand he would draw his sword in defence of Christianity, and these, his brother Sir Knights, would do the same if they were true Sir Knights.

I wondered if this was in accord with the command of our blessed Saviour, when he said, "Put up thy sword into his place: for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword."

Many of these Sir Knights have not darkened a church door for months, possibly years. They are no friends to practical Christianity. If Christ was here they would crucify him now; and the one who here declared he would draw his sword in defence of Christianity, would be one of the first to come against Jesus with his sword. For they "have a form of godliness but deny the power thereof." A spirit of ungodliness on one hand with one of solemn mockery on the other pervaded the whole exercise. The minister requested the audience to remain seated after the benediction was pronounced, until the Sir Knights marched out. He pronounced the benediction and went out with them.

Surely darkness covers these ends of the earth, and gross darkness this people. They call evil good and good evil; they put darkness for light and light for darkness; they put bitter for sweet and sweet for bitter. O, that light may arise to dispel this darkness, and liberate these deluded and deceived mortals from the snares of the devil! As it is, these people are waxing worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived. Christianity is at such a low ebb here, that Masonry is the superior thing; hence an exhibition like the one just given here, inspires those who are below in the order to press on. However, it does not stop here. Other organizations are encouraged, strengthened and built up, so that secret societies literally swarm in this place, and the secret empire holds sway so that no man may buy or sell save he that has the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name. Sincerely,

O. S. Cameron.

IOWA FIELD NOTES.

Fort Madison, Iowa.

While lecturing in Council Bluffs recently, I found from seventy to eighty saloons doing business. It is even worse in Sioux City, Davenport, Burlington, and other border cities. There are five reasons which explain this open violation of the State prohibitory law:

1. The lack of moral back-bone on the part of officials. When a man loses an arm or a leg it can be replaced by an artificial limb, but when he loses his back-bone he is a goner.
2. The people do not stand by the officials and demand the enforcement of the law.
3. When voters go to the ballot-box, they are more concerned for party protection than for home protection.
4. The enforcement of the law is in the hands of judges, sheriffs, jurors, attorneys and witnesses, who are sworn or pledged to obey each other's signs and grips.
5. In most of these border cities, business men think that if saloons are closed the trade will go to the adjoining cities across the river. Until prohibition is the law of the nation and liquor is ruled out of every State, it cannot be made a complete success.

I have just closed a two-weeks' lecture tour of Henry Co., Iowa. I lectured at Wayne, Swedesburg, Winfield, Trenton, New London, Salem, Chestnut Hill, Donaldson's Chapel, Birmingham and Crawfordsville. At three of these points I gave two lectures. In addition to the muddiest roads I ever saw in Iowa, I had to encounter the prejudice of Republicans who are afraid of any agitation of the prohibition question, for fear of injuring the party. Then the secret society men give us the cold shoulder, and at many points try to close doors against us. Also the Seventh-day Adventists get on our track, and just before our meetings they put their tracts and papers in every home, prejudicing the people as much as possible against the idea of God in government, and the efforts to secure the closing of the Columbia Exposition on the Sabbath. In coming home from a meeting on horseback, the poor animal in trying to get around a mud-hole, crowded me against a barbed wire fence, tearing my pants nearly off. While in Fort Madison, the next day, a friend took pity on my sad plight and bought me a new pair.

I spent a very pleasant Sabbath at Wayne. Bro. F. J. Wilson has organized a quartette that sing the popular prohibition songs in a style to almost rival the famous Silver Lake Quartette. They sang at three of my meetings, and expected to accompany me in all the meetings, had not the muddy roads prevented. M. A. Gault.

LOTTERIES AND LODGES.

York, Pa., March 30, 1891.

Editors Cynosure:—I inclose a letter which I have just received from the City of Mexico. You will see that the envelope contains a five-cent Mexican postage stamp, and is post-marked Mexico. I send you the four promising circulars it contained, showing how I might (perhaps) get more money than I would be able to fling to the thirty-two points of the compass.

I suppose the generous Mexicans are very anxious to bless me, and fill all my empty pockets; but I fear they will be somewhat disappointed in not getting five dollars out of my old pocket-book for lottery tickets. But to bring them before the American public, in some way, I hereby give you the liberty to use this Mexican lottery letter in any way you think proper.

Citizens of the United States are not allowed to carry on the lottery business through the mails. I cannot see how treaties or international laws can give to citizens of Mexico any rights in our postoffices which we do not possess.

Philadelphia, York and many of our cities and towns are overrun by secret society benevolent sharpers, who make great promises and plunder the credulous. Have the Jesuits and Masons of Louisiana and Mexico united their forces to use the United States mails for an extensive plundering scheme, to rob all gullible American citizens? Turn on all the lights. Yours, etc.,

Edward J. Chalfant.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE NATIONAL HOLINESS ASSOCIATION.

To the Rev. Geo. Hughes, and other members of the National Holiness Association,

Dear Brethren:—Feeling a deep interest in the subject which gives your organization its name, and feeling more and more the importance of it, we naturally turn to you for spiritual guidance, who are supposed to be the exponents of the blessed theme of Holiness.

My dear brethren, you ought to know the intensity of my feelings on the subject. For the past year or more I have mourned over the condition of the lodge-ridden churches here and elsewhere. My anxiety of mind has been such that sleep has departed from me, to such an extent that my health is seriously impaired in consequence. There is little or no religious element here that can sympathize with me. The Christian church members do not dare to antagonize their preachers who are of the fraternity. I do not understand the way of faith sufficiently to cast the burden on the Lord, and be happy.

Does it not appear that for the last twenty years, the work of spreading Scriptural Holiness has advanced but slowly? Have not the victories and triumphs been too few and evanescent? Have you prayerfully considered the cause? I fear that the "Great Day" will reveal that the labors of the Association have been divided between the work of the Lord, and the effort to sanctify Freemasonry. That institution ought to be beneath any professing Christian, much more one professing heart purity.

To understand the disgraceful character of Masonry, some of its features must be dragged to light, in all their deformity. Hideous as they are, shall we face them, or cover them all up with the cloak of charity? In the first degree the candidate is made to swear to ever conceal and never reveal the least part or parts, art or arts, point or points of Masonry; yet knowing nothing of these secrets he has sworn to keep; penalty: throat cut across, tongue torn out, etc. Second degree, he swears to obey all the signs, grips, and mandates of the lodge. Penalty: heart cut out, and fed to the vultures. Third degree, he swears that he will never violate the chastity of a Master Mason's wife, mother, sister, or daughter, knowing them to be such; to keep a Master Mason's secrets, when communicated to him as such, in all cases, except murder and treason, and those at his option. Penalty: body cut in two, bowels burnt to ashes, and scattered to the four winds.

The further it goes, the worse we find it. In the seventh degree they swear to deliver each other out of difficulty if in their power to do so whether the brother be right or wrong. To keep secrets in all cases, murder and treason are not excepted; penalty: skull smote off.

The Masonic burial service consigns all Masons to the Grand Lodge above. The name, Jesus, is studiously omitted in all their prayers, burial service, and reading of Scripture, so that Jews and infidels in the lodge need not hear that (to them) hated name.

Now, brethren, what say you? You know this to be a genuine picture. Most Masons cast doubt on its genuine character. I never knew a Mason to acknowledge that he had taken these oaths except when forced to do so by courts of justice. There is no room for doubt. The National Christian Association publish the whole thing, turn it inside out to the core, the main charges sworn to and proved before courts of justice. In some of the degrees the candidate swears that he will be amenable to whatever is omitted in the administration of that oath, when it comes to their knowledge. Can such stuff be sanctified or exist in a holy heart?

President Finney, in his younger days, was an educated lawyer and a lodgite; so he spoke from actual personal knowledge, when he characterized Freemasonry. Besides the tongue of an educated lawyer he had the power of godliness. The fear of man was not before his eyes. He put it down, down, into mire so deep, that any man who stoops low enough to take it up, is polluted, probably for life. After he became a Christian, and gave a square look at the lodge, he obeyed the Scripture injunction, "Come out from among them." What honest-hearted Christian could do otherwise?

Bro. Hughes refuses to answer the last question on this subject, and claims the Guide is not neutral, though it very seldom contains the least sentence in reference to it. More than one person has refused to answer me the question. Is the editor of the Guide a member of the fraternity? Am I not justified in the conclusion that silence gives consent? Now, gentlemen, you may stand on your dignity, and appeal to public opinion, which is controlled by a Masonic pulpit, but there is a day coming when "Judgment will be laid to the line, and righteousness to the plummet." Such muck will be burned up. I pray you to consider these things, and like Pres. Finny, "come out from among them." Get the power of godliness, and there will be a shaking among the dry bones. Yours for clean holiness,

J. Marsh.

PITH AND POINT.

THE UNION M. E. CHURCH OF COVINGTON, K. Y.

In your issue of April 2 is a letter from Rev. J. M. Foster concerning the church of which I am pastor in this city, which is, unintentionally no doubt, misleading. The music of the church costs $1,500, not $1,800 a year, and is paid for out of the current expense fund. At each night service since Mr. Foster was here, the church has been crowded. Last year we had near a hundred conversions. The night Bro. Foster preached I was, as he says, out of the city, and the people made the absence of the pastor the occasion for visiting other churches to hear other city pastors; consequently the congregation was small. Bro. Foster's sermons in this city are very highly spoken of.—W. A. Robinson, Pastor Union M. E. Church.

THE BEAST WITH TEN HORNS.

I have not seen the Seventh-Day Advent book, "Bible Readings for the Home Circle," to which Bro. Apple refers. But its claim that the ten-horned beast of Rev. 13 is the National Reform Association, is one of the most absurd ideas of these false interpreters of prophecy. A beast recognizes no higher rule of action than its own will or instinct. This is why the term beast in the language of prophecy is used to symbolize governments, or world powers which recognize no higher authority than themselves. The National Reform Association, instead of answering to this symbol, was formed for the special purpose of transforming these beasts, or world powers, into moral personalities, by inducing them to adopt moral law as their rule of conduct. The Adventists are exerting their strength in teaching the opposite theory, that civil governments should remain beasts by refusing to own the Divine law. They find their symbol in Nebuchadnezzar, where he ignored Divine authority in civil affairs, and was turned out to graze with the beasts, till he knew that the most high God ruled in the kingdom of men.—M. A. Gault.

HE FINDS A HELPER.

Thanks for favoring me with so noble a privilege of signing my name to the "Call" for a conference which I believe will please God, and enlighten men. I am a constant reader of the Cynosure, and favor its work on moral reform. It helps me much in meeting the trials, work and persecutions incident to this life, especially in the divided and peeled state of the church of my choice. Courage! God reigns, and can rule this friction in the purification of the church. May it so be.—George M. Freese.

TO VOTE OR NOT TO VOTE.

I have just read Josiah Divoll's answer in your paper of April 2. We grant all he claims, as a church; but, dear brother, what are you doing as to the state? Do you expect us to nominate good men at the primaries, or elect them at the election without your help? Do you expect our conventions to get out a platform that will suit you and be right in God's sight with such a mighty church or people that are on the Lord's side, staying at home? If Christians would stand together we could carry the day. Put a ticket in the field, brother; if you can't come to us, may be we can go to you.—W. N. Wilson.

THE TRUTH MUST STAND.

I have been receiving your paper through the kindness of my brother and expect to continue a subscriber. My sympathy for the principles advocated by the Cynosure grow stronger as the years pass by; and as the lodges multiply like the plagues of Egypt and increase in refuges of lies, lodge-ridden churches are wondering why they do not have old-fashioned spiritual revivals, and I am thankful that some of the hitherto blind dupes begin to see the point. There is no release in this war. The truth must stand and prevail when this world is on fire. —Nelson Callender.

ONE SIGN OF A CONSECRATED LIFE.

At Humboldt, Nebraska, I found our friend W. C. Bissel hard at work in the anti-secrecy cause. If persecution is any sign of being a Christian, surely he must be one. The church and the world are moving in great harmony there. The members help each other: members of some of the churches dance, and the world attends their socials and Y. M. C. A. festivals. The ladies prepared a grand lunch at 50 cents each, each lady choosing a partner to suit her fancy, married ladies choosing some other lady's husband, anything to make the most fun. I have no doubt the time is coming when there will be a line of distinction drawn between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not. Mr. Wesley wrote a short time before his death, if he had a hundred men that feared nothing but sin and loved nothing but God, he cared not whether they were preachers or laymen, he could shut the gates of hell and open heaven. O for such a class to come soon! I am now near 73 years old and hope to do some service yet.—L. Landon.

HELPING ON THE CONFERENCE.

I am at present circulating the call for a Christian Conference. I have only five names of ministers; have been refused by three, one of whom I am at present trying to convince that they are wrong. I will send in the names as soon as I see a few more ministers. I am doing all that I can to further on the work, during the time I am out of school. I don't know how I could get along without the Cynosure; may God bless you in your work and hasten the time when all such societies shall be prohibited by law.—R. E. Rose.

NOTELETS.

I wish and pray that your untiring labor in this cause may be crowned by success.—Pastor F. Schrœder.

I have induced a neighbor to take the paper and I will get more subscribers as soon as I can, but times are hard. I appreciate the Cynosure very highly.—N. Benbow.

Your paper is well worthy of support from all Christian people. Your cause is a popular one in the Lord's sight; but not in man's. May you have grace to continue to the end.—(Rev.) S. R. Wallace.

It is strange that so many people friendly to the cause won't take hold, but will cower and help keep in power those who rule and ruin our State. I would like to see one of those garden cultivators at work.—C. A. McMillan.

Note.—The best view to be had of one of these excellent machines is over a club of 15 subscribers. None can do better work than a cultivator so earned. Try it.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association.

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. ☞A liberal discount to dealers

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" compriscs the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian, seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

Masonic Salvation, as taught by its standard authors. This pamphlet is a compilation from standard Masonic works, in proof of the following proposition: Freemasonry claims to be a religion that saves men from all sin, and purifies them for heaven. 111 pages, price, postpaid, 20 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

1. Historical Sketch—National Christian Association.
3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
5. President C. G. Finney on the duty of Christians towards the Lodge.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
18. Despotic Character of Freemasonry.
19. Freemasonry, a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Nathaniel Colver, D.D., on Masonry.
33. Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
44. D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.

Chapters in American Politics.

Masonry vs. Prohibition.

Decline of the G. A. R.

Christianity and Odd-fellowship. Part 1, 4 pages; part 2, 4 pages.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

New England Department.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

Washington Department.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

Western Department.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

Pacific Department.—Rev. M. H. Nichols, 520 Kearney St., San Francisco, Cal.

College Agent, Rev. S. F. Porter, Cynosure office.

State Agents.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.
Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.
Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

Other Lecturers.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Berea, Ky.
Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Annawan, Ill.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)
—AND OFFICE OF—
The Christian Cynosure,
221 West Madison Street, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

President—Bishop Milton Wright Dayton, O.

Vice President—Rev. Geo. R. Milton, Elgin, Ill.

Cor. Sec'y and Treasurer—W. J. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Rec. Secretary—Rev. E. R. Worrell, Washington Heights, Ill.

Directors—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, J. M. Hitchcock, Jerome Howe, G. R. Milton, Wm. Pinkney, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, W. W. Wait, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell.

The object of this Association is:
"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

New England.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves Harris, Mass.

Connecticut.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

Illinois.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

Iowa.—Pres., S. A. Gilley, Marengo; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

Kansas.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Lecompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

Maine.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W Goddard, West Sidney.

Massachusetts.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

Michigan.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas. Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

Minnesota.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

Missouri.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

New Hampshire.—Pres., Simon Rowe, Guilford; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Isaac Hyatt Gilford Village.

New York.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

Ohio.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

Pennsylvania.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

Wisconsin.—Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies") degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover 50 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

The Christian Cynosure.

J. BLANCHARD, Editor.
HENRY L. KELLOGG, Associate Editor and Publisher.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 16, 1891.

THE SCANDINAVIAN SECTS.

The Cynosure aspires to be a mediator between the American Scandinavian churches. These are: Lutheran, Free or Mission churches, Baptists and Methodists. If these several bodies of Christian people should appoint a convention of representatives and vote to regard themselves as one Christian people; to recognize each other's baptisms and ordinations; to allow their churches to call pastors across denominational lines, and cease all attempts to proselyte from each other, they might still manage their affairs in their separate organizations as they now do and still be

"One army of the living God
At whose command they bow."

Nearly all these Scandinavian bodies exclude secret lodges and regard their altars as altars of Baal—false altars like those of Jeroboam at Dan and Bethel which dissolved the union of the United States of Palestine, and have given up that once garden of creation to Turks, owls and hyenas. And these Scandinavian churches have no Scriptural right to call themselves by different names, as of Paul, Apollos, Luther or Wesley. And by an outward recognition of each other sufficient to shut out sectism, neither of them would give up any one sentiment or truth of God. United, they would lay a hand on the helm of American Christianity and the United States, second in power to none. And in the mighty conflict now coming on which precedes the fall of "Mystery! Babylon the Great, the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth," the 300,000 Scandinavians would all be found ranged on the side of Christ.

The Lutheran Reformation destroyed all the builders' lodges on the European Continent but two or three. (See Rebold, General History, p. 54.) And the Danes, Norwegians, Swedes and Fins, inhabiting a soil and climate too cold to be agreeable to priests who flock, with the lazaroni of all Europe, to its beautiful and warm southern belt, those Northmen were the purest children of the Christian Reformation. And of all the sects and denominations, these children of the Northern Lights have the least excuse for sectarian divisions.

Bernadotte, one of Napoleon's marshals, became king of Sweden in 1818, the year Illinois was admitted to the Union. State-churchism had corrupted the Swedish Lutheran State church and both doctrine and morals ran low. God raised up a modern apostle, Rosenius, who was not a priest but a private Christian, truly converted to Christ. This apostolic man started meetings for prayer and reading the Bible. And his followers were called "Readers," as they were forbidden to preach without license from the State church bishops. This "Readers" movement spread all over northern Europe, and has tinged with its own complexion all the Scandinavian sects in America. The good Dr. Hasselquist, founder and father of their Rock Island College and Seminary, started the Augustana, a Swedish paper; and though he adhered to the name and forms of Lutheranism, he was eminently evangelical; and his Augustana Synod, now numbering above one hundred thousand communicants, is decidedly opposed to liquor and the lodge.

Indeed, the Swedish Lutherans in the United States, are spiritual children of the Readers, and owe much to them their emancipation from the unbelief, liquor and lodgism of the king, bishops and court priests of Sweden. The rank and file of the Lutherans in Sweden, now hold prayer and revival meetings, and pray openly for a divorce of their church from the State. Dr. Hasselquist's paper used to publish, with approbation, articles from Rosenius' paper, the Pietisten, which is now edited by Dr. Waldenstrom. And as the Swedish king and bishops have no governmental control over Swedish Lutherans in America, and as they are virtually one with the Free churches, they ought to recognize that oneness, and cooperate with them against the enemies of Christ.

And the Free churches are reciprocally indebted to the Lutherans. They have been nursed at the breast of the Lutheran churches, which have taught all those who have reached or passed middle life, the Scripture texts, hymns and catechetical knowledge of religion used in preparing children for confirmation. We would not have the Free or Mission churches insist any less strongly on regeneration as a preparation for the Lord's Supper. Until men are "born again" they are "dead in trespasses and sins." And there is no propriety in giving spiritual bread to a spiritual corpse. But they have been suckled by the Lutheran churches, and they must not beat with sectarian cudgels the breasts which have nursed their fathers and mothers.

Dr. Peter Waldenstrom is one of the most brilliant minds and prolific writers of the age. He was converted to Christ at sixteen; became a State church priest, but suffered proscription and persecution by the formalists; joined the Readers and now edits their organ, the Pietisten, established by Rosenius. He is professor of Hebrew and Greek at Hefle, and a statesman as well. He is now in his second term in the Swedish Parliament. We have but one fault to find with him. Seeing the rulers of the State church, many of them open unbelievers, and like their Archbishop Lundberg, hard drinkers and swearers, and yet hoping for heaven by the atonement of Christ—because he "tasted death for every man," Waldenstrom has undertaken to cure that evil, and take away their hopes of salvation while living in sin, by teaching a theory of the atonement which excludes them. And in this he is right. God, the Father, needed no atonement to make him love sinners, and be willing to save them. "For while we were yet sinners Christ died for us." But there is no salvation for men while they deliberately continue in sin. For "the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all unrighteousness and ungodliness of men. But the cure for these is to lift up the voice and show them their transgressions; not a new theory of the atonement; least of all, a theory which ignores the fact that Christ died to make it possible "that God could be just, and justify him that believeth in Jesus." But Dr. Waldenstrom has pressed some phases of the atonement till the Lutherans believe he has denied vicarious atonement altogether. And if he succeeds in inducing the Scandinavians to embark in a theological war on abstruse doctrines, it will be fatal to religion and reform.

Old men in New England remember when a theological war raged between Congregationalists and Methodists, as "The Orthodox" and "Arminians." The writer has heard it said that Methodists believed the "Orthodox" churches were so cold, dead and formal, that "they were going to hell in stone boats with iron paddles!" And the other party were wont to say that, "The Methodists, whose religion was mere emotion, were never known to forgive an injury or confess a sin." Now those two denominations fraternize, receive each others' letters, exchange pulpits, and call pastors, the one from the other.

For the last sixty years, Congregationalist and Presbyterian ministers have lost half their time in splitting hairs of doctrine, instead of "taking up stumbling-blocks," and removing practical abuses. The Tyler-and-Taylor controversy raged in New England; raised thousands of dollars; built a new theological seminary, and has passed off, leaving scarce ten men who can tell what "Taylorism" and "Tylerism" meant. The great Presbyterian General Assembly, in 1837, cut off by one vote 500 ministers, four Synods, and fifty thousand people, about doctrines and measures, thus forming two General Assemblies, the Old School and the New. They continued apart thirty-two years and reunited without confessing an error. But the public was deluged with windy doctrines, and slavery grew green under the shadow of their silence, and inaugurated a war which filled eighty-two Southern graveyards with Northern dead! If that one General Assembly had directed their learning and eloquence against the secret lodges which inaugurated the war, and called on our nation to "break every yoke and let the oppressed go free," their learning, influence and prayers to God, would have prevented secession and the war!

James H. Thornwell of South Carolina, and Dr. Palmer of New Orleans, both members of that Assembly, encouraged by its equivocation and silence, finally took ground that slave-holding was not morally wrong, and secession followed. Those two men voiced the Presbyterian body. And, even then, Tennessee and North Carolina were taken out of the Union by force and fraud.

The salvation of our country and world is now to turn on the question of supplanting the oath of God in our courts; expelling the Word of God from our schools; and eclipsing the worship of God by lodge altars; and our Scandinavian population are the best instructed portion of our people on these great issues. If they stand shoulder to shoulder in the discussion, we are saved. But if they divide and contend on hair-splitting distinctions of doctrine, there is a long agony before us.

ALBERT PIKE.

The American Balaam is dead (April 2, 1891). He was born in Boston, of humble parentage. Was taken by his father to Newburyport, Mass., where he became a teacher. In 1831 he started west. The Mason lodges of New England were then turned inside out, and young Pike of course knew that Morgan was murdered five years before; and as President John Quincy Adam's letters and Col. Wm. L. Stone's also had appeared in all the newspapers, he must have known too that the lodges protected the perpetrators of that brutal murder, and contributed money to send them out of the country. On foot in a company of trappers he went to Arkansas and joined a Masonic lodge. Of course when he was initiated he knew Masonry had been correctly revealed by Morgan; and that he had joined a band of swindlers who were selling revealed secrets, and a band of murderers who were accessories after the fact. The most charitable view of his case possible is that he was left to believe the sorceries of the lodge as Mormons believe theirs, and so "forsook the right way and followed the way of Balaam, the son of Bosor, who loved the wages of unrighteousness, to whom is reserved the mist of darkness forever." (2 Pet. 2: 15.)

In Arkansas Pike became an editor, lawyer and politician; and went into the Mexican war (one of the most unjustifiable wars ever waged) avowedly to "enlarge the area of slavery by adding four slave States to the Union—and he born and educated in New England! He wormed himself into the confidence of the Cherokee and Choctaw Indians and became their attorney. He was intimate with John B. Floyd, who was Buchanan's Secretary of War and was guilty of wholesale plunder and fraud, and was indicted for stealing U. S. bonds by the grand jury of the District of Columbia. By the aid of such men Pike became general in the Confederate army. As agent of the Indians under Buchanan's administration he drew the money which Congress voted for Indian schools, etc., and raised a brigade of Indians, who scalped our dead and wounded soldiers at the battle of Pea Ridge, Ark. Non-combatants climbed to a hill-top overlooking the battlefield where Curtis and Van Dorn were engaged, and saw Pike's Indians scalping and tomahawking our Union troops, who lay dead or wounded on the field. Tho Indians were unwilling to fight against the flag which had sheltered and fed those tribes, till Pike took some fifty of them to Washington and swore them to obedience in Federal Lodge, No. 1. They then finding Washington filled with secessionists, went home, raised a brigade and followed Pike to Pea Ridge. This information was given the writer by the secretary of Federal Lodge, who helped initiate "Pike's Indians." After the war was ended Pike owned and edited the Memphis Appeal in 1867–8, but soon sold out that paper and made Masonry his trade, and plundering the U. S. treasury his occupation, in behalf of Freemasons and their sons, his own family included; while drawing a large salary as Grand Commander of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, Southern Jurisdiction of Freemasons. Those who wish to know what this "Rite" is, will do well to read the history and analysis of the thirty-three degrees, with a thorough and correct revelation of its secret work; sold at this office.

This most popular and prevalent Rite, like the whole secret lodge system, is one tissue of fraud and falsehood. Its name is the "Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite." Whereas, it is neither "Ancient" nor "Accepted," nor "Scottish." It was started by a Jew, Stephen Morin, in Charleston, South Carolina, in 1801. Twenty-five of its thirty-three degrees were invented by Romish priests in the Jesuit College of Clermont, Paris, with the help of an apostate Presbyterian, Ramsay , who named it Scottish to draw in the Scotch lodges, restore the Stuarts, and re-subject England and all Europe to the Pope of Rome. A Jew who retained nothing of his religion but its hatred of Christ, was sent over in 1761 as "Sovereign Grand Inspector General;" came to Charleston via St. Domingo; and instead of obeying his employers, set up for himself. He made thirteen other Jews, with Drs. Dalcho and John Mitchell, "Sovereign Grand Inspectors General" like himself. These borrowed, invented and added eight more degrees to the Jesuit's Rite of Perfection which the Jew Morin had brought over from France, and named this grand compound of sorcery, blasphemy and paganism, the "Ancient Scottish Rite," and the world has gone after it. It was invented by "the mother of spiritual harlots;" and is itself the mother of a host of her harlot daughters, who will fall with their mother and model, when "Mystery, Babylon the Great," goes down before the coming kingdom of Christ, which is "Righteousness, peace and joy in the Holy Ghost," who will yet put all his enemies under his feet. "Is ANYTHING TOO HARD FOR THE LORD?"

PROF. CURTIS VS. AGNOSTICISM.

The professor's thoughtful article in last week's Cynosure concedes too much to the doctrine of "don't know," or universal doubt.

God is no more unknowable than is everything else. For as Burke says, "Everything runs into infinity;" while our minds are finite. The smallest grain of sand has as many millionth parts as the planet Jupiter. But those millionths lie beyond

"Where glass can reach, or science can define."

So Bishop Butler says truly: "We cannot give the whole account of any one thing whatever." It is in this sense that the Bible says "none by searching can find out God." "Such knowledge is too wonderful for us. It is high; we cannot attain to it." Yet we can and must know God. Our eternal life depends upon it. For "This is life eternal, that they might KNOW thee the only true God and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." John 17: 3.

But how can we know him? I answer: We know material bodies. Even an idiot, if not entirely one, knows enough to keep out of fire and water. We know also particular bodies,—an apple, for instance. Now if we apply our mind to an apple, which we know by our senses, we shall find that we know the space which the apple occupies by our reason, even more certainly than we know the apple by our senses. For our senses—taste and sight and feeling—may be diseased, and misinform us. But there can be no mistake in the proposition that body cannot exist without space to exist in. This affirmation of our reason is even more certain than our senses. And this space, which we know with absolute certainty, is, like God, invisible, intangible, inappreciable by our senses, and like God also it extends to infinity. Thought never can get beyond space. And yet any finite particular body implies and gives us space, with absolute certainty by the simple affirmation of our reason.

So our reason gives us God with a certainty equally absolute. As the finite bodies around us, by the reason, give us infinite space, which is incomprehensible, yet absolutely certain; so finite minds, our own and others, by our reason, give us God, the infinite Spirit, who is equally certain, and equally incomprehensible. Finite implies the infinite as body implies and proves space.

Philip asked Christ to show them the Father. Jesus replied: "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." (John 14:9.) Christ was and is GOD manifest to us mortals,—all we can see, know and comprehend of the infinite God. And we know him with absolute certainty by our reason. But in Christ we know and love him as "OUR FATHER. If this is not true, then nothing is true; and we are indeed "Agnostics," that is, Know Nothings. We cannot even know Agnosticism or God.

"Fools never raise their thoughts so high;
Like brutes they live; like brutes they die.
Like grass they flourish till thy breath
Blast them in everlasting death."

—Our Washington agent is this week in New York city, visiting pastors, churches and friends of the reform.

HELP THIS MISSION.—Bro. J. W. Wolfe, the evangelist and missionary, is conducting a good work, that every good man should desire to help. Now see how you can do it, dear reader. He writes: "We are captivated with your premium, Double-wheel Man-weight Cultivator, and wish we had one; as we do not have the time to canvass for subscribers, being busy day and night with our large family of orphan children, we thought that perhaps you could prevail upon some friend of humanity to help us to one for our Orphanage farm. We have been having a hard struggle to get along, and money is a scarce article in the Home. It would be such a help to us. The boys would be delighted with it. Can you not solve the problem for us and send us one?" This is an appeal that comes near to Bro. Wolfe's many friends. The Cynosure will contribute its full share for a cultivator for the Venita Home, but with each machine we must have a new subscriber.

The cultivator costs	$ 8 00
Cynosure one year	1 50
Express—say	1 00
	$ 10 50

We will donate $3.00 of this amount and will send a copy of the paper for a year to a new subscriber, and the cultivator, freight prepaid, to Bro. Wolfe for $7.50. Who will take this offer first?

—Bro. H. W. Fowler of Phœnix, Arizona, is hoping to secure a lecture from Bro. Glassford in that city soon. He is earnestly distributing tracts and copies of the Cynosure.

—The midnight pagan ceremonies over the dead body of Albert Pike in the First Congregational church of Washington last Thursday, will reveal to our readers an amazing depth of superstition and horrible incantation. We reserve it until next week.

—The discussion of secret societies by the colored pastors of Indianapolis will take place May 4th instead of April 13th as we noticed last week. This is an important step in the right direction, and many are praying that God will honor his truth on that occasion.

—It is announced that Mrs. Matilda B. Carse, one of the lady commissioners of the World's Fair, will present all petitions against liquor selling and Sunday opening in the Columbian Exposition. It is especially desired that members of the W. C. T. U. secure signatures to these petitions and forward them to her. Her address is 145 Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

—The secretary of the largest Sabbath-school Association in Illinois outside of Chicago, writes of President C. A. Blanchard's address on "College Fraternities:" "I think that the ablest address I have seen in print" by the eloquent speaker, "and one of the ablest I have ever read on any subject." Send for this great speech. Who will give a dollar to put 25 copies in the hands of the students of some institution which the sender may select?

—The Washington agent has rented rooms at No. 160 West 36th street in New York for temporary headquarters, so that he can have a foothold from which to sieze the horns of the lodge with both hands. He had two lectures engaged in a short time after reaching the metropolis, and he will extend his work to the sister cities on both sides. Friends in New York and vicinity will note this temporary address, and write Bro. Stoddard in respect to lecture work in their vicinity.

—A meeting of much importance to Wheaton College was held in this city on the evening of the 7th inst. It is briefly reported thus in the Congregational News: "Mr. and Mrs. Case, last Tuesday evening opened their beautful home on Ashland Boulevard, Chicago, which has served so many good purposes, to receive the friends of Wheaton College, in the interests of higher education. President Fisk, of the Seminary, presided. Prof. Boardman made a happy speech. President Blanchard gave a strong address on the 'Purpose of the Higher Education.' Prof. H. A. Fischer, of the college, impressed all as to the important work of the college, in speaking of its graduates all over the world. Mrs. Bryant, of the Wheaton Musical Conservatory, delighted with her singing. Mr. Case, in his welcoming address, spoke of education without Christ as a damage. Mrs. Case provided for the feast socially in the refreshments served. About fifty were present to enjoy the happy occasion."

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Rev. L. G. Jordan has returned to Wisconsin to continue his work for the prohibition of the saloon.

—Elder J. S. Rosenberger of Covington, Ohio, is about preparing a tract on secret societies for publication by the tract society of the German Baptists or Brethren church.

—Rev. J. M. Foster of Cincinnati, was last week in Logan county, Ohio, speaking for National Reform. He writes that the farmers of that section have not been so closely pressed for twenty years, because of crop failure.

—Bro. J. P. Stoddard reached Chicago via Washington Thursday noon. His return to headquarters brightened the day. He will not long remain away from New England, but will hasten the settlement of his mother's estate and return without delay.

—The death of Bro. C. M. Candee of Sylvania, Ohio, removes from our reform ranks a steadfast friend who loved the truth for Christ's sake. He died March 5th. His name was given to the call for the conference of last year, and it was his wish to subscribe this year, and if practicable, be present, but he has gone where there are no lodges or hoodwinks, but where the Lamb of God is the light of the holy city and all its glorified inhabitants.

—A personal letter from Bro. Nichols, our Pacific Coast agent, informs us of his convalesence after an almost fatal illness that has shut him up at Tacoma for two months. Among the friends God raised up for him in time of trouble were Dr. Chamberlain, Revs. J. W. Carter and Chas. O. Brown, pastors respectively of the Free Methodist and Congregational churches; but especially a brother and sister Jackson who opened to him their home and cared for him as for a brother. The Lord will reward these his children for their kindness. No ministrations constrained by oaths of lodgery could have at all compared with these.

—The Conservator brings us the sad news of the death of Rev. James M. Bishop of Chambersburg, Pa. He died on the 27th of March. Bro. Bishop was one of the great men of the United Brethren church. In the early days of our reform, in 1870, he rallied several members of his conference into decided and aggressive action against the secret lodges. Ten years later when the churches of that name began to fall back, the First Church of Chambersburg kept advancing until soon her company were fighting the enemy alone, and were said to be separated from the U. B. family. With base as broad as the Word of God this church had no trouble to stand alone, until the division a few years later brought the "radical" party into line again. Pastor Bishop was a man of noble impulses and fervent zeal. Few men were better known in the denomination. It is said that the cast from which the statue of William Morgan on the monument at Batavia was copied was given him by the Vermont company who did the work. It was presented to him for his friendship to one of their agents.

PENNSYLVANIA CHRISTIAN ANTI-SECRET ASSOCIATION.—This Association is opposing the Jesuitic secret empire of Pennsylvania, which is composed of numerous secret societies, that are secretly and slyly operated by Jesuits, in various disguises. It is opposing the numerous plundering rings, which are based upon and upheld by the aforesaid secret power. It is opposing the demoralizing liquor power of the State, which is protected by the same Romish influence; the liquor dealers being mainly Roman Catholics and secretists. And it is also opposing the Roman Catholic church, which is now mainly a demoralizing political machine, that is operated by the sly, cunning and crafty Jesuits, "for the good of the order." All citizens of Pennsylvania who desire more light in regard to this Association, and the demoralizing institutions here named, are requested to address, with stamp, the Corresponding Secretary, Edward J. Chalfant, York, Pa.

The Home.

A HYMN OF TRUST.

Thou sweet, beloved will of God!
My anchor-ground! my fortress hill!
My spirit's silent, fair abode!
In Thee I hide me, and am still.

Upon God's will I lay me down,
As child upon its mother's breast;
No silken couch, nor softest bed,
Could ever give me such sweet rest.

Thy wonderful, grand will, my God!
With triumph now I make it mine,
And love shall cry a joyous, "Yes,"
To every known command of Thine.

Thy beautiful, sweet will, my God,
Holds fast in its sublime embrace
My captive will, a gladsome bird,
Prisoned in such a realm of grace.

Within this place of certain good
Love evermore expands her wings;
Or, nestling in Thy perfect choice,
Abides content with what it brings.

Oh, sweetest burden, lightest yoke,
It lifts, it bears my happy soul,
It giveth wings to this poor heart;
My freedom is Thy grand control.

—Madame Guyon.

THE CREW OF THE POLARIS.

Do you remember the extraordinary experience of those eighteen persons composing a part of the crew of the Polaris, dispatched by the U. S. Government in the summer of 1871 on a trip to discover the North Pole? How they were strangely separated from the ship on October 15th, 1871, high up in latitude 81 degrees 38 minutes, longitude 61 degrees 44 minutes, and thrown with a few provisions, some guns, ammunition, and a small boat upon the ice, and where, less than 500 miles from the Pole, they commenced one of the strangest voyages ever taken by man? Such a trip on a "God-made raft," as the leader styled it, as no person on earth before or since ever took and survived to tell the tale? Just how it happened, and how they fared; the suffering, the peril by ice, cold, and hunger; the hair-breadth escapes, and final deliverance, was related by Captain George E. Tyson in thrilling words.

They were on an ice-floe twenty or thirty feet in thickness, but constantly thinning, for a period of 187 days, from October 15th till April 30th; right through the rigors of an Arctic winter and the gloom of an Arctic night, with the thermometer from 20 degrees to 40 degrees below zero, and so down to the freezing of the mercury; no sun for months, no fire, no light save a little burning seal oil, no fuel, no bed but the ice and the few skins of animals they killed; no houses but huts of snow, no compass, the winds blowing with hurricane fury, the ice cracking around them and often right under their frail huts, tossed from floe to floe, tormented with fear and anxiety, nearly starving often for food, compelled to live on frozen seal and bear meat eaten raw, and the hungry men tempted to cannibalism; still drifting, drifting, drifting, down southward through Baffin's Bay, fifty or one hundred miles distant from land, past desolate, inhospitable shores, during six and a half months of dreary days and nights a distance of 1,500 miles until rescued April 30, 1872.

The astonishment of the civilized world when this strange voyage was heralded knew no bounds. Old experts in Arctic adventure were incredulous. They declared it "impossible," "ridiculous." Hundreds flocked to see the party on their return to the United States. People could hardly be convinced of the truth of the marvellous story. The company had increased to nineteen when Captain Bartlett of the seal ship Tigress took them off the ice; for, strange to say, there were several women and children in the group, and a babe was born on the voyage! "The misery of that fearful drift," says Tyson, "will haunt me so long as memory endures."

But how did they subsist? It seems nothing less than miraculous. Captain Tyson appears to have been a Christian—perhaps the only one present—as well as a brave, cool, hardy, resolute man. Had it not been for his wise leadership all would have perished. Again and again in his narrative he puts his faith on record thus,—"I trust in God to bring us through." God surely did. In the very auroras he saw the flashes of a Divine power, and caught hope from their strange fires. "Our little ice-craft," he once wrote, "is plowing its way through the sea without any other guide than the Great Being above." Hundreds of huge icebergs were often all about them: once they dashed against their frail ice-craft, threatening instant destruction. They escaped and drifted on and on. They would get nearly out of food when Providence would send them, just in time, a few seals, or birds, or a bear, which was perhaps eaten raw, and the warm blood drank as a luxury. "Thank God," the captain would exclaim, and put his grateful words on record. When their piece of ice was broken up so that but a single acre remained, he wrote, "A kind and merciful God has thus far protected us, and will, I trust, yet deliver us."

Their experience of hardship the last month was dreadful. The ice would crack, and grind, and roar like an earthquake, filling all with sleeplessness and alarm. The sea would rage, the winds were terrific. "God alone knows what we suffer:" wrote the captain, "no pen can describe it. God's will be done!"

Such trust was rewarded at last. As one ice cake would break up, they would traverse the tossed sea in their boat to another. Only made to carry eight persons, these eighteen souls were often launched in that blessed boat. On its preservation life depended. Sometimes the ice would snap and move asunder, leaving them on separate pieces. Gales swept furiously, the sea ran high, they were wet, cold, and getting weak and worn out. The night of April 19, 20 beggars all one's imagination of supreme icy horrors. The elements raged in their might. From 9 P. M. to 7 A. M. the men stood and held the boat from washing away from their now little piece of ice; cold waves dashed chunks of ice against their limbs; darkness and gloom reigned through the awful hours. None spoke a word. Morning broke. "Man can never believe, nor pen describe the scene we passed through; surely we are saved by the will of God alone," wrote the believing leader.

But now there was no food. The merciless sea had swallowed all. They were bruised, wet, weary, hungry. "God will send us some food," wrote Tyson. In the afternoon while starvation stared all the party in the face, an Arctic bear, much farther South than usually seen, and totally unlooked for in that low latitude, roamed towards the unfortunates, was discovered, and instantly shot. They shouted with joy. "God has sent us food," says Tyson.

In one more week they were rescued by the Tigress. Once on board and safe, a gale of three days' duration, exceeding in savage fury all that had been previously experienced, swept over that cold sea. All on board the vessel were of opinion that had this sorrowful company then been on their ice-floe they would have gone down before its power, with no survivor to tell this strange story. Says our Christian hero, "He that guided us so far was still all-powerful to save!"

I have never read of so fortunate a deliverance from danger and death. I said fortunate: may we not call it providential? Surely on the ocean and on the land God is "mighty to save."—D. T. Taylor, in the Christian.

SAFETY IN THE SHELTERING ROCK.

Jesus Christ is no security against storms but he is a perfect security in them. I have seen a village nestling in the bosom of some great mountain. Speaking one day to the villagers, I ventured to ask if they had many storms during the year.

"Oh yes," was the answer. "If there is a storm anywhere in the neighborhood it seems to find us out." "How do you account for it?" "Those who seem to know say it is due to the mountain which towers above our village. If he happens to see a cloud anywhere on the horizon he beckons it until it settles on his brow. We villagers call it putting on his nightcap." "Have you had any accidents from lightning?" "Not one. We have seen the lightning strike the mountain a hundred times, and a grand sight it was, but nobody has been killed." "What have you, then?" "We have the thunder which shakes our windows and frightens our women and children, but it has not killed anybody; and we have the downpour. The fertility of our village, which you so much admire, is all due to the thunder-showers."

When Jesus Christ became incarnate, he rose like a very mountain of God, and all the storms of the ages gathered around his head. There came sweeping up, too, hurricanes from the dreary wilds of eternal night, which hurled themselves in all their fury against him; but he took the lightning into his own breast, and what have we? The thunder-shower. He shall come down like rain on the mown grass, like showers that water the earth.—Henry Simon, in the Christian.

A CHILD'S VIEW OF SLAVERY.

[Among the warmest friends the Cynosure or the N. C. A. ever had was Isaac Preston, who died some years ago at his home in Lockport, Ill. The following entertaining personal narrative was written by a daughter of that dear and well-remembered man for the Inter Ocean.—Ed. Cynosure.]

We have had a winter home in the South some nine or ten years. When we first came we expected to see a good deal of the injustice toward the colored people one reads of so frequently in Northern papers. But in all this time nothing has come under our immediate notice.

We had almost begun to feel that perhaps they were shown more justice than we had been made to believe. But when we came home the last of December a little incident occurred to open our eyes. We had a delightful trip until we reached Jacksonville and parted like old comrades, each party going its separate way. Our sleeper had been like a parlor of happy friends—a stream of gay laughter and pleasant conversation—and when we clambered into the day coach and began stopping at all the little stations in that tedious manner so exasperating to tired travelers nearing a journey's end—we began to realize that we were in Florida. At first we had a car for the colored people, but as the coaches were switched off here and there along the way only the baggage car and ours remained. And when some Negroes came in they were ordered out, not asked to go, or told to go, but ordered, as a bully orders a dog. They began to retreat to the baggage car, but one woman refused to go, and held her ground—a scuffle ensued. There were two men against one woman, but she won the field for the moment, and took her seat.

The conductor punched her ticket and told her that at the next station she was to go in the baggage car. What the rules of the road are we were not able to learn, but I feel sure that there is not a conductor from the Atlantic to the Pacific that could hold his position for a week and treat a white woman, even of the lowest order, as that conductor treated her. It was the first time in my life that I ever saw a woman struck. Five men stood in a group ready to help the conductor at the next station. But the woman arose and walked out without assistance; whether she went into the baggage car or down the steps I know not, but she must have gone out blacker in some spots than when she came in.

It was not so much her being put from the car that affected us as the sentiment manifested on all sides. I wondered, as I looked upon those five forms of Southern manhood standing in a group, ready to do the bidding of the railroad official, if I was gazing upon a specimen of the much-vaunted "Southern chivalry?" and I said to myself, "This is of the order of things of which Mr. Albion Tourgee has spoken," and it recalled the hour in which I first realized what slavery meant, and that occurred a year or so before our civil war.

My father was a physician, living in a small inland town in Missouri. I was but a child of 10, and had just returned from the North, where I had been some three years with my mother's family. Coming as I had from a large city, the novelty of my surroundings was a constant source of delight to me, and I entered into every new phase of life there with the keenest zest. My constant playmate was a little girl of my own age, Maggie Osburn. Her father was a Virginian by birth, and had been for those parts quite a large slave owner, but he became convinced that slavery was wrong and sold his entire plantation, and his servants were the slaves of other people from whom he hired them.

Among them was a girl named America, a tall, well-built creature, almost majestic in her movements, with a fine head and eyes that would have been beautiful had there not been an expression almost sullen in them. Her mother was an old Virginia slave, a well-trained ladies' maid and house servant, and America and her seven sisters were well taught and—for Negroes—well born. They belonged to an estate that could not be settled until the heirs were of age.

If Maggie Osburn had a pleasure or a holiday I shared it and America was often sent to take care of us. We now and then spent several days at her old home; and those were bright days for America as well as for us, for two or three of her sisters lived there, and her only brother, a lad of 14 or 15 years.

Maggie was a good child, obedient and quiet, but I was of a different order. She and America seldom had any trouble, but America and I had many a battle. She was very superstitious and easily frightened, and if ever a child loved to tell hobgoblin stories and fill the rooms and the woods with giants and monsters and dragons, I was that child, and a susceptible creature like America, was a temptation I could not resist. To pop out upon her and peer up in her face and mutter, in the most solemn voice I could assume, "Fee, fi, fo, fum, I smell the blood of an Englishman," would always make her scream. Then I was happy, and she would say: "Go 'long, Miss Julie; those are all lies. If ever a chile deserve to be eat by a painter, you are that chile." A panther was the one thing she never failed to try to frighten us with; and when I drew her skirts about me and called to her to save me, and told her of the great yellow eyes that were glaring at me, and the shining teeth, and the gliding steps coming nearer, I was well reassured, for it was America that really saw the panther then, and her wrath waxed strong, and I'm afraid she even went so far as to shake me a few times. But I never dared disclose her fury or my pranks, for well I knew our long tramps in the woods and wades in the brooks and countless happy days would soon have been at an end for me. I was there on sweet sufferance and for Maggie's sake, not to torment poor America. But I loved her, and our quarrels always ended happily.

I had lived much with my grandfather, who was something of a leader among the anti-slavery men of his day, and I had heard the warmest discussions on the Negro question, and had early learned to feel that slavery was an awful evil. But when I went to live among them they seemed so happy, and so gay, and so delighted my fantastic fancies, that I thought no people were so full of the sparkle of life. I was something of a pet among them, for I was as joy-loving as themselves, and like a true Southerner had none of that natural antipathy, so universal among Northern people toward Negroes, no matter how alive they may be to their wrongs. I laughed when I thought that these men, the people who were so wretched that grandpapa was always writing and talking about, and spending hundreds to help redeem from bondage, it seemed to me that a few of the wise and stern-faced Abolitionists that sat about his table were not half so happy and contented as these people, who dressed like rainbows at their camp meetings, and whose laugh wakened the merry echoes, who met you always with a smile, were never in a hurry, and whose very rags had a joyful air. Slavery! Slavery! It was but an empty word—an excuse for warm arguments for dull old men.

The days and the months went by. I saw much of America, and perhaps—aside from my father's household and little Maggie—there was no one in all that countryside I loved so well. The summer was gone and autumn was there. The woods were beginning to grow mellow with her first warm beauties. One day there was a whisper of a slave sale on a certain farm; a slave sale!

"Ah," I thought, "I've heard them grow violent at grandfather's over that," and I could remember how bright the eyes of my grandfather grew as he fairly rose from his chair when talking in his clear, impassioned way on that very subject.

So I begged and craved, and offered treasures to Maggie, and at noon we ran away from school and went to the sale. It was a long walk for us. We dallied some on the way, and were late, arriving near its close. My father was there, looking as I've seen him look when he came home with the word that some one was dead. I realized at once, from the surprised and pained look he gave me, that he never expected to see his daughter there, and I began to feel that a slave sale was not going to be anything in which Maggie or I would find any amusement.

The sale was of America, her sisters and their brother. The youngest heir was of age and the time had come for the slaves to be sold. They were being bought by neighbors thus far and could still live among the associations of their childhood. A Louisiana planter was there, however, and was expected to bid. At last all were sold save America and her brother. The stranger went up to her. She had stood straight and sullen, seemingly indifferent to everything, but when the planter spoke, she uttered a wild cry and sprang to the feet of Maggie's father. She flung her arms about his knees and cried: "Oh! Massa Osburn, buy me! Buy me! Oh! Massa Osburn, for the love of heaven buy me! Don't let them take me South—Buy me! Buy me!"

That was my first pang of agony. My tears were mingled with America's, my prayers went up with hers. Ah! this was what my grandfather meant; this was slavery.

America was never sold South. All the sisters lived where they could often meet, but that young brother went with the Louisiana planter. It was a sight to make the angels weep to see those sisters crowd round him for that last earthly farewell. I fled from the scene alone, and like a child bereft of reason, threw myself on the grass and wept as I had never had the power to weep before. I felt that I was beginning to understand what slavery meant.

I never saw America but once after that. I was spending the day with my mother on the plantation which was the home of her new master. She gave me a very warm welcome, and, with a smile and a shake of her head, said: "Well, Miss Julie, ain't the painters got you yet?"

Julia Daniels Moseley.

TEMPERANCE.

NINE MURDERS A WEEK.

The Chicago Tribune publishes the following table of causes of murder during the year 1890:

Quarrels	2,184	Highwaymen killed	74
Liquor	486	Self-defense	67
Unknown	464	Insanity	59
Jealousy	396	Outrages	25
By Highwaymen	217	Duel	1
Infanticide	167	Strike	1
Resisting arrest	149

This record is made up from the reports given in the press of the country, and of course the causes are those assigned by the press. How many of those assigned to "quarrels," to "unknown," to "jealousy," to "infanticide," to "resisting arrest," to "self-defense," to "insanity," and to "outrages," are due to liquor either as principal or auxiliary cause, we cannot tell. But taking the causes just as assigned, we find that 486 murders (11 per cent,) are due to liquor. Suppose Prof. Koch's lymph should develop the unsuspected property of maddening men and causing a record like that this year, what an outcry would would be raised, despite its remedial qualities, and how quickly the necessary restrictions would be applied by the law. If the Voice could chronicle each of these NINE MURDERS A WEEK assigned to liquor alone, how long would the personal liberty argument keep its legs? But liquor is different from lymph; it has "vested interests" and a political pull.—The Voice.

NATIONAL TEMPERANCE CONGRESS.

Drs. Funk, Deems, and others have issued the following call, which has been endorsed by hundreds of our best known workers in the temperance cause:

To the Opponents of the Saloon:—We, the undersigned, representing almost every phase of temperance views, invite all who hate the saloon to unite in a National Temperance Congress on August 18 and 19, 1891, in the Auditorium of the National Prohibition Park, Staten Island, New York. The object of the Congress will be similar to that held last year in the Broadway Tabernacle, New York city. In the language of the call for the first Congress, we invite the representative temperance people to assemble together in convention to look into one another's faces to frankly compare views, to learn the whole ground of our agreement, and to enlarge this ground, if possible, by candid and friendly discussion.

Never was the liquor trade more intolerant of opposition or more aggressive and destructive than to-day. It is true now, as it was when the New York Tribune uttered these words a few years ago: "This traffic lies at the centre of all political and social mischief, it paralyzes energies in every direction, it neutralizes educational agencies, it silences the voice of religion, it baffles penal reform, it obstructs political reform."

The success of the Temperance Congress last year proves that such meetings held for an exchange of views are eminently practicable and profitable. We ask all local, State and National temperance societies (regardless of sex or politics), and all churches and Sunday-schools, and other associations which hate the saloon, to send representatives to the National Temperance Congress.

Mass-meetings will be held in the evening and conferences will be held during the day sessions, the day sessions beginning at 10 A. M. each day.

We urge friends everywhere to see that every section of the country is fully represented. Let this be both a National conference and a National mass-meeting for the overthrow of the liquor traffic.

Every person opposed to the saloon who will present himself at the Congress will be welcomed as a member.

All communications should be sent to the Secretary, J. A. Bogardus, 167 Chambers street, New York city.

Hon. Roswell Dow, of Sycamore, Ill., has an interesting and valuable collection of newspapers and clippings, some of them quite yellow with age. We are permitted to copy a few lines printed in the Sycamore Sentinel, September 28, 1858, and by it taken from another Democratic paper published in Ohio. This was just after the Fremont campaign, you will remember, and it will doubtless have a very familiar sound to both Republicans and Democrats who took part in the political movements of those days. Read it:

Now that the black Republicanism has run its course, let us ask, what has it accomplished?

Has it been the means of setting at liberty a single slave?

Has it been any advantage to the cause of freedom?

Has it organized a Free State?

Has it abolished slavery in a single State or Territory?

Has it made any effort to repeal the Fugitive slave law?

Has it made any effort to abolish slavery in the District of Columbia?

Has it made any effort to restore the Missouri Compromise?

Has it done anything for which it should receive the thanks of a single slave?

The above style of questioning is also quite familiar to Prohibitionists, modified to suit the liquor traffic instead of slavery; except that now it is used for Republican argument instead of Democratic. The discouraging questions did not deter the Black Republicans from their purpose, nor do they now dishearten Prohibitionists. As the right was then with them and bound to prevail, so now it is with us, and is just as sure to triumph in God's own time.—The Patrol.

Again has the curse of drink brought disrepute upon our 19th century Christianity. A Japanese commissioner who was sent to England to report upon the influence of the Christian religion on those islands, has returned to his home with the recommendation that the Japanese do not adopt the religion of Great Britain, as the prevalence of the drunkenness is so common in that country.

The Religious Department of the Ohio Valley Centennial Exposition gave some interesting statistics. Among them was this item: "Evangelical Protestant Christians since 1880 gave for Foreign missions $75,000,000; for Home Missions, $100,000,000 and for religious publication houses, $150,000,000." These three items foot up $325,000,000 collected and expended for the purposes named since the year 1880. This sum will not near pay the drink bill of the United States for six months. Every man who does not do all in his power to blot out the liquor traffic is partner in this crime.—Ex.

CALL

FOR A

CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE

ON THE

SECRET LODGE SYSTEM.

We, the undersigned, believe that there is no good which can be accomplished, in times of peace and in a free land, by secret societies which cannot be secured more easily and perfectly by open organization.

We believe that much of the time and money so greatly needed by the cause of our Lord Jesus Christ is wasted in the large and unprofitable expenses of secret orders.

We believe that the union of Christians with men of the world in oath-bound organizations is forbidden by the Word of God and always injurious to the spiritual life of those Christians who enter such societies.

We believe that some oath-bound societies are clearly hostile to the peace and welfare of our country.

We therefore invite all those who sympathize with us in the views above expressed, to meet in "A Conference of Christians," to be held under the auspices of "The National Christian Association," in Central Music Hall, Chicago, May 14, 1891, at 9 A. M., to consult and pray respecting the best method of saving men, the churches, and our land from the injurious influence of such societies.

Joseph Cook, Boston.
Rev. James Tompkins, D.D., Chicago, Cong'l Supt. Home Missions, Illinois.
Rev. T. D. Wallace, D.D., Pastor 8th Presbyterian Ch., Chicago.
Rev. Geo. S. Dickerman, D.D., Pastor 1st Cong'l Church, Amherst, Mass.
Rev. Thomas B. Hyde, Pastor "Moody Church," Chicago.
Rev. O. P. Gifford, D.D., Pastor Bap. Church, Boston, Mass.
Rev. A. J. Gordon, D.D., Pastor Bap. Church, Boston, Mass.
Prof. H. M. Scott, D.D., Cong'l Theological Sem'y, Chicago
Col. George R. Clark, Supt. Pacific Garden Mission, Chicago.
Rev. John Henry Barrows, D.D., Pastor 1st Presbyterian Ch., Chicago.
Prof. James R. Boise, D.D., Baptist Theological Sem'y, Chicago.
And nearly 400 others.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE OLD TESTAMENT.

LESSON IV.—Second Quarter.—April 26.

SUBJECT.—Nineveh brought to Repentance.—Jonah 3: 1-10.

GOLDEN TEXT.—The men of Nineveh shall rise up in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for they repented at the preaching of Jonas: and, behold, a greater than Jonas is here.—Luke 11: 32.

|Open the Bible and read the lesson.|

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Jonah 3. T.—Jonah 4. W.—Ezek. 18: 26-32. Th.—Joel 2: 12-17. F.—Isa. 55: 6-13. S.—Eph. 2: 1-10. S.—Luke 11: 29-36.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. Jonah sent the second time to Nineveh.—vs. 1, 2. This life is the season of probation and discipline. It therefore follows that it must also be a season of mingled failures and successes. Jonah no doubt felt tempted at first to despair; to fear that he would never be forgiven, much less be called again to take up the work he had once refused. In spite of his defects of character he must have been a man of strong faith; for while his first thought, during his terrible entombment in the whale's belly, was that God had cast him off, his next (see ch. 2, v. 4) was, "Yet I will look again toward thy holy temple." Our failures give us no right to despair. If the blood of Christ could save us while we were yet sinners, much more will it be powerful to cleanse us from the original sin which may yet remain in our renewed natures. It is seldom that a rejected opportunity to do good returns once more, but at the call of true penitence Duty will sometimes, as in the case of Jonah, show her angel face the second time. What joy must have thrilled the heart of the blundering, disobedient prophet to know that he was going to be given another trial!

2. Nineveh's repentance.—vs 3-8. "So Jonah arose." The only practical test of true repentance is when we arise and do our Father's will. That his preaching should result in the most wonderful revival ever known to ancient or modern times seems miraculous from one point of view; from another only what might have been reasonably expected. It was a heathen city, pre-eminent for luxury and wickedness. Why should they repent at the preaching of Jonah?—an unknown man, rude of dress, strange of speech, and moreover a Jew!—one of that narrow and exclusive race which hated the whole Gentile world, and must have been in turn hated by it with a hatred quite as hearty. The reasons are several, and they hold good in all revival work to-day: 1. His preaching was "according to the Word of the Lord," and his word is always "with power." We notice that the second command to Jonah came in a more direct and personal form than the first: "Preach unto it the preaching that I bid thee." Many a learned and eloquent preacher has failed to convert, and consequently to save men, because he has preached himself instead of Christ; or his own theories and opinions instead of the stern, plain, uncompromising truths of God's Word. He came as did Paul, "not with attractive speech of man's wisdom." He was too terribly in earnest for that. His mission was to warn, not to amuse or entertain, and he kept strictly to it. 2. Nineveh was even then beginning to experience some of God's judgments for her long course of unparalleled wickedness and oppression. Says Geikie: "Rebellion was chronic in many provinces; conquest had given way to defence." Judgments are often sent in mercy to prepare the way for repentance, and where they do not soften, whether it be nations or individuals, they only harden. 3. Jonah was a repentant sinner himself. He had personally experienced, in an extraordinary degree, both the judgments and the mercy of God. Our Lord says that he "was a sign unto the Ninevites." So every Christian who has been buried with Christ and risen again to a new life in him, should be a sign to the world about him; and unless he can show such a sign of his mission, he will never be able to convert sinners. 4. Nineveh's repentance was in the line of fulfilled prophecy. Moses had said centuries before: (Deut. 32: 21.) that God would use "a foolish nation," and "them that were no people," to rebuke and shame apostate Israel. God's word never returns to him void. It is always reasonable to expect that what he says will come to pass.

3. God's mercy to Nineveh.—vs 9, 10. Nineveh was not only "exceeding great" in population, but in its area of territory, for it reached out and took in many suburban towns, where of course Jonah's message would be first proclaimed. But the tidings were not long in reaching the palace of the king. The lower strata of society usually has to be moved before the influence of any religious reform can reach the upper one. A fast was proclaimed. Even the beasts were covered with sackcloth, on the same principle that horses at a state funeral are covered with the trappings of mourning. But it did not stop with a mere external show. They turned from their evil ways, and thus kept the only kind of fast which God accepts. (Isa. 58: 6, 7.) With God both judgment and mercy are ever conditional, but the Ninevites who did not know this repented on the mere chance of mercy. What excuse then for those who continue impenitent under the full light of the Gospel?

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Dr. H. L. Morehouse says that the American Baptist Home Mission Society closes the year with a small balance in the treasury. More than nine hundred missionaries have been employed, being over one hundred more than were in the service the previous year.

—A party of five recently sailed for Secunderabad, India, to join the self-supporting mission work of Rev. C. B. Ward.

—Mr. Moody's work in Boston during last month was at the Clarendon St. Baptist church (Dr. A. J. Gordon's), the Berkeley Temple, and Back Bay. The meetings on Sabbath were in Tremont Temple and were crowded. At 9 P. M. meetings for men only were held, which have been attended by thousands of men. These services have been impressive and fruitful in results. Mr. Moody continued holding noon meetings in Tremont Temple, which was crowded every noon despite stormy weather. These noon meetings were held even when he was holding afternoon and evening meetings in Beverly, Brockton, South Boston, Jamaica Plain, and Newburyport, and they have been followed by after-meetings in the Meionaon, the summer hall of the Temple building.

—Dr. Pentecost went to India with a desire to challenge the attention of educated Hindoos to the paramount claims of Christ as Lord and Saviour. In this he has succeeded. The Statesman, a secular paper in Calcutta, says: "He does not attack Hinduism, but simply explains to his hearers what the doctrine of Christ is, and earnestly presses upon them the careful study of the Gospel, urging them, at the same time, so far as they may be persuaded of its truth, to embrace its teaching and to follow Christ. He believes profoundly in the possibility, nay, the near certainty of the triumph of the Gospel in this land. His aim does not seem to be a mere longing for converts, but a hearty and sincere desire to see the blessings of Christianity, as he understands it, come to this nation. . . . He often says he would not walk across the aisle of a hall, or over a street in Calcutta, to turn the whole Hindu fraternity into nominal Christians; and draws sharp distinctions between Christians in name only—of whatever nationality—and real Christians, who, as he says, are 'born from above.' He repudiates the nominal Christian, who does not show by his life the presence and fruit of the indwelling Spirit of God; and insists that all men, Hindus or unreal professors of Christianity, stand on the same footing before their common God. Each man, he insists, must individually come to God by repentance and faith in Jesus Christ before becoming a Christian."

—An outline map of Boston has been prepared, giving the population and the number of churches, chapels, missions and branch or mission Sunday-schools in each ward. There are 296 churches and missions, 262 Protestant, including 11 Jewish, meeting in 243 buildings, and 34 Catholic churches, in each of which several different congregations gather. The whole population of the city is figured at 448,477.

—The new Adoniram Judson Memorial church, built in the down-town portion of New York, and with the purpose of helping the poorer classes, has been opened. The total cost of the building was $320,000, of which $90,000 is yet unpaid but is being rapidly raised. In the buildings there are rooms for a children's home, day school, young men's apartments, reading-room, library, sitting-room, and gymnasium. Dr. Edward Judson is the pastor.

—Dr. Tucker, the evangelical Bishop who has succeeded to the dangerous diocese of equatorial Africa, rendered vacant by the murder of the heroic Bishop Hannington, has arrived at Uganda, after terrible and prolonged sufferings. A hundred miles of the long journey were through a dense, foodless forest, infested by savage robbers, who murdered stragglers and stole loads at every opportunity.

—A month ago Rev. Mr. Newsom, a young colored minister, began protracted meetings in the little colored church at Westerfield, Ohio. So extraordinary was his eloquence and the effects on the congregation that white visitors began to crowd the little church and many of both races have since professed conversion. Soon the church would not hold the people and the eloquent colored man was invited to the Evangelical church, the largest in the city. This has been crowded nightly for a mon h

The Dearest Spot on Earth is the spot that's washed out without Pearline. It costs in clothes, in the rubbing and scrubbing that wears them out quickly; it takes twice the time, and double the labor. It's expensive washing before you get through with it—and the cost comes home to you, no matter who does the work.

Pearline saves money by saving work, wear, and time. It hurts nothing; washes and cleans everything. It costs no more than common soap, but it does more. It's cheap to begin with—but it's cheapest in the end.

Beware of imitations of Pearline which are being peddled from door to door.
196 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

April returns to the Department of Agriculture show that the condition of the growing wheat crop throughout the entire country is the best since 1882.

Secretary Blaine's reply to Marquis Rudini's last communication will probably be furnished Monday. It will cover the whole question of Italian immigration, the character of the subjects of King Humbert who were lynched at New Orleans, and the disposition shown by Italy to protect its fugitives from justice who have fled to the United States. Minister Porter's cables to Washington during the last few days have been unusually full, and it is thought that the Secretary is in possession of inside news about the domestic politics of Italy and its connection with the New Orleans affair.

CHICAGO.

Yesterday the World's Fair share and proxy holders re-elected a large majority of the old board of directors, assuring the rapid building of the exposition on the settled lines. There were voted over 460,000 shares, representing nearly 30,000 stockholders.

Secretary of War Proctor was in Chicago for a short time Friday and left for Washington last evening on the Pennsylvania limited. The Secretary has no intention of resigning from the Cabinet to accept the chair in the Senate soon to be vacated by Senator Edmunds.

The municipal election of last week is generally conceded to the Republicans, and Hempstead Washburne will probably be the next mayor. The official count must be made before the question is decided.

The greatest West Side fire for a dozen or fifteen years occurred Sunday afternoon, burning out some of the finest buildings of West Madison St. The Dime Museum, Smyth's house furnishing stores on the south side, and a number of stores on the north side of the street were completely destroyed. Several persons were injured, and the losses are nearly $1,000,000. The fire was located on Madison just east of Halsted.

COUNTRY.

The total number of deaths in the city of New York during the twenty-four hours of April 8 was 206, against 176 for the preceding day, an increase of 28. Of these cases 18 were reported as being caused by the grip in conjunction with other diseases.

In a wreck on the Wisconsin Central Railroad Thursday, near Vernon, Wis., an engineer, fireman, and head brakeman were pinioned under the engine, and fatally scalded.

Boys smoking set fire to the stock yards near Cincinnati Thursday night and property valued at $250,000 was destroyed. Cotton sheds at Memphis burned, with $325,000 worth of cotton.

J. E. Anderson, of Lyons, Iowa, was indicted by the United States grand jury at Dubuque, for sending through the mails a postal card to the Louisiana Lottery Company asking for their last drawing.

Fred Hundley, 18 years of age, was sentenced to fourteen years in the penitentiary at Huron, S. D., Thursday for shooting his father over a quarrel in putting down a carpet last summer.

Reports from Iowa state that the ground is in good condition and farm work in full blast, with much small grain being sown.

At Anaheim, Cal., Wednesday, 162 ostriches were sold for $6,000 to a company of capitalists and speculators. They were claimed to be worth $30,000.

Mayor Stewart, of Philadelphia, has ordered the police to withdraw from all local political work within the next ten days, or failing in this, to present their resignations. Any violation of this order will be sufficient cause for immediate dismissal from the service for disobedience of orders.

April 10 was the fiftieth anniversary of the birth of the New York Tribune, and the event was fittingly celebrated to-night by a jubilee at the Metropolitan Opera House. Addresses were made by Maj.

(Continued on 16th page.)

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from April 6 to April 11, inclusive:

B Gaddis, J S Yaukey, R B Dawson, J P Hammond, Rev J Garn, E W Shaw, E P Webster, R Gant, D Horning, J Reid, Rev J W Morton, G V Bohrer, Miss H Parsons, Mrs M Stegner, T Gilmor, G Dillman, E B Webster, Dr J N Norris, M F Eaton, Miss E Hinshaw, A C Palmer, J Ackart, C M Forsyth, Mrs M Harvey, Grand Lodge of Iowa, J Davis, Mrs J W Phelps.

Many people who pride themselves on their blue blood would be far happier with pure blood; but, while we cannot choose our ancestors, fortunately, by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, we can transmit pure blood to our posterity.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring	98	@ 1	03¾
Winter	1 02	1	05⅞
Corn—No. 2	69	@	69½
Oats—No. 2	55	@	56
Rye—No. 2	88½
Bran per ton	18 50
Hay—Timothy	11 00	@15	00
Butter, medium to best	12	@	25
Cheese	05	@	12½
Beans	1 75	@ 2	25
Eggs	12½
Seeds—Timothy	1 17	@ 1	25
Flax	1 17	@ 1	22
Broom corn	03	@	04½
Potatoes, per bu	6 05	@	1 20
Hides—Green to dry flint	05	@	09
Lumber—Common	10 00	@13	00
Wool	15	@	34
Cattle—Choice to extra	5 50	@ 6	40
Common to good	1 75	@ 5	10
Hogs	3 75	@ 5	35
Sheep	2 75	@ 5	35

NEW YORK.

Wheat	1 03	@ 1	27
Corn	77	@	79
Oats	57	@	66
Eggs	15
Butter	12	@	27
Wool	14	@	39

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	1 75	@ 6	20
Hogs	3 35	@ 5	00
Sheep	5 50	@ 6	00

In the Spring

Nearly everybody needs a good medicine. The impurities which have accumulated in the blood during the cold months must be expelled, or when the mild days come, and the effect of bracing air is lost, the body is liable to be overcome by debility or some serious disease. The remarkable success of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and the universal praise it has received, make it worthy your confidence. It is the "ideal Spring Medicine."

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"For many years I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla in the early spring, when I am troubled with dizziness, dullness, unpleasant taste in my mouth in the morning. It removes this bad taste, relieves my headache and makes me feel greatly refreshed. The two bottles I took this spring have been worth many dollars to me." JOHN BINNS, 663 43d Street, town of Lake, Chicago, Ill.

The Spring Medicine

"I have taken two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and have gained 22 pounds. Can eat anything without it hurting me; my dyspepsia and biliousness have gone. I never felt better in my life, am at work again and consider myself a well man. Those two bottles were worth $200 to me." W. V. EULOWS, Lincoln, Ill.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

There is nothing more conclusively proven than that Hood's Sarsaparilla is a radical and reliable blood purifier. If we could show you the many letters we receive from people of whom we never heard before, telling of remarkable cures of scrofula, salt rheum and all kinds and degrees of diseases of the blood, you would be as fully convinced of, and as enthusiastic over, the merits of Hood's Sarsaparilla as we are.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"Last spring I was completely fagged out. My strength left me and I felt sick and miserable all the time. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured me. There is nothing like it." R. C. BEGOLE, Editor Enterprise, Belleville, Mich.

"After taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I felt like a new person. That tired feeling has gone, my appetite returned." C. W. PHELPS, Shirley, Mass.

The Spring Medicine

"I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla every spring for the last four years and have found it the most beneficial medicine I have ever taken. My little children have been troubled with worms and we gave each a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which has completely removed all their troubles." F. W. PHIPPS, Sedalia, Mo.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer who will send me their Express and P.O. address.
T. A. Slocum, M. C., 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

10,000

Another ten thousand edition of the tract

KILLED, AND NO INQUEST.

This is a large 4-page tract at 30 cents per pound, 15 cents for half pound, and 10 cents for a third of a pound. It is an illustrated account of the death of Rev. J. W. Johnston, while being initiated by the officers of Huntington Lodge, W. Va., in January of this year. Sent postpaid at the above price. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 W. Madison St Chicago

OLD AND NEW

WANTED FRIENDS

TO GAIN

NEW SUBSCRIBERS

FOR

BUDS & BLOSSOMS.

Acknowledged to be one of the BEST AND CHEAPEST Magazines. Its wealth of illustration, purity yet often thrilling statements of MISSION WORK and ADVENTURE in lower New York, make it wholesome and cheery reading. Edited by

J. F. AVERY,
Pastor Mariners' Temple. 1 Henry St

BUDS AND BLOSSOMS

AND FRIENDLY GREETINGS

WANTS to give Canvassers

$5 & $10 REWARDS.

Send three cents for specimens, etc.

Address Rev. J. F. AVERY,
1 Henry St., New York.

FIFTY YEARS and BEYOND;

OR,

Old Age and How to Enjoy It.

A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHROP.

Introduction by
REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D.,
(Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of that now is, and to give comfort and help life that is to come.

"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors the gray head and refuses to consider the oldish man burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"The selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveller to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1

Address, W. I. PHILLIP,
231 W Madison St., Chicago Ill

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY, candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Patriarchs Militant Illustrated. The complete ritual of the Patriarchs Militant degree. This is an accurate copy of the Charge Book furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Odd-fellows, with the eighteen military diagrams and the unwritten (secret) work added. Paper cover, 25cts each.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

Farm Notes.

TILE-DRAINAGE.

The benefits of tile-drainage are clearly set forth by W. I. Chamberlain in the National Stockman. He says: Tiling makes the soil warmer. This is a fact proved by actual experiment, and is explained by the law of physical science. If there is no under-drainage, natural or artificial, the surface soil must dry from the top by evaporation in the spring and after each soaking rain. In the spring the water must thaw before it can evaporate, and thawing ice by heat applied from above is slow work, as you know if you ever tried to thaw out a wooden pump by pouring in hot water. Evaporation of surplus water after the thawing is done in spring or after a very heavy rain, is not only a slow process, which is bad enough when you are waiting to plant or till your crop, but is a very cooling process.

Tiling makes the "root pasturage" deeper and more abundant in two ways: It makes the soil porous deeper, and lowers the water level of super-saturation. The roots of agricultural (land) plants must have air as well as moisture. But when the soil is soaked all the air spaces are full of water. Tile drainage leaves the larger spaces in the soil free from water and full of air, while capilliary attraction fills the smaller spaces with moisture. In a wet, soggy soil the roots must run near the surface to get air. In well-tiled soil they can get air and moisture down deep, while the greater looseness of the soil permits the roots to permeate the soil deeper and more widely, thus greatly increasing the area of their "pasturage." These two things they must have, air and moisture. They can get both best in a well-tiled soil.

The tile-drainage of clay soils makes wheat, clover and potatoes possible and successful year with year, much as on the sandy and gravelly loams. Some years you can grow these crops on untiled land, but in a wet year potatoes fail or rot, and in a frosty winter, with little snow, wheat and clover heave out and kill by the frequent freezing and thawing. On my own farm some years tile-drainage has given a good crop of wheat, when side by side that on the undrained land has been nearly or quite a failure.

EFFECTS OF ROLLING LAND.

Following is a summary of the results of a series of observations made by. the Wisconsin Experiment Station in relation to the effects of rolling land. 1. Rolling land makes the temperature of the soil at 1.5 inches below the surface from 1 to 9 degrees F. warmer than similar unrolled ground, and 3 inches from 1 to 6 degrees warmer. 2. Rolling land by firming the soil, increases its power of drawing water to the surface from below, and this influence has been observed to extend to a depth of three or four feet. 3. The evaporation of moisture is more rapid than from unrolled ground, unless the surface soil is very wet, and then the reverse is the case; the drying effect of rolling has been found to extend to a depth of four feet. 4. In cases of broadcast seeding, germination is more rapid and more complete. 5. In their experiments on oats, the yield stood 61.12 bushels on rolled ground, and 58.89 bushels on the unrolled ground. 6. The oats from the rolled ground weighed 2.03 pounds per bushel more than that from the unrolled ground; the kernel also averaged larger.

—It has been decided that the $1,000 prizes offered on vegetables by James Vick, Seedsman, of Rochester, N. Y., will be contested for at the fair to be held at Hillsdale, Michigan, Sept. 28 to Oct. 2, 1891. At the Illinois State Fair last year over 200,000 people witnessed this exhibit, which filled a tent 60x90 feet, and it was conceded on all sides to be the chief attraction. There were over 1,000 entries, coming from every State and Territory in the Union, besides several from the Canadian Provinces. The managers of the Hillsdale Fair have already arranged for a large extension to be added to the same tent that was used at Peoria, making it 120 feet long. and everything will be done to make this the largest and grandest exhibition of the kind ever seen. There are four prizes on each of the following eight varieties of vegetables—first $65, second $30, third $20, fourth $10, making in all $1,000, which is very large and liberal: Cabbage, for the largest and best 3 heads All Seasons. Celery, Golden, Self-blanching, 12 plants, largest and best blanched. Potatoes, best peck, Vick's Perfection. Cauliflower, largest and best 3 heads, Vick's Ideal. Tomatoes, largest and best 12, McCullom's Hybrid. Musk Melon, largest and best 3 Irondequoit Melons. Onion, largest and best 12 Danvers Yellow Globe. Mangel, largest 1 Golden Giant. Vick's Floral Guide gives full particulars.

Two doctors of an Eastern town,
To learning much inclined,
Were called to see a gentleman,
Whose health was undermined.

The first one used his stethoscope
Upon the patient meek.
"I find," quoth he, "one lung is gone;
You cannot live a week."

To this the other wise M. D.
Vehemently objected.
"I see," quoth he, "as all may see,
Your kidneys are affected."

These wise men argued loud and long,
Yet the patient owes recovery
(Not to those doctors, but to—Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery).

There are some patent medicines that are more marvelous than a dozen doctors' prescriptions, but they're not those that profess to cure everything.

Everybody, now and then, feels "run-down," "played out." They've the will, but no power to generate vitality. They're not sick enough to call a doctor, but just too sick to be well. That's where the right kind of a patent medicine comes in, and does for a dollar what the doctor wouldn't do for less than five or ten.

We put in our claim for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

We claim it to be an unequaled remedy to purify the blood and invigorate the liver. We claim it to be lasting in its effects, creating an appetite, purifying the blood, and preventing Bilious, Typhoid and Malarial Fevers, if taken in time. The time to take it is when you first feel the signs of weariness and weakness. The time to take it, on general principles, is NOW.

It's the cheapest blood-purifier, sold through druggists, no matter how many doses are offered for a dollar.

Why? Because it's sold on a peculiar plan, and you only pay for the good you get.

Can you ask more?

Of Course You Have Heard About It.

Everywhere you go you are reasonably sure to see or hear something about Hood's Sarsaparilla. No medicine ever placed before the public has won such popularity or been so much talked about and praised. All over the country, Hood's Sarsaparilla, Peculiar to Itself, 100 Doses One Dollar, are familiar household words. Hood's Sarsaparilla has won

UNLIMITED PRAISE

by its power in making scrofulous blood rich and pure, by the relief it gives from the itching and burning of salt rheum, in the satisfaction at meals experienced by the former dyspeptic, in the happiness of those it has cured of malaria and catarrh, in buoyancy of spirits and it has imparted to those recently weak, tired and run down. Is not its record of cures and the good it has done others sufficient to warrant you in trying this excellent medicine.

THE GOOD APPETITE

Nothing adds so much to a person's appearance as a fine thick head of hair of even color, and to assure this use only Hall's Hair Renewer.

FOR MINISTERS
THE
"STORIES OF THE GODS"
is especially adapted. They will at once derstand the references to the idolatrous systems of the nations. And the idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus more clearly seen and easily understood. Will you furnish each pastor in your place with one of these pamphlets?
PRICE, ONLY 10 CENTS.
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison Street, Chicago

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY
ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entir Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33d inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated'

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated' comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Mention this paper.
books
New Books every week. Catalogue, 132 pages, free; not sold by Dealers; prices too low; buy of the Publisher, John B. Alden, 393 Pearl St., New York.

Disloyal
SECRET OATHS
ADDRESS OF
JOSEPH COOK,
OF BOSTON,
AT THE
Conference of Christians
CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
Wm. I. Phillips, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

PATENTS
Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.
Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.
Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.
A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,
C. A. SNOW & CO.
Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

SEE THIS!
The latest, most complete edition
Over 235 choice
Reform Songs for the Times.
Only 30c a copy, or 20c by the 100
—AND—
"THE TOBACCO MANIA."
$1 per 100.
For sale here and by the author,
GEO. W. CLARK,
76 W. Montcalm St., Detroit, Mich.

In Brief.

The fate of Lizzie Bond, of Anderson, Ind., shows that a woman is not safe even after she has stepped to one side of the track and permitted a train of cars to pass her. Miss Bond stepped off the the track, but the suction of the train that thundered past her drew her dress under the rear of the car, which, catching upon an iron bar, dragged her fifty yards or more, dashing her brains out upon the crossties.

Because Mrs. Dimick, a sister of Mrs. Harrison, draws a salary of $100 a month from the Government as housekeeper at the White House, Washington society, the New York World says, shows a disposition to taboo her. Mrs. Dimick has the choice of giving up her salary or being considered outside of the gilded circle, and decides to cling to the salary. The President and Mrs. Harrison approve of her choice, and Washington society is much agitated in consequence.

The largest and richest vein of tin ore known to the world, says a San Antonio, Texas, dispatch, has been discovered in the old Dablo mine shaft, forty-five miles southwest of Durango, Mexico. The owner of the mine and discoverer of this fabulously rich vein or mineral is John Pershbaker of San Francisco. At the bottom of the shaft a marketable vein of ore over four feet wide, composed of a solid mass of oxide of tin, assaying from 50 to 60 per cent of pure metal, was found.

The salary-list of Catholic prelates within the Austrian empire has just been made public and gives an inkling of the immense burden their maintenance imposes upon an already heavily-taxed people. The income of the Cardinal Irmar, just deceased, as archbishop of Grau and primate of Hungary, amounted to $400,000 annually; that of the archbishop of Prague to $350,000; that of the archbishop of Erian to $275,000, and that of the archbishop of Olmutz to $250,000. The prince-bishop of Salzburg has to get along with $175,000, he of Cracow with $200,000 and he of Linz with $155,000, while the archbishop of Vienna is endowed with only $20,000.

When Mr. Windom became Garfield's Secretary of the Treasury, March, 1881, the National debt was about $1,500,000,000. The latest statement of the Treasurer is that the total liabilities of the Government are $676,126,440, or, including everything, $747,006,985. It is at most less than one-half what it was a decade ago. In the indebtedness of 1881 figured $439,841,350 of 5 per cent bonds, and $196,378,600 6 per cent bonds. These were funded into bonds drawing 3½ per cent interest, and, what is very important, without refunding them into long time bonds. They were mostly wiped out in 1882 and the balance in 1883. The achievement was certainly one of the most brilliant strokes of financiering on record.

Gen. W. F. Cody (Buffalo Bill), returning from the West and the Indian country, was asked for his idea on the absolute settlement of the Indian question. "Make citizens of them," he answered; "give them every opportunity to mix with the whites. Let them go and settle wherever they like. Will they respect the law and act decently? Yes, sir, they will. I would suggest to the Government to organize them as soldiers. Have three or four regiments of them, commanded at first by regular officers, but in time to have their commanders from their own number as they show their fitness. The Indian is brave, loyal, honest, courageous, if only treated humanely. See what the Indian police did at Pine Ridge and Rosebud." He praised the work now being done at Carlyle toward educating the Indian youth, but it didn't go far enough. It was all right to teach the boys industrial trades, but after they had learned these trades they should be provided for and placed in good positions in the great cities.

Beecham's Pills act like magic on a Weak Stomach.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Has Cured Others
Will Cure You.

The Superior Medicine

The time to purify the blood is in MARCH, APRIL, MAY. The medicine to take is AYER'S Sarsaparilla, which is SUPERIOR in combination, SUPERIOR in proportion, SUPERIOR in appearance, and SUPERIOR in all that goes to strengthen and build up the system weakened by disease and pain. AYER'S Sarsaparilla gives tone to the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys, and Bowels. It quickens the appetite, and imparts to the system a healthful feeling of strength and vigor. When taken for Scrofula, Catarrh, Rheumatism, or for any other disease originating in impure blood the results are positive, thorough, and lasting. These statements are true only of AYER'S Sarsaparilla. Be sure to ask for AYER'S. IT CURES OTHERS, WILL CURE YOU.

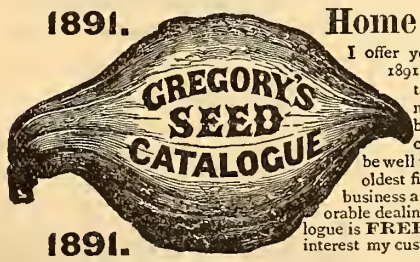
THERE ARE MANY USES FOR SAPOLIO



To clean tombstones.	To renew oil-cloth.	To renovate paint.	To brighten metals.
To polish knives.	To scrub floors.	To wash out sinks.	To scour bath-tubs.
To clean dishes.	To whiten marble.	To remove rust.	To scour kettles.

EVERYBODY USES IT.

Dentists to clean false teeth.	Engineers to clean parts of machines.	Housemaids to scrub marble floors.
Surgeons to polish their instruments.	Ministers to renovate old chapels.	Chemists to remove some stains.
Confectioners to scour their pans.	Sextons to clean the tombstones.	Carvers to sharpen their knives.
Mechanics to brighten their tools.	Hostlers on brasses and white horses.	Shrewd ones to scour old straw hats
Cooks to clean the kitchen sink.	Artists to clean their palettes.	Soldiers to brighten their arms.
Painters to clean off surfaces.	Wheelman to clean bicycles.	Renovators to clean carpets.

EVERY ONE FINDS A NEW USE.

1891.

1891.

Home Grown, Honest, Reliable.

I offer you my Vegetable and Flower Seed Catalogue for 1891 FREE. Note the immense variety of seed it contains, and that all the best novelties are there. Not much mere show about it (you don't plant pictures) but fine engravings from photographs of scores of the choice vegetables I have introduced. Would it not be well to get the seed of these from first hands? To be the oldest firm in the United States making mail and express business a specialty proves reliability. Honest and honorable dealing is the only foundation this can rest on. My Catalogue is FREE as usual. A matter on second page of cover will interest my customers. J. J. H. GREGORY & SON, Marblehead, Mass.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. 25cts each.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction and Murder, and Oaths of 33 Degrees. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 304 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

THE BEST.

EVERITT'S MAN-WEIGHT

HOE, CULTIVATOR PLOW, ETC., SINGLE AND DOUBLE WHEEL.

Will Revolutionize Hand-Power Cultivation—Makes Keeping a Horse an Unnecessary Expense in Many Cases.

This new Invention is a Great Boon to all Cultivators of the Soil, and must be Classed with the Great Inventions of the Age, yet it is so simple that the natural question with every one is, "Why did I not think of that?" And so nicely does it fill a want existing with thousands of gardeners, nurserymen, seedmen, florists, and farmers, that after the first trial they invariably conclude to "never do without it."

All other Garden Tools, Seed Drills, Rollers, etc., can be attached and run with our propeller with many times the power and greater ease than by hand power.

SINGLE WHEEL cultivator, with attachments, price $6.00. W't, 15 lbs.

DOUBLE WHEEL, with attachments, $8.00. W't, 20 lbs.

With every Double Wheel Machine the extra parts are furnished necessary to convert it into the single wheel machine, without extra charge. Thus practically giving the two machines for the price of one.

This best of all hand cultivators to every worker for the Cynosure free as follows:

Two-wheel for 15 new subscribers. ($22.50.) Single-wheel for 12 new subscribers. ($18.00.)

Two-wheel machine, 1 renewal and one new subscriber for $8.50. Same for two new subscribers.

Single wheel and same for $7.00. Express or freight extra.

The St. Louis Sermon

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

Hundreds have been ordered, and many have been the commendations. All orders will be filled (D. V.) on or before the 15th of April. A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover.

Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Patriarchs Militant Illustrated

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

Sovereign Grand Lodge

OF THE

Independent Order of Odd-Fellows

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885.

Compiled and Arranged by John C. Underwa
Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED,

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introductio
By Pres't. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton Colleg

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association
221 West Madison St., Chicago.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

BUSINESS.

NEW AND OLD.

The Cynosure will continue to supply all ts subscribers, new or old, who send $1.50 for the paper, with the Health Calendar and Ropp's Commercial Calculator, as follows: The paper and the Calculator, leatherette bound, No. 1, (publisher's price 50 cents) for $1.70. Morocco bound (price $1.00) for $2.00.

The paper and Calendar (publisher's price 30 cents) for $1.65. The Calculator (No. 1.) or a Calendar free to every old subscriber sending $3.00 for renewal and a new subscriber.

The Calculator is a book of great value for every farmer, mechanic or business man.

The Calendar contains a temperance bill of fare for every day, and hundreds of good recipes. It hangs on the wall in constant sight.

NEW OFFERS.

The Cynosure and the Cosmopolitan Magazine (publisher's price $2.40) to new subscribers only $3.00. To others $3.25.

The Cynosure and Pres. C. A. Blanchard's new book "Educational Papers" for $1.70 to all subscribers.

NEWEST AND BEST.

Read the advertisement of the Manweight Cultivator on another page.

This grand machine which everybody should have who has a garden, whether farmer or gardener or not, we are able to offer at excellent rates to Cynosure subscribers.

We will send the cultivator free to every one who will send us a club of 15 new subscribers at $1.50 each; or the single wheel for a club of 12 new names.

For $8.50 we will send the two-wheel cultivator and the Cynosure two years to new subscribers or a year each to a new and an old. This gives two subscriptions for 50 cts. The single-wheel machine and the same subscriptions for $7.00. We don't pay transportation.

We would be glad to put 100 of these machines at work killing weeds and raising new subscriptions. It is an investment none will regret.

50,000

SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CYNOSURE would bring our reform to the POINT OF SUCCESS. LET US "KEEP EVERLASTINGLY AT IT."

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

William McKinley, Chauncey M. Depew, Charles A. Dana, Roswell G. Horr and George William Curtis.

Gen. Merritt thinks the attempt on the part of the Government to enlist Indians as regular soldiers will prove a failure. They will serve as scouts without hesitation and are efficient and valuable in that capacity, but they have a very positive aversion to enlisting as either infantrymen or cavalrymen, and those in the Indian Territory at least will not enter the regular service.

A serious riot occurred at Kingston, Pa., Thursday afternoon while the local fire brigade was engaged in extinguishing a fire. The firemen and citizens got in a hand to hand encounter. Stones, clubs, wrenches and everything that could be used as a weapon was wielded. The firemen were soon outnumbered and were on the point of beating a retreat when the police appeared and engaged at once with the rioters. The fight was long and bloody, and when at the end of an hour the citizen forces were put to flight there were no less than twenty men badly injured on each side.

Three small boys of Thomas Munce, a well-known citizen of Franklin Township, Pa., were playing along the pike, Sunday, and found a partly empty glycerine can in a fence corner near their home. The boys, not understanding the dangerous character of the stuff, stood the can up in the road and began throwing stones at it. One rock struck the can and a terrible explosion followed, which could be heard for miles. Two of the boys were blown to atoms. The third was badly bruised, and will likely die.

There were ninety one immigrants, principally Italians, debarred from landing at the barge office, New York, during the past week.

Baron Fava, the recalled Italian minister, sailed for Havre on the French steamer LaGascogne, which left New York Saturday morning. Dr. Roversi, of Il Progresso Italo Americano, declares that he had been authorized by Baron Fava to publish that he was going to Rome on "a leave of absence," and that he is still the Italian minister in Washington.

FOREIGN.

The countess of Zetland, wife of the lord lieutenant of Ireland, and Miss Balfour, sister of the chief secretary for Ireland, who have been most active in the collection and distribution of the Zetland-Balfour fund for the relief of the suffering poor of Ireland, have started on a tour of the distressed districts of the western portions of this country.

Mr. Gladstone, in reply to an inquiry whether Mr. Parnell's statement made yesterday at the meeting in Phœnix Park, Dublin, to the effect that he, Mr. Gladstone, had received dynamiters at Hawarden was true, telegraphs that the utterance referred to is an absolute falsehood.

The last week in Parliament has been made notable in a special degree by a concession of blows which have been dealt the English liquor-dealers and the traffic in opium in India.

The principal topic of conversation in political and official circles in Italy has been the latest report put in circulation, to the effect that unless the American Government made a very speedy reply to Premier Rudini's last note Minister Porter would be politely requested to leave Rome and the Italian legation would be recalled from Washington.

There is a good deal of guarantee business in the store keeping of to-day. It's too excessive. Or too reluctant. Half the time it means nothing. Words—only words.

This offer to refund the money, or to pay a reward, is made under the hope that you won't want your money back, and that you won't claim the reward. Of course.

So, whoever is honest in making it, and works—not on his own reputation alone, but through the local dealer, whom you know, must have something, he has faith in back of the guarantee. The business wouldn't stand a year without it.

What is lacking is confidence. Back of that, what is lacking is that clear honesty which is above the "average practice."

Dr. Pierce's medicines are guaranteed to accomplish what they are intended to do, and their makers give the money back if the result isn't apparent.

Doesn't it strike you that a medicine, which the makers have so much confidence in, is the medicine for you?

PENSIONS OLD CLAIMS Settled Under New Law. Soldiers, Widows, Parents, send for blank applications and information. PATRICK O'FARRELL Pension Agent, Washington, D. C.

BEATTY'S ORGANS, PIANOS, $35 up Write for Catalogue. Address Dan'l F. Beatty, Washington, N. J.

Dr. Price's Baking Cream Powder.

Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

My Medical Discovery seldom takes hold of two people alike! Why? Because no two people have the same weak spot. Beginning at the stomach it goes searching through the body for any hidden humor. Nine times out of ten, inward humor makes the weak spot. Perhaps its only a little sediment left on a nerve or in a gland; the Medical Discovery slides it right along, and you find quick happiness from the first bottle. Perhaps its a big sediment or open sore, well settled somewhere, ready to fight. The Medical Discovery begins the fight, and you think it pretty hard, but soon you thank me for making something that has reached your weak spot. Price $1.50. Sold by every Druggist in the United States and Canada.

AGENTS WANTED both sexes. $25 to $50 per week EASILY MADE. SAMPLES FREE. Send for terms. W. C. Wilson, Kansas City, Mo.

CRAZY WORK 60 ass'td beautiful Silk and Satin pieces, enough to cover 500 sq. inches, 20c; best, 25c. Lemarie's Silk Mill, Little Ferry, N. J.

$6000.00 a year is being made by John R. Goodwin, Troy, N.Y., at work for us. Reader, you may not make as much, but we can teach you quickly how to earn from $5 to $10 a day at the start, and more as you go on. Both sexes, all ages. In any part of America, you can commence at home, giving all your time, or spare moments only to the work. All is new. Great pay SURE for every worker. We start you, furnishing everything. EASILY, SPEEDILY learned. PARTICULARS FREE. Address at once, STINSON & CO., PORTLAND, MAINE.

BEECHAM'S PILLS Cure SICK HEADACHE. 25 Cents a Box. OF ALL DRUGGISTS.

Stop that CHRONIC COUGH NOW!

For if you do not it may become consumptive. For Consumption, Scrofula, General Debility and Wasting Diseases, there is nothing like

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Of Pure Cod Liver Oil and HYPOPHOSPHITES Of Lime and Soda.

It is almost as palatable as milk. Far better than other so-called Emulsions. A wonderful flesh producer.

Scott's Emulsion

There are poor imitations. Get the genuine.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St., N. Y.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS, NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING 45 RANDOLPH STREET, CHICAGO.

WALL PAPER SAMPLES SENT FREE of spring patterns with borders and ceilings to match. One half million rolls offered at wholesale prices. White blanks 4c to 6c, Gilts 8o to 35c. Embossed Gilts 10c to 50c. I will send you the most popular colorings, and guarantee to save you money. ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant, 147-149 W. Madison-st. Chicago

WHEATON COLLEGE, WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

COMMENCEMENT THURSDAY, JUNE 25TH, 1891.

Full College Courses, Preparatory School, Business School, Musical Conservatory and Art School. Fifteen Professors and Instructors.

Send for Catalogue.

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

VASELINE.

FOR A ONE-DOLLAR BILL sent us by mail we will deliver, free of all charges, to any person in the United States, all of the following articles, carefully packed:

One two-ounce bottle of Pure Vaseline	10 cts.
One two-ounce bottle of Vaseline Pomade	15 "
One jar of Vaseline Cold Cream	15 "
One Cake of Vaseline Camphor Ice	10 "
One Cake of Vaseline Soap, unscented	10 "
One Cake of Vaseline Soap, exquisitely scented	25 "
One two-ounce bottle of White Vaseline	25 "
	$1.10

Or for postage stamps any single article at the price named. On no account be persuaded to accept from your druggist any Vaseline or preparation therefrom unless labelled with our name, because you will certainly receive an imitation which has little or no value. Chesebrough Mfg Co., 24 State St., New York.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

Recommended as the Best.

LE MARS, PLYMOUTH, CO., IA., May, 1889.

I suffered from temporary sleeplessness from overwork for two years, for which I used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, and can recommend same as the best medicine for similar troubles.

F. BORNHORST.

A GREAT BLESSING.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 1, 1887.

I can most truthfully testify to the fact that here in Cleveland, several cases of epilepsy, which were cured by the medicine of Rev. Father Koenig, of Ft. Wayne, Ind., have come under my personal observation. In other similar cases great relief was given even if up to this time they have not been entirely cured. It would certainly be a great blessing if the tidings were more widely circulated that many could be cured by this medicine.

REV. ALARDUS ANDRESCHECK, O. S. F.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

KOENIG MEDICINE CO., 50 West Madison, cor. Clinton St., CHICAGO, ILL.

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

Price $1 per Bottle. 6 Bottles for $5.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIII., No. 32. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 23, 1891. WHOLE No. 1,095.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Send all business letters relating to the paper to THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by ex press money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.... 1
What ground shall the National Conference Take?..... 8
Will the Congregational Churches Protest?.... 8
Personal Mention..... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Seth M. Gates on Guard. 1
Plain Preaching..... 2
The Black Knights of Malta..... 3
SELECTED:
The Lodge on the Congo. 2
Women and Secret Societies..... 2
Lodge funerals in Europe 3
Pagan—The funeral of Albert Pike..... 4
LITERATURE..... 7
THE N. C. A..... 7
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 9
REFORM NEWS:
A Glance at the Metropolitan Ministers; Michigan Preparing for a Convention.....5,6
CORRESPONDENCE:
The Christmas and Easter Relics; The Need of Practical Christianity; Opportunities in Arkansas; The Cynosure in the South.....5,6
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 9
THE HOME.....10
TEMPERANCE.....11
BIBLE LESSON.....12
RELIGIOUS NEWS.....12
NEWS OF THE WEEK.....13
DONATIONS.....13
OBITUARY.....14
FARM NOTES.....15
BUSINESS.....16
MARKETS.....16

SPECIAL.—See pages 7 and 16 for offers.

ANNUAL MEETING

OF THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, MAY 13, 1891.

The Annual Meeting of the National Christian Association will occur on Wednesday, May 13th, 1891, at 10:30 o'clock A. M., in the Carpenter Building, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill., for the election of officers, and the transaction of other important business.

MILTON WRIGHT, President,
EDWIN R. WORRELL, Rec. Sec'y.

The Greek letter secret societies for girls have had a "Pan" convention in Boston, holding three days last week. There is something repulsive about a girl student who so forgets the dear old mother at home that she will take a pledge to keep secrets from her. But the fact that lodgery is spreading into unlooked-for corners, and poisoning every fountain of charity and affection, has its hopeful side. "The worse it gets the better it gets;" that is, the sooner will come the reaction. We can expect little change till then.

There is plainly to be an experience with the secret society business in connection with the World's Fair. First the Italians were stampeded and union men took their place. Some hundreds of these held a Sunday meeting and resolved to demand $1.75 for eight hours work instead of $1.50 for ten hours. Emissaries from a number of labor lodges made speeches to the crowd enraging them against the "bloody capitalists." The men have a wet and unwholesome job, but their demand is probably aimed high with the hope of hitting somewhere above their present mark.

The Western Good Templar, published in this city, has its eyes open at last to the harm of secrecy in the temperance work, and has been urging the entire abolition of the "unwritten" or secret work, and large changes in the ritual. Of course the old office-holders and "moss-backs" in the order hotly object. They have everything by way of perquisites, titles, lodge dignities and juggleries to lose if the organization is made open as the day, a place for Americans and Christians to work together against the rum power. But let the good work go on. "Orders" should be out of date, secret obligations outlawed and bombastic titles made the ridicule of the street in this free country.

The W. C. T. U. of the West Side, Chicago, secured an able address from ex-Gov. St. John in the First Congregational church (Dr. Goodwin) lately. In an interview with a News reporter the champion of a great cause related his experience with Mr. Blaine's end of the Government. St. John wanted a few copies of the brewers' pamphlet issued by the Government respecting the malt and beer trade in South America. They were refused. He wrote to the Department and to friends in the Senate in vain. But in New York a friend sent for twenty copies for a brewer and got them quick. Mrs. Gougar got a half dozen copies in the same way. This effort of Mr. Blaine to make his department a great agency for the beer business is an outrage on the Government which Americans should repudiate with disgust.

But it is a greater pity that our government is not alone in the liquor business. The "blue book" issued by the British government last month discloses the fact that 152 peers of the realm are the owners of places in which intoxicating liquors are sold. The number of these drinkshops is 1,509. The list is headed by the Earl of Derby, who is the owner of seventy-two. The Duke of Bedford has forty-eight drinking-shops to his credit; the Duke of Devonshire forty-seven; the Earl of Cawdor, thirty-nine; the Duke of Rutland, thirty-seven; the Earl of Dudley, thirty-five; the Duke of Northumberland, thirty-four; and the Duke of Portland, thirty-two. Included in this list is the Rt.-Rev. Richard Lewis, D. D., Bishop of Llandaff, who, this official record shows, is the owner of two places which are devoted to the sale of intoxicating liquor. This is a fearful record.

The Seventh-day Baptist church practically disfellowshiped the lodge twenty years ago. It is now in some sections honeycombed by lodges of various sorts. The Good Templars, Sons of Temperance, Temple of Honor, G. A. R., and even Masons and Odd-fellows are found in many churches. The testimony of the church might have been maintained, were it not for the insinuating work of the less obnoxious orders, of which the G. A. R. is most dangerous. The first break was made by a prominent member of the church in Westerly, R. I., who asked permission of his brethren to join the Temple of Honor with a brother, who was a drinking man, hoping to save him. Permission was given, and within a year the church member had got into the Freemasons and was practically lost to religion, while the brother returned hopelessly to his cups. From so small a beginning the lodge leprosy spread until the testimony of the church is almost broken down and her voice of warning hushed.

The journey of President Harrison across the country and back is a pleasure our chief magistrates may occasionally indulge in with profit. The passage of the excursion through the Southern cities is glowingly reported in the Northern press. Thus far it has been in the nature of an ovation, and seems to be more sincerely and honorably breaking down party prejudice than ten thousand such efforts as those made by the Knight Templars at New Orleans, or the Odd-fellows at Washington, or the G. A. R. and other lodges, with more or less frequency for twenty years. But why is President Harrison defying the best sentiment of the nation by providing a drunken junket for some of the party. Our Washington letter protests against taking the devil on board in the shape of liquor. The Inter Ocean describing the dining-car, says: "The steward, with a cork-screw sticking out of an upper vest pocket, was on his knees in front of the wine-chest stacking up bottles that were adorned with white and red and orange and green labels—bottles whose mouths were stopped with gold seals and silver seals and emerald seals, and a few black bottles that were choked with common and unadorned corks." If such baggage goes with a President we can afford to do without one for a term or two until prohibition gets into the White House.

SETH M. GATES ON GUARD.

The two letters below from Hon. Seth M. Gates, father of President Gates of Amherst College, are scarce twenty years old. They are an emphatic protest, from a man eminent in the Congregational church, against mixing the faith in secret lodge oaths and rites, with faith in our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ at the communion table. No professor of the lodge religion should be received there any more than a professor in Mormonism or Buddhism. Mr. Gates maintained his cause then; and Congregational churches must yet come to stand with him if they wish not to see their altars broken down.

These letters were written respectively to Rev. Woodruff Post, an excellent minister of the Methodist church, and to Abner Hard, a citizen of Painted Post, in the same State.

WARSAW, N. Y., April 16, 1871.

MY DEAR SIR:—This is the first moment I have found since the receipt of your letter, which I knew how to devote to an answer. I pray you not to deem my long delay disrespectful. Having hired myself out for the current year to take care of the postoffice, and having no assistance only while I go to dinner and tea, I have just as much as a man now past his three-score and ten ought to try to do.....

This brief history of my present situation and employment and time of life, may, it seems to me, be regarded as furnishing a sufficient reason for my declining to promise you any important aid in getting up a convention to oppose Masonry at Rochester or elsewhere. In my present situation I could do nothing which would satisfy myself or others, or be of service.

On that subject I fought my battles years ago, and with some success, and although the bad institution was only scotched, not utterly killed, and is, in many portions of the land, secretly worming its way into existence and prominence again, I have neither time nor strength left to go into a general or public aggressive warfare against it again.

I have in no degree changed my mind in reference to it. I regard it as a dangerous institution, and have, with the help of some others of like mind, kept it out of our church entirely, until within the last year. I learn one or two of our members have crept in unawares. I am everywhere known as an avowed Anti-mason, and have made good use of, and done some good service with, Finney's and Green's books, which I try to keep busy. More than this home warfare, I do not feel it my duty to promise.

I have had a life of agitation and warfare. I entered upon public life as an Anti-mason; fought the institution with my pen briskly in the papers for years; was in 1832 elected to the Legislature on an openly avowed Anti-masonic ticket. About the same time I joined in the anti-rum struggle, and have, in my humble way, battled in the ranks of that army ever since. I was early enlisted in the great anti-slavery struggle, and tried, for many years, to do good service for humanity there too; and while I do not mean to put off the harness, or shrink from any responsibility in any one of these great and good causes, I feel that my days of warfare are nearly over, and that the battle-axe, to be wielded effectually, must be in younger and stronger hands than mine.

I bid you who are younger and stronger, God-speed in your labor. As to petitioning the present Legislature to compel the Masons to give an account of themselves, I should as soon think of petitioning the Evil One to reform sinners, or put out the fires of the pit. Very respectfully your friend and brother, Seth M. Gates.

Warsaw, N. Y., Feb. 21, 1872.

Rev. and Dear Sir:—I have the proceedings of the New York Anti-Secret Society Convention held at Syracuse in 1870, and should like to get the proceedings of the one held in Rochester last fall. I am an old seceding Mason; lived in LeRoy when Morgan was kidnapped; had a "writ" in my hands as deputy sheriff for Johns, the Canadian spy who tried to kidnap Miller, and I tried to arrest him (Johns) at LeRoy, but was prevented by Royal Arch Masons. I fought the institution vigorously several years, until it was put down in all this region, and until I became engrossingly engaged in the anti-slavery struggle.

In my 72d year of age, I find the Congregational church here, of which I am a member, infested with this "fretting leprosy." We had on our church records a resolution passed sixteen years ago, against secret oath-bound societies, and in publishing a nice, new church manual, the mystic brethren undertook to expunge this from our records. They came within an inch of succeeding before I got the church awake to what was going on. Of a committee of five on the manual, of which I was one, all the others, with the pastor at its head, reported in favor of striking out the resolution. I made a strong minority report in writing, and moved to substitute my report retaining the old resolution on the records, and supported it by a speech of twenty minutes, in which I described Masonry, its initiatory rites, and its most profane oaths. I had a good house-ful, for the church was at last aroused, and my report and resolution was adopted overwhelmingly.

Still the Masons are at work drawing in many of our young members, who here, as elsewhere, will stand by Masonry, wherever that and religion come in conflict, although the Saviour is ignored in Masonry proper, so as not to offend Jews and others from its brotherhood. I think we shall have more trouble with it. Pardon me for this long story, but I wish to tell you enough to convince you that I have some interest in the anti-secret association of which you are a member and an officer, though so situated that I could not attend the meeting. Very respectfully,

Seth M. Gates.

PLAIN PREACHING.

BY ELDER NATHAN CALLENDER.

(Deut. 27:8; Isa. 32:4.)

Plainness and precision in preaching the Gospel are more important than in mathematics or any of the sciences, because infinitely more is involved in the Gospel than in all the sciences united.

The four-word sermon of Nathan to David was of too much consequence to the king to leave it possible to misunderstand it. Not one obscure word,—"Thou art the man." His sin had been festering on his crime-hardened soul nine months. The parable of the prophet was a very pointed and beautiful illustration of the case, but had to be put on by the "thou art the man," or David would have ransacked his kingdom to find the criminal. David found him in his own robe, and under his own crown; hence the 51st Psalm. More such preachers would give us scores more such penitential utterances. I know many preachers who are not able to construct a single paragraph correctly as to grammar and rhetoric, and yet are the best understood men who fill the pulpit, and lodge more saving truth in the heart than many of the titled sons of the schools.

The more learning the better for any calling, provided it is used as Paul used it; but when used to glorify self, it "puffeth up," and culminates in a first-class bubble; always doomed to burst. We are reminded that this age needs "brain-power." Every age needs it, and will have it. Brains are not made in the schools. God makes them, and puts them into his work.

It is said that men who could teach the people fifty years ago cannot do so now, and it may be admitted. God then took men of all callings and positions and made good preachers of them, but the same men would now be behind the times. One thing, however, is overlooked by the strenuous advocate of an exclusively educated ministry. General intelligence has advanced with the people. Have not our teachers of the common schools kept pace with the times? Have not our merchants, mechanics, farmers, and men of all vocations, kept pace with the schools? There always has been, as now, a pressing necessity for learned men to teach the people, and that on all subjects. But is the necessity any greater to-day than fifty years ago? Perhaps not. Christ took the average man from among the whole mass and sent him into his ministry. Only one man from the feet of Gamaliel met the demands of that age. God could have put Nicodemus,—indeed the whole Sanhedrim—into the ministry; then, as now, he could follow the beck of the world, and confine his calls to the schools of this day, and leave out the Spurgeons, Moodys, Pentecosts, Munhalls, and a multitude of less ability and power, from the ministry. Then "the excellency of the power would be of men," and not of God. Did not that age more than any other demand all Pauls to compete with scribes, Pharisees, Sadducees, and the learned millions of Greece and Rome? In nothing is the combined wisdom and sovereignty of God more pronounced than in his calls into the Christian ministry. Contact between preacher and people is the vital point. Jerry McCauley could best teach the degraded in New York; D. L. Moody the masses of the world.

It will be apparent that this is no plea against liberal education, in favor of ignorance, in the pulpit or anywhere else. The writer believes that "knowledge is power," and the more the better, in every single position to be filled in our world. Many a time has he looked at Hugh Miller's picture in "Old Red Sand Stone," with coat off, and hammer in hand, a stone mason and scholar, hard at work, leading the world in geology. "Self-made, but made, and at work." Speak and write the Word very plainly.

THE LODGE ON THE CONGO.

[From "Fetishism in Congo Land" by E. J. Glave in the April Century.

Among the Ba-kongo people of the Lower Congo country, whose headquarters is at San Salvador, where resides their king known as the Ntotela (Emperor), or to Europeans as Dom Pedro V., a title bestowed upon him by the Portuguese, we find many curious examples of the fetish system. Prominent among these is the ceremony of the "Nkimba," or initiation of the boys and young men of the village into the mysteries and rites of their religion.

Each village in this region possesses its Nkimba inclosure, generally a walled tract of perhaps half an acre in extent, buried in a thick grove of trees in the vicinity of the village. Inside the inclosure are the huts of the Nganga, the fetish-man, who presides over its ceremonies, and his assistants, as well as of the boys undergoing the course of instruction. What this instruction is it is hard to say, for none save the initiated are permitted to penetrate the precincts of the Nkimba inclosure, but it includes the learning of a new language, so that those having passed through the Nkimba may be able to converse on religious matters in words not understood by the people.

When a boy reaches the age of puberty he is generally induced to join the Nkimba. This is effected in the following curious manner: On some market-day or public assemblage he falls down, simulating sickness or a stupor, and is immediately surrounded by the Nganga and his assistants, who carry him off to the inclosure. It is given out that Luemba or Nsaki, or whatever the boy's name may be, is dead; that he has gone to the spirit world, whence by and by the Nganga will recall him to bring him up with the other lads in the sacred inclosure before restoring him to his friends under a new name. No woman is allowed to look upon the face of one of the Nkimba, who daily parade through the woods or through the surrounding country singing a strange weird song to warn the unitiated of their approach. The women fly from the sound, deserting their work in the manioc fields, and sometimes a man, a stranger in the district, on being encountered in one of these walks abroad will be severely beaten for his temerity in standing to watch the Nkimba go by.

The bodies of the lads are chalked entirely white, and a wide skirt of palm fronds or straight dry grass suspended from a circular strip of bamboo standing out from the body above the hips hangs down to below the knees, much resembling a short crinoline. Food is brought daily by the mothers or relatives of the pupils and laid outside the inclosure, whence it is conveyed inside by one of the Ngangas or the older lads. For although the women and the credulous outsiders really believe in the death and residence among the spirits of their male relatives who have "died in the bush" (i. e., entered the Nkimba inclosure), they are religiously instructed by the Ngangas to attend to all the bodily wants of the supposed inhabitants of the spirit world.

When a youth has successfully mastered the new language, and has acquitted himself satisfactorily in the eyes of the Nganga, expressing implicit belief in all the strange doctrines of fetishism it is thought necessary to impart to him, it is given out by the medicine-man that Luemba or Nsaki is now fit to return to the world and to his sorrowing relatives. Accordingly on a certain day he is conducted back to his village with much ceremony, reintroduced to his parents as no longer Luemba, but as "Kinkila Luemba" or "Nehama Nsaki,"—the new names being distinctly Nkimba names, adopted during the period of his residence in the inclosure,—and he affects to treat everything with surprise as of one come to a new life from another world; to recognize no one, not even his father or mother, while his relatives receive him as raised from the dead; and for several days the newcomer is permitted to take anything he fancies in the village, and is treated with every kindness until it is supposed that he has become accustomed to his surroundings, when he will be allowed to shake down into his place in life, and unless he determines to pursue the calling of a fetish-man will again become an ordinary member of society. The duration of the period of initiation varies from two years in some cases, and even longer, to only a few months, according, I suppose, as the pupil shows an aptitude for his studies or not. Any refractory youngster or one who cannot bring himself to believe all the Ngangas declare to be true, is beaten until he recognizes the error of his ways and accepts as strictly true every story and miracle the medicine-man may relate. Sometimes a sturdy, unbelieving boy who cannot see that black is white, or vice versa, however much the Nganga may assert it and his older and wiser comrades share in the assertion, is beaten black and blue before he becomes convinced of the fact that his eyes have deceived him. The origin of this strange African order of Freemasonry is quite unknown among the Ba-kongo. No missionary has yet been able to penetrate the mysteries of the language or of the rites and ceremonies connected with it, but from the following facts I feel inclined to believe it simply a perpetuation in the native mind, darkened by savagery and superstition, of the early Catholic teaching of the Portuguese fathers who followed Diogo Cam's discovery of the Congo and established themselves at San Salvador and in the surrounding country.

WOMAN AND SECRET SOCIETIES.

[From the Bible Standard.]

Never was a wise woman more unwise than Miss Willard in a recent address, when she spoke in behalf of the women of America, and used the following words: "Our expectation of justice is not in the lily-handed men of college, court and cloister, but in the farmers whose 'higher education' has been in the Grange, and in the mechanics trained by trades unions and the Knights of Labor. These are the men who have been known to go on strike because sewing-women toiled at starving rates; who stand stoutly by their motto, 'Equal pay for equal work;' who declare in their platforms that we shall have the ballot, and who are the force that shall bring about an evenness between the eight-hour day of the husband and the sixteen-hour day of the wife."

It is a mistake for the women to look for emancipation from their bondage with any hope that the lodge-trained men of any country will come to to their help. The only reason why lodges recognize women in any way is to silence their opposition, and secure their co-operation at feasts, and where their work is needed. Organized secretism is handed down to us from the age of barbarism. Freemasonry in many of its features is a descendant from Druidism and the ancient Egyptian mysteries, and is in whatever form but a type of Baal worship. In these paternal ancestors the lodge had no place for women except to satisfy the unholy lust of men. That Freemasonry is the author of all the brood of secret societies in the world is well known, and the cursed use and abuse of womanhood by the ancient secretists is handed down to this age in one form or another. In Freemasonry its takes the form of obligating all Masons to preserve the virtue and chastity of the near relatives of Masons, but leaves all others exposed to the lust of Masons, so that a man can commit a crime with any woman not thus protected, and remain a good Mason.

The Grange also presents a type of this old-time debauchery, in giving to some of its offices names coming directly from the Grecian and Roman corruption. The Grangers call some of their women "Ceres, Pomona, Flora," and these are the names of one or another goddess of Greece and Rome. In the conception of these deities the Greeks and Romans endowed them with the most debasing and corrupt habits and passions which found prominence in their own sinful natures. The worship rendered to these deities was debasing in the extreme. The founders of the Grange were not ignorant of the facts in the case, and in adopting these names perpetuated the thought of the ancient corruption. Womanhood will look in vain for any elevation in such titles, or among men of such lodge-training.

The Knights of Labor may have for their motto, "Equal pay for equal work," but they have some peculiar ways of avoiding it in practice. In almost any shop you can duplicate the following: An ignorant, stupid, bungling workman joined the Knights, and was put to work in a shop where his fellow Knights were employed. He could not do any work well, and could only do a small part of the work required of the men who received the same wages as he, yet these noble Knights, who are going to help the women of America, insisted that he should be retained in the shop and paid as much as any one, threatening to "strike" if their dictum was disregarded. That may be "equal pay for equal work" as these men see it, but it must be according to some new standard of equality. The typographical unions demand equal wages but do not furnish equal work. Every man must have the same wages, even if he does not and cannot do as good work as his fellow workmen. An important equation is gone in such cases as this.

The esteemed lady whose words are such a grief and disappointment to thousands of Christian men and women is a devoted follower of Jesus Christ. To him as to no other do our mothers, sisters, wives, owe their exalted place among men. The training of the whole lodge system is against Christ and the Christian religion. There is no religion or system of morals upon the face of the earth which elevates woman above the slave and instrument of man's passion, unless it is the Christian religion. Shall American women then appeal to the greatest enemy of Christ and Christianity for help? The Christian Sabbath is one of the essentials of the Christian religion, yet these very Knights to whom the women are directed to look for help, are chief in making it a day for their secular meetings, excursions and picnics. Furthermore the whole lodge spirit is anti-Christ. In one case it dethrones Christ and enthrones personal rights. In another case it dethrones Christ and enthrones labor. In another case it dethrones Christ and enthrones a so-called benevolence, and in every case it gives the government of the life to self, and not to Christ. No community can live in peace where one set of men are arrayed against another. Suspicion, jealousy, strife, discord, follow in the wake of all secret societies. These are the elements which enslave and crush the weak and already oppressed. To look to these elements for relief is only to sell themselves to a deeper and more cruel oppression. Never were two more selfish and greedy societies organized than those to whom the appeal is made. The only recognition among lodgemen the women can obtain, is a selfish recognition for selfish purposes. Right and truth under God will place womanhood along by the side of manhood, and pronounce the one to be the exact counterpart of the other, each in its place equal to the other, and absolutely essential to each other. Equal in the goverment of the home, the church and the state. Equal in all the philanthropies and Christian endeavor of the world. Equal as combattants not one against the other, but united and true against a common foe, and in the day when we shall crown our Saviour Lord of all in his glory, we shall share as equals.

A. T. J.

LODGE FUNERALS IN EUROPE.

[In connection with the Masons' burial of their chief in Washington we present a sketch of the obsequies performed by the Grand Orient of Brussels on the death of their lodge brother Leopold, King of the Belgians, in 1866. The account is taken from an English work translated from the German, entitled, "The Secret Warfare of Freemasonry against Church and State." The whole ceremony breathes the spirit of paganism, with which we become familiar in classic Greek or Latin, and is a stigma upon Christendom.]

The hall is draped with black. In the background the tapestries are adorned with festoons of white, with tears and silver fringes. On the side-walls are hung shields inscribed with funeral mottoes in letters of silver. In the midst stands the catafalque raised on three steps, and guarded on the right and left by four high dignitaries with their swords drawn, and the black riband of the Maitre elu des Neuf around their necks. A funeral lamp is suspended from the ceiling.

The whole nave of the Temple is dimly lighted; the altar, draped with black, stands in the left corner at the side of the tomb; in the right corner is a statue of the deceased veiled with black crape. Before the tomb stands an antique tripod, on which a lamp is burning; to the right and left are brasiers, from which clouds of incense and perfumes arise; on a table are placed a basket filled with leaves of flowers, a vessel containing wine, another containing milk, and a third containing purifying water (in imitation of holy water).

The Grand Master, Brother Van Schon, advances to the altar, where the sacred fire is burning, and speaks as follows:

"Listen to my words, honored shade of our distinguished brother! In the name of all Masons here present, I offer thee water, by means of which Nature is perpetually renewed, and which, in the course of its various transformations, casts off all defilement, thus becoming a fit emblem of purity. I offer thee wine, which the labors of man win from the vine. It is the emblem of strength. I offer thee milk, the first food of mankind. It is the emblem of simplicity.

"Death, like a devouring flame, consuming all things, has caused thee to disappear from our midst; but to destroy thy memory is not within his power. This memory, like these sweet perfumes diffusing themselves in the air, will serve to animate our courage, kindle our zeal, and guide us in the performance of the duties incumbent upon us."

After this a speech from the Grand Orator followed, on the conclusion of which the Grand Master approached the altar, threw incense on it three times, with these words: "As the smoke of this incense rises to heaven, so may the soul of our brother ascend to its celestial source."*

Returning to the throne, the Grand Master begins afresh: "My brethren of the Orient, unite with me in scattering flowers upon the tomb of our honored brother, as a token of our friendship and an emblem of our grief." The Grand Master and the brethren, sitting on the East side, then advance to the catafalque, and thrice cast upon it a handful of flower-leaves. The Brother Wardens at the head of their columns do the same in their turn.

After this offering to the dead, the Most Serene Grand Master invites all present to stand up in order of rank, while he pronounces the last farewell to the departed. He then calls upon the two Wardens to assist him in closing the tomb. Arrived at the foot of the catafalque, he strikes with the hammer three times on the edge of the tomb, saying, "Farewell! farewell! farewell!"

*It is to be observed that the whole ceremony hinges on the immortality of the Pantheists (the being absorbed into space, and surviving only in the remembrance of posterity). The idea of personal immortality is left entirely out of the question.

Then returning to his throne, he thus speaks:

"My brethren, stand up all of you in your ranks. Our venerated Brother Leopold of Saxe-Coburg is no more! We shall never again behold that distinguished Freemason; but the soul of our beloved brother has returned to its celestial source. So let us hope; let us hope!"

For the closing scene the decorations are changed, the lodge being transformed into a temple of immortality, radiant with light. In the centre is a bust of Leopold of Saxe-Coburg, brilliantly illuminated; around it are allegorical figures holding out to him crowns and palms of immortality. In the background are some scenes, painted by Brother Welbrandt, representing Elysium. Music is heard; as the last chords die away, the Grand Master exclaims, "Brethren, our hopes are fulfilled! Our brother has taken his place amongst the benefactors of humanity; he will eternally shine in the temple of immortality!"

THE BLACK KNIGHTS OF MALTA.

The existence of a secret order of this name was brought to our attention some time since by a gentleman who had been asked to join it, and to whom was given in print the following statement of the objects and history of the organization.

In the circular accompanying the statement it is claimed that the order was founded at Jerusalem in A. D. 1048, and reorganized on a military basis in 1118. Its officers are a "Sir Knight Commander," Generalissmo and companions. The lodges are called commanderies, and the members "Sir Knight Companions." The applicant for membership asks for admission to the "ancient and honorable order," pledges his honor that he is not influenced by any unworthy motive, and promises to "obey and do my utmost to maintain all rules and usages." There are twelve degrees. The statement of principles, etc., is as follows:

The Order of the Knights of Malta is a body of men banded together under the most binding forms of comfort and sustain one another in the practice of the Christian religion, to offer mutual assistance in the time of need, to promote Protestant unity and to defend the Protestant religion against all foes whatsoever. This Order is not a fraternity of recent birth, but is the legitimate descendant of the illustrious religious and military order of the Middle Ages; heir to its greatness and fully endowed with all its ancient rights and ceremonies. Cradled in the Holy Land, amid the scenes of our Saviour's life and Passion, it arrived at the dignity of manhood during the period of the Reformation; when, rejoicing in man's estate, it zealously embraced the doctrines of the Reformers; and under the leadership of Sir James Sanderlands, the First Protestant Grand Master, assisted John Knox in his holy work in Scotland. Since then it has been the faithful ally of the Protestant Church and the inflexable opponent of Roman Catholicity.

The Order of Malta is the staunch defender of civil and religious liberty. Whilst opposing all forms of error and superstition, it nevertheless teaches and exercises the fullest toleration and charity toward all men, being incapable from the nature of its constitution or of the religion in whose interest it has been perpetuated, of oppressing any man or body of men on account of their religious or political belief.

The Order of Malta is neither a national, political nor sectarian association. Instituted in the Holy Land in A. D. 1048, at a period when few, if any of the States of Europe had attained their modern proportions of power and before the continent of America had been heard of, it is the property of no nation, the possessor of no national traditions. Having no connection whatever with politics in any form, nor with any particular church organization, it demands, as the sole qualifications for membership, purity of morals, zeal for the Protestant cause, faith in the Holy Scriptures as the infalliable rule of faith and life, belief in the Holy Trinity and reliance upon Christ as the only mediator. Its ramifications extend to the four quarters of the globe, and in every quarter is the society governed by the same grand and Christian principles and under the same ancient and knightly constitution, in short, it is a universal Protestant fraternity the true evangelical alliance for the propagation of the faith.

In association with the religious principles and aspirations of the fraternity is a chivalric spirit which is the conmitant of the knightly character of the institution. The Order of Malta being one of the few military orders of the middle ages which has survived the revolution in society possesses the spirit as well as the forms of Christian knighthood and is thus decidedly elevating and emi nently Christian.

This ancient and honorable fraternity, therefore calls upon all Protestants, by whatever name known, who love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity and in truth, to enlist under its banners, and to take their part in the religious regeneration of the world. With Protestantism aroused and faith kindled, our religion would sweep the nations to the utter destruction of every form of error and superstition. May the Lord hasten the day, and grant the speedy coming of His kingdom.

A careful examination of this singular statement shows a strange mixture of falsehood and fact. It is true that a little band of men, almost monks, banded together in Palestine during the Crusades to protect poor pilgrims. They became rich and popular, and after the re-capture of Jerusalem by the Saracens, were scattered over Europe with headquarters on the island of Malta. They were finally suppressed for their excesses. Mackey in his Encyclopedia shows that the degree called by their name should never be allowed in Masonry, since the ancient order was never secret. But this nondescript body here taking the name is not only a secret lodge, but proposes to do all for mankind that civil government or the Christian church can hope to do. The story of its Protestantism, and aiding John Knox is bald falsehood. The order is a fraud conceived by some sharper to make money by selling charters and regalia, and get a bloated title to make a few weak-minded people stare and wonder. Such frauds are worse than a lottery.

PAGAN!

LODGE SORCERIES IN A CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

WHO SHALL CLEANSE THIS TEMPLE?

[Report of the ceremonies over the dead body of Albert Pike, from the Washington Evening Star of April 10, 1891.]

The First Congregational church was not near large enough to hold the immense throng of people who went there last night to witness the Masonic ceremonies over the remains of the late Gen. Albert Pike.

Long before the hour of midnight several thousand persons were at the church door anxious to gain admittance, but the doors were not opened to the public until after the members of the Masonic orders had been accommodated.

The lower floor had been reserved for Masons only, but when the doors were opened the ushers found it wholly impossible to keep back the vast crowd.

A few minutes before the midnight hour, and after the relatives and members of the deceased's family had been seated, the solemn procession entered the church and the body of the deceased knight was placed on the catafalque, which was on a platform that had been erected for the occasion. The ancient ceremonies used at the obsequies of a Knight Templar were employed. They are a modification of the original ceremonies and were written by the late Gen. Pike.

In compliance with the requirements of the ceremonies the walls were covered with black cloth and the remains of the dead chief placed on a trestle near the center of the church.

The body was dressed in the habit of the Kadosh, the legs crossed and the arms folded across the breast. Nine lighted candles in three triangles stood at the east, west and south of the casket, while to the north were the pillows and skull, the skull wreathed with ivy and surrounded by seven candlesticks, which were not lighted.

A heavy iron cross, painted black, stood at the head of the coffin, and directly in front of this stood Grand Master Holt, who had charge of the exercises.

Just at about the hour of midnight Grand Master Holt and twenty-one knights following came from the chapel at the sound of a trumpet, each bearing a lighted taper. They came one by one and formed a semi-circle about the remains of the deceased.

JUDGMENT OF THE DEAD.

Grand Master Holt, standing at the head of the coffin, broke the death-like silence by saying:

"Dear brethren and Knights of the Holy House of the Temple, it has pleased our Father, who is in heaven, to take away from us the living soul of our brother and to leave unto us his body, of which we are about to dispose according to our ancient knightly custom; but we are first of all to hold a judgment upon him whose mortal remains lie before us.

"It is midnight, and a new day begins for us. Our brother has finished his earthly probation. Death is the inexorable creditor, whose indulgence nothing in the world can purchase. Every moment that sees a newborn child laugh at the light sees also a man die, and hears the cry of a breaking heart, and the lamentations of those who sit lonely and in the desolation of affliction, no longer seeing the faces of dearly loved ones. Round the little island of our being on which we follow our various pursuits of toil or craft, of usefulness or mischief, throbs the illimitable ocean of eternity, upon which, round the isle, a broad circle of impenetrable darkness brooding lies. But beyond that zone the outer ocean sparkles, and its white crested waves dance in the light and somewhere in the distance the islands of the blessed are dreaming, girdled by the peaceful waters. Here, in our present home, we live our little life, waiting to be called to other duties elsewhere, and one by one our loved ones and our cherished friends glide away from us unseen, and are swallowed up in the darkness which is the shadow of the broad wings of death.

"Each of us belongs to some little colony of hearts that hath a life of its own, its private and inner life, apart from that of the mass of humanity which eddies around it in endless agitations, having with it no sympathies nor any memories of association. When one of its members dies it is as if a limb were severed from the body. The wound heals, but the limb is missed as long as the body lives. This is the body of our order here mutilated to-day and therefore we mourn."

THE RESPONSES.

Then came the responses and the knight in charge said:

"Let us look back upon the life of the brother whose spirit has departed from his body and see if he be entitled to honorable mention and to be remembered with affection. If any one of you, or any one who hears me, can accuse of wrong this knight now dead let him stand forth and so declare."

One of the twenty-one knights followed:

"Brethren, it belongs not unto man but unto God to judge the dead. He alone can with perfect justice reward and punish. He alone can look into the soul and know its most secret motives and at once see and know all that, from birth until death, a man hath thought and said and done. Therefore, if thou wert even thrice to call upon us to accuse our brother, whose lips are closed so that he can no longer answer for himself, thou would'st call in vain, for we are all brethren in the bonds of knighthood and do reverence our dead."

"It is my bounden duty again, brethren," said Grand Master Holt. "We are free members of the Order of the Holy House of the Temple of Solomon. Speak! if ye have aught whereof to accuse the brother whose body lieth here awaiting burial."

There was a death-like silence for a few moments and then the Grand Master said in a loud voice: "If there be no accuser there can be no judgment. Doth no man accuse the dead?"

The twenty-one knights knelt and answered: "God is his judge and ours."

Three blows on the iron cross and the knights arose and continued the service.

The Grand Master—"Let the grave, then, be ready to receive this body. Brethren, who command in the West, hear and make answer. When will God judge?"

Response—"In his own good time."

"Who will be man's accuser?"

"His conscience."

"Who his defender?"

"No one."

"Who will give testimony against him?"

"No one."

"No one?"

"God, who will judge, knoweth all."

A few more responses and then three blows on the iron cross were followed by soft and plaintive music. The coffin lid was removed and the body prepared for burial.

THE FINAL BLESSING.

Music by the choir of male and female voices followed and Acting Grand Commander Batcheller, Gen. Pike's probable successor, concluded the ceremonies by saying: "I bless thee, O dead brother, in the name of Almighty God, in the name of the Order of the Holy House of the Temple and in the name of the knights and brethren here assembled. May the light of the face of God shine upon and bless thee, Amen."

The church, which was in darkness during the ceremonies, except the light from the candles, was lighted and the body was taken to the Scottish Rite Temple.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

[Dispatch to the Chicago Herald.]

Washington, April 10.—At midnight Masonic ceremonies over the remains of General Albert Pike were held in the First Congregational church with great solemnity. At about 10:30 members of Albert Pike consistory conveyed the body from the Scottish Rite Cathedral, where it had lain in state, to the church. Long before midnight hundreds of people had gathered in front of the church. So dense was the crowd that the bearers of the casket could hardly force their way into the church, followed by the long line of Masons who wished to pay high honor to the deceased brother. The walls of the church were covered with black cloth, while on a catafalque on a platform extending out twenty feet from the pulpit was the casket containing the deceased knight. There were nine candle-sticks, four feet in height, in three triangles, on the east, west and south of the casket, each having upon it a lighted candle. Otherwise the large church was unlighted. On the upper end of the casket was a chaplet of white roses, and below it was the insignia of the order and the sword of the deceased knight in its scabbard. Upon a tablet near the coffin was a skull wreathed with evergreens, surrounded by seven large candle-sticks bearing no lights. At the head of the casket stood a great iron cross painted black. When all was quiet and the organ played softly, Grand Master Holt, bearing a lighted candle and an iron hammer, walked slowly in from a room on the left and stood at the foot of the casket. Then twenty-one knights followed, all bearing candles and attired in black, with scarfs of crape, and their heads bare, and arranged themselves in a semi-circle on the west, south and north sides of the casket facing the east. For a few moments there was perfect silence, then a trumpet sounded in plaintive notes in an adjoining room, and after the last faint echoes had died away the Grand Master began the ceremonies according to the ancient knightly custom. The beautiful but weird services were continued by taking the chaplet from the temples of the dead knight, the cross from the breast, the cords from the feet and hands, and then in succession each attendant approached the casket and laid his right hand upon the eyes, cheek, mouth, heart, hands and feet, repeating a blessing. When the last attendant had touched the body of the dead the lights were turned up, and after all had left the church the remains were carried back to the Scottish Rite temple.

To help all our local and traveling agents in working for subscribers, we give to all new yearly subscribers during the present month a copy of Prof. Henry Drummond's latest work, "Love, the Supreme Gift; or The Greatest thing in the World." There is now an immense demand for this work. It has been issued by some publishers at 20 cents per copy; by others at 35 cents, and $1.00 for an illustrated edition. We will send it to every new subscriber that can be obtained before May 1st, whether by agent or directly. Considerable theological controversy has arisen over this work of Prof. Drummond's, and for its size it has attracted as much attention as the same author's famous "Natural Law in the Spiritual World." Dr. A. J. Gordon of Boston, has written a supplementary pamphlet on Faith, "The First thing in the World." Messiah's Herald of Boston, says: "There has been no work of its size issued during the last decade that has been more severely criticised than Drummond's 'Greatest thing in the World.' Many have warmly commended it, and thousands of copies of the work have been sold. The great objection to the work has been that Prof. Drummond paid little attention to the value of faith." Dr. Gordon makes up this deficiency.

We have secured a special rate on this work. Free to new subscribers for a year or more from this time to June 1st.

—At a very large meeting of the Christian Endeavor Societies of San Francisco, the question of the Sunday Closing of the World's Fair was considered, and a strong memorial was drawn up and is to be sent to the Commissioners, in favor of Sunday closing.

REFORM NEWS.

A GLANCE AT THE METROPOLITAN MINISTERS.

160 W. 36th St., New York City,
April 14, 1891.

Dear Cynosure:—The farmer says, "hard times;" the merchant, "business is quiet;" the churches report, "collections short." The lodge, the saloon, and undertaker appear to have the "balance of trade." This city, like many others, has been seriously affected by the "grip." It is hoped with the recurrence of bright days it may vanish. At this writing Mrs. Summerville, wife of the much-esteemed pastor of the 39th St. Reformed Presbyterian church, is very low with pneumonia. Physicians give little hope of her recovery. It was my privilege to hear Bro. Summerville preach two most excellent sermons on Sabbath.

A visit to the now famous "Jerry McAuley mission," was very interesting. Mrs. McAuley presided. The leading thought, "Being filled with the Spirit," was ably presented. The testimonies which followed in rapid succession were as simple as they were similar. Drunkenness, poverty, desolation, despair, transformed by the indwelling Christ, to sobriety, joy in believing, and all that follows. The same story is told night after night the year round; and yet it never grows old. The convert tells it with the same joy and zeal as if it were never discovered before. It is the "pearl of great price" to him, and why should not he rejoice.

On Monday I attended a meeting of about thirty of the Presbyterian pastors of this city, held in the late Dr. Crosby's church. Rev. Mr. Kidd read a very ably-prepared paper giving an account of the origin, growth and distinctive principles of the United Presbyterian church. All present were given three minutes each to compliment or condemn the church, or the paper, as they might be disposed. As would naturally be expected I used the three minutes granted, complimenting the position taken by this body against the secret lodge system. I was led to believe, together with the late pastor of the church in which we met, Dr. McCosh, Joseph Cook and others of national reputation, that the secret lodge system was doing a vast amount of evil in impeding the progress of Christ's kingdom in the earth. While the lodge question was discussed but little, it was evident there was a diversity of opinion as to its merits.

A gentleman, whose name I did not learn, in a bragging way, as if telling something he was proud of, said that when formerly pastor of a U. P. congregation in Washington county, Pa., (He is now in the Presbyterian church), he never asked a man whom he received whether he belonged to a secret society or not. He was sure there were plenty of them in that church. He had not enforced their law on restricted communion. In short, he made himself out an outlaw; perhaps hoping to draw others after him. I can have nothing but feelings of contempt for such a man.

The discussion was mainly on the singing of Psalms and the use of instrumental music in worship. It was held that in the last Psalm we were commanded to praise God with stringed instruments. This was replied to by the statement that the same Psalm enjoined dancing in praising God. We were as much commanded to dance in the praise of God, as to use stringed instruments. The tracts I distributed, giving opinions of Joseph Cook, Dr. Pentecost, D. L. Moody and others, were thankfully received.

I attended a meeting of the New York Presbytery in the Scotch Presbyterian church. I judge there are two hundred pastors in this body. Prof. Briggs of this presbytery is accused of heresy in holding to what is called by the N. Y. Sun "prolonged regeneration after death." As the professor had the grip he could not be present. His case was referred to a committee to report at the next meeting of presbytery in May. A shortage of funds for home mission and church extension work was reported. It was purposed to sell a property and abandon a mission among the sailors to help the finances. This did not meet with general approval. One urged that as a presbytery they should build up, not abandon, a post every time the devil got strong about it. If they would be aggressive there would be money enough, but if they would run from the devil he would soon drive them out of the city.

A colored church whose members had so quarreled as to make their church odious were compared to a barrel of apples. One rotten apple would destroy the whole barrel, but the good ones would not make the bad good. The remedy was to empty out the barrel and sort out the bad. The church property was ordered sold, and the church disbanded; a new church to be organized in a different locality, so far as possible with the bad left out. This action reminded me of a man, said to be very wise, who burned his barn to get rid of the rats.

To-day I met a conference of Lutheran pastors of the Missouri Synod. All whose subscriptions to the Cynosure were due paid for another year. These friends, while not endorsing our paper in every respect, believe it an able advocate of the anti-secret movement and show a kindly spirit in its support.

Next week Wednesday evening I speak in Rev. Kidd's U. P. church, this city, and the following Friday evening in Rev. Carson's R. P. church, Brooklyn. Other meetings are being arranged. My address for two weeks will be 160 W. 36th St., New York city. W. B. Stoddard.

MICHIGAN PREPARING FOR A CONVENTION.

Dear Cynosure:—After lecturing at Allegan, I preached and lectured at four points on the Hopkins circuit, of which Rev. Badder is pastor, and arranged to return and lecture again at Allegan. I then went to Holland where I met Mr. Doesburg, who, some years ago, revealed Freemasonry.

From Holland I went to Saugatuck, where I preached a sermon, showing the conflict of the lodge philosophy with the Gospel, in Rev. Fero's church.

The pastor of the M. E. church was present and assisted in the service. I also preached in the town of Ganges, twelve miles south of Saugatuck.

I then returned to Allegan where a thousand hand-bills had been distributed to advertise another lecture in the principal hall of the city. But it rained hard that afternoon and continued to rain during the evening. To save expense, I went to the proprietor of the hall and withdrew the appointment.

I visited Grand Rapids, but did not work up a meeting, as the pastor, who might have helped me, was hindered by sickness in his family. So I came to Hastings and stopped with Bro. E. Pennock and with Rev. Cheeney, the pastor of Hastings circuit. I had a severe cold and seemed threatened with illness, but while enjoying the hospitality of Bro. and Sister Pennock, I so far recovered that I preached twice before taking my departure.

In one of those sermons I exposed the deceitful wickedness of the lodge system in supplanting Christ and subverting our holy Christianity, while professing to be the "handmaid" of the church. Brother and Sister Pennock each paid me five dollars to be used in the anti-secret society reform work. Rev. Townsend conveyed me across the country to Clarksville, where I worked a little privately, distributing literature and canvassing for the Cynosure.

From here I went to Lowell, where I met Rev. A. N. Hudson and others, who are friends of Christ, and opposed to the lodge. We went to Saranack to consult with Rev. D. A. Richards, the president of the Michigan State Association. We also consulted with brethren Shepard and Cheatham, and, if others concur, we will work up a convention, to be held at Lowell, for the discussion of the secret lodge system.

Bros. Hudson and Shepard will make some inquiries and report by letter to me, and then we will decide whether to hold a convention there or not.

Leaving Lowell I came to Ionia and went south until I came to the Campbell circuit, Rev. Smith, pastor; and preached three sermons, magnifying Christ as the friend of sinners and the Saviour of his people, and exposing the lodge as a religious humbug and a Satanic conspiracy to substitute the false gospel of Masonry for the glorious Gospel of the ever-blessed God.

Brethren who wish to correspond with me, will address me at Jackson, Mich. I will order my mail forwarded from that office to any point where I may go. Let us unitedly work to pull down the strongholds of Satan and build up the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ.

C. F. Hawley.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE CHRISTMAS AND EASTER RELICS.

Philadelphia, 4th, 13th, 1891.

Editors Christian Cynosure,

Dear Friends:—About Christmas time I was glad to note your discriminating remarks in relation to the observance of the so-called "church festivals." That caution was repeated upon the recent recurrence of Easter. Until quite recently the non-ritualistic denominations have testified against these "days and times" as a relic of popery, but it seems now as though the last protest was almost ready to be hushed up by a multitudinous concord of sweet sounds, and smothered under great masses of garlands and wreaths and floral offerings generally—a pagan renaissance.

Were it at all probable that the precious memorobilia, the historic facts concerning our Redeemer's birth, incarnation, suffering and resurrection, were in the slightest degree in danger of being lost to the world, some stated annual commemoration would seem highly desirable. But, as we may well believe, not ten thousand conflagrations such as wiped out the Alexandrian Library, would suffice to extinguish the historic evidences concerning our Divine Lord

What we do now need is a deepening in that commemoration and worship which is in spirit and in truth; and this should be, with the Lord's disciples, oftener than the returning day. It is far from apparent that the spread of ritualistic, ceremonial, religious-holiday observances is indicative of a spiritually healthy trend. An observation by Alexander King, in his recent little book "The Cry of Christendom," concerning the secrecy accompanying the holding of the "mysteries" of our religion by some of the early Christians, and how some among the heathen were stumbled by it, I will have to defer until a later opportunity. Truly your friend,

Josiah W. Leeds.

THE NEED OF PRACTICAL CHRISTIANITY.

Phœnix, Arizona.

If we would be successful in winning souls and effective in our labors for Christ, we should be sound in theory, in doctrine, and in experience. It is a sad truth that many who stand in the sacred desk are not so. Were they what it is their right, privilege and duty to be, they would be successful for God and souls. They would mould the character of the nation, and make it in reality as well as in name, a Christian nation.

The hosts of sin and wickedness cannot stand the light and truth of God. Were the whole counsel of God declared, they would be forced to fly to the pit from whence they came. But under such teaching as is common, is it to be wondered at that the devil is extending his kingdom all the time?

On a late Sabbath we heard a minister preach from the text, "But let every man prove his own work, and then shall he have rejoicing in himself alone, and not in another." We supposed he would treat the subject practically and intelligently, but the prominent feature in the sermon seemed to be the recital of occurrences of a tour he had made to the outlying points on his circuit. Said he: "I spent the night at Gov. ————'s house, and was royally entertained. The next night I stopped at a place where they had no extra rooms. I picketed my horse, went in and partook of the frugal meal; after which I sat down on the mud floor, and smoked my pipe, and I never enjoyed a smoke so in all my life. Why? Not for that which was in me, but for the power of God which lived in me."

A short time before this at a meeting in town the preacher in charge arose and said, "The man who will now address you, has done more for the cause of Christ than any man in Arizona to-day," referring to the man just mentioned above. And said he, "When I was on a circuit, in going to preach I would take my Bible, hymn-book, Discipline, Winchester, and six-shooter." "And brother P. (the man who was going to speak) had to take more than this." I wondered if that was the example the blessed Saviour set us, "who when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered he threatened not; but committed himself to Him that judgeth righteously," and said, "Resist not evil."

As I had been through these places and never needed to carry any weapon, I thought were these men (called ministers of the Gospel) from a lack of godliness, seeking to compel the people to accept religion through fear; or were they men whose deeds were evil, and sought to fortify themselves in their evil ways, "having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof."

I noticed the minister in charge had his mouth full of tobacco and squirted the juice freely on the floor. After service I remarked my surprise to my friend. "Oh," said he, "Bro. F. has the dyspepsia, and uses tobacco for it." I said, "He has got the dyspepsia and thinks it is religion."

The preacher announced that as soon as full moon came they would commence revival services. I attended these services. One night after preaching for about two hours and a half, the minister invited the people to come to God and get religion, saying, "I invite you to come, but how to come I cannot tell you. Some persons with little discretion, and less knowledge of the Word of God, may presume to tell you, but I cannot." So far as could be seen there were no seekers, let alone converts, from these efforts. Could any be expected under such preaching?

I then attended some meetings at the popular church of the place, where the "upper crust" assembled together. They were commencing revival services, as they called them, and the pastor was "preaching up" for the occasion. At this time he talked from the text, "These ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone." He preached money all the way through. "Give and get blessed. Give and succeed in business. Do this and secure to yourself peace and salvation." This church is in the third series of these revival services (?) since the first of the year. So far nothing has been accomplished, but the pastor says, "The way to have a revival is to have it, and we are going to have a revival."

Under such teachers and teaching it is not astonishing that Christianity does not prevail. I find there is a great difference between religion and salvation. There is much of the former here, but oh, so little of the latter.

Oh, that those who are called the ambassadors of Christ knew him by a personal, living experience, that they might gather the wheat into the garner. Oh, that they would give the Holy Spirit the right of way through their hearts and be converted to God, that they might receive that power, wisdom and understanding which is from on high. O. S. CAMERON.

OPPORTUNITIES IN ARKANSAS.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.

Arkansas is now presenting the most fruitful opportunities to workers of reform. Since the days of the lamented Woodsmall the "ice has been broken" for reformers, and there has been a quiet, steady upheaval of public opinion against the liquor traffic and lodge worship.

This does not mean that one cannot find both in a flourishing condition in most parts of our State, but the sentiment against them, especially among the intelligent and truly pious of the colored people, is as audacious and determined as the monsters themselves. Nearly every one of us occupying a "high place" is an anti-secretist. And these are living in organized closeness to each other so that their efforts in that direction may be most successful.

The colored Baptist College in Little Rock is not built as an avowed anti-secret school. But all it lacks is the name. Its influence and work against the lodge are fixed and forceful. The wickedness of liquor and lodges, the twin demons, is discussed daily in the Bible classes, weekly in the literary society, and through the columns of the Vanguard, the State denominational paper and organ of the school.

Profs. Jos. A. Booker and J. E. Knox, president and principal teacher in the school, have organized Sunday Bible classes to meet every Sabbath afternoon at 4:30 for the benefit of city people and those who do not attend Christian schools during the week. This, of course, gives them a homogeneous class to work upon. More than one hundred attend the popular Bible class taught by Prof. Booker, while a large number of teachers make up the Bible Normal class taught by Prof. Knox.

The time was when it was dangerous and almost impossible to get a hearing in our annual bodies on these questions, but now the people are willing to listen and learn. It is the indication of Providence, then, that all these religious agencies should be used as wedges between popular evils and the people. If the N. C. A. could employ a man like Rev. L. G. Jordan, it would not merely cast bread on the waters, but it would soon enjoy an early harvest from the latest sowing.

Workers of reform can do great good indirectly by seizing these opportunities, and using the agencies here that God has so providentially planted for them. Help the school and paper; contribute to the columns of the paper, send tracts for distribution at these popular meetings, send books of reform for the college library. Opportunities! opportunities!! "Occupy till I come!" JOSIAH.

THE CYNOSURE IN THE SOUTH.

The work in the South is now set forward mainly by the circulation of the Cynosure among the pastors. We give another selection from the letters received from these brethren. Many sermons will be preached through this agency this year, and by God's grace many churches may be redeemed from lodge fellowship. The fund for this good work should be much increased.

I accept very cordially the Christian Cynosure and promise to carry out the principles set forth in it. I have always given my voice against secret societies, because I am profoundly convinced that all oath-bound organizations are a great hindrance to the progress of Christianity. I have received several copies of the Cynosure, and like the paper very much. Rest assured that I shall endeavor to exert my influence against all secret orders—W. P. HAMILTON, Childersburg, Ala.

The fearless way in which your paper champions the cause of reform, will give courage to any one who reads it. I only wish I knew a way we could get it into the hands of every Negro pastor in America.—L. G. JORDAN.

For several years I was a constant reader of your paper, but owing to my small income, and my dislike of purchasing what I could not afford to pay for, I had to have the paper stopped. But I do like the work of the paper and am always desirous to read it. I make it a rule to preach at least a sermon once a year against all secret societies, and when I have read the paper I mark all the important points (that is, points best suited to the case at issue) and hand it to some one that will use it to profit. I shall be thankful for its visits, and shall strive to sow the good seed in mellow soil.—A. L. REESE, White Castle, La.

I shall be very glad to have the Cynosure. I read it some years ago and have missed its visits very much. I shall be glad to help propagate its principles. My school shall have the pleasure of reading it. Thanking you for the enclosed information and the gift of the paper.—W. H. FRANKLIN, Rogersville, Tenn.

I write my appreciation of your kind offer to me through some good friend who loves humanity, and the great cause of my Master. Secret societies I have always been opposed to: 1st, because I can't understand their object; 2d, as a Christian, I don't believe in darkness, for those that love it walk in the same. For this very cause our city is all ablaze from effects of secret workers of darkness and sin. I have received a copy of your valuable paper occasionally and read it, by which I have gained much knowledge concerning the lodge. If I had not been reading it I would have been into some of those fraternities. But I thank my Maker that I have escaped this evil, that looks so charming to the eyes. You all may rest assured I shall do my part in shelling Satan's camp hereafter. Please accept my sincere thanks for the paper. I shall use it amidst my little flock.—BURNETT BROWN, New Orleans, La.

Your paper comes to me, and after a careful reading it has found a home with me. I deplore the fact that secret societies are a great hindrance to a pastor, to church building and church progress in every way. I have seen the evils rising out of them like great cyclones, blowing the pastor out of his pulpit. I have been fighting this evil, and will continue to do so.—W. W. BOOKER, Lura, Ark.

It is a pleasure to write my appreciation of the paper I receive from you. I like it very much. Please continue to send it to me. Thank God, my church is in a prosperous condition. May the blessing of God attend your work.—CHARLES SHERKEY, New Orleans, La.

I have always read the Cynosure with the greatest of pleasure, because I like it. I have always preached against secret orders. I never was a member of any, and I never shall be. I have not one member belonging to secret orders in my church. They are against God's Word and I preach against them. May God ever bless your work.—C. W. WILLIAMS, New Orleans, La.

I shall read your paper if you send it, and will preach against such societies, and help in any other way. Am seeking more light on the subject; have read J. Cook's lecture on the same.—G. H. MARSH, Glen Mary, Tenn.

Am in hearty sympathy with your teachings; am somewhat silently at work trying to turn individuals so as to have strength. Shall try and fulfill your requests. These-devil traps are strong here, owing to preacher's co-operation in the past. Send the Cynosure to me and also to Prof. B———, a worthy young man who is with us, having "come out from among them."—C. P. JONES, Searcy, Ark.

I am in full sympathy with the work you are engaged in. Secret societies are productive of almost as much evil among my people as the saloon. There are some evils connected with those among us that does not affect the members of same organization among the whites.—J. W. DOWNS, Leland University.

I gladly welcome the Christian Cynosure, answering affirmatively the two last questions and negatively the first of your letter to pastors and teachers in the South.—A. U. FRIERSON, Cheraw, S. C.

I take great pleasure in writing you a few lines on this subject. I was a member of a secret order before I became a Christian. I loved the works of God better than the works of secret societies, so I left the order altogether. I have been standing out against secret orders for nine or ten years, and as a Christian, I am willing to take a stand for Christ against all kinds of sin. I like the paper very well and am hoping that this work will go on until our country becomes wholly the Lord's. So then let us fight the good fight of faith, and lay hold on eternal life.—ANTHONY PEDEN, Oaks, N. C.

I have been receiving your valuable paper, and am in full sympathy with the stand it takes against secret societies and other evils of our day. I will read the paper and then give to others where it may do good.—T. A. KITCHEN, Deer Lodge, Tenn.

I will be glad to read your good paper, and will comply with your request in trying to make it profitable to my people.—J. T. MCMAHAN, Morrilton, Ark.

LITERATURE.

RIGHT AND WRONG CONTRASTED. Illustrated with incidents and pictures from everyday life. By Thos. E. Hill. Price 25 cts. For sale at the office of the Humane Journal, Rialto Building, Chicago.

This little work is full of sermons for boys and girls so attractively presented that they will read and remember the lessons of morality, and abhor the paths that lead to vice and crime. The author does not, however, take the best and truest view of a happy home life always; as he introduces in one place the billiard table, and he neglects to urge the study of the Bible as the only foundation and true guide to good morals.

In the forthcoming May Century ex-Minister John Bigelow will furnish a remarkable chapter of secret history in an article which he calls "The Confederate Diplomatists and their Shirt of Nessus." Mr. Bigelow proves in this paper by authentic documents how the cabinet and agents of the Southern Confederacy were baffled in their attempts at negotiations in Europe by the important place of slavery in the Southern Constitution. Mr. Bigelow thinks that Mr. Davis's administration was not fully alive to the great difficulty, and that it did not face the situation as it really existed. He publishes letters from Secretary J. P. Benjamin to Slidell and Mason, also from Mason to Benjamin, from De Leon to Benjamin, from A. Dudley Mann to Benjamin, with other documents.

The Evangelical Repository presents ably the general topics relating to the United Presbyterian churches, but such a list of topics as is given in the April number can be profitably read by all Christian people; as, "Review of Mission Work in Egypt," "Long Pastorates," "A Bible in Mexico," etc. A map showing partition of Africa among the European governments accompanies the number.

The fourteenth annual report of the American Humane Association contains the proceedings of the Nashville convention held by the society last fall, and various reports and statistics of the humane work in the country abroad. The fact that the work of this society is mainly educational and missionary is being very properly recognized.

The American Garden gives us an apple number this month, with wealth of illustration. In a half dozen articles various writers give their experiences in a way to excite enthusiasm in every reader. The "Homes of Hayes and Garfield" is an illustrated paper that recalls portions of our American history both sad and glad.

Vick's Magazine takes up a controversy with the American Garden on the question of government seeds, and argues that the seed distribution, though begun with good intentions has now sunk to be simply a political affair, unworthy of the nation. The winter aspect of trees and summer annuals are illustrated articles.

Pastor B. P. Nommensen of Milwaukee, Wis., has devised a neat little receipt book for the convenience of those who make monthly payments to their church treasury or other society. It provides for the preservation of the treasurer's receipts for twelve years. Price 10 cents per copy.

Sabbath Reform is a new quarterly, issued by "Author's Publishing Co., 53 Ninth St., Pittsburgh, Pa., at 25 cents per year. The January and April numbers contain a number of the latest and best documents issued by Rev. W. F. Crafts on the preservation of the Sabbath day.

The Sidereal Messenger for April is replete with astronomical data and argument interesting to students of that science. Published at Carleton College, Minn.

PREMIUMS
FOR CYNOSURE SUBSCRIBERS.

Stanley's Adventures in the Wilds of Africa.

By Hon. J. T. Headley. A graphic account of the several expeditions of Henry M. Stanley into the heart of the Dark Continent. It covers Stanley's expedition to find Livingstone, his crossing the continent and exploration of the Congo from its headwaters to the ocean, his establishment of the Congo Free State, and his last great achievement—the discovery and deliverance of Emin Pasha, in 1889. Twenty-five illustrations, 539 pages, 8vo., bound in cloth. A book of extraordinary interest to all classes of readers.

Price postpaid $1.00.

We send it free to every old subscriber who sends a new name with his renewal and $3.00. To anybody for two new subscribers for one year each. This offer is good only till June 1st, 1891.

Africa and its Explorers.

Livingstone, Stanley, and other celebrated travels and adventures in Africa. The interesting story of all the celebrated travellers in Africa, including Barth, Du Chaillu, Burton, Speke, Grant, Sir Samuel Baker, Schweinfurth, Moffat, Thomson, Livingstone, and Stanley. Naturally, it conveys more general information, and is of greater popular interest, than could be given in the narrative of any one traveller. This is a much larger book than "Stanley's Adventures." Numerous illustrations. A book every one needs to be up to the times.

We make an extraordinary offer of this book till June 1st, for three new subscribers, or for a renewal and two new names. All for one year each.

The "Uncle Tom's Cabin" of the Horse.

BLACK BEAUTY,

His Grooms and Companions.

This is the most popular book ever written on animal life. Over 100,000 sold in England and a greater number in America. Prof. Blaisdell of Beloit College has prepared a topical index.

This book is as entertaining as "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and is written with a great moral purpose,—to inculcate the principle of mercy to dumb animals. EVERY BOY SHOULD READ IT!

We will send it to every boy or girl who reads the Cynosure, if they will send us a new subscriber and $1.50 on or before June 1st, next.

BEULAH SEMINARY,

Clarksville, Mich.

A Christian School, one of the best and cheapest to be found. Methodistic in doctrine, unsectarian in spirit. Students of all classes and grades made welcome, so long as they prove themselves worthy. The course of study is practical and complete. If you wish to prepare for college or university, come to Clarksville. Vocal and Instrumental music taught by a thoroughly competent teacher. Many other special inducements. Good board at the Seminary Hall, only $2.00 per week, including room rent. Any who wish can work one hour per day, and pay $1.50 per week.

Business Department.

The Business department in this new school is no mere pretension. It is under the instruction of Prof. J. J. Sadler, a teacher who has with great success for years made a specialty of preparing young and old for Book-keeping, and Commercial calculations in every department of business; in the most thorough manner; in the least possible time; at the least possible expense. Prof. Sadler graduated at Bryant & Stratton's Business College, many years ago, and is one of the best Commercial teachers of the State.—Over one hundred students in attendance. Circulars sent free on application. Address,

MRS. ETTA SHAW, Principal,
or PROF. J. J. SADLER, Secretary,
CLARKSVILLE, MICH.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)
AND OFFICE OF
The Christian Cynosure,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Bishop Milton Wright Dayton, O.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. Geo. R. Mil ton, Elgin, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Rev. E. R. Wo rell, Washington Heights, Ill.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, J. M. Hitchcock, Jerome Howe, G. R. Milton, Wm. Pinkney, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, W. W. Wait, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell.

The object of this Association is:
"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves Harris, Mass.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS —Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., S. A. Gilley, Marengo; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Lecompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas. Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagle ville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Rowe, Guilford; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Isaac Hyatt Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant York; Treas., J.C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN —Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSH ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $9.00. Paper cover 50 cents; per dozen $4.00.
All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

CALL
FOR A
CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE
ON THE
SECRET LODGE SYSTEM.

We, the undersigned, believe that there is no good which can be accomplished, in times of peace and in a free land, by secret societies which cannot be secured more easily and perfectly by open organization.

We believe that much of the time and money so greatly needed by the cause of our Lord Jesus Christ is wasted in the large and unprofitable expenses of secret orders.

We believe that the union of Christians with men of the world in oath-bound organizations is forbidden by the Word of God and always injurious to the spiritual life of those Christians who enter such societies.

We believe that some oath-bound societies are clearly hostile to the peace and welfare of our country.

We therefore invite all those who sympathize with us in the views above expressed, to meet in "A Conference of Christians," to be held under the auspices of "The National Christian Association," in Central Music Hall, Chicago, May 14, 1891, at 9 A. M., to consult and pray respecting the best method of saving men, the churches, and our land from the injurious influence of such societies.

Joseph Cook, Boston.
Rev. James Tompkins, D.D., Chicago, Cong'l Supt. Home Missions, Illinois.
Rev. T. D. Wallace, D.D., Pastor 8th Presbyterian Ch., Chicago.
Rev. Geo. S. Dickerman, D.D., Pastor 1st Cong'l Church, Amherst, Mass.
Rev. Thomas B. Hyde, Pastor "Moody Church," Chicago.
Rev. O. P. Gifford, D.D., Pastor Bap. Church, Boston, Mass.
Rev. A. J. Gordon, D.D., Pastor Bap. Church, Boston, Mass.
Prof. H. M. Scott, D.D., Cong'l Theological Sem'y, Chicago
Col. George R. Clark, Supt. Pacific Garden Mission, Chicago.
Rev. John Henry Barrows, D.D., Pastor 1st Presbyterian Ch., Chicago.
Prof. James R. Boise, D.D., Baptist Theological Sem'y, Chicago.
And nearly 400 others.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

1. Historical Sketch—National Christian Association.
3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
5. President C. G. Finney on the duty of Christians towards the Lodge.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
18. Despotic Character of Freemasonry.
19. Freemasonry, a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Nathaniel Colver, D.D., on Masonry.
33. Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
44. D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.

Chapters in American Politics.
Masonry vs. Prohibition.
Decline of the G. A. R.
Christianity and Odd-fellowship. Part 1, 4 pages; part 2, 4 pages.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washngton, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co.. Ill.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. M. H. Nichols, 520 Kearney St., San Francisco, Cal.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter, Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.
Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.
Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Berea, Ky.
Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Annawan, Ill.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd fellowship, Good Templarism, The Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. 25cts each.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 326 pages; cloth, $1.00.

The Christian Cynosure.

J. BLANCHARD, Editor.
HENRY L. KELLOGG, Associate Editor and Publisher.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 23, 1891.

REMEMBER, to prepare for a delegation to the Conference, May 14, from your church or town. Especially let students in a score of colleges within 200 miles send their representatives.

REMEMBER, that in addition to other premiums, the new work of Prof. Drummond, "Love, the Supreme Gift," goes to every new subscriber whether sent by agent or local worker.

WHAT GROUND SHALL THE NATIONAL CONFERENCE TAKE?

If the leading clergymen in Chicago put exactly the same estimate on the secret lodges, their fate would be sealed and their destruction speedy; the fall of Jesuitism would speedily follow and our personal and national redemption draw nigh. What hinders this unity of judgment? this seeing "eye to eye" of God's watchmen?

Look at the diversity of opinion, in press and pulpit, of Albert Pike now deceased. Even so able and worthy a print as the Chicago Inter Ocean allows its columns to call him an eminent lawyer, though it mentions but one fee, viz., that of $100,000; which money was voted by Congress for schools and supplies of poor Indians and their children. The same paper calls him a "brave soldier," though it mentions but one battle in which he fought in our great civil war, viz., when he fought his brigade of Indians under the rebel General Van Dorn, and was whipped by Curtis at Pea Ridge. He is lauded as a poet, though the only poetry mentioned is his Hymns to the Heathen Gods, and not a stanza or couplet quoted. Then he is a great author of seventeen volumes, translated from the Vedas and Zend Avesta, which volumes the Inter Ocean tells us are not published, and doubtless never will be. The cyclopedias tell us that "European scholars vary hundreds of years as to dates," of the Sanscrit writings, and that their authorship is involved in scarcely less uncertainty. A single British warship has bombarded and dictated terms to an Asiatic city of a million people; in shipping a crew in the Indian Ocean, four Lascars are counted equal to one European sailor; and Asiatic princes and nobles have sent their children to us around the globe, for the knowledge given in our village workshops and common schools. Such are the fruits of the Vedas which Pike has spent a good part of his life in translating. What possible explanation can be given of the laudation of a character like Albert Pike, and upon such a showing of facts by the very prints which praise him? The answer is, there are two, and but two religions on our earth: the one a religion of holiness, the other a religion of sin. Albert Pike represented the religion of the god of this world. Christ appears in Eden, the author of holy wedlock and healthful industry; the serpent as his rival and antagonist. Moses reduced the first religion to a simple law of right. Jannes and Jambres, priests of Memphis, and magicians in Egypt, gave a religion of enchantment, fraud, and falsehood. A mere glance at what the papers say of Albert Pike, shows which religion he represents. The first of these religions was formulated and given to men through Moses by God himself. The other is made up of human inventions, which God by Moses forbade on pain of death, which penalty both Moses and Joshua inflicted by the immediate command of God with relentless severity; and there would have been no Hebrew Commonwealth, and we should not be writing of them if they had not done it. The Hebrew prophets all followed in the footsteps of Moses and Joshua, and Christ endorsed the prophets.

We live under a milder regimen, and "the weapons of our warfare are not carnal." But the spirit of our religion is the same as theirs. "And Moses said, thus saith the Lord God, Put every man his sword by his side, and go in and out from gate to gate, throughout the camp, and slay every man his brother, and every one his companion, and every man his neighbor;" and it was done as he commanded. And Joshua took Achan, who had taken the goods of slain idolaters, and Joshua took the goods, and "Achan and his sons, his daughters, oxen, asses, sheep, and all that he had. And all Israel stoned them with stones, and burned them with fire." This was an execution like that of Andre by Washington, dictated by the laws of war and dire necessity. Mercy to idolaters would have been treason against God and the life of that whole people.

Dr. Leonard Bacon used to say, "If Abraham and Jacob were here now, they would be put in the penitentiary for polygamy." And his saying, in a sense, was true, as our dealing with Mormons proves. And though good men, while ignorant, may violate fundamental morals, and their sins be winked at, that time of ignorance concerning lodge idolatry in this country is fast passing, if not already passed, away. The murders of Morgan, Cronin, Hennessey and others in our country show, in the words of Dr. J. N. Norris, that "Freemasonry contains the spirit of murder and every crime this side;" and mercy to murder is cruelty to mankind.

It is said, "Why single out the secret lodge from the mass of worldliness and sin which churches are fallen into?" The answer is, While "all unrighteousness is sin," a false altar, such as now stands in the secret halls in this country, is a blow aimed directly at God. And the midnight funeral of Albert Pike shows what religion is left us when false worships have supplanted the only possible worship of the true God by the Mediator, Jesus Christ. Scan the life and death and burial of Albert Pike as given by his admirers, column after column, and there is not one hint of the holy law of God. And "he that turneth away his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer is abomination."

WILL THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES PROTEST?

The ghastly midnight performance over the remains of Albert Pike, given on another page, should be seriously considered by every one who believes in Christ, and especially by all interested in the life of orthodox Congregational churches, whose vital breath was a protest against "mystical rites or ceremonies of religion" invented by men. (Neal's History of the Puritans, 1., p. 248.

We call the special attention of the Pacific, Advance, Independent and Congregationalist to the fact that April 10th inst. the First Congregational church at our national capital, a church built by contributions from the denomination, was polluted by heathen abominations no less gross than those revealed to Ezekiel polluting the temple of God. The person whose corpse was carried there at midnight was a known, open, and professed despiser of the Christian religion, whose rule was never to enter a Christian church while he was alive; and his dead body was carried there at midnight by the managers away from their own large halls, to show to our nation that the church of God cringes to, advertises, and endorses the lodge, whose idolatries are bringing the wrath of God on the American people.

None but fools will call that midnight orgy "foolery." The Louisiana lottery was not so stupendous a swindle; nor is the lottery craze so blinding and bewildering, or so costly even, as the craze of the lodge. As Webster said of the pulpit silent concerning slavery, if the pulpit is silent concerning this religious harlotry, "that pulpit is false to its trust."

The May meetings of ecclesiastical bodies are at hand, and we hope that no Presbytery, Association, Conference or Synod, and above all, no Lutheran Synod, will adjourn without calling the attention of the Christian people to this diabolical insult to American Christianity and the Son of God, who said to the devil, when he attempted to blend his worship with that of Christ, "Get thee hence, Satan!"

The Chicago Christian Conference, now near, to be held in the Central Music Hall, May 14th, will doubtless not fail to give an appropriate note of warning to the Christian people of this country of this another attempt to insert the worship of Satan in place of that of Christ.

—A friend in Oakland, Cal., who read with pleasure a copy of the Cynosure, sent for other samples to use for new subscribers, saying, "I should think there were quite a number here who ought to take your fearless organ of fair play." The Cynosure should have a local agent in every town that is big enough to support a secret society of any kind.

—The Free Methodist lately explained in an editorial the standing of the various farmers' organizations in respect to their secret obligations, urging all members of that church to shun the "evil communications" of all those which practice lodgery.

—We have received a number of letters from good brethren on both sides of the seventh-day Sabbath question. We cannot afford space for this discussion, as we said two weeks ago. We believe our good friends would all do well to follow the Word wholly in this matter of Sabbath observance.

—Dr. Carradine's sermon is, next to Talmage's, one of the most widely printed discourses of the year, and it would surpass the Brooklyn Tabernacle preacher were it not that the secular press prints for him as a money-making scheme. The Wesleyan Methodist is now publishing the St. Louis sermon. Send to this office for a copy in nice pamphlet form.

—The Michigan Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias met in Grand Rapids the other day and held a banquet which the local press calls "magnificent." The bill of fare was not very long, but included sherry, claret, champagne and one or two other French wines, with brandy to close the revel. The master of ceremonies closed his speech with a complimentary reference to the liquors and then called on the "prelate" of some lodge to "ask a blessing!"

—A friend in Little Rock, Arkansas, whose name is otherwise unknown to us, writes at length his amazement that such a letter should appear in the Cynosure as that from Bro. Gregorian of Armenia in April 9th number. He then proceeds to write a long article on baptism by immersion for our amazement. Bro. Gregorian had nothing to say for or against any mode of baptism, but only against the method of proselyting from his flock by a brother who it was supposed had come to convert men to Christ from semi-heathenism.

—America attributes the election of Hempstead Washburne and defeat of Past Grand Master Cregier to a secret society! The Patriotic Order of the Sons of America, it says, at the last moment deserted Elmer Washburn and went over to the Republican candidate. America is interested in the purification of politics. Will its editor please tell us what safety there is for us in secret societies, the vote of whose members is so controlled that they are cast this way or that at the command of whatever leader or demagogue may be at their head?

—How is the Cynosure appreciated in our colleges? It has been sent to some two hundred reading-rooms this year, by means of the fund set aside by the N. C. A. Board, and thousands of students have read the paper. A note from Bangor Theological Seminary the other day shows the value of this work. Says the letter: "We have received the papers in good order. The articles in their straightforward suggestiveness have been enthusiastically welcomed. What a loss has ours been! We are trusting to get a more complete view of truth and reform by the aid of your valuable Cynosure. Thanking you again and again in the name of the students, I am," etc.

—A friend in Wisconsin, who is "not a member of any of the really secret societies," but who in spite of his assertion belongs to the Good Templars, and says that secret lodge is "doing more good in the world than a thousand Cynosures can," gives us some advice about opposing what we know nothing about. He says he prefers "to make my fight against an open evil and an open enemy rather than attempt to strike in the dark at something that cannot be seen in the daylight"(!) We agree with this. An open enemy is always more honorable than a secret one, therefore we oppose the Good Templar lodges as an incubus upon the temperance reform, which is year by year dividing the temperance forces with its puerile performances and obligations of secrecy. If all the Good Templar order were as consistent as this one, the liquor power would have no reason to dread it.

—Dr. Crosby's funeral occurred on Tuesday, the 7th inst. Dr. John Hall of the Fifth Avenue

Presbyterian church, and Dr. Wm. M. Taylor of the Congregational Broadway Tabernacle, conducted the public services, which were held in the church of which Dr. Crosby had been so long pastor. The New York Herald speaks thus cordially of Dr. Crosby's character:

In the death of Dr. Crosby this entire community suffers loss. He had for many years been closely identified with our best interests, was not merely a preacher of good tidings, but a doer of good deeds. By temperament a close and accurate student, by education a theologian, always a welcome guest in pulpit and on platform, he occupied a special place in the general heart as a man with convictions, backed by a courage which never reckoned the odds against him. Dr. Crosby had peculiarly marked characteristics. He was always a factor in our public life, was seldom merely prudent in his utterances, never diplomatic or cautious in speech, made vigorous friends and hot enemies by the sturdy candor with which he stated his position, and the unflinching boldness with which he defended it. He disdained compromises, fought either to win or fail, gave no quarter and asked none, was as incisive and emphatic as a thunderbolt. In his contests with bribery, the excise laws and prohibition he was often beaten, but he never surrendered. Essentially a reformer, he had little patience with hack politicians, and was, therefore greatly honored and thoroughly hated. The honor had its origin in the whole-souled manliness with which he impressed us all; the hatred was due to the fact that as a fearless truth-teller he was no respecter of persons.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Mrs. Laura S. Haviland has been seriously ill at her Englewood home in this city, since her return from Michigan, where she spent the winter. She is now, we are happy to learn, recovering.

—Elder Isaac Hyatt, for years pastor at Gilford Village, N. H., has just removed to Poland, Herkimer connty, in northern New York. Rev. J. Phillips, a man of fine culture and true to Christ on reform questions, becomes the pastor at Gilford.

—Mr. O. H. Kind, a seceded Odd-fellow, died at his home in Lee county, Iowa, on the 22nd ult., aged 67 years. He was a zealous Christian worker, who faithfully maintained his convictions, and stood by the cause represented by the National Christian Association.

—Prof. William R. Sloane of Princeton College has given a fine crayon portrait of his father, Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, to Geneva College. It will hang in the chapel. Some time ago another friend sent a portrait of Dr. A. M. Milligan; and yet another of Dr. Johnston, the first president of the institution.

—Rev. S. Smith, a veteran of several reform wars, has lately returned from Oberlin, Louisiana, to Beaconsfield, Iowa. Father Smith has been one of the oldest Cynosure subscribers, and has attended several of our earlier conventions. He rescued D. P. Rathbun from the Kellerton mob years ago. He is now in advanced years and poor health, but will stand at his post till the last.

—Rev. George A. Milton of Elgin was injured nearly four months ago. His broken thigh is not yet strong enough to give him liberty, and the "grip" has of late shaken him and prostrated his wife, we trust not seriously. He has not been able to attend the meetings of the N. C. A. Board more than once or twice this year, but may God give him strength to help in the approaching conference.

—Elder Rufus Smith, so long connected with our work in Missouri, at Maryville, and more lately living at Crandon, Wis., has just removed to Wheaton, where he has bought a home close by the College, and has, with shrewd provision, purchased other property near. He wishes to be near Chicago where he can engage in city mission work. He is at home and a welcome worker in a number of our large city missions.

—The Cosmopolitan magazine which we are enabled to offer to our subscribers at very favorable rates, is widely recognized as one of the most interesting of our illustrated publications. Its publishers are anxious to secure permanent subscribers and make the Cynosure subscribers an excellent offer. It contains yearly some 1,500 pages of reading matter, a large proportion of which is finely illustrated. A profitable investment is offered in the Cynosure and Cosmopolitan for $3.00 to new subscribers to both; $3.50 to old subscribers to both; and $3.25 to all our present subscribers who do not take the magazine.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C., April 15, 1891.

Mr. Harrison has always been credited with being a temperate man, and Mr. Wanamaker has more than once since he entered the Cabinet spoken in public for temperance, therefore it puzzled me to know why the buffet in the dining-car of the train in which the Presidential party is traveling should have been filled, before the train left Washington, with an assortment of bottled wines and liquors. Perhaps this may have been done by order of the railroad officials without Mr. Harrison's knowledge or consent, and, after all, the liquor may not be consumed by the ladies and gentlemen composing the party. I trust that it is not the intention of the President, his family and two members of his Cabinet to set a bad example to the young men and women of the country by drinking the liquor carried from here.

Marshal Ballington Booth, son of Gen. Booth, the head of the Salvation Army, is in Washington. Monday evening he conducted one of the unique religious services peculiar to his organization before a large congregation in one of our largest churches, which was opened by the pastor of the church. The fact has been more or less commented on that of late many of the churches have shown a disposition to co-operate with the Salvation Army to a considerable extent. I talked with a minister about this the other day, and he said, "I do not approve of many of the methods of the Salvation Army, but I recognize the fact that it is striving for the same end—the saving of souls—that the churches are, and that its methods appeal very strongly to a great many people, people that it would be difficult to reach and arouse by ordinary church methods, and for that reason I favor its recognition by the churches."

Most touching it was to me to observe the feeble, tall, white haired man, who so earnestly talked to an audience of men at the Y. M. C. A. rooms Sunday afternoon. The speaker was ex-Justice Strong of the United States Supreme Court, now 83 years old, and his subject was "personal religion." He told the young men of the pleasures that awaited their unreserved acceptance of the religion of Jesus Christ, of whom he had been an humble follower for more than forty years, and appealed to them not to put off repentance until it was everlastingly too late.

In a temperance meeting the other evening Senator Peffer opened his remarks by dramatically asking, "Am I my brother's keeper?" and proceeded to demonstrate that eventually we shall be compelled to answer in the affirmative; but the portion of his remarks that attracted the most attention was in substance this: In 1890 this country manufactured 25,000,000 barrels of fermented liquors. On October 1, there were 86,000,000 gallons of distilled spirits in bonded warehouses and 16,000,000 gallons in the places of wholesale dealers. To put this liquor in a canal twenty feet wide and ten feet deep the canal would have to be fifteen miles long, or it would form a lake one mile square and thirty-two feet deep. There is food for thought in these figures, and I commend them to workers in the cause and to thoughtful people generally. *

—Actual experience with garden cultivators warrants the highest commendation of the Manweight Cultivator which we advertise this week and offer free (except freight) to those who get up clubs. The ordinary cultivator is pushed by the arms and is hard work at times. This new machine is pushed forward easily by the simple weight of the body. There is no garden tool a boy likes so well as a cultivator. With this new machine a boy can cultivate a quarter to half an acre and think it play. The wheels are high so he can make a team of his playmates and pull it through the soil. Before the first of May we should be glad to add a hundred clubs of eighteen to our list in exchange for this useful and beautiful implement.

All Reformed Presbyterians who purpose to attend the anti-secret conference soon to be held in Chicago, can be furnished with credentials as delegates by notifying the undersigned. We hope many will find it convenient and see it their duty to attend. By order of Synod.

J. S. T. Milligan,
Ch'n Standing Com. on Secret Orders, R. P. C,, Denison, Kan.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Spring thoughts—Honest doubters—Mr. Moody—Massachusett's bill for cigar smoke—Taxation without representation in the Rebekah lodges of New Hampshire.

The signs of spring are on every hand, but there are some that appeal to the heart more directly than others, and draw us as with golden cords back to the days of our innocent childhood. The note of the first bluebird is to New England ears what the firing of guns at St. Petersburg to proclaim that the ice in the Neva has broken up is to the inhabitants of that far-off northern city—only it is a much pleasanter and more poetic way of announcing the springtide. Another token, which with anyone country-bred cannot fail to awaken associations connected with their childish days, is the smoke rising from countless brush fires that the tidy householder kindles for the destruction of his winter debris. Do we all begin life with more or less of the gipsey in our natures? and is that the reason why an out-door fire with its crackling flames is always such a wonderful source of attraction to the little folks? One might fancy the spirit of some old Druid momentarily thinking himself present at the celebration of his ancient rites, and then sadly turning away when he finds that not to the sun are these fires kindled, but to the gods of order and thrift which the savage Briton knew not, nor his fathers before him. This warm, smoke-laden air, with the red sunbeams struggling through it that have kissed perhaps the first opening violets under their coverlid of last year's leaves, touch the fountain of solemn as well as sweet musings;—for so the great Householder will gather out of his kingdom all things that offend for the Judgment fires to consume; and just as the grass is always greener and the fruitage richer that springs on these blackened spaces, so it is only when the human heart has been burned over by the fires of sorrow that it "bringeth forth the peaceable fruits of righteousness."

Heresy seems to be a passport to fame now-a-days, instead of being as in former times a passport to the dungeon and the stake. To have a few pet heresies seems to be almost a necessity for a minister who would catch the public ear, and it is even becoming one of the elements of literary success. It is said that the Rev. McQueary before the recent church trial invariably had his articles which he sent to the leading magazines returned, but now these same periodicals are offering him large sums to contribute to their columns. As the Christian Leader well says, "What wonder that a large proportion of those whose doings and misdoings take up space in the papers, are people of no account; for in such a race for 'fame' character and brains are not entered." The fact is, honest skeptics are rare, for that expression implies an honest man to begin with,—one who is honest all the way through, with himself and with God. And such we know are not plenty. We feel that the men who questioned the truth of the Romish dogmas when it meant death to do so were thoroughly honest in their doubts; but if instead they had known that their heresies were going to give them promotion and rich livings, we should not feel quite so sure. The great majority of religious doubters prejudge the case, and instead of looking for evidence of the truth of a doctrine are all the time looking for proofs of its falsity; and the consequence of not putting themselves on the receptive side is, that instead of seeing a ladder reaching up into heaven as did Jacob, who, in spite of his grievous failings was morally honest, they see only a Babel tower of human theories and opinions. Honest doubters are as rare as white crows, but the other kind are common enough, and their dismal "caw, caw," is heard all over the land. Synods and councils will never stop their croaking. I believe there is only one thing that will make sincere believers out of these doubting Thomases,—and that is a church whose individual members can point like their Master to the marks which show that they have been crucified to the world with its affections and lusts.

Dr. Emory Haynes, who recently resigned the pastorate of the Tremont Temple church, has gone back to Methodism, and will become the pastor of the People's church. As long as denominational tenets seem to set on him so loosely it has seemed to many Christians that he would have acted more wisely had he stepped out from

(Continued on 12th page.)

The Home.

THE NEW SONG.

Sound over all waters, reach out from all lands,
The chorus of voices, the clasping of hands;
Sing hymns that were sung by the stars of the morn;
Sing songs that were sung when Jesus was born;
With glad jubilations
Bring hope to the nations,
The dark night is ending, and dawn has begun;
Rise, hope of ages, arise like the sun;
All speech flow to music, all hearts beat as one.

Sing the bridal of nations with chorals of love;
Sing out the war vulture and sing in the dove,
Till the heart of the people keep time in accord,
And the voice of the world is the voice of the Lord.
Clasp hands of the nations,
In strong gratulations,
The dark night is ending, and dawn has begun;
Rise, hope of ages, arise like the sun;
All speech flow to music, all hearts beat as one.

Blow, bugles of battle, the marches of peace;
East, West, North, and South, let the long quarrel cease;
Sing the song of great joy that the angels began;
Sing of glory to God and good-will to man.
Hark! joining in chorus,
The heavens bend o'er us;
The dark night is ending, and dawn has begun;
Rise, hope of ages, arise like the sun;
All speech flow to music, all hearts beat as one.

—John G. Whittier.

SPIRITUAL SONGS IN CHRISTIAN WORSHIP.

Many writers assume that the early church, following the example of our Lord and his disciples, used the book of Psalms for public praise. The primitive Christians were severely simple in their ritual. Their spirituality of worship was not rendered artificial by motives of foolish display. Where such temptation overtakes and overcomes a church it is only fit to be spued out like the church of Laodicea. It is a very solemn affair to undertake the guidance of church praise. If there be a chorister, and if there be a choir, such persons should be specially characterized by sobriety of demeanor and by a fervent spirituality. Honest Adam Clark, referring to the pure worship of the early church, and remarking on the singers of his time, said: "Those whose peculiar office it is to direct and lead that part of the Divine worship which consists in singing the high praises of God should have clean hands and pure hearts. To see this part of public worship performed by unthinking if not profligate youths of both sexes, fills the serious with pain and the ungodly with contempt. He who sings not with the Spirit, as well as with the understanding, offers a sacrifice to God as acceptable as the dog's head and swine's blood would have been under the Mosaic law."

I do not know if choirs generally have improved much since Adam Clark's day; but this we do know, that there is marked contrast between the sensuous worship of our times chiefly limited to choirs, or quartettes, and the exalted worship of Spiritual life which finds its varied expressions of reverence, homage, devotion, and adoration in the book of Psalms. The sentimentalism of carnal worshipers may be gratified by unmeaning sound, but how can God be glorified, or the church edified by senseless jargon, is a question beyond our comprehension.

In Psalm 47: 7, we are commanded to sing praise with understanding. Old Charnock said, "In worship the soul adores and reverences God's majesty, is ravished with his amiableness, embraceth his goodness, enters itself into an intimate communion with this most lovely object, and pitcheth all his affections upon him; we must worship God understandingly; it is not else a reasonable service."

Much of modern hymn-writing has lowered the standard of worship. The sickly rhymes without reverence or sense, full of silly endearments and frivolous allusions to things most sacred, has prostituted spiritual praise, while many of our revival song-services are more befitting heathen fanes than Jehovah's temple. Silly ditties which have overflowed the land indicate how sadly the church has declined in her worship from the days when she appreciated "David's harp of solemn sound."

The Psalms always present the living God as the object of worship. The voice is unto God.

1. The voice of supplication is directed to him. Psalm 5: 3, 4, "My voice shalt thou hear in the morning, O Lord; in the morning will I direct my prayer unto thee, and will look up. For thou art not a God that hath pleasure in wickedness: neither shall evil dwell with thee."

2. The voice of praise is uplifted to him. Psalm 47: 6, "Sing praises to God, sing praises; sing praises unto our King, sing praises."

3. The voice of laudation is to God. Psalm 47: 1, "O clap your hands, all ye people; shout unto God with the voice of triumph."

As the panting deer hastens to the waterbrooks, so the throbbing heart of the believer hasteth towards God. Hear the cry of the quickened soul in Psalm 43: 3, 4: "O send out thy light and thy truth: let them lead me: let them bring me unto thy holy hill, and to thy tabernacles. Then will I go unto the altar of God, unto God my exceeding joy: yea, upon the harp will I praise thee, O God, my God."

Notice here: The light, like the Cloud of old, leads to the holy hill of Zion. But that does not satisfy. Nor does the Tabernacle, the house of the Lord, satisfy; nor does the brazen altar with its smoking sacrifices, nor the golden altar with its fragrant incense, fully satisfy. The true worshiper must enter within the vail to commune with a personal God, who himself is the believer's joy.—From Spiritual Life in the Psalms by George C. Needham.

SELECTING HYMNS.

In the minds of some old-fashioned people, singing is a part of the worship of God, or a means of conveying instruction and consolation to men. Others regard it as a performance, to be engaged in by a soloist, a quartette, or a choir, who "perform," or "render," or "execute" something which the Lord perhaps understands, but which to other people is frequently in an unknown tongue.

One thing is observable in connection with this style of musical performance, and that is the method of selecting hymns. If hymns are properly selected and properly sung, they become a mighty adjunct to the preaching of the Word of God. They impress the truth upon the hearts of men, and give to those who have heard the Word an opprtunity of expressing their appreciation of the truth that has been declared. But in order to do this the singing and the preaching must be in harmony; and when a man has preached the truth the people must sing something in accordance with it. But if this is to be the case there must be plenty of hymns at command, which will correspond with the truth declared, and then such hymns must be intelligently selected and properly sung.

In many cases the books that are used do not afford the hymns necessary for such a purpose. The hymn book is on too narrow lines, and those who use it are compelled to fiddle on one or two strings. Sometimes, when there are a sufficiency of hymns, the selection of them is left in the hands of the leader of the singing, who may know nothing about hymns, but who is able to pick out tunes which his choir can sing, often selecting them without much reference to fitness or appropriateness. A sermon on the Judgment Day is liable to be followed by a musical jig; and in a multitude of instances the singing is well calculated to take off the effect of the sermon, and may be used by Satan as one of those means by which he catcheth away that which is sown in men's hearts.

Such evils call for remedy, and persons who desire to worship God in song should see that such faults are corrected. To do this let them: First, have a book which contains a sufficient number and a sufficient variety of hymns for use, so that persons who sing will not need to be tied down to a few hymns, or to hymns on two or three subjects. Second, let the hymn book contain hymns enough so that there will be no need of throwing it by and getting a new one at the end of six months, before it is possible to become familiar with the contents of the book. Third, let pains be taken to learn tunes that are worth learning, and hymns that are worth remembering; and let these hymns and tunes be practiced by Christian people, until they can sing them properly. Fourth, let devout and serious people make use of the hymns and tunes with which they have been familiar in years past, but which have been crowded out of sight and mind by others of less value, and let them thus seek to bring into use the hymns which are worthy of being retained. And finally, let them follow this direction which is contained in "Songs of Pilgrimage, page 36.

"Let the leader of the singing go through the Hymnal used in the desk, and plainly mark with an X or some other mark, all the tunes which can ordinarily be sung without difficulty. Let two such marks be used to designate tunes which are entirely familiar, and can be sung at any time without hesitation. Similar marks can be used in the index to indicate familiar tunes or favorite hymns. Thus hymns may be announced at any moment without the liability and embarrassment of failure, and one of the hindrances to good singing avoided."

By attending to these suggestions the singing can be brought into harmony with the preaching, and be made to minister to the devotion of the true worshipers; and in a short time people will be surprised at the change in the singing, and "the service of song in the house of the Lord" will minister to the edification of those who engage in it, and become not a mere performance, but an act of worship in honor of the Most High God, and a means of edification to his church.—H. L. Hastings in the Armory.

SINGING FOR HEALTH.

The time will soon come when singing will be regarded as one of the great helps to physicians in lung diseases in their incipient state. Almost every branch of gymnastics is employed in one way or another by the doctors, but the simple and natural function of singing has not yet received its full meed of attention. In Italy, some years ago, statistics were taken which proved that the vocal artists were especially long-lived and healthy, under normal circumstances, while of the brass instrumentalists it was discovered that consumption never claimed a victim among them.

Those who have a tendency towards consumption should take easy vocal exercises, no matter how thin and weak their voices may seem to be. They will find a result at times far surpassing any relief afforded by medicine. Vocal practice, in moderation, is the best system of general gymnastics that can be imagined, many muscles being brought into play that would scarcely be suspected of action in connection with so simple a matter as tone production. Therefore, apart from all art considerations, merely as a matter of health, one can earnestly say to the healthy, "Sing, that you may remain so," and to the weakly, "Sing, that you may become strong."—Selected.

The following from "Farmton" (Dr. Thwing), in the Advance, on church choirs, expresses some principles worthy of consideration: "It has become quite customary for our churches to put a gallery for the choir either behind the minister or beside the minister. The people want to see the singers; they want to face the music. I do not like the custom. These last months I have been sitting in the pews, and have faced the music. I have thus added evidence, drawn from observation, to my theories that music should be heard, and not seen; it should appeal to the ear and not to the eye. The sense of worship in song through the agency of the ear is marred by the distractions which the eye brings. The organist, jumping about on his seat, pawing the pedals, pulling the stops, the size of the soprano's mouth, eccentricities of dress and deportment, all these the eye brings to the heart and mind, and thus serves to mar the sense of worship."

Conformity to the world is the great weakness of the church. The world demands the substitution of entertainments for worship; and the church responds by drowning the sentiment of religious songs with instrumental music, and with a mouthing process, which in many instances entirely covers up the words of the song. With such display as a substitute for worship God is not pleased.

"And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God. For I say through the grace given unto me, to every man that is among you, not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but to think soberly, according as God hath dealt to every man the measure of faith." Rom. 12: 23.

MOTHER'S TURN.

"It's mother's turn to be taken care of now."

The speaker was a winsome young girl, whose bright eyes, fresh color and eager looks told of light-hearted happiness. Just out of school, she had the air of culture which is an added attraction to a blithe young face. It was mother's turn now. Did she know how my heart went out to her for her unselfish words? Too many mothers, in their love for their daughters, entirely overlook the idea that they themselves need recreation. They do without all the easy, pretty and charming things, and say nothing about it, and the daughters do not think that there is any self-denial involved. Jennie gets the new dress and mother wears the old one, turned upside down and wrongside out. Lucy goes on the mountain trip, and mother stays at home and keeps house. Emily is tired of study and must lie down in the afternoon; but mother, though her back aches, has no time for such indulgence. Girls, take care of your mothers. Coax them to let you relieve them of some of the harder duties which, for years, they have patiently borne.—Presbyterian.

WHO STOLE THE HONEY?

A TRUE STORY.

The honey was in Deacon Bird's store. What child living in the country has not seen just such a store? It has barrels of potatoes, kegs of molasses, piles of codfish, and on the counter, pieces of pink and white calico for little folks' frocks and aprons. There is always a glass showcase in this kind of a store, where are kept pen-knives and thimbles and letter paper, and perhaps a little case of glittering finger rings. And behind the showcase, on the high shelves, there are glass jars full of candy. Fascinating sticks a penny a piece, some white, some red, some with ribbon-like stripes, are in these jars, and pink cinnamon lozenges and delicious lemon drops.

Besides having all these melt-in-your-mouths to sell, Deacon Bird dealt in honey. A few boxes of the sweet, golden stuff always stood in the back of the store, near a window. One summer day Deacon Bird discovered that a large part of the honey had been taken from one of the boxes. Had his little errand boy, Dick, a sweet tooth?

"Come here, you, Dick," said the deacon.

Dick came, barefooted, curly-headed, with his ragged straw hat in his hand.

"Have you been meddling with my honey, sir?"

"No, sir."

"Prove that you haven't by finding out the thief," said the deacon. "Do you hear?"

Poor Dick! How was he to find out the thief? A few days passed, and another box was nearly emptied.

"I've watched," said the deacon, "and no boy goes into that back store but yourself. If you don't clear up this mystery in a week you leave my store. I want no thieves in my place."

To be called a thief! That was harder than hard work. Dick would have left the deacon's employ that very minute had it not been that his father was a poor man, with little ones younger than Dick to clothe and feed. No, he must stay and find the culprit.

One day Dick went into the back room, and sat down on a bag of meal. The deacon had gone home to dinner, and Dick was tending store. But there were no customers, and the boy, feeling very disheartened, sat down among the barrels and boxes to think what he should do if the deacon turned him away. Suddenly he heard a sound that caused him to look up.

"Ha! ha!" said Dick," there are the thieves!"

There they were, indeed, talking away to each other, coming in and going out, as busy and important as if their doings were honest and above board. Above board they really were, for not one of the pilfering gentry made the slightest pretense to secrecy.

"I will tell the deacon you are here," said Dick, "and he may catch you if he can. I guess he'll have a merry chase of it."

Then Dick fell a laughing, and in a paroxysm of mirth rolled off the meal bag on to a bag of Brazil nuts. The nuts did not make a very comfortable bed, and he sprang up just as the deacon came in.

"I've found the thieves, Deacon Bird," he said. "Come and catch them."

But the deacon was afraid that the rascals might do him mischief. So he locked the door of the back room, making Dick a prisoner with the highwaymen, and ran off after a constable. He was back presently with burly Billy Barrett, who had locked up many a sinner. Pushing the constable ahead, the deacon, well covered by his broad shoulders, entered the back store.

"Where be they?" he asked, forgetting his grammar.

"Don't you see them?" asked Dick, pointing to a score of bold invaders.

"Now, Mr. Barrett, now's your chance."

Mr. Barrett laughed a loud roaring laugh.

"Bees, by my yardstick!" said the deacon. "Boy, you may have the rest of the honey if you won't tell o' this."

But somehow the story got out.—Congregationalist.

TEMPERANCE.

MOVE ON THE CONSTITUTIONS.

Very little attention is given in these times to our constitutions in politics and legislation. There is to be found "the will of the people" if they are not traitors. There is the life of our state and of our nation.

Who has ever brought the towering liquor crime to the test of these constitutions? Instead of this they have been surrendered to its service like any other interest, and it now holds the country in its serpent-grip. O shame, treachery, blindness! They are unequivocally against it, and demand its extermination. Listen to them while stating the principles and objects for which they were made.

The national Constitution says: "We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, to establish justice, to ensure domestic tranquility, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty, do ordain and establish this Constitution." State constitutions have the same object. Ours says: "We, the people, grateful to God for our civil and religious liberty, do ordain this Constitution. Government is instituted for the benefit and protection of the people." They then proceed to organize government to carry out these sacred objects of "justice, domestic tranquility and general welfare." Now arraign at the bar of these constitutions the liquor traffic; with all its torment and woes, all its ruin to "domestic" life, its material destruction of $1,100,000,000 annually; its crimes, poverty and public corruption, its barbarous war on "the public welfare;" and close the indictment by counting up its 60,000 dead each year. Then bring in the verdict. Is this business constitutional? Common sense answers, No! It is directly and fatally at war with every object for which the constitutions were made. For its annihilation they summon the whole power of penal law.

These positions are undeniable. The liquor ruin has not a shadow of rights under our constitutions. It is a gigantic crime against the state.

It is a fundamental principle of judicature that nothing morally wrong can be legal, and what is wrong if the liquor woe is not? The Supreme Court of the United States declared it a "nuisance." Has it constitutional rights? It is opposed to the common law, under which Blackstone says: "No man has a right to use his property to the injury of another." The Supreme Court has said again: "No legislature can bargain away the public health or the public morals. The people themselves cannot do it. Government is organized for their preservation." And God's law thunders, "Execute justice; or my wrath shall go forth like lightning."

Thus the gigantic liquor crime with all its licensed inventions, is stripped of every shred of legal covering. This position is so unanswerable that a little thought by the people and a few trials by the courts will settle all forever.

The question of the overthrow of the liquor power is broader than prohibition. It involves the problem whether or not our sacred constitutions and free government would continue to be prostituted to the support of the greatest curse on earth, killing the moral and material vitality of our country. The misconstruction of the Constitution in support of slavery for two-thirds of a century, made its termination possible only through blood. The danger now is not less, but the constitutions are still the field on which all foes of intolerable wrong can rally in unity, and there conquer.

A. Willey.

Northfield, Minn.

A MURDER AND ITS LESSON.

A very profitable temperance lesson might be learned from the murder of William Trimmer by Francisco Cota, committed near El Cajon. The murderer is a young man about twenty-five years of age. His victim was also a young man, and the two had long been associates and friends. It is seldom, however, that the public heed the lesson. The immediate cause of a crime is all that most people care to know anything about.

It is true, as the preliminary examination disclosed, that these young men were not drunk at the time the terrible deed was committed: but it is equally true that drinking led to it. Cota, it seems, had been giving attention to the sister of Trimmer, which fact displeased the latter, and bad feeling between the two was the result. It is understood that they had frequently quarreled over the matter, and on the Sunday previous to the day of the murder they had both spent much of the time in the saloons of El Cajon, where it may reasonably be inferred no steps were taken for an amicable settlement of the affair. The saloon was their general place of rendezvous.

What makes the affair sadder than such things usually are is the fact that only last summer at a prohibition meeting held by the writer, the father of the murdered man, Martin Trimmer, a well-known and influential Democrat in his community, avowed himself as being in favor of prohibition, although himself a drinking man, and that he should vote that way—a thing he intended to do for the sake, as he said, of his boys. True to his word, he not only voted that way but from that time on till the election worked faithfully to secure votes—the result of his work being a very respectable vote for our ticket where really none was expected before.

Alas! the father of this poor murdered boy commenced his temperance work too late to save him, but let us hope not too late to save somebody else's boy.—California Voice.

PROHIBITION CELEBRATION.

James A. Troutman, president of the Kansas State Temperance Union, has issued a call for a prohibition decenniale celebration. In his call President Troutman says: "The first day of May, 1891, will complete a decade of prohibition in this State. Kansas is the typical prohibition State, and for that reason our policy has been mercilessly assaulted by the allied liquor interests of the nation. While we have been making history for Kansas, we have been fighting a moral battle for the whole United States. That prohibition is impregnably intrenched in our fundamental law after ten years of such warfare is a significant fact.

The State Legislature of Missouri adjourned March 24th, after a drunken carousal of nearly ten days. On the last Sunday of the session all the saloons in the city, save two, were running, and they were thronged with yelling, drinking, swearing Senators and Representatives. The last night of the session Governor Francis held a reception at the executive mansion at which he dealt out beer, punch and whisky to the drunken crowd. Both the speaker and speaker pro tem of the House were drunk for ten days.

The Legislature of Texas has passed a Scientific Temperance Education law. The passage of the law has been secured, as in other States, through the influence of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, led by Mrs. Hunt. There are now only eight of the forty-four States that have not secured by law provisions for scientific temperance education in the public schools. The influence of this for good on the rising generation must be incalculable.

A careful calculation shows that the total aggregate income of the Church Wesleyan, London, and Baptist missionary societies and the British and Foreign Bible Society of Great Britain, during the fifty years of Queen Victoria's reign amounted to £20,768,160, being about equal to the sum spent on strong drink in Great Britain in sixty days.—Ex.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER (Continued from 9th page).

the bonds of sect entirely. Mr. Moody's labors in Boston and vicinity have resulted in much good. Some thousands have been converted, to say nothing of the hosts of believers who have been refreshed and strengthened by his ministrations. His gift to the Romish church in Northfield has put him under a severe fire from the anti-Catholic party, for Mr. Moody makes mistakes at times; but they always "incline to virtue's side"—in this case overmuch charity. But isn't there "a stirring in the tops of the mulberry trees" when a Catholic paper like the Sacred Heart Review, makes a plea for prayers in English, instead of the unknown tongue used in the mass—unknown at least to the majority of the worshipers? The fact that intelligent Catholics are urging such a bold innovation on the customs of their church is a very cheering sign.

Massachusetts taxpayers—especially those who neither use the weed themselves nor wish to be the occasion of others using it—are naturally rather disturbed to learn that legislative committees are in the habit of smoking at their expense, —and smoking either very high priced cigars or else a great many of them. In one month the State has had to pay $93.55 for this item alone. Here is evidence surely of the low moral tone prevailing among the "representatives"—so called—of this enlightened State. No wonder the friends of reform find small encouragement from such a body, or that the noble women who have pleaded before them for better protection for the young of both sexes, have so often been made the subjects of covert if not open insult! That it was passed under the inspiration of tobacco may account for many a bad law on our statute book, or weak point in a good one.

As the descendants of Benjamin Franklin have lost their case in Philadelphia, their suit against Boston is also practically dismissed. A will cannot be contested with much hope of success after the lapse of a hundred years, especially if might and right are both on the side of the defendant.

The Rebekah lodges of New Hampshire are to be taxed so much per capita for the benefit of the Grand Lodge made up entirely of men, and to which every woman is denied admittance. The jurisdiction of New Hampshire is the first to do this, and whether their example will be followed by other Grand Lodges will depend on the temper in which the Daughters of Rebekah meet this new rule. If they have a spark of the old Revolutionary spirit they will set up the standard of revolt by coming out from an institution to which they are at best but a mere kitchen attachment. "Taxation without representation" may be a step too far for even the Grand Lodge to take.

Elizabeth E. Flagg.

Bible Lesson.

STUDIES IN THE OLD TESTAMENT.

LESSON V.—Second Quarter.—May 3.

SUBJECT.—Israel often Reproved.—Amos 4 : 4-13.

GOLDEN TEXT.—He that being often reproved hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy.—Prov. 29 : 1.

| Open the Bible and read the lesson. |

Daily Readings.—M.—Amos 1 : 1-15. T.—Amos 2 : 1-16. W.—Amos 3 : 1-15. Th.—Amos 4 : 1-13. F.—Prov. 14 : 1-12. S.—Prov. 1 : 24-33. S.—Mark 12 : 1-9.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. False worships reproved.—Vs. 4, 5. Amos was, if we may so speak, a lay prophet; that is, one who had been trained to a secular calling, and not in any school of the prophets which were the theological seminaries of that day. His bold, vigorous style of preaching, filled with figures drawn from the common everyday life of the peasantry, made a great sensation among the people; but we do not read that it had the slightest effect except to procure the prophet's speedy banishment. Unlike Jonah, Amos "was obedient to the heavenly vision," yet the call to leave his own country, Judah, and the protection of good King Uzziah for the kingdom of Israel where the wicked Jeroboam II. was then reigning, and which had so often persecuted and slain the prophets of God, could not in itself have been a pleasant one. The sequel was also very different, for unlike heathen Nineveh, apostate Israel gave not the faintest sign of true repentance. Amos (perhaps after many proofs that they would still continue to reject his message) mockingly tells them to go on; to multiply their sacrifices and add sin to sin. Israel had reached a point where her iniquities had wearied out even the Divine patience, and nothing remained but to fill up the measure of her guilt. "For this liketh you." These false worships with their outward splendor and inward corruption just suited them. There are many to-day who try to serve God and Mammon as the Israelites tried to worship Jehovah and the golden calf. They are careful to keep up the forms of religion, but in all their devotion they mingled the leaven of worldliness. They even make magnificent free-will offerings to charitable objects, while they oppress the poor and needy. The golden calf set up by Jeroboam was worshiped as a symbol of Jehovah, but it was a symbol borrowed from paganism, and was in direct violation of his express command not to make any graven image to represent Him who is invisible. Perhaps there were some who thought they could worship him just as sincerely under a heathen symbol. So, many people to-day really think that Masonic prayers to the G. A. O. T. U. are offered to the true God. But he is a Creator and not an architect; our heavenly Father and not the great grand master of the grand lodge above. We know that a petitioner who should approach any earthly king and address him by a title inferior to the one which rightfully belonged to him, instead of having his request granted would be ignominiously thrust from the royal presence; and is it any less an insult to the King of kings to call him by a human title as if he were indeed one like ourselves? That is always false worship which tries to opproach God in ways he has not appointed, or that calls upon him by a name unrecognized in his Word.

2. The judgments on false worships.—Vs. 6–13. We notice (1) that where judgments fail to soften they only harden. (2) A mixed religion which joins together the holy and the profane is more hardening than pure heathenism. They kept enough of the letter of their ancient worship to be a salve to their conscience, while mixing with it the spirit of paganism that licensed them to do evil with impunity. Famine comes first in the series of judgments, typified by cleanness of teeth; so where there is a spiritual famine everything may seem, as one commentator says, "very smooth and clean outwardly because there is no solid religion. Better fightings and fears with real piety than peace and spiritual decorum without religious life." Besides these general judgments there seem to have been some especial ones which fell on certain individuals. These may have been swallowed up in the earthquake referred to by Amos in the beginning of his prophecy; not that they were sinners above the rest but as a solemn warning to those who were spared. Still the sad, monotonous refrain continues, "Yet ye have not returned unto me, saith the Lord." It almost reads like a recapitulation of the judgments which have befallen many sections of our own land. What mean the cyclones, the drouths, the ravages of noxious insects, and this strange disease which is now afflicting us, but the voice of God calling our nation to repentance? And if we fail to heed it, does not the same cry of doom sound in our ears that rang through the hills and valleys of ancient Israel, "Prepare to meet thy God in the judgment which shall be final, and from which there can be no appeal to his long-rejected mercy."

Religious News.

—The conference of the Brethren churches of Maryland and Virginia met March 21st last, at Maurertown, Va., passed strong resolutions in favor of a Sabbath-keeping World's Fair, which they forwarded through the Cynosure office to the managers in this city.

—Leverinz, a young Omaha Indian attending the Carlisle Indian school, has been examined by the Carlisle presbytery as a student for the ministry, and passed a creditable examination. His purpose is to enter the ministry and work among his own people.

—Rev. Charles W. Bennett, D. D., LL. D., professor of Historical Theology in the Garrett Biblical Institute, at Evanston, Ill., died Friday morning. He had been in failing health for about two years, ever since he suffered from a severe rheumatic fever, which he contracted while attending a Methodist Episcopal Conference in the South.

—During the quarter just ended, the Chicago Tract Society has made grants of tracts to seventy-five missions and missionaries in this city, aggregating over a million pages. These tracts were printed in twelve languages, as follows: English, German, French, Italian, Swedish, Norwegian, Danish, Finnish, Spanish, Polish, Arabic and Hebrew. During the same period, four colporteurs visited 2,538 families. In these homes they placed by sale 1,486 volumes of Christian literature, besides distributing tracts and books aggregating 88,000 pages. These books and tracts were largely in foreign languages.

—The revival in East Liverpool, Ohio, through the labors of the ministers, assisted by Major Cole and F. S. Jewett, seems to have been most remarkable work of the Holy Spirit. Out of a population of 10,000, there were nearly 2,000 reported conversions. From 250 to 300 were added to the membership of each of three leading churches. From fifty upwards were added to the membership of half a dozen others. Saloons were closed, and the daily supply of beer from Pittsburg diminished by three-fourths. The whole town was moved, and a general reformation and lifting up of morals experienced. The conversions were of a marked and decided character, strong men breaking down and making most public and outspoken confession of Christ and going to work for him.

—The Union meetings held at Hudson, N. Y., by Rev. B. Fay Mills, have been wonderfully blessed. Mr. Mills is now holding services in his brother's church at Providence, R. I. He expects shortly to commence labors at Westfield, N. J.

—Rev. David Beaton, late president of a Dakota college, entered upon his pastoral duties at the Lincoln Park Congregational church, this city, Sabbath morning. He made a most favorable impression on the large congregation and evidently begins his work with the best of feelings on both sides.

—Census revelations are, some of them, very startling. Now we learn that Illinois, though the fifth State in scale of education, is fortieth in that of Christian religion. There are more country villages without the Gospel than any other State. Maine has ninety-five towns without religious service.

—Major-Gen. O. O. Howard has undertaken mission work in New York since he was stationed at Governor's Island in command of the United States troops. He and his son have been teaching Bible classes in a miserable room over a stable in Elizabeth street. He is now trying to buy a deserted church in Chrystie street for the use of the school and for services for adults. He has already raised $13,000 of the needed $20,000 for the purchase.

—On Oct. 12 last, for the first time, a place of worship was dedicated in Jerusalem by non-Episcopal Protestants to the worship of God. It was an upper room near the Jaffa gate. Representatives of English, Scotch and American churches were present. Members of six different denominations united in the consecrating services. A Young Men's Christian Association has been started in this City of David. This has been done in connection with the Presbyterian mission from the United States.

—Rev. Dr. Luther Halsey Gulick, for nearly forty years engaged in missionary work, died at his home in Springfield, Mass., April 8. He was the son of Rev. Peter J. Gulick, who went out as missionary to the Sandwich Islands in 1828, and seven of the children have been consecrated to the same service in widely separated parts of the globe. He was born in Honolulu, June 10, 1828. In 1852 he sailed as missionary of the American Board to Micronesia with Rev. Messrs. Snow and Sturgis. He was instrumental in forming a written language for the natives, and for eighteen years labored as a missionary at Ponape, Micronesia, and in other islands of the vicinity. The first missionary vessel, the Morning Star, was built for Dr. Gulick by the Sunday-school children. Over twenty-five years ago Dr. Gulick's health failed. He came to America and pleaded for the mission, while Mrs. Gulick remained at the post and continued her work. In 1870 both returned to America, and a year later they went to Spain, and engaged in work among Roman Catholics in Italy, also under the American Board. Returning to this country in 1874, Dr. Gulick entered the employ of the American Bible Society, and until his retirement two years ago was their agent for Japan and China.

—The Telugu Mission in India, under the care of the American Baptists, has been one of the wonders of modern missionary enterprise. A few years ago there was a marvelous ingathering, which was fully recorded in these pages. Now there has come another glorious harvest. Altogether there are now thirty thousand converts on that field. The missionary force is utterly insufficient to instruct and care for them. In one field, 80 miles in length, there are from 4,000 to 5,000 members living in 121 different villages, with one man to look after them. In another field there are 3,000 living in 137 different villages. In another portion of the field 5,000, and yet, for three years, they have been without the presence of an American missionary, except during occasional visits. Around the principal center there are clustered no less than seventeen thousand baptized members, scattered in 445 towns and villages, and yet with only one missionary and two trained assistants to look after the work. Besides all this, there is a vast unoccupied field of the same people, equally inviting, stretching many miles away, and containing myriads of people equally accessible with those who have already been reached. The missionaries have appealed, and as yet in vain, for twenty men to reinforce them. Dr. Clough, the senior missionary, adds: "Come soon. Come in numbers. Don't delay. I beseech you in God's name."—Christian Statesman.

DONATIONS.

For Current Expense Fund:

Rev John Harper	$ 5.00
John Pierce	1.00
C W Pritchard	5.00
Mrs D P Baker	5.00
Rev Geo R Milton	10.00
Daniel Brown	3.00
Jacob Grove	2.50
F F Dresser	10.00
Previously reported	1,449.88
	$1,491.38

For Free Tract Fund:

Jacob Davis	$ .30
Winfield Hine	1.30
Previously reported	32.52
	$34.12

For Southern Ministers' Fund:

Samuel Bushey	$ .50
Previously reported	680.18
	$680.68

W. I. Phillips, Treasurer.

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from April 13 to April 18, inclusive:

A Cunningham, J Pierce, Rev R Loggan, A C Lemm, Mrs M Wilson, J P Dops, A Acker, J Cation, J Crane, C M Candee, H Myer, C M Strickler, L D Brown, C Fischer, F W Smith, W M Breaden, N Callender, G W Waterbury, J Day, W Hine, G S Peck, J Shuh, G F Albrecht, G W Park, S H Moore, D Brown, E Johnson.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

President Harrison and party, including Postmaster General Wanamaker and Secretary Rusk, left Washington Tuesday about midnight for a trip to the Pacific coast and back. They passed through the Southern States and reached Galveston, Texas, Saturday afternoon.

The Treasury Department is taking steps to check any violation of the new immigration law by immigrants who are landing at Halifax in numbers, for the purpose, it is believed, of evading the law by coming into the United States by rail from Halifax.

Secretary Noble Thursday sent a telegram to the Register and Receiver of the Land Office at Ashland, Wis., suspending indefinitely his orders authorizing the filing of claims on the 17th and 18th inst., within what is known as the Omaha railroad grant. This action is taken upon information that serious trouble will follow the opening of the lands to settlement.

Mrs. Halford, wife of the President's private secretary, died Wednesday morn- in Washington.

Secretary Foster Thursday announced that $21,000,000 in fractional currency will be put in circulation as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made.

James McMahon, a Romish priest of New York, has presented to the Roman Catholic University in Washington $500-000 worth of property, to found a school of philosophy and to beautify the university grounds.

CHICAGO.

Two men accused of forging a will, were both found guilty Thursday. The former's punishment was fixed at nine years and the latter's at three years in the penitentiary.

The official canvass of the city election vote was concluded Friday. Hempstead Washburne is elected by 389 votes. The revision begins Monday.

Preliminary work on one of the great group of world's fair buildings was begun last week. McArthur Bros. commenced actual grading for the fisheries building. It will require 15,000 wagon loads of earth to complete the grading for the one structure. Steady work on grading for all the buildings is begun, the horticultural hall probably coming first after the fisheries. The park looks like an immense railroad gravel bank in active use, with side-tracks running all over it.

COUNTRY.

The bill requiring every manufacturing, mining, quarrying, lumbering, mercantile, railroad, surface, street, electric, and elevated railway, steam railway (except surface railroads), steamboat, telegraph, telephone and municipal corporation, and every incorporated express company and water company to pay its employes weekly has passed both branches of the Illinois General Assembly.

Senator Fassette, in the New York Legislature Thursday night, charged that $250,000 blood money was extorted monthly by the police of New York city from the liquor interests of that city.

Lieutenant Schwatka started for Alaska Thursday to explore the country from the Yukon river west. This is his third expedition to Alaska.

The finding of fifty human skeletons near Corpus Crispi, Texas, last week is accounted for by William Payne, manager of the Farmers' Alliance at Whitewright, Texas. He says eighty of his comrades deserted in a body from the rebel service and started for Mexico, not one of them having been heard of since, and that they were captured and executed to a man.

The newly elected Mayor at Toledo, Ohio, began his term Wednesday by a vigorous speech against gamblers and Sunday saloons. After the meeting the police started out and pulled every gambling joint in Toledo. Faro banks and poker rooms were raided without mercy. The Mayor announces that policy shops must go too. The station house was a scene of excitement at midnight. Over 100 gamblers are under arrest and the police were still pulling them.

The Deleware legislature has passed unanimously upon an important Free School bill. It provides for free books for all schools of the State, and places the colored schools on an equal plane with the white.

The Methodist ministers of Cincinnati have taken action against the games of base-ball in the city on Sundays. A committee was appointed to ask the Mayor to co-operate in enforcing the law against Sunday games.

In a wreck on the Lake Shore railroad

(Continued on 16th page.)

Spring Medicine

Is so important that great care should be used to get THE BEST. Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven its superior merit by its many remarkable cures, and the fact that

Hood's Sarsaparilla

has a larger sale than any other sarsaparilla or blood purifier shows the great confidence the people have in it. In fact

The Standard Spring Medicine

Is now generally admitted to be Hood's Sarsaparilla. It speedily cures all blood diseases and imparts such strength to the whole system that, as one lady puts it, "I seem to be made anew." Be sure to get

Hood's Sarsaparilla

We have never claimed anything for this medicine which it has not honestly performed; all our statements are within bounds and without exaggeration; all our testimonials are genuine and reliable.

A Point for You.

If you decide to take Hood's Sarsaparilla for your Spring Medicine do not buy any substitute.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer who will send me their Express and P.O. address.
T. A. Slocum, M. C., 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Paper covers, 25 cents each.

Patriarchs Militant Illustrated. The complete ritual of the Patriarchs Militant degree. This is an accurate copy of the Charge Book furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Odd-fellows, with the eighteen military diagrams and the unwritten (secret) work added. Paper cover, 25cts each.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

OBITUARY.

Cornelius C. Corss, of Bureau Township, Bureau Co., Ill., departed this life April 5th, 1891, aged 83 years, 5 months, 22 days. So the true and tried are passing "one by one" from the labor and pain of earth to the "rest that remaineth for the people of God."

Mr. Corss was probably of Puritan ancestry. The family were residents of Deerfield, Mass., at the time of the French and Indian massacre in 1704; two of them only escaping, and one of them was the great-grandfather of Mr. Corss. Greenfield, Mass., was their next home, and there Mr. Corss was born, with two brothers and six sisters; two of whom, a brother a minister of Bradford Co., Pa., and a sister of Greenfield, Mass., are still living.

Mr. Corss was one of the oldest residents of the county, having entered it in 1833, with the then pioneers of the West. He was a member of the Congregational church of Princeton, the county seat of Bureau Co., and the first organized in the county; but being distant eight miles, in his later life he seldom met with them in worship, but often met with the Wesleyan Methodist church of his township, with the principles of which he was in hearty sympathy: Opposition to episcopacy, slavery, organized secrecy and rum. He was ever ready to help in reform work, a supporter of the N. C. A., and subscriber to the Cynosure. His opposition to the lodgery of the day was firm and outspoken, but with deference to those who thought differently. He was industrious, economical, faithful and true,—a godly man, one of Illinois' noble-souled farmers, a pillar in the republic.

His health for a few years has not been robust, but he was able to superintend his business. His life-long companion, to whom he was united in marriage June 1st, 1837, passed on to the Spirit land a few weeks before him—Feb. 9th, 1891. The way was lonely without her, and the Master in mercy shortened it, and the morning of the 5th of April—Sabbath morning—resurrection morning, as the sun was rising in a cloudless sky, his peaceful spirit passed to the light of eternal day. "Help, Lord, for the godly man ceaseth."

Wm. Pinkney.

In accordance with the provisions of her late husband's will, Mrs. Isabella Bird Bishop went to Cashmere, India, and founded a hospital about two years ago. After this was done she determined to visit the sacred city of Lhassa, the capital of Thibet, a place hitherto utterly inaccessible to foreigners. She reached the outskirts of the province unmolested, and the Thibetans hardly knew what to do with her. They could send a man about his business under menace of death, but even they hesitated about treating a woman in such cavalierly fashion. So she was told that she might go to Lhassa in safety, but that the official of every village through which she passed would lose his head for letting her through, and every district through which she passed would be heavily fined. This was too much for her, and she promptly retraced her steps.

That Tired Feeling.

It is remarkable how many people there are who have That Tired Feeling who seem to think it is of no importance or that nothing need be done for it. They would not be so careless if they realized how really serious the malady is. But they think or say "It will go off after a while." We do not mean the legitimate weariness which all experience after a hard day's work, but that all gone, worn-out feeling which is especially overpowering in the morning when the body should be refreshed and ready for work.

IT IS A MISTAKE

To allow this condition to continue, as the body may soon become debilitated beyond recovery, or some serious disease may gain a tenacious foot-hold. The craving of the system for assistance should be gratified by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great building up medicine. It purifies and vitalizes the blood, regulates the digestion and really does "Make the Weak Strong."

Made a New Man.

"In the spring of 1890 I experienced that tired, dull feeling, and what sleep I had nights seemed to do me no good. Dyspepsia seized me, and each morning in the effort to get rid of the bad taste I had severe vomiting spells. I was much discouraged. My druggist suggested Hood's Sarsaparilla. I took two bottles and am happy to say it made me a new man, and I never was better than now." John Mack, foreman Springer & Willard's stock farm, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

A bald headed woman is unusual before she is 40, but gray hair is common with them earlier. Baldness and grayness may be prevented by using Hall's Hair Renewer.

For a disordered liver try Beecham's Pills.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." 25cts each.

SMELLING AT THE CORK.

The smell of the cork won't cure you. Rest assured of that, Madam. That's common sense in a nutshell. Do not take a dose or so of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and expect to feel well immediately. You may find marvelously speedy effects from its use, but chronic, or lingering, diseases, which have had possession of the system for years, can't be cured in a day. Such maladies are generally slow in their inception, slow in their progress, and must be cured, if at all, by slow degrees and regular stages.

Perseverance in the use of the "Favorite Prescription" for a reasonable length of time will cure all those chronic weaknesses, irregularities and derangements with which so many females are afflicted. But the use of this world-famed medicine must be persisted in for a considerable time in long standing, complicated and obstinate cases.

Go to your drug store, pay a dollar, get a bottle and try it—try a second, a third if necessary. Before the third one's been taken you'll know there's a remedy to help you. Then you'll keep on taking it and a cure 'll come.

But if you shouldn't feel the help, should be disappointed in the results—you'll find a guarantee printed on the bottle-wrapper that'll get your money back for you.

How many women are there who'd rather have the money than health? And "Favorite Prescription" produces health. Wonder is that there's a woman willing to suffer when there's a guaranteed remedy in the nearest drug store.

Where proof's so easy, can you afford to doubt?

Manufactured by World's Dispensary Medical Association, No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

10,000

Another ten thousand edition of the trac

KILLED, AND NO INQUEST.

This is a large 4-page tract at 30 cents per pound, 15 cents for half pound, and 10 cents for a third of a pound. It is an illustrated account of the death of Rev. J. W. Johnston, while being initiated by the officers of Huntington Lodge, W. Va., in January of this year. Sent postpaid at the above price. Address,

National Christian Association.
221 W. Madison St Chicago

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office

---

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entir Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33d inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated'

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated' comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Mention this paper.

books

New Books every week. Catalogue, 132 pages, free; not sold by Dealers; prices too low; buy of the Publisher, John B. Alden, 393 Pearl St., New York.

Disloyal

SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians

CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
Wm. I. Phillips, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

SEE THIS!

The latest, most complete edition Over 235 choice

Reform Songs for the Times.

Only 30c a copy, or 20c by the 100

—AND—

"THE TOBACCO MANIA."

$1 per 100.

For sale here and by the author,

GEO. W. CLARK,

76 W. Montcalm St., Detroit, Mich.

Farm Notes.

SUFFERING FARMERS.

We hear great talk of the combines against farmers, and the lack of legislation in their interest.

I would like to know who this oppressed farmer is; whether he is the man who has made his fortune and retired, living on the rent of his possessions, or is he the renter, who pays part of his profit to the aforesaid gentleman as rent; or is it that gentleman who has bought a farm at a high price and given a mortgage to the retired gentleman, who receives as interest still more than the rent would be; or shall we consider only those who have received their land gratis from the government, and still live there and improve the same.

I should judge that the farmer is oppressed from the speeches and political movements of the farmers as a body. How this can be I do not understand. The government has always about as good as given away the land to those who would become farmers. The value of land to-day in Illinois, is just like anything subject to demand for it, and the profits from farming is greater than any other legitimate business having the same capital and business ability. The farmer is the founder of all business; he gets his living at first cost; he pays no man a profit on his meat, butter, eggs, potatoes, vegetables, or bread; in many places he does not even have to buy fuel.

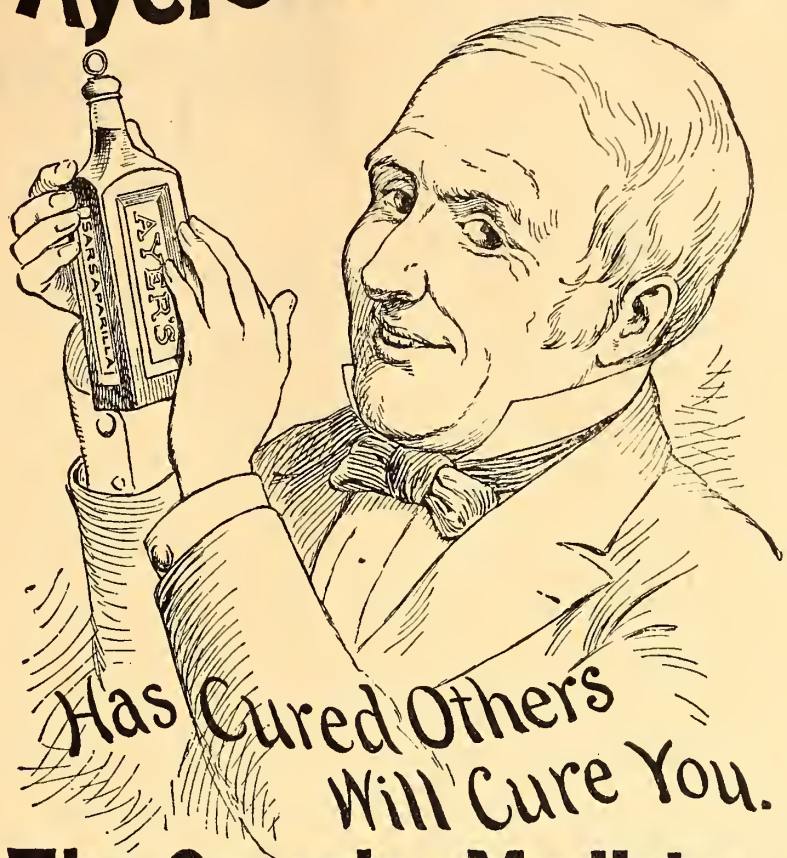
I have been a farmer when this part of the State was a wild prairie, when hay was cut with the scythe, and raked by hand, the grain was cradled and bound by hand. While yet a farmer, I have seen the whole prairie taken up, fenced into fields, roadways laid out and worked, ornamental trees planted, fringing the outline of fields and roads, fine houses and barns were built and school-houses established every two miles. The reaper, the mower, the horserake, the planter, the cultivator, and the labor-saving tools were in use before I quit farming and relieved the laborious work of the farm. I sold corn in 1861 or 1862 at 12 cents per bushel, and only bought a cheap pair of boots with the proceeds of a whole load of corn. Comparing the past with the present, I consider the farmer has better opportunities to make money that ever before.

To illustrate the enormous profits of farming in this vicinity, I will call the interest on investment of lands at three dollars per acre, and we will see what can be made on 100 acres of land, hiring all the work done. We will plant it in corn and say the crop will partly fail, and average 30 bushels per acre, and we will sell the corn at 50 cents per bushel:

Rent of 100 acres at $3.00	$300 00
13 hus. seed corn at $1.00	13 00
Plowing 30 days, 3 horses at $2.50	75 00
Harrowing 4 days, 3 horses at $2.50	10 00
Planting 10 days, two horses at $2.00	20 00
Harrowing twice, 8 days, 3 horses at $2.50	20 00
Cultivating 3 times, 35 days, 2 horses at $2.00	70 00
Husking at $1.50 per acre	150 00
Shelling and marketing at 5 cents	150 00
Total	$808 00
100 acres at 30 bus., 3,000 hus. at 50c.	$1,500 00
Difference or profit	$692 00

Will some farmer correct any error I may have made, and tell us wherein the farmer is oppressed, or why farming is not a better business than manufacturing at the present time with competition shut off by tariff on iron and steel, prices of material advancing and price of manufactured goods and farm machinery declining.—M. H. Daley in the Patrol.

"Golden Medical Discovery" cures those diseases which come from blood impurities—scrofula and skin diseases, sores and swellings.



But does it? It's put up by the thousands of gallons, and sold to hundreds of thousands. Can it cure as well as though it had been compounded just for you?

Its makers say that thousands of people who have had Tetter and Salt-rheum, Eczema and Erysipelas, Carbuncles and Sore Eyes, Thick Neck and Enlarged Glands, are well to-day because they used it.

Suppose that this is so. Suppose that a quick-witted man was far-seeing enough to know that to cleanse the blood was to cleanse the life. Suppose that by many experiments, and after many failures, he discovered this golden key to health and that his faith in it for you is so strong that you can go to your druggist, buy a bottle, and if it doesn't help you, you can get your money returned—cheerfully. Will you try it?

The remedy to have faith in, is the remedy the makers themselves have faith in.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Has Cured Others Will Cure You.

The Superior Medicine

"MARCH to search, APRIL to try, MAY to tell if you live or die." So runs the old adage. But if you take AYER'S Sarsaparilla during the months of March and April, the result in May will be all you could desire. To overcome the ailments peculiar to Spring, purify and invigorate the blood by the use of AYER'S Sarsaparilla. All who make use of THIS as their Spring medicine need have no fear of That Tired Feeling, Indigestion, Headache, Pains in the Back and Limbs, Feverishness, and other disagreeable symptoms so prevalent at this period of the year. For the young, the old, the middle-aged—for all—AYER'S Sarsaparilla is the SUPERIOR MEDICINE FOR SPRING. Be particular that your druggist gives you AYER'S Sarsaparilla. IT CURES OTHERS AND WILL CURE YOU.

EVERY WATERPROOF COLLAR OR CUFF

BE UP TO THE MARK

THAT CAN BE RELIED ON

Not to Split!

Not to Discolor!

BEARS THIS MARK.

TRADE CELLULOID MARK.

NEEDS NO LAUNDERING. CAN BE WIPED CLEAN IN A MOMENT.

THE ONLY LINEN-LINED WATERPROOF COLLAR IN THE MARKET.

RARE CHANCE for PROFITABLE INVESTMENT.

The government is expending ten million dollars, making Grand Dalles, Washington, located on the Columbia River, the head of Ocean navigation. A city is now being built at this point that will outrival Tacoma or Seattle. The town site is owned by the Interstate Improvement Co., of which Rev. O. D. Taylor is President. We are offering a limited amount of this property to investors. Come in on the ground floor, if you wish to double your money within a year. Write for particulars, maps, etc., to PETTIBONE & CO., Real Estate Investors, 161 La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

FOR MINISTERS

THE

"STORIES OF THE GODS"

is especially adapted. They will at once derstand the references to the idolatrous systems of the nations. And the idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus more clearly seen and easily understood. Will you furnish each pastor in your place with one of these pamphlets?

PRICE, ONLY 10 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison Street, Chicago

THE COSMOPOLITAN,

The Cheapest Illustrated Monthly in the World.

25 CENTS A NUMBER.
$2.40 PER YEAR.

EDITION FOR DEC. '90, 100,000 COPIES.

THE COSMOPOLITAN is literally what the New York Times calls it, "AT ITS PRICE, THE BRIGHTEST, MOST VARIED AND BEST EDITED OF THE MAGAZINES."

SUBSCRIBE. SUBSCRIBE. SUBSCRIBE.

An Unusual Opportunity

FOR NEW SUBSCRIBERS FOR ONE YEAR ONLY.

THE COSMOPOLITAN, per year	$2.40
The Christian Cynosure	1.50
The price of the two publications	3.90
We will furnish both for only	3.00

This offer is only to new subscribers to both the Cosmopolitan and the Cynosure, and only for one year.

To an old subscriber to the Cynosure who is new to the Cosmopolitan	$3.25
To old subscribers to both	3.50

A Splendidly Illustrated Periodical at a Price hitherto deemed Impossible.

TRY IT FOR A YEAR.

OLD AND NEW

WANTED FRIENDS

TO GAIN

NEW SUBSCRIBERS

FOR

BUDS & BLOSSOMS.

Acknowledged to be one of the BEST AND CHEAPEST Magazines. Its wealth of illustration, purity yet often thrilling statements of MISSION WORK and ADVENTURE in lower New York, make it wholesome and cheery reading. Edited by

Pastor Mariners' Temple. J. F. AVERY, 1 Henry St

BUDS AND BLOSSOMS

AND FRIENDLY GREETINGS

WANTS to give Canvassers

$5 & $10 REWARDS.

Send three cents for specimens, etc.

Address Rev. J. F. AVERY,
1 Henry St., New York.

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots,

WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

—o—

It contains the portraits of

Washington.
John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.
James Madison, 4th President of the United States.
Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.
Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.
Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.
John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.
Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.
William Wirt, Attorney-General.
John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.
John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.
Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.
Lebheus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.

Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, post paid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

BUSINESS.

NEW AND OLD.

The Cynosure will continue to supply all ts subscribers, new or old, who send $1.50 for the paper, with the Health Calendar and Ropp's Commercial Calculator, as follows: The paper and the Calculator, leatherette bound, No. 1, (publisher's price 50 cents) for $1.70. Morocco bound (price $1.00) for $2.00.

The paper and Calendar (publisher's price 30 cents) for $1.65. The Calculator (No. 1.) or a Calendar free to every old subscriber sending $3.00 for renewal and a new subscriber.

The Calculator is a book of great value for every farmer, mechanic or business man.

The Calendar contains a temperance bill of fare for every day, and hundreds of good recipes. It hangs on the wall in constant sight.

NEW OFFERS.

The Cynosure and the Cosmopolitan Magazine (publisher's price $2.40) to new subscribers only $3.00. To others $3.25.

The Cynosure and Prcs. C. A. Blanchard's new book "Educational Papers" for $1.70 to all subscribers.

NEWEST AND BEST.

Read the advertisement of the Manweight Cultivator on another page.

This grand machine which everybody should have who has a garden, whether farmer or gardener or not, we are able to offer at excellent rates to Cynosure subscribers.

We will send the cultivator free to every one who will send us a club of 15 new subscribers at $1.50 each; or the single wheel for a club of 12 new names.

For $8.50 we will send the two-wheel cultivator and the Cynosure two years to new subscribers or a year each to a new and an old. This gives two subscriptions for 50 cts. The single-wheel machine and the same subscriptions for $7.00. We don't pay transportation.

We would be glad to put 100 of these machines at work killing weeds and raising new subscriptions. It is an investment none will regret.

50,000

SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CYNOSURE would bring our reform to the POINT OF SUCCESS. LET US "KEEP EVERLASTINGLY AT IT."

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

at Kipton station, forty miles west of Cleveland, O., Saturday evening, the east-bound fast mail ran in to the Toledo express, killing both engineers, six postal clerks and a fireman. A number were seriously hurt. The passenger train was about to enter a siding to let the mail train pass when it was struck by the latter going at full speed. Both engines, three mail cars and one baggage car were completely wrecked, causing a loss of $100,000.

A freight train of thirteen cars and three engines on the Maryland Central railroad went through a trestle near Baltimore, Thursday, killing three men.

Poison in a well at Linden, Ky., a Louisville suburb, resulted in the death Saturday of one of the guests at the wedding of the daughter of Albert Herr, a wealthy farmer. Sixty of the most prominent people of the county were present and it is expected that several will die. It is thought that a servant is guilty of the deed.

By the explosion of a boiler at the Lebanon, Ind. Manufacturing Company's establishment Thursday the engineer was instantly killed and another man fatally wounded.

It is reported that the court-house at Hansford, Tex., in course of construction and nearly completed, was destroyed by a cyclone on Wednesday afternoon. A brick mason and another man were killed. Huff Wright, a citizen of the little town, was injured. Every house was more or less damaged.

A large supply of corn has been brought to light in Southern Nebraska by the recent rise in prices. The Burlington & Missouri River railroad alone is moving an average of 100 cars daily.

Fifteen women voted at the late municipal election in Lombard, Ill., which has a special charter which provides that all citizens over 21 may vote at municipal elections. The question now for the courts to settle is "Are women citizens?"

FOREIGN.

Dispatches received from Chili state that a desperate battle, resulting in a victory for the Chilian insurgent forces, has been fought on the River Copiapo, thirty miles from the sea. Only meager details say that the insurgents, after a long and determined struggle, defeated with heavy loss a force of 3,000 of President Balmaceda's troops.

Advices from Honolulu state that the British ship, St. Catherines, was recently wrecked off the Caroline Islands, and that ninety persons were drowned.

The London Times correspondent at Rome says: "The excitement caused by the lynching at New Orleans has completely subsided. The government fully appreciates the difficulties under which the American government labors and it is not likely that any pressure will be brought to bear upon the latter. It is convinced the American government will readily make the compensation which justice demands. Public opinion goes to show that no sympathy for the lynched men is manifested. Many Italians say that it would be well if the other members of the Mafia were treated in the same way." The correspondent adds: "There never has been the slightest pretext for an appeal to force in connection with the affair."

After suffering horribly for years from scrofula in its worst form, a young son of Mr. R. L. King, 706 Franklin st., Richmond, Va., was recently cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. No other medicine can approach this preparation as a cleanser of the blood.

ELECTRIC BELT FREE.

The attention of the reader is called to a large advertisement of The German Electric Belt Agency, headed as above. It will benefit any of our readers afflicted with chronic diseases to read this advertisement through.

Puget Sound catechism and its chief city SEATTLE, WASHINGTON Send stamp to Eshelman, Llewellyn & Co., Seattle, Wash.

AGENTS WANTED both sexes. $25 to $50 per week EASILY MADE. SAMPLES FREE. Send for terms. W. C. Wilson, Kansas City, Mo.

Only $20

ODELL DOUBLE CASE TYPE WRITER

It has 78 Characters, and is the only Type Writer with Check Perforator attachment. Is fast taking the lead of all Type Writers. Special terms to Ministers & S.S. Teachers. Send for circulars. Odell Type Writer Co. 85 Fifth Av. Chicago.

PENSIONS OLD CLAIMS Settled Under New Law.

Soldiers, Widows, Parents, send for blank applications and information. PATRICK O'FARRELL Pension Agent, Washington, D. C.

MONEY can be earned at our NEW line of work, rapidly and honorably, by those of either sex, young or old, and in their own localities, wherever they live. Any one can do the work. Easy to learn. We furnish everything. We start you. No risk. You can devote your spare moments, or all your time to the work. This is an entirely new lead, and brings wonderful success to every worker. Beginners are earning from $25 to $50 per week and upwards, and more after a little experience. We can furnish you the employment and teach you FREE. No space to explain here. Full information FREE. TRUE & CO., AUGUSTA, MAINE.

Dr. Price's Baking Cream Powder.

Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

My Medical Discovery seldom takes hold of two people alike! Why? Because no two people have the same weak spot. Beginning at the stomach it goes searching through the body for any hidden humor. Nine times out of ten, inward humor makes the weak spot. Perhaps its only a little sediment left on a nerve or in a gland; the Medical Discovery slides it right along, and you find quick happiness from the first bottle. Perhaps its a big sediment or open sore, well settled somewhere, ready to fight. The Medical Discovery begins the fight, and you think it pretty hard, but soon you thank me for making something that has reached your weak spot. Price $1.50. Sold by every Druggist in the United States and Canada.

Some Children Growing Too Fast

become listless, fretful, without energy, thin and weak. But you can fortify them and build them up, by the use of

SCOTT'S EMULSION

OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND HYPOPHOSPHITES Of Lime and Soda.

They will take it readily, for it is almost as palatable as milk. And it should be remembered that AS A PREVENTIVE OR CURE OF COUGHS OR COLDS, IN BOTH THE OLD AND YOUNG, IT IS UNEQUALLED. Avoid substitutions offered.

 Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS, NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING 45 RANDOLPH STREET, CHICAGO.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St., N. Y.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—"Civil Service Gazette."

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins, by Grocers, labelled thus: JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London, England.

WALL PAPER

SAMPLES SENT FREE of spring patterns with borders and ceilings to match. One half million rolls offered at wholesale prices. White blanks 4c to 6c, Gilts 8c to 35c. Embossed Gilts 10c to 50c. I will send you the most popular colorings, and guarantee to save you money. ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant, 147-149 W. Madison-st. Chicago

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

COMMENCEMENT THURSDAY, JUNE 25TH, 1891.

Full College Courses, Preparatory School, Business School, Musical Conservatory and Art School. Fifteen Professors and Instructors.

Send for Catalogue.

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

VASELINE.

FOR A ONE-DOLLAR BILL sent us by mail we will deliver, free of all charges, to any person in the United States, all of the following articles, carefully packed:

One two-ounce bottle of Pure Vaseline	10 cts.
One two-ounce bottle of Vaseline Pomade	15 "
One jar of Vaseline Cold Cream	15 "
One Cake of Vaseline Camphor Ice	10 "
One Cake of Vaseline Soap, unscented	10 "
One Cake of Vaseline Soap, exquisitely scented	25 "
One two-ounce bottle of White Vaseline	25 "
	$1.10

Or for postage stamps any single article at the price named. On no account be persuaded to accept from your druggist any Vaseline or preparation therefrom unless labelled with our name, because you will certainly receive an imitation which has little or no value. Chesebrough Mfg Co., 24 State St., New York.

THE WOMAN'S NEWS

IS THE ONLY

GENERAL WOMAN'S NEWSPAPER IN THE UNITED STATES,

—AND IS THE—

LARGEST WOMAN'S NEWSPAPER

EVER PUBLISHED.

The publishers offer the Largest Cash Commissions and the Best Premiums ever given by any newspaper.

Agents Wanted Everywhere.

Send for Sample Copies and Terms for Agents. Address,

THE HOSTERMAN PUB. CO., Springfield, Ohio.

PASTOR KOENIG'S TRADE NERVE TONIC MARK

Recommended as the Best.

LE MARS, PLYMOUTH, CO., IA., May, 1889.

I suffered from temporary sleeplessness from overwork for two years, for which I used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, and can recommend same as the best medicine for similar troubles.

F. BORNHORST.

A GREAT BLESSING.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 1, 1887.

I can most truthfully testify to the fact that here in Cleveland, several cases of epilepsy, which were cured by the medicine of Rev. Father Koenig, of Ft. Wayne, Ind., have come under my personal observation. In other similar cases great relief was given even if up to this time they have not been entirely cured. It would certainly be a great blessing if the tidings were more widely circulated that many could be cured by this medicine.

REV. ALARDUS ANDRESCHECK, O. S. F.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Kœnig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the KOENIG MEDICINE CO., 50 Wes. Madison, cor. Clinton St., CHICAGO, ILL.

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

Price $1 per Bottle. 6 Bottles for $5.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIII., No. 33 CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 30, 1891. WHOLE No. 1,096.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Send all business letters relating to the paper to THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.... 1
The Teaching of Albert Pike..... 8
What is the Trouble?.... 8
"Madness is in their Heart"..... 8
Personal Notes..... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
The Menace of the Theater 1
Political Anti-secrecy... 2
Agnosticism..... 2
SELECTED:
The Identity of Masonry and the Mysteries..... 3
The Wesleyan Rule..... 3
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 4
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 9
Call for the Conference.... 7
REFORM NEWS:
A Silent Candidate; The U. P. Churches of New York..... 4
CORRESPONDENCE:
Knowing God; Cities on the Hudson; Parochial Schools Defended; Dr. Norris as an Abolitionist; Pith and Point....5,6
AGENTS AND LECTURERS.... 7
THE HOME 10
TEMPERANCE.....11
BIBLE LESSON.....11
RELIGIOUS NEWS.....13
MARKETS 13
LODGE NOTES.....14
FARM NOTES.....15
NEWS OF THE WEEK.....16
BUSINESS.....16

See pages 7 and 16 for premium offers.

MAY 14.

This, as our readers know, is the date for our coming Conference, to be held in Central Music Hall, Chicago, morning, afternoon and evening.

The influence which this Conference shall exert on the public mind in favor of openness, in favor of the Christian faith, as opposed to modern idolatries, will depend in a measure upon the number of those who attend it. These lines will, we trust, be read by several thousand earnest Christians, many of whom live within a few hours' ride of Chicago. Will you not, dear friends, plan to attend this meeting; reaching the city so as to be at the morning session if possible? We trust that there may be a large representation from the churches of this vicinity.

ANNUAL MEETING

OF THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, MAY 13, 1891.

The Annual Meeting of the National Christian Association will occur on Wednesday, May 13th, 1891, at 10:30 o'clock A. M., in the Carpenter Building, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill., for the election of officers, and the transaction of other important business.

MILTON WRIGHT, President,
EDWIN R. WORRELL, Rec. Sec'y.

Samuel Gompers, the cigar-maker president of the American Federation of Labor, has been "swinging around" the Andy Johnson circle, speech-making for his secret organizations, and claims that the Federation is fast attaining the great membership the Knights of Labor once boasted of, a million. But he seems not to be wise enough to see that his organization is now ready to fall to pieces, with the enormity of its own bulk; and he is by far a less able man than Powderly to hold them together.

Ex-Minister Phelps' Democratic sympathies hardly excuse him for justifying the work of the New Orleans mob; and perhaps it is well for his country that he now wears his title with an "ex" before it, for he would not do her very good service by expressing such opinions abroad. The secret societies of the South with their dark and terrible record are not so different from the murderous Mafia that one would care to make a choice between them, and it is said that prominent members of the notorious White League led the mob. Not less but more reverence for law is what we need, and it bodes ill when our public men teach the opposite.

Following the strong lead of the farmer lodges the railway men through their secret organizations are planning to combine all branches of the service to secure the benefits of legislation; in other words, to go into secret politics. Nobody can deny that railway men have grievances enough to provoke them to even such an unwise measure. The companies are too often economical of everything but human life, and adopt safety devices for brakes, couplers, switches, etc., only so fast and far as they are compelled to do so. And worst of all they are fast killing off an army of railway men by Sunday work, which at the same time makes them heathen.

Archbishop Whately, the eminent author and controversialist, one of the most remarkable thinkers and writers of his time, used to say that it was no wonder that some English people have a taste for persecuting on account of religion, when the first lesson taught in the nurseries inculcated that sentiment, in these words:

"Old Daddy Long legs won't say his prayers:
Take him by his left leg and throw him down stairs."

When a man of Archbishop Whately's wisdom and experience attributes so serious a result to such a comparative trifle, are not we justified in the most severe charges against the lodge, which is night by night and year by year training men in the orgies of paganism, cannibalism and Jesuitism?

The "Union Veteran League" is a branch of the G. A. R., but distinctly organized to work in politics. It is one of the "secret political societies" of which all our influential dailies write with detestation, having only in mind the Clan-na-Gael or some order of like nature. The G. A. R., it seems, grew weary of attempting to deny a fact that was as patent as the brass buttons on the coats of its members. The burden was therefore shifted onto another shoulder, and the League organized to do the political work of the main order. So it may with better seeming be now said that the G. A. R. is not a political secret society. Its members attend to their secret politics in the Veteran League. The usual accompaniment of such politics is not wanting and a buffet well-stocked with liquors opens from the League room, where members can help themselves. Can any man innocently join the G. A. R.?

The publishers of the New York Voice are paying the penalty of leadership. As the mouthpiece of the Prohibition party the Voice has been, as a rule, energetic and aggressive, yet cautious, fair and Christian. Its financial success has been merited, and it has become the envy of "little men," and whisky bigots. Among the latter class the New York Evening Post has been most bitter and irrational. The Post is "mugwump" in politics, which is not necessarily bad; but it is mugwump in religion also, and that is an unmixed evil. Much of its hatred of prohibition is because of the Christian faith mixed with that reform. The Post has gone so far in its persistent misrepresentation and personal abuse of the Voice and its editor, Dr. Funk, that the latter has brought suit for libel to the amount of $100,000, for statements recently made by the Post, which appear to be utterly false. We hope he will make Messrs. White, Schurz & Co., pay well for their fun and folly.

Friday, May 1st, promises to be an important day to secretly organized labor. In several American cities the struggle is to be renewed for an eight-hour day by some one or other of the trades best able to undertake it. In Europe also the miners of England, France and Germany propose a similar contest, having selected Belgium as the field upon which to decide the battle with the capitalists. There is no doubt that for men whose habits and moral character are above suspicion, more leisure would be profitable for their families, and therefore to the whole community. But so long as employers are convinced that two hours from the factory means two more for the saloon they are justified in resisting the eight-hour day. We believe the solution of this problem rests with the workingmen themselves. If they are men upon whom two hours a-day would would not be squandered, they have a sure foundation for a demand, which could easily be successful by means of conference agitation and public discussion. rather than by the barbarous and pugnacious methods of the strike and the boycott.

THE MENACE OF THE THEATER.

BY JOSIAH W. LEEDS.

Eleven years ago a theater manager appealed to the Court of Quarter Sessions of Philadelphia from the decision of the then mayor of the city, in refusing to grant him a license for the place of amusement which he proposed to open. By a statute of the preceding year (1879) the mayor had been given discretionary power to refuse the application for a license for any theater or other place of amusement where the play or spectacle to be presented should be of a character "immoral in its nature or tendencies, or otherwise unlawful or hurtful to the community." Although the court in this initial case sustained the mayor, very rarely, be it said, has that official's prerogative in the same direction been exercised since. Is this immunity owing to the fact that the character of the performances has meanwhile so improved that the above restrictive proviso has no application? Let us see what is the present drift.

The married daughter of a well-known minister of this city, expressing her surprise to a theater manager that a certain sensuous spectacle had been brought out in a theater claiming to stand in the front rank, replied: "Why, madam, no theater could be maintained and made to pay in our day without ballet-dancing."

The magistrate officiating at the Central Station said in my presence that the indecent pictures of the cigarette manufacturers, against which there has been such an outcry, were no worse than the living originals which were to be seen on pretty much every stage in the city. The superintendent of police also remarked, that at theaters advertised by vulgar posters the most fashionable people of the city might be found in attendance.

During the winter just passed, a certain French play of the lowest cast was produced at a number of the theaters in our American cities. In Boston, the mayor and board of aldermen cited before them the manager of the theater who brought out the play in that city, and agreed to revoke his license for one year. In Richmond, Virginia, a faithful captain of police, scandalized at the disgraceful performance, applied to the mayor to have it stopped. The mayor, nevertheless, allowed it to continue upon promise of the manager to exclude the objectionable parts; but of so little worth was this promise, that at the next performance thereafter the half dozen ladies who had the hardihood to attend retreated for very shame from the building. In Philadelphia the same notorious play was given at two theaters without any hindrance from the authorities, so far as appeared.

Where, therefore, do we stand? and how does it happen that the evil has become thus entrenched? and that to utter a protest against it, and to ask that the plain requirement of the law be fulfilled, is to bring down upon one's head, from almost every quarter, the opprobrious epithet of fool and fanatic? The reader of the "Annals of Philadelphia" for the colonial or proprietary period will learn that the Assembly repeatedly essayed to prevent the coming of the play-house, only to have the permissive acts as often restored by enactments of the Royal Council. It is also evident that the just sentiment of the community at large (and not that of the Friends only) was opposed to the theater as being a prime promoter of social debasement, for the Friends of the period of the Revolution were unrepresented in the Assembly by which the prohibitory act of 1779, "for the suppression of vice and immorality," was promulgated. Appealing, in a corporate capacity, to the proprietors, Thomas and Richard Penn (1770), the Friends remind them that "the pious and most considerate of other religious denominations have at times, for some years past, been repeatedly concerned to address the Governors you have placed here against the strolling players who have come to the city." In the present writer's Essay upon the Theater the above episode is commented upon in language which it appears pertinent at this time to repeat:

"In view of the fact that play-houses, even those of the vilest description, are everywhere allowed and licensed in our towns and cities, and that it would be in vain to look now for any municipal or state action, such as above detailed, there is something pathetic in the pertinacity with which this community strove again and again to turn aside—to keep away—that leprous invader, which the mother country, like an unnatural parent, endeavored with an unrelenting persistency to fasten upon it. What were the stamp act and the tax upon tea, as absolute grievances, to this? The tax might be lowered, or, by continuous, emphatic, and dignified protest, be eventually done away with; but, as for this canker of the play-house, assured were those old-time people that, did it once find legalized place, the leaven of its sorcery would so work in the community, that first a tolerating, then an altogether favoring, public opinion would be created, so that its ultimate dislodgment would be exceedingly improbable. Yes, it is here now, apparently more strongly entrenched, growing year by year more corrupt and vile, while the measure of the woe that it brings, who can fathom?

During the last three years, I believe there has been an average of at least two new theaters or opera houses built here each twelve months. A daily paper, referring to the two of last year, specially examined before their licenses were granted, says that they "were pronounced safe, and built in strict accordance with the law," and that the examiners "are emphatic in their approval of the means taken for the safety of visitors in case of fire or panic."

Stand at the doors of any one of those theaters, and look at the crowd of men, young men, and boys that come pouring out at the conclusion of one of the low performances,—scan their countenances well, and mark whether there be found one who shows an open, noble, God-loving look, upon which may be written the reassuring legend: "Safe,—Secure in Case of Fire or Panic."

The removal, at long intervals, of a few indecent posters advertising the debasing entertainments does not touch the evil itself. The corrupt spectacles go on all the same, notwithstanding the interposition of a twelve-inch brick or stone wall that may shield them from the gaze of the general public, and hide them from the open light of heaven. There is no flagrant disorder and no breach of the peace that is apparent out upon the streets, and the officers of the law say of the performances, "Disturb them not." The satisfied attender goes thither to gratify his unhallowed likings, and no word of protest or complaint to the authorities can be looked for from him. If an occasional on-looker, having regard for the proprieties, feels outraged and aggrieved at the license that is permitted, his sense of shame at being found in attendance at such a resort operates to prevent his making the fact public.

Philadelphia, Pa.

POLITICAL ANTI-SECRECY.

BY REV. M. A. GAULT.

In writing recently of Birmingham, Iowa, and of the influence of Dr. Norris in organizing reform sentiment, I reserved for another letter a notice of his right-hand man, W. N. Enlow. He is editor of the Free Press, the State organ of the anti-secret movement. Under his wise, energetic management, it is growing in circulation and is making itself strongly felt, not only around Birmingham, but throughout the State. Bro. Enlow is a born editor and publishes a local paper in addition to the Free Press, and has built up quite a publishing business besides. His associate editor of the Free Press is M. N. Butler, of Avalon, Mo. They are both intensely radical, and devoted to the anti-secret reform, especially to the idea of organizing a new party on that issue. In this they are so far in advance of their fellow reformers, that they are doomed for some time to come to have but a small following, unless numerous Mafias conspire soon to push this question to the front.

It must be admitted there are strong arguments in favor of political organization, yet it seems that to organize on this issue at the present time would be like trying to start a locomotive with only a few pounds of steam, or before even the boiler is hot. Such a party ticket, securing only a few votes in a county, would do little more than exhibit the poverty of the movement. It is evident that God has put the prohibition question first on the calendar for solution.

The rum power threatens to make the first assault upon our Republic. To put the anti-secret question first, would be as if the old Abolitionists, before the war, had put the prohibition question first. The liquor traffic, now making the assault, has marked our line of battle. The Prohibition party has absorbed largely the best moral sentiment of the country. There are very few anti-secretists, who during these past years have stood shoulder to shoulder with their prohibition comrades, while the batteries of the two old parties have poured hot shot into their ranks, who are willing now to come out and desert their comrades, to form a new line of battle. Would it not be too much like soldiers at Gettysburg deserting their comrades and leaving the army because it would not declare for prohibition?

But what then is the duty of the hour? Shall we compromise for the present on this question? No, never! Let every friend of the anti-secret movement give prohibition conventions to understand that they will scratch every candidate who is a member of a secret society. If every friend of the cause in Iowa would do this it would be impossible for prohibitionists to nominate a secret society man. I have heard it asserted, that it was the circulation of anti-secret literature in the prohibition convention at Indianapolis that prevented the nomination of Green Clay Smith for President in 1888. It will be time enough for anti-secretists to come out of the Prohibition party when it adopts a resolution favoring secret societies. The two old parties are now the great barriers to prohibition. Before it can triumph their power must be broken. Every true friend of prohibition should do everything possible to break the power of the old parties.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

In a journal of a tour in Palestine, Dr. Carradine, in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, after speaking of the Valley of Bethshemesh, along which the ark of God was drawn so wonderfully, says:

"The valley after awhile turns southward, and merges into the Valley of Ajalon. Here, again, memory is stirred at that bold prayer and demand of faith upon the part of Joshua: 'Sun, stand thou still on Gibeon, and thou moon in the Valley of Ajalon.' Great was the victory that day over the five kings! They were pursued from Gibeon to Azekah, across and down the Valley of Ajalon. The Bible says God took a wonderful part in that battle, for he rained down great stones from heaven upon the enemies of Israel. As I passed down the valley and along the hillsides, I suddenly began to notice myriads of stones on all sides. Strange to say, I had not thought of the Scripture statement until I saw the stones. In no other part of the country did I see stones like these before me, for peculiarity of size and multitude. They were just such as would be used in hurling down upon a great army. I took up one of the smaller sized ones, a soft whitish stone, two and a half inches in diameter, for the editor of the Advocate."—The Armory.

AGNOSTICISM.

My dear Editor:—Many arguments for the existence of God have been formulated. Some prefer one of these, some another. The choice is determined largely by training and mental temper. The great majority of those who believe in God can furnish no logical proof for his existence and care for no such proof. They accept the fact upon authority or base it upon personal religious experience. A very large school of Christian theologians argue that the existence of God is not a matter of knowledge, but a matter of faith. If we know God as we know the stick and stone, his existence, say these scholars, would have no more significance for religion than the most secular truths.

I am wont to look upon the proofs for the existence of God as in the last resort nothing more than efforts to reproduce in the individual the consciousness of God, which is the possession of the race. And this will assume, as I said, different forms in different minds.

Kant's method was to start with pure reason. At the close of his Critique he found that he could neither prove nor disprove the existence of God, the freedom of the will, or the immortality of the soul. But we need, says Kant, these conceptions. Life is meaningless without them. The moral nature of man demands them. He, therefore, assumes them, and acts and thinks as though they were real. By this means he comes to have a sure faith that they are real.

Hegel's method was different. Kant, he argued, made a mistake by starting out with the pure reason and denying all else. Man is something more than this reason of Kant's. He hopes and loves. He is not reason but spirit. And his very existence as spirit proves that God is. The thought of God in human consciousness, with all that this implies, is conclusive proof of the existence of Absolute Spirit. But Hegel professes to arrive at this knowledge of God not by sight, but by insight. Kant makes knowledge of God not a matter of science but a matter of faith. And faith is more than mere belief. It is spiritual insight.

It may be that in emphasizing the fact that God knows us, in my article to little was made of the side that in our usual discussions is alone magnified. At any rate, as for myself, I would hesitate to place in the same category my knowledge of space and my knowledge of God. Is there any such thing as space, or is it just a mental form (box) that we put things into in order that we may think them? If space has an existence other than in our minds, what may that existence be? Time can work no changes in it. It cannot be measured, weighed or thought. We can think of objects in space, but we cannot think of space. It is itself nothing other than the form of perceiving co-existent points.

As to the other point made in favor of a knowledge of God, the words need an interpreter. Jesus said, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." Does this mean that any poor Jew who was so fortunate as to have seen the man Jesus, was also so fortunate as to have seen the Eternal Spirit? Not at all. The majority who looked upon Jesus, saw a man: nothing more. The beloved disciple saw more than a man, he saw the Son of God; but how did he see this? Was it after all knowledge or faith? The Greeks had two words for knowledge. The one (episteme) was used of practical, every-day common sense, or of systemized knowledge. The other (gnosis) seems to have had a broader significance, and was used by the Greek Fathers and the Gnostic sects to include not only objects of knowledge (episteme) but objects of faith (pistis).

The knowledge we have of physical objects is quite different from the knowledge we have of God. In the way we know the one we cannot know the other. This is not the same as saying that the reality of the one is more certain. Our senses often deceive us. They have deceived the whole human race for ages in many ways. When the senses report that the sun rises and sets, we do not accuse them of falsehood. They report accurately what appears. The error is one of interpretation. Left to the material furnished by the senses,—and the Bible must also be classed here, for it makes its way to us through hearing or seeing,—God can never be to us more than an inference. We may conclude that he is from testimony or from reason, that is all.

In the last resort, he only knows God to whom God has revealed himself. And this knowledge we are wont to call faith, when we speak guardedly. The aids to faith are many and the surest guide is the Bible itself. But these are only aids. He who reads the Bible, using only sense and reason (in the narrow use of the word), will find but a series of dry and uninteresting stories. Added to sense there must be emotion, and added to reason, faith, for "faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."

In the verse "this is life eternal to know thee, the only true God," the word used is the cognate of gnosis, not of episteme. Because our word "knowledge" is used as a translation for both these words, it is impossible to avoid confusion. "Reason" is also liable to similar abuse. We use it in a narrow sense as equivalent to a logical process, and we also use it as including the sum total of spiritual capability. In general it is better to make a distinction between reason and spirit, knowledge and faith. Yours very truly,

A. B. Curtis.

Tufts College, Mass.

WHEN JESUS COMES.

Some people seem surprised at the eagerness which is displayed for the return of the Lord Jesus to this earth again by some Christians.

But why should they not be eager for his return, when that return means reunion for the parted, immortality for the mortal, health for the sick, life for the dead, land for the landless, habitations for the homeless, plenty for the destitute, bread for hungry, water for the thirsty, sight for the blind, hearing for the deaf, speech for the dumb, strength for the weak, youth for the aged, liberty for the captives, riches for the poor, "beauty for ashes," "a garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness," "the oil of joy for mourning," peace for the troubled, rest for the weary, gladness for the sorrowing, songs for the sighing, society for the friendless, perfect bodies for the crippled, mansions for huts, crowns for crosses, light for darkness, wisdom for ignorance, strength for weakness, harmony for discord, with an eternal inheritance in the kingdom of God for all his ransomed people.

The Worcester Weekly Times, in a paragraph headed, "Back to Barbarism," states that the Philadelphia branch of the Catholic Knights of America have decided that wine should be used and women excluded at the banquet to be given to the Supreme Council at its meeting in the Quaker City in May. We are glad these Catholic Knights see that the company of wine-bibbers is not fit for virtuous women; but this incident fitly illustrates the trend of the lodge system, which is "back to barbarism," always and everywhere.—Home Guard.

We cannot carry Christ in one hand, and the world, the flesh and the devil in the other. The man who tries to sit down on two chairs at the same time, sits down on the floor. The man who gives two hours a week to the Lord, and six days and twenty-two hours to the service of the world or the devil, need not be surprised if he finds himself growing worldly or even vicious. Success in any business or walk of life requires singleness of purpose.—Rev. Thomas Dixon.

If I wished to raise up a race of statesmen higher than politicians, animated not by greed or selfishness, by policy or party, I would familiarize the boys of the land with the characters of the Bible—with Joseph and Moses, Joshua and Samuel, Daniel and Paul—and I would teach them the gentle wisdom of Jesus Christ.—Dr. John Hall.

THE IDENTITY.

Though masonry is identical with the ancient mysteries, it is so in this qualified sense, that it presents but an imperfect image of their brilliancy.—Albert Pike, Grand Commander of the Supreme Council, Sovereign Grand Inspectors-General, in "Morals and Dogma," p. 624.

(The following selections are from the Synoptical Index of Mackey's "Symbolism of Freemasonry.")

Hierophant. (Holy, sacred, to show.) One who instructs in sacred things; the explainer of the aporrheta, or secret doctrines, to the initiates in the ancient Mysteries. He was the presiding officer, and his rank and duties were analogous to those of the master of a Masonic lodge.

Mithras. He was the god worshiped by the ancient Persians, and celebrated in their Mysteries as the symbol of the sun. In the initiation in these Mysteries, the candidate passed through many terrible trials, and his courage and fortitude were exposed to the most rigorous tests. Among others, after ascending the mystical ladder of seven steps, he passed through a scenic representation of Hades, or the infernal regions; out of this and the surrounding darkness he was admitted into the full light of Elysium, where he was obligated by an oath of secrecy, and invested by the Archimagus, or High Priest, with the secret instructions of the rite, among which was a knowledge of the Ineffable Name.

Sun-worship. The most ancient of all superstitions. It prevailed especially in Phœnicia, Chaldea, and Egypt, and traces of it have been discovered in Peru and Mexico. Its influence was felt in the ancient Mysteries, and abundant allusions to it are to be found in the symbolism of Freemasonry

(The extracts which follow are from "The Obelisk and Masonry," by John A. Weisse, M. D., an eminent German-American philologist and author of "Origin, Progress and Destiny of the English Language.")

Amelia B. Edwards, in her "Thousand Miles up the Nile," 1877, speaking of a temple in Upper Egypt, says (p. 497), it was "coated as usual with a thin film of stucco, and colored with a richness for which I know no parallel, except in the tomb of Seti I., at Thebes, commonly known as Belzoni's Tomb." We consider it incumbent on Freemasonry all over the world to restore that hallowed spot to its pristine design and make it the Mecca of a universal Masonic brotherhood.–p. 61

We devoted so much space to this earliest and most lasting European secret association [Eleusinian Mysteries] that has any analogy to mediev.al or modern operative and theoretic Masonry, because we thought it had rites, ideas, emblems and symbols, which resembled those of Egypt and India; especially the ordeal of horrors, nearly identical with those of Elephanta, now in vogue in oriental and in some Western orders. The Eleusinian order had its male grand master, wardens, and minor officials. True, it admitted women and children, thus completing the social fabric; but it excluded criminals and outlaws. It had its grades and initiations, with social, moral, and religious bearings, and strictly enjoined secrets; so that every order or association, formed in Europe or America, either for social, moral, or religious purposes, or mutual protection, must point to Greece for a prototype. This gains yet more force, when we trace the Eleusinia to the imposing order that initiated Pharaohs, princes, queens, hierophants, priests, and magnates in the magnificent secluded Masonic Temple, constructed by Seti I. (Osymandias) and his son, Rameses II. (Sesostris), which looks more like modern Freemasonry than anything history mentions, and of which every intelligent Mason must feel proud, when he inspects and studies Belzoni's atlas, especially Plate 19.—p. 84.

According to our reading of history, the priesthoods of Belus, or Baal in Assyria, of Osiris in Egypt, of Jehova in Palestine, of Jupiter in Greece and Rome, of Ahura Mazda in Persia, of Brahma in India, and of Teutates in Britain, were primitive secret societies, who instructed and governed the primitive families and races. It little matters whether we call the members of those priest hoods Belites, Pastophori, Levites, Curetes, Magi, Brahmins, or Druids; they were connected by secret ties, and intercommunicated from the Indus to the Tiber, from the Nile to the Thames. Hence there ever has been, is, and ever will be Freemasonry on our planet. Masonry was ever more or less connected with priesthoods till about the thirteenth century of our era, when Masons declared themselves Freimaurer (Freemasons). Since about that period priesthoods have ever denounced and persecuted Freemasonry.—p. 93.

In looking back through all history we discover that Masonry, or the old associated mystic societies, analogous to modern Freemasonry, have been the means of promoting civilization, fostering mechanical arts, and of holding together the more advanced minds for mutual protection and charity.—p. 174.

THE WESLEYAN RULE.

In an Open Letter by the editor of the Wesleyan Methodist, published in a late issue of that paper, the position of the Wesleyan churches in this country is very plainly set forth:

Dear Bro.:—Your letter of inquiry is received. The rule on secret societies of the Wesleyan Methodist Connection excludes all secret societies. It is construed to exclude the Sons of Temperance, as they are a secret society doing their business as such society in secret. Tylers guard their divisions from the presence of any but members of the order; the initiation and lodge work is within curtained and guarded rooms. The Wesleyan Methodist Connection believes that there is no affinity between any good cause and organized secrecy. Secret methods are the methods of evil doers, and open methods are the methods of truth doers, according to the teachings of Christ, whose utterances are supposed to be authority with all who would do good. Christ says: "Every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved. But he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God." Here are two methods of procedure spoken of; one is the secret, the other is the open. The secret method is declared to be that of the evil doer; the open method that of the truth doer. The devil has deceived many very good people into believing that the devil's method of secret doing can be rendered more effective for good than Christ's open method, and hence they are deceived into dragging a good cause into unnatural and Christ-condemned relations. Secret temperance societies began at the time of the great Washingtonian movement which swept the country and threatened the annihilation of the liquor interest, and that secret movement killed the Washingtonian open movement, as Dr. Marsh and others warned them it would do. Secret societies have been a general curse to the temperance cause as they have adopted the evil doers' method of attempting good which has tended to paralyze the open and Scriptural methods. I know the history of what I write about. God save the world from secret clans for any professed purpose. Yours for Christ's methods of work, N. Wardner.

Search thy friend for his virtues; thyself for thy faults.—C. H. Spurgeon.

What to thee is shadow, to Him is day. And the end He knoweth.—J. G. Whittier.

One act of charity will teach us more of the love of God than a thousand sermons.—Frederick W. Robertson.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Dr. Fulton—School readers—Legislative doings—The endowment orders—Other matters—The military drill in the Loyal Legion.

Last week, for the first time, the British American left out Dr. Fulton's Music Hall sermon. Perhaps none regretted more his severe attack on that large branch of the Christian church which advocates infant baptism than did many of his good Baptist brethren who heard him class them with "pagans" and Romanists. The doctor needs a little more of the tolerance he condemns in Mr. Moody. It would be much better for the cause he champions; for he is not the most discreet of men, and often forgets that firing into the ranks of his friends is an excellent way of helping the foe. Sectarianism—at least when it takes the offensive, as with Dr. Fulton—is the greatest of all hindrances to reform work. The resignation of a Charlestown pastor, Rev. Mr. Twombly, discouraged with his unsuccessful labors in a district where the Protestant churches are said to be losing ground rapidly, with a corresponding increase of Romanism, seems to lend emphasis to the truth that the fight against Catholicism can never be won on denominational lines.

Pres. Eliot, of Harvard College, condemns unsparingly the mass of trash which make up the school readers of to-day. A comparison with the readers of fifty years ago will show a sad deterioration in literary quality which makes it quite apparent that they are now got up, less in the interest of education than of rival publishers. I well remember that my first glimpse into the rich store-house of English literature was obtained, when a mere child, from Sargent's readers; and how many in an earlier time received their first patriotic impulse from the Columbian Orator! Another reading book which I am told was used in schools in the opening part of this century was made up of selections from the Bible; but this was when the dropping of the Christian Scriptures from our public schools at the bidding of an arrogant, foreign priesthood was a thing happily undreamed of. Teachers were then supposed to know a little of everything, and the temptation to appear to know more than they really did, must have been great.

An amusing story on this point used to be related by an aged lady now gone to her rest. One of the girls having reached a difficult place in her knitting—sewing and knitting being then considered a regular part of the school routine—either in the simplicity or the wickedness of her heart, I am not sure which, took it to the master. He, poor man!—feeling that he must save his reputation at all hazards, took the knitting from his pupil's hand, looked it over with an expression of owl-like wisdom, and then gave it back to her with the information that "he should think it was time to begin to purl." This was not the first, and surely not the last time, that the use of a technical term has been found a very convenient cover for absolute ignorance.

The bill before the Massachusetts Legislature to repeal the prohibition of the public bar, has failed to pass; its opponents raising several points of orders by which they succeeded in getting it thrown out. Said "points of order" were the merest technicalities, of course, but enough for the purpose. It is curious how the most trifling thing will stop the passage of an important measure, while an unnecessary or thoroughly bad law will ride triumphant over every obstacle. Temperance people, though inclined at first to think that it did not matter very much whether a man took his drink standing up or sitting down, have altered their minds since they see that it is far from being an indifferent matter with the liquor men, who would scarcely have worked so hard and raised so much money to repeal a law which did not materially affect their interests.

Labor has also suffered a defeat. The bill to reduce the hours of work for women and minors in manufacturing and mechanical establishments was a measure that would doubtless have passed had not remonstrances poured in from the owners of woolen and cotton mills representing hundreds of millions of dollars. If the millionaire American "dearly loves a lord," I am inclined to think that the average legislator, especially the kind who smokes the highest priced cigars he can find at the State's expense, dearly loves the millionaire.

But more important than this or any other, unless it be the temperance question, is the bill relating to restrictive legislation as regards the fraternal orders and bond investment companies. The bill is said to be much more thorough than the New Hampshire act which gives the matter entirely over to the insurance commissioner, who may condemn any of these companies or pronounce them safe, according to his own sovereign will and pleasure—a rather dangerous power to place in the hands of one man. Of course the bill will be tinkered over and amended to such a degree as greatly to impair its original force if it should become a law; which is doubtful, as all these orders are banded together ready for the fight. Collectively, they can command a vast number of votes; and men with more political ambition than principle will be chary of offending their constituents who have invested in these concerns, and do not want to see their house of cards pulled down about their ears.

I am glad to see that Mrs. Rice, the national superintendent of Juvenile Work, has recommended the abolition of the military drill in the Loyal Legions. One of the features by which the lodge attracts is by pandering to the love of military display. Let the W. C. T. U. with its open methods show the youth of our land a more excellent way.

Elizabeth E. Flagg.

REFORM NEWS.

A SILENT CANDIDATE.

Dear Cynosure:—Since my last writing I have been at Portland, Grand Ledge, Okemos and Williamson. While at Grand Ledge I went to Wacoosta and called upon Mr. Nelson Daniels. He is a staunch friend of the N. C. A. and financially aided the cause.

From Williamson I went into the country and spent the Sabbath with Rev. Bro. Bush, and preached three times and then canvassed for the Cynosure. I called upon a brother by the name of Burton, who related his experience in Masonry. He was an irreligious and profane young man when Masons began to entice him to join the lodge. One of the Masons, that he might have a better opportunity to influence him, arranged to change works with him. In the course of their conversation the Mason twice remarked, "I tell you, you will have to take a big oath to become a Mason."

The night he was made an Entered Apprentice Mason, his initiation passed off smoothly until he came to the clause in the oath where he was to agree to have his throat cut across and his tongue torn out. Mr. Burton had repeated the oath after the Master until he came to the throat-cutting clause, when suddenly he became silent. They waited for him to agree to have his throat cut and his tongue torn out, but they waited in vain.

After a long pause, the Master said, "He does not refuse; by silence he consents." The lodge then adjourned and the brethren gathered in little clusters and seemed to be in consultation. The lodge was again called, and they made an excuse for giving him the second degree. This, like the first initiation, proceeded smoothly until they came to the point in the oath where he was to agree to have his left breast torn open and his heart and vitals taken out if he did not keep his Masonic covenant. But Mr. Burton was as much opposed to having his heart torn out as he had been to having his throat cut. Again he became silent.

Mr. Burton thinks that the Masonic brethren came to the conclusion that it was not pure bashfulness that prevented him from repeating after the Master, but a settled purpose not to agree, in any contingency, to his own murder. So they never invited him to be made a Master Mason, and to this day he has only a cowan's knowledge of the sublime mysteries of that degree. When speaking of the throat-cutting and tongue-pulling clause, in the oath of an Entered Apprentice Mason, he said that though he was a profane young man at that time, the oath seemed so horrible to him that he felt a cold chill to the crown of his head. "I cannot imagine," said Mr. Burton, "how a man who has believed on the Lord Jesus Christ and received the Spirit of Christ into his heart, could take such an oath."

The Entered Apprentice Mason swears ever to conceal as well as never to reveal Masonry. Mr. Finney saw no way by which he could conceal what has been already revealed, only by duplicity and falsehood. Just think of a Christian man agreeing to have his throat cut and his tongue torn out if he does not do what an astute man like Pres. Charles G. Finney saw no way of doing without being guilty of duplicity and falsehood!

Is it not time that we lift up our voices like trumpets and cry aloud and spare not until at last the churches are brought to realize the horrible nature of the Masonic covenants?

Mr. Burton also spoke of a funeral that he attended. The deceased was an Odd-fellow. He had been addicted to strong drink and to profane swearing. The minister who preached his funeral sermon came into the pulpit in the regalia of an Odd-fellow. In the course of his remarks he exhorted his brethren to emulate the example of their deceased brother; and assured them that in doing so they would make sure of a place at the right hand of God. How long will the American churches tolerate such shameful prostitution in their ministry! Should they longer withhold their rebuke will not the stones cry out? I had a lengthy conversation to-day with a Mason who has been converted to Christ. I explained the religious philosophy of Masonry to him and showed its antagonism to the Gospel of Christ, and analyzed the covenants of Masonry and showed their sinfulness. I also showed that the covenants of Masonry are neither legally nor morally binding, and that they have not even the force of a bond of honor. Masonry and its unclean brood of kindred orders must not be permitted to dominate and corrupt the American churches.

The heathen world is looking to us for missionaries to teach them the way of life. We should send them men who have not bowed the knee to this modern Baal.

Who will help to do this missionary work at home to prepare the way for missionary work abroad?

C. F. Hawley.

THE U. P. CHURCHES OF NEW YORK.

160 W. 36th St., New York, Apr. 22.

Dear Cynosure:—It was my privilege to address friends in the First and Second United Presbyterian churches, Jersey City, on the Sabbath. Rev. Martin, pastor of the First church, is a young man of much ability and zeal. He makes no compromise on reform lines. Dr. Armstrong of the Second church, being founder of the church of which he is pastor, has naturally drawn those of kindred faith. His thirteen reasons why a Christian should not be a Mason, published in pamphlet, have been widely circulated by the N. C. A. Any who have not read them should do so. If a person is not convinced that Freemasonry is an evil to be shunned and opposed after reading these reasons, he is a hopeless case. I gained much strength by conversing with this father in Israel who has labored so faithfully and long in the Master's cause. As his eyes grow dim to the things of earth, may they see more clearly the things revealed in Christ.

Yesterday I was very heartily welcomed in a meeting of the New York Presbytery of the United Presbyterian church, and invited to address this body as I might desire. Several invitations were given for lectures, all of which I shall not be able to fill this trip. The vexed question of "organ or no organ" is by no means dead in this presbytery. It was reported to presbytery that the Hoboken congregation had petitioned their elders to introduce an organ. The elders believing the use of the organ in worship wrong, had refused the congregation's request. The congregation, said to have about forty members, then requested, through their delegates, that presbytery appoint new elders favorable to the introduction of the organ, and excuse those not in harmony with the congregation. A committee was appointed who nominated three new elders. Their report was adopted by a small majority, the vote standing 15 to 12. A brother wearing a gold ring argued that he believed "the only hope of the salvation of Hoboken congregation" was the introduction of an organ. To one who does not believe that the salvation of men depends on any human agency, such an argument sounds strangely, to say the least. An elder in this brother's congregation is responsible for the assertion that he has a number of secret society members. When asked by your agent if there would be an opportunity to speak in his church against the lodge, he replied that he had his own way of dealing with that subject. He never allowed a temperance, National Reform or any kind of a reform lecture in his church. He considered himself amply able to tend to that matter. While I would not question this brother's ability to present what his people might need in reform lines, yet I find some, like the dog in the manger, who would neither eat the hay himself or let the ox eat it. The same elder, who said there were a number of secret society men in his church, said the pastor never spoke on the subject. God forbid that I should try to get into churches to speak where I am not wanted. There are plenty where I am. But how are the people to know the truth unless it is in some way brought to them? I am sure this brother would not claim the only hope of the salvation of his congregation is in the big organ which they have.

My appointments are as follows: To-night, 7th Ave. U. P. Congregation, New York; evening April 23, Free Methodist church, Brooklyn; evening April 24, Covenanter church, Brooklyn; Sabbath afternoon, U. P. church, Rev. Andrews, pastor, Brooklyn; Sabbath evening, U. P. church, near Brooklyn, Rev. Shaw, pastor: evening April 28, Lutheran church, Perth Amboy, N. J., Rev. Skov, pastor. I shall probably address Bro. Shaw's people again on Friday evening, May 2.

Rev. Biddle of Jersey City, and Rev. Smith of Patterson, N. J., are among those who showed me much kindness, and would have helped arrange for lectures had not my time been so completely taken. Let us who find joy in the service of Christ, never look back, but forward "to the pride of our high calling." The battle may be fierce, but the victory is sure. O, that the things of this world may appear of less importance, and the things of eternity more. W. B. Stoddard.

Notice.—The postoffice addresses of the following named persons are desired. Will any one who knows, kindly forward such addresses to this office. Prof. J. A. Edgren, Rev. J. D. Brown, Wm. H. Morrill, S. V. Poole, J. M. Kent, Rev. M. S. Drury.

CORRESPONDENCE.

KNOWING GOD.

Editor Cynosure:—The article on the Knowableness of God is perhaps open to discussion. Suppose we consider that:—

1. "Now we know in part" rather than do not know.

2. A reasonable ground of belief is knowledge. To be "well-assured" is to know. This is the common usage of the word know.

3. The distinction between reason and faith, knowledge and belief, "science and religion," are not scientifically or correctly made.

4. Between two things so related that the denial of one is the admission of the other, the one that is most easily believed is necessarily believed, and necessary belief is knowledge.

5. We "know" God, partly because we cannot rationally deny him and partly because of his appreciable manifestations, which we name after similar human relationships: paternal, loving, wise, omnipotent.

6. There is no interest or glad assurance in the fact that God knows us—in truth, hardly anything in the phrase, excepting as it assumes our knowledge of him to the extent of all practical present necessity. If I know who he is who knows me, I am interested and blessed with the thought of being known by him.

I care nothing about being known by a person whom I know nothing about. To know about a person is to know him in a very practical and large sense. The writer had a saucy letter from an editress last year who prided herself on being an "agnostic," and no more a child in religion, believing bear stories and "fish stories,"—not one of the "old fogy preachers." The things she didn't know were of course enough to entitle her to the name "agnostic," if she used it modestly, but it was equally evident that she knew enough about God to be classed with those of whom it is said: "The invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, his eternal power and godhead; so that they are without excuse.

"Because that when they knew God they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful, but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened. Professing themselves to be wise they became fools." A. O. C.

CITIES ON THE HUDSON.

New York, April 20, 1891.

Editor Christian Cynosure:—Last Friday I visited Newburg, on the Hudson. Its location is peerless and the views up and down the great river are supurb. It is cursed with 200 saloons. The churches, the Y. M. C. A., and the W. C. T. U., raise only a feeble cry against them.

On Sabbath morning and evening I preached in Trinity M. E. church, Rev. Dr. Longachre, pastor. The "grip" is a prevailing epidemic here and this brother was one of the victims. So by the invitation of the official board, I filled his pulpit. He has a congregation of 800 and they are enthusiastic workers. One of their members, Mr. Francis Gouldy, took my heart by his hearty approval of the sentiments of the sermon. He is a man of great wealth and he uses it in the Lord's work. For thirty years he has been partially paralyzed. He formerly lived in New York City, being engaged in business there. His son took to drink, and one night came home drunk, attacked his father with a knife, killed his sister and went upstairs and shot himself. Mr. Gouldy's injury resulted in paralysis and he has a man employed to take care of him. He is enthusiastic in temperance reform, Sabbath reform, missions at home and abroad, and in every good work. He gives $500 to the congregation's foreign mission collection each time and $300 per year for their church work in Newburg.

At 3:30 I preached in the Second R. P. church, Rev. J. R. Thompson, pastor. Bro. Thompson was licensed to preach thirty-nine years ago that day. You would not think he had been in the service half that time. His congregation is large and active. They have the zeal of their efficient pastor. Work always tells. His daughter, Miss Anna, is a leader in the W. C. T. U. work here. She has a mission for poor boys. One of her converts is a young Portuguese. He is a miracle of grace. The transformation in his life is wonderful. His prayer is fulfilled: "Dear Father, make my life beautiful. Teach me so to live and love and influence, that through my example, all with whom I come in contact may see thy glory shining through, and may wish for no higher good than to be like Thee; amen."

On Monday I came to New York. I was surprised to find the English monk, "Father Ignatius," conducting services at the Y. M. C. A. hall on 23d street. He claims to be a semi-Protestant. But many of the secular papers speak boldly of him as practicing a Jesuitical scheme to lead away the souls of the ignorant and thoughtless.

On Monday evening I attended a temperance meeting in the 23d street R. P. church, of which my brother, Rev. F. M. Foster, is pastor. The first paper was read by Mr. Joseph Colwell on "The Responsibility of the Nation for the Liquor Traffic." He insisted that in licensing or taxing the business the nation was a partner in the criminal traffic. A firm in Boston has entered into a contract for seven years to send 5,000 gallons of whisky per day to the Congo Valley. Our government collects $95,000,000 per year revenue from whisky. For that sum it legalizes a crime that costs our nation directly and indirectly $2,000,000,000 annually. The State of Ohio collects $4,000,000 tax per year on the saloon. For this it sustains a saloon system that costs our commonwealth $70,000,000 annually. When will we learn wisdom? The second paper was read by the pastor's wife, Mrs. Cecil Foster, on "Rum and Missions." She pictured the work of missions in the Congo, and then described the ruin that is being wrought there by rum. In 1884, there were 8,000,000 gallons of rum sent to the Congo. Dr. Clark said, he had seen thousands of girls lying drunk around the traders' wagons. She quoted a touching letter written by Malike, Emise of Nupe, to Bishop Crowthers of the Niger. He plead with him as a father to keep rum out of his country for it was destroying his people. The appeal made our heart ache. The last paper was read by Robert McNeel on "Personal Responsibility for the Drink Habit." The man who does not practice total abstinence now is not following Christ. We are our brother's keeper even though he be given to drink. And by prayer and personal effort we should reclaim him.

Mr. J. W. Pritchard, editor of the Christian Nation, was chairman. He took me by force and led me to the platform and demanded a speech. This society holds a monthly meeting.

J. M. Foster.

PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS DEFENDED.

Johnson's Creek, Wis.

Dear Editor:—The laudable object of the Christian Cynosure is thus defined: "to expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the church of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption." Every branch of the Christian church should favor your noble effort, and every Christian man and woman in our grand country should hail with joy your work. None of the many denominations of the Christian church in the United States is so fully in harmony with you in the fight against the lodge, as is the Lutheran church. All the Lutheran synods, if indeed Lutheran they be, have openly declared against all secret societies and practice what they teach.

Now this same Lutheran church has won a great victory against an "anti-Christian movement," that had assailed the holiest of our treasures, that had nothing less in view than destruction of the liberty of conscience as well as of the liberty of our republican government. This deadly foe was the so-called Bennett law. Much misrepresentation has been going on about the opposition against this law. Even the Cynosure had several correspondents that lamented the fall of the famous law. In a correspondence in the Cynosure of March 5, Rev. Galloway says, "the Bennett law is so just and beneficent in its designs!" Last fall a Methodist conference at Whitewater, Wis., passed resolutions against the opponents and in favor of the Bennett law. Lutheran ministers have been served with all kinds of by-names in ecclesiastical as well as in political papers. Yet I venture to say that most of the defenders of the Bennett law either were enemies of the Christian church, or Know-Nothings, who never carefully read neither the law itself nor the objections raised against the same.

I suppose you, as a Christian, concur with the Lutheran church in the doctrine that every child ought to receive a thorough Christian education, fully as fundamental as his secular education, and that this education should commence as early in childhood as possible. See Matt. 28: 19, 20; Mark 10: 14; 2 Tim. 3: 15; Eph. 6: 4; Matt. 6: 33. Our belief is, that no Sunday-school can accomplish this great task; that only regular daily instruction for the whole period of childhood can bring about that noble perfection which Paul praises in his pupil Timothy. This your and our forefathers knew well enough; therefore they made religion the principal branch taught in their every-day schools. This the missionaries know: for their first care is to establish schools in which to teach the little ones the glad tidings of the blessed Saviour. This they know and practice in all other Christian countries except France and the United States. Why is this so in our country? Well, for one, the state is not responsible for the spiritual welfare of its citizens; it is not the duty of the state to levy taxes for the building of churches, paying of ministers and evangelists, etc. And even if the political government were willing to hire a teacher to instruct children in religion, of what denomination should that teacher be taken? of the Catholic? then the Lutheran would not be satisfied; or of the Episcopal? then the Methodist would object. Public or district schools must be maintained; they are a necessity; and every loyal citizen must willingly help to support them; but they cannot give a Christian education; religion can never be taught in a public school under our present form of government.

These facts being evident, the Lutheran congregations deem it their duty to establish parochial schools, in which to educate their children according to Christ's commandments. Most of these schools are model schools. They are taught by teachers who have carefully prepared for their office, and who make teaching their lifetime busi-

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Dr. Fulton—School readers—Legislative doings—The endowment orders—Other matters—The military drill in the Loyal Legion.

Last week, for the first time, the British American left out Dr. Fulton's Music Hall sermon. Perhaps none regretted more his severe attack on that large branch of the Christian church which advocates infant baptism than did many of his good Baptist brethren who heard him class them with "pagans" and Romanists. The doctor needs a little more of the tolerance he condemns in Mr. Moody. It would be much better for the cause he champions; for he is not the most discreet of men, and often forgets that firing into the ranks of his friends is an excellent way of helping the foe. Sectarianism—at least when it takes the offensive, as with Dr. Fulton—is the greatest of all hindrances to reform work. The resignation of a Charlestown pastor, Rev. Mr. Twombly, discouraged with his unsuccessful labors in a district where the Protestant churches are said to be losing ground rapidly, with a corresponding increase of Romanism, seems to lend emphasis to the truth that the fight against Catholicism can never be won on denominational lines.

Pres. Eliot, of Harvard College, condemns unsparingly the mass of trash which make up the school readers of to-day. A comparison with the readers of fifty years ago will show a sad deterioration in literary quality which makes it quite apparent that they are now got up, less in the interest of education than of rival publishers. I well remember that my first glimpse into the rich store-house of English literature was obtained, when a mere child, from Sargent's readers; and how many in an earlier time received their first patriotic impulse from the Columbian Orator! Another reading book which I am told was used in schools in the opening part of this century was made up of selections from the Bible; but this was when the dropping of the Christian Scriptures from our public schools at the bidding of an arrogant, foreign priesthood was a thing happily undreamed of. Teachers were then supposed to know a little of everything, and the temptation to appear to know more than they really did, must have been great.

An amusing story on this point used to be related by an aged lady now gone to her rest. One of the girls having reached a difficult place in her knitting—sewing and knitting being then considered a regular part of the school routine—either in the simplicity or the wickedness of her heart, I am not sure which, took it to the master. He, poor man!—feeling that he must save his reputation at all hazards, took the knitting from his pupil's hand, looked it over with an expression of owl-like wisdom, and then gave it back to her with the information that "he should think it was time to begin to purl." This was not the first, and surely not the last time, that the use of a technical term has been found a very convenient cover for absolute ignorance.

The bill before the Massachusetts Legislature to repeal the prohibition of the public bar, has failed to pass; its opponents raising several points of orders by which they succeeded in getting it thrown out. Said "points of order" were the merest technicalities, of course, but enough for the purpose. It is curious how the most trifling thing will stop the passage of an important measure, while an unnecessary or thoroughly bad law will ride triumphant over every obstacle. Temperance people, though inclined at first to think that it did not matter very much whether a man took his drink standing up or sitting down, have altered their minds since they see that it is far from being an indifferent matter with the liquor men, who would scarcely have worked so hard and raised so much money to repeal a law which did not materially affect their interests.

Labor has also suffered a defeat. The bill to reduce the hours of work for women and minors in manufacturing and mechanical establishments was a measure that would doubtless have passed had not remonstrances poured in from the owners of woolen and cotton mills representing hundreds of millions of dollars. If the millionaire American "dearly loves a lord," I am inclined to think that the average legislator, especially the kind who smokes the highest priced cigars he can find at the State's expense, dearly loves the millionaire.

But more important than this or any other, unless it be the temperance question, is the bill relating to restrictive legislation as regards the fraternal orders and bond investment companies. The bill is said to be much more thorough than the New Hampshire act which gives the matter entirely over to the insurance commissioner, who may condemn any of these companies or pronounce them safe, according to his own sovereign will and pleasure—a rather dangerous power to place in the hands of one man. Of course the bill will be tinkered over and amended to such a degree as greatly to impair its original force if it should become a law; which is doubtful, as all these orders are banded together ready for the fight. Collectively, they can command a vast number of votes; and men with more political ambition than principle will be chary of offending their constituents who have invested in these concerns, and do not want to see their house of cards pulled down about their ears.

I am glad to see that Mrs. Rice, the national superintendent of Juvenile Work, has recommended the abolition of the military drill in the Loyal Legions. One of the features by which the lodge attracts is by pandering to the love of military display. Let the W. C. T. U. with its open methods show the youth of our land a more excellent way.

Elizabeth E. Flagg.

REFORM NEWS.

A SILENT CANDIDATE.

Dear Cynosure:—Since my last writing I have been at Portland, Grand Ledge, Okemos and Williamson. While at Grand Ledge I went to Wacoosta and called upon Mr. Nelson Daniels. He is a staunch friend of the N. C. A. and financially aided the cause.

From Williamson I went into the country and spent the Sabbath with Rev. Bro. Bush, and preached three times and then canvassed for the Cynosure. I called upon a brother by the name of Burton, who related his experience in Masonry. He was an irreligious and profane young man when Masons began to entice him to join the lodge. One of the Masons, that he might have a better opportunity to influence him, arranged to change works with him. In the course of their conversation the Mason twice remarked, "I tell you, you will have to take a big oath to become a Mason."

The night he was made an Entered Apprentice Mason, his initiation passed off smoothly until he came to the clause in the oath where he was to agree to have his throat cut across and his tongue torn out. Mr. Burton had repeated the oath after the Master until he came to the throat-cutting clause, when suddenly he became silent. They waited for him to agree to have his throat cut and his tongue torn out, but they waited in vain.

After a long pause, the Master said, "He does not refuse; by silence he consents." The lodge then adjourned and the brethren gathered in little clusters and seemed to be in consultation. The lodge was again called, and they made an excuse for giving him the second degree. This, like the first initiation, proceeded smoothly until they came to the point in the oath where he was to agree to have his left breast torn open and his heart and vitals taken out if he did not keep his Masonic covenant. But Mr. Burton was as much opposed to having his heart torn out as he had been to having his throat cut. Again he became silent.

Mr. Burton thinks that the Masonic brethren came to the conclusion that it was not pure bashfulness that prevented him from repeating after the Master, but a settled purpose not to agree, in any contingency, to his own murder. So they never invited him to be made a Master Mason, and to this day he has only a cowan's knowledge of the sublime mysteries of that degree. When speaking of the throat-cutting and tongue-pulling clause, in the oath of an Entered Apprentice Mason, he said that though he was a profane young man at that time, the oath seemed so horrible to him that he felt a cold chill to the crown of his head. "I cannot imagine," said Mr. Burton, "how a man who has believed on the Lord Jesus Christ and received the Spirit of Christ into his heart, could take such an oath."

The Entered Apprentice Mason swears ever to conceal as well as never to reveal Masonry. Mr. Finney saw no way by which he could conceal what has been already revealed, only by duplicity and falsehood. Just think of a Christian man agreeing to have his throat cut and his tongue torn out if he does not do what an astute man like Pres. Charles G. Finney saw no way of doing without being guilty of duplicity and falsehood!

Is it not time that we lift up our voices like trumpets and cry aloud and spare not until at last the churches are brought to realize the horrible nature of the Masonic covenants?

Mr. Burton also spoke of a funeral that he attended. The deceased was an Odd-fellow. He had been addicted to strong drink and to profane swearing. The minister who preached his funeral sermon came into the pulpit in the regalia of an Odd-fellow. In the course of his remarks he exhorted his brethren to emulate the example of their deceased brother; and assured them that in doing so they would make sure of a place at the right hand of God. How long will the American churches tolerate such shameful prostitution in their ministry! Should they longer withhold their rebuke will not the stones cry out? I had a lengthy conversation to-day with a Mason who has been converted to Christ. I explained the religious philosophy of Masonry to him and showed its antagonism to the Gospel of Christ, and analyzed the covenants of Masonry and showed their sinfulness. I also showed that the covenants of Masonry are neither legally nor morally binding, and that they have not even the force of a bond of honor. Masonry and its unclean brood of kindred orders must not be permitted to dominate and corrupt the American churches.

The heathen world is looking to us for missionaries to teach them the way of life. We should send them men who have not bowed the knee to this modern Baal.

Who will help to do this missionary work at home to prepare the way for missionary work abroad?

C. F. Hawley.

THE U. P. CHURCHES OF NEW YORK.

160 W. 36th St., New York, Apr. 22.

Dear Cynosure:—It was my privilege to address friends in the First and Second United Presbyterian churches, Jersey City, on the Sabbath. Rev. Martin, pastor of the First church, is a young man of much ability and zeal. He makes no compromise on reform lines. Dr. Armstrong of the Second church, being founder of the church of which he is pastor, has naturally drawn those of kindred faith. His thirteen reasons why a Christian should not be a Mason, published in pamphlet, have been widely circulated by the N. C. A. Any who have not read them should do so. If a person is not convinced that Freemasonry is an evil to be shunned and opposed after reading these reasons, he is a hopeless case. I gained much strength by conversing with this father in Israel who has labored so faithfully and long in the Master's cause. As his eyes grow dim to the things of earth, may they see more clearly the things revealed in Christ.

Yesterday I was very heartily welcomed in a meeting of the New York Presbytery of the United Presbyterian church, and invited to address this body as I might desire. Several invitations were given for lectures, all of which I shall not be able to fill this trip. The vexed question of "organ or no organ" is by no means dead in this presbytery. It was reported to presbytery that the Hoboken congregation had petitioned their elders to introduce an organ. The elders believing the use of the organ in worship wrong, had refused the congregation's request. The congregation, said to have about forty members, then requested, through their delegates, that presbytery appoint new elders favorable to the introduction of the organ, and excuse those not in harmony with the congregation. A committee was appointed who nominated three new elders. Their report was adopted by a small majority, the vote standing 15 to 12. A brother wearing a gold ring argued that he believed "the only hope of the salvation of Hoboken congregation" was the introduction of an organ. To one who does not believe that the salvation of men depends on any human agency, such an argument sounds strangely, to say the least. An elder in this brother's congregation is responsible for the assertion that he has a number of secret society members. When asked by your agent if there would be an opportunity to speak in his church against the lodge, he replied that he had his own way of dealing with that subject. He never allowed a temperance, National Reform or any kind of a reform lecture in his church. He considered himself amply able to tend to that matter. While I would not question this brother's ability to present what his people might need in reform lines, yet I find some, like the dog in the manger, who would neither eat the hay himself or let the ox eat it. The same elder, who said there were a number of secret society men in his church, said the pastor never spoke on the subject. God forbid that I should try to get into churches to speak where I am not wanted. There are plenty where I am. But how are the people to know the truth unless it is in some way brought to them? I am sure this brother would not claim the only hope of the salvation of his congregation is in the big organ which they have.

My appointments are as follows: To-night, 7th Ave. U. P. Congregation, New York; evening April 23, Free Methodist church, Brooklyn; evening April 24, Covenanter church, Brooklyn; Sabbath afternoon, U. P. church, Rev. Andrews, pastor, Brooklyn; Sabbath evening, U. P. church, near Brooklyn, Rev. Shaw, pastor: evening April 28, Lutheran church, Perth Amboy, N. J., Rev. Skov, pastor. I shall probably address Bro. Shaw's people again on Friday evening, May 2.

Rev. Biddle of Jersey City, and Rev. Smith of Patterson, N. J., are among those who showed me much kindness, and would have helped arrange for lectures had not my time been so completely taken. Let us who find joy in the service of Christ, never look back, but forward "to the pride of our high calling." The battle may be fierce, but the victory is sure. O, that the things of this world may appear of less importance, and the things of eternity more. W. B. Stoddard.

Notice.—The postoffice addresses of the following named persons are desired. Will any one who knows, kindly forward such addresses to this office. Prof. J. A. Edgren, Rev. J. D. Brown, Wm. H. Morrill, S. V. Poole, J. M. Kent, Rev. M. S. Drury.

Correspondence.

KNOWING GOD.

Editor Cynosure:—The article on the Knowableness of God is perhaps open to discussion. Suppose we consider that:—

1. "Now we know in part" rather than do not know.

2. A reasonable ground of belief is knowledge. To be "well-assured" is to know. This is the common usage of the word know.

3. The distinction between reason and faith, knowledge and belief, "science and religion," are not scientifically or correctly made.

4. Between two things so related that the denial of one is the admission of the other, the one that is most easily believed is necessarily believed, and necessary belief is knowledge.

5. We "know" God, partly because we cannot rationally deny him and partly because of his appreciable manifestations, which we name after similar human relationships: paternal, loving, wise, omnipotent.

6. There is no interest or glad assurance in the fact that God knows us—in truth, hardly anything in the phrase, excepting as it assumes our knowledge of him to the extent of all practical present necessity. If I know who he is who knows me, I am interested and blessed with the thought of being known by him.

I care nothing about being known by a person whom I know nothing about. To know about a person is to know him in a very practical and large sense. The writer had a saucy letter from an editress last year who prided herself on being an "agnostic," and no more a child in religion, believing bear stories and "fish stories,"—not one of the "old fogy preachers." The things she didn't know were of course enough to entitle her to the name "agnostic," if she used it modestly, but it was equally evident that she knew enough about God to be classed with those of whom it is said: "The invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, his eternal power and godhead; so that they are without excuse.

"Because that when they knew God they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful, but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened. Professing themselves to be wise they became fools." A. O. C.

CITIES ON THE HUDSON.

New York, April 20, 1891.

Editor Christian Cynosure:—Last Friday I visited Newburg, on the Hudson. Its location is peerless and the views up and down the great river are supurb. It is cursed with 200 saloons. The churches, the Y. M. C. A., and the W. C. T. U., raise only a feeble cry against them.

On Sabbath morning and evening I preached in Trinity M. E. church, Rev. Dr. Longachre, pastor. The "grip" is a prevailing epidemic here and this brother was one of the victims. So by the invitation of the official board, I filled his pulpit. He has a congregation of 800 and they are enthusiastic workers. One of their members, Mr. Francis Gouldy, took my heart by his hearty approval of the sentiments of the sermon. He is a man of great wealth and he uses it in the Lord's work. For thirty years he has been partially paralyzed. He formerly lived in New York City, being engaged in business there. His son took to drink, and one night came home drunk, attacked his father with a knife, killed his sister and went upstairs and shot himself. Mr. Gouldy's injury resulted in paralysis and he has a man employed to take care of him. He is enthusiastic in temperance reform, Sabbath reform, missions at home and abroad, and in every good work. He gives $500 to the congregation's foreign mission collection each time and $300 per year for their church work in Newburg.

At 3:30 I preached in the Second R. P. church, Rev. J. R. Thompson, pastor. Bro. Thompson was licensed to preach thirty-nine years ago that day. You would not think he had been in the service half that time. His congregation is large and active. They have the zeal of their efficient pastor. Work always tells. His daughter, Miss Anna, is a leader in the W. C. T. U. work here. She has a mission for poor boys. One of her converts is a young Portuguese. He is a miracle of grace. The transformation in his life is wonderful. His prayer is fulfilled: "Dear Father, make my life beautiful. Teach me so to live and love and influence, that through my example, all with whom I come in contact may see thy glory shining through, and may wish for no higher good than to be like Thee; amen."

On Monday I came to New York. I was surprised to find the English monk, "Father Ignatius," conducting services at the Y. M. C. A. hall on 23d street. He claims to be a semi-Protestant. But many of the secular papers speak boldly of him as practicing a Jesuitical scheme to lead away the souls of the ignorant and thoughtless.

On Monday evening I attended a temperance meeting in the 23d street R. P. church, of which my brother, Rev. F. M. Foster, is pastor. The first paper was read by Mr. Joseph Colwell on "The Responsibility of the Nation for the Liquor Traffic." He insisted that in licensing or taxing the business the nation was a partner in the criminal traffic. A firm in Boston has entered into a contract for seven years to send 5,000 gallons of whisky per day to the Congo Valley. Our government collects $95,000,000 per year revenue from whisky. For that sum it legalizes a crime that costs our nation directly and indirectly $2,000,000,000 annually. The State of Ohio collects $4,000,000 tax per year on the saloon. For this it sustains a saloon system that costs our commonwealth $70,000,000 annually. When will we learn wisdom? The second paper was read by the pastor's wife, Mrs. Cecil Foster, on "Rum and Missions." She pictured the work of missions in the Congo, and then described the ruin that is being wrought there by rum. In 1884, there were 8,000,000 gallons of rum sent to the Congo. Dr. Clark said, he had seen thousands of girls lying drunk around the traders' wagons. She quoted a touching letter written by Malike, Emise of Nupe, to Bishop Crowthers of the Niger. He plead with him as a father to keep rum out of his country for it was destroying his people. The appeal made our heart ache. The last paper was read by Robert McNeel on "Personal Responsibility for the Drink Habit." The man who does not practice total abstinence now is not following Christ. We are our brother's keeper even though he be given to drink. And by prayer and personal effort we should reclaim him.

Mr. J. W. Pritchard, editor of the Christian Nation, was chairman. He took me by force and led me to the platform and demanded a speech. This society holds a monthly meeting.

J. M. Foster.

PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS DEFENDED.

Johnson's Creek, Wis.

Dear Editor:—The laudable object of the Christian Cynosure is thus defined: "to expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the church of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption." Every branch of the Christian church should favor your noble effort, and every Christian man and woman in our grand country should hail with joy your work. None of the many denominations of the Christian church in the United States is so fully in harmony with you in the fight against the lodge, as is the Lutheran church. All the Lutheran synods, if indeed Lutheran they be, have openly declared against all secret societies and practice what they teach.

Now this same Lutheran church has won a great victory against an "anti-Christian movement," that had assailed the holiest of our treasures, that had nothing less in view than destruction of the liberty of conscience as well as of the liberty of our republican government. This deadly foe was the so-called Bennett law. Much misrepresentation has been going on about the opposition against this law. Even the Cynosure had several correspondents that lamented the fall of the famous law. In a correspondence in the Cynosure of March 5, Rev. Galloway says, "the Bennett law is so just and beneficent in its designs!" Last fall a Methodist conference at Whitewater, Wis., passed resolutions against the opponents and in favor of the Bennett law. Lutheran ministers have been served with all kinds of by-names in ecclesiastical as well as in political papers. Yet I venture to say that most of the defenders of the Bennett law either were enemies of the Christian church, or Know-Nothings, who never carefully read neither the law itself nor the objections raised against the same.

I suppose you, as a Christian, concur with the Lutheran church in the doctrine that every child ought to receive a thorough Christian education, fully as fundamental as his secular education, and that this education should commence as early in childhood as possible. See Matt. 28: 19, 20; Mark 10: 14; 2 Tim. 3: 15; Eph. 6: 4; Matt. 6: 33. Our belief is, that no Sunday-school can accomplish this great task; that only regular daily instruction for the whole period of childhood can bring about that noble perfection which Paul praises in his pupil Timothy. This your and our forefathers knew well enough; therefore they made religion the principal branch taught in their every-day schools. This the missionaries know: for their first care is to establish schools in which to teach the little ones the glad tidings of the blessed Saviour. This they know and practice in all other Christian countries except France and the United States. Why is this so in our country? Well, for one, the state is not responsible for the spiritual welfare of its citizens; it is not the duty of the state to levy taxes for the building of churches, paying of ministers and evangelists, etc. And even if the political government were willing to hire a teacher to instruct children in religion, of what denomination should that teacher be taken? of the Catholic? then the Lutheran would not be satisfied; or of the Episcopal? then the Methodist would object. Public or district schools must be maintained; they are a necessity; and every loyal citizen must willingly help to support them; but they cannot give a Christian education; religion can never be taught in a public school under our present form of government.

These facts being evident, the Lutheran congregations deem it their duty to establish parochial schools, in which to educate their children according to Christ's commandments. Most of these schools are model schools. They are taught by teachers who have carefully prepared for their office, and who make teaching their lifetime business, with whom teaching is not only a transitory occupation, as with most of the teachers of district schools. The pupils, when they leave the parochial school, have the proficiency of expressing their thoughts in German as well as in English. Moreover, almost all the pupils of parochial schools after their confirmation attend public schools yet for several years. The communities prosper under this state of things. Wisconsin stands third in the rank of education. Public safety is not endangered any more here than elsewhere. You don't find any more tramps in Wisconsin than in Maine or Massachusetts. Crime does not prosper any better here than in Virginia. There is no more pauperism in Wisconsin than in Rhode Island.

All of a sudden the Bennett law springs into existence. Where does it come from? What is it aimed at? What is its object? The defenders of the law tell us, "it is meant to help the poor ignorant German boy." How charitable a work! How suddenly this kind of charity has been born! Again, to create a sentiment, the friends of the Bennett law proclaim that they want to "protect the English language." How ridiculous! As if the English language needed any protection! As if English could not take care of itself! Has not every child, that is born in America, the inclination and love for the English language? Do not our boys and girls converse in "United States" everywhere?

The object of the Bennett law was quite a different one: it was not only meant as a blow against "Germanism" in general, but especially as a blow against the Lutheran church! Take the first section of the law; it requires that the child should visit a school in the city, town or district in which it resides. This clause certainly was not accidental; its originator knew what he meant by it; he had a fixed object in view; he knew that those children who attend parochial schools, very often come together from four to seven different districts; this he was going to stop.

Section 2 of the Bennett law fixes the penalty "for every neglect" at not less than three nor more than twenty dollars; it states furthermore that "failure for each week or portion of a week —shall constitute a distinct offense." Then the school board or school directors are authorized to excuse a child from school (only authorized, not bound to excuse) if it is shown to their satisfaction: (a) that the person neglecting to send a child is not able to send such child; (b) "that instruction has otherwise been given (mark: it does not read, is being given) for a like period of time;" (c) "that such child has already acquired such elementary branches of learning;" (d) "that his physical or mental condition is such as to render attention inexpedient or impracticable." Add to this section 6, in which it is stated that "prosecutions under this act shall only be instituted and carried on by the authority of such boards and shall be brought in the name of said boards;" section 7, that "jurisdiction to enforce the penalties herein described in this act is hereby conferred on justices of the peace and police magistrates."

I do not intend to dwell at length on the legal side of the foregoing sections, showing how they tend to "pervert the administration of justice and corrupt our republican government" by denying the right of an honest trial by jury, and by giving to a school board (very often incompetent, ignorant or malevolent) the right and power to impose heavy penalties ad libitum—I only want to show the religious side. Suppose it so happens that the school board of the district in which a Lutheran parent resides, is composed of an infidel, a Puritan and a Methodist. Neither of these observe either Good Friday or Easter Monday. But the Lutheran father deems it his duty to take his child to church on both of these days; he cannot, however, show "to the satisfaction of said board" the necessity of his child's absence from school; so he incurs a penalty of not less than six nor more than forty dollars! You object, "This will never occur!" But it may occur; the Bennett law creates the possibility of such a case. Don't forget that fanaticism of an infidel or an intolerant bigotist goes far sometimes.

Lastly, take section 5 of the Bennett law: "No school shall be regarded as a school under this act, unless therein be taught as part of the elementary education of children, reading, writing, arithmetic and United States history in the English language."

Suppose a Lutheran congregation has its parochial school, in which, beside religion as the fundamental branch, all the above named branches are taught, and geography also; they are taught, however, in the German mother-tongue of the child—English not being neglected, special instruction in English being duly given—or in the parochial school all the above named branches are taught in English except one branch: such schools could not stand before the forum of the Bennett law; they would not be schools; and the Lutheran parent would have to take his children out of such Christian school and send them to an irreligious if not anti-Christian school.

This is the Bennett law, "so just and beneficent in its designs," so much praised and petted. And who were its defenders? All the German infidels and turners, the English infidels, the lodgeman, the Mason and a great part of the Anglo-American ministry, so closely connected with the lodge. It would be interesting to find out how far the secret societies were concerned in this so-called compulsory education movement in the different States. Certainly the lodge looks with very ungracious eyes upon the Lutheran church, which has so openly and boldly declared war against this part of anti-christendom; and the Lutheran parochial school can find no grace with lodgemen, because it teaches the youth to abhor secret societies. Now, thanks be to God, for the present at least the battle is fought and the Lutheran church has won back the liberty of religious exercises;—the Catholic church has cut but a small figure in this fight, as almost all Catholic citizens have ever voted the Democratic ticket. Would that every effort to destroy liberty of conscience and political liberty should so fully and mercilessly be repulsed!

In conclusion, let me say a few words yet to the writer of "School Politics in Wisconsin" of March 5. That reverend gentleman deeply laments the decision of the "Supreme Court" regarding the reading of the Bible in public schools. That famous decision affects the Lutheran church very little. Reading of the Bible for five or ten minutes at the opening of school will not and cannot give to a child that necessary fundamental Christian education. To accomplish this we have our parochial schools, which we mean to maintain, without any help from the State, by our own means, if God helps us. But we shall ever be ready also to protect our schools and to fight against any and every attempt of the State to mix in our church affairs and to take away our liberty of worshiping God according to the dictates of our conscience. And so we trust to prove valiant Christians as well as worthy citizens of our great country; even if we be "picked up from every port," even if we be "surrounded by the fogs of error, ignorance and superstition," as your reverend correspondent puts it. Then alone we will be able to withstand the great tribulations of the end, and the final movements of the beast.

J. Becker.

DR. NORRIS AS AN ABOLITIONIST.

Kirwin, Kansas, Apr. 17, 1891.

Editor Cynosure:—I read what was said in the Cynosure about Dr. J. N. Norris of Birmingham, Iowa. I knew him in 1845 and 1846. I became much interested in him for the noble stand he took on the slavery question. He was then, as well as myself, a young man.

We held an anti-slavery meeting in Birmingham. Rev. Joab Comstock, Rev. Cartright and myself gave addresses. The meeting continued two days. There was much excitement and large audiences. A general discussion followed. An Episcopal Methodist man advocated slavery to be right from the Bible. When I replied, the M. E. people contradicted me from every corner and all over the house. The whole congregation rose to their feet. The excitement was intense. It seemed for a time that we should be mobbed. Dr. Norris stood up nobly for the anti-slavery cause and the lecturers. He did not fear his reputation.

The next morning after our meeting, a pro-slavery man, prominent in the place, met Dr. Norris, and said, "I will never employ a man of your principles in my family." Dr. N. replied, "Do you think I will give up my principles for the sake of puking and purging your family. I tell you if you do think so, you are terribly mistaken; I am not such a man."

If we had had enough such men as that, slavery might have been put down without the awful sacrifice of human life caused by the war. I shall never forget Dr. Norris. He is a noble man, such as God loves, and the devil hates.

R. F. Markham,
(Pastor of Congregational Church.)

PITH AND POINT.

THE DEMORALIZING LODGE IN COLLEGES.

The pastor of the M. E. church at Burlington Junction, Mo., I. M. Kinney, is a graduate of the University at Evanston, Ill. I preached to his people on a recent Sabbath and talked with him on the secret society question and Pres. C. A. Blanchard's lecture before the Massasoits. I found him a live man and wide awake to the danger from secret societies. He said their dominating influence over the faculty at Evanston demanded that their members be graduated when they had not taken the prescribed course. I met on the train to-day a student of Grinnell College, Iowa. who said that the faculty of that institution had prohibited all secret fraternities among the students, as demoralizing and dangerous to the college government.—M. A. Gault.

HE DOES WHAT HE CAN.

I received your postal card awhile since requesting my name as a helper to obtain subscribers for the Cynosure. Well, I would be so glad to help. I have been a reader of the paper since and before the Chicago fire, and I have made frequent efforts to obtain subscribers and have succeeded in a few cases, but nothing in comparison with my desire. Now I am well advanced in years, shall close my seventy-eighth (if I live) in one week, and my wife is aged and an invalid. But I can send you a list of those who ought to take the paper, hoping they may read and become subscribers.—W. B. Loomis.

HOW SOME PREACHERS ADVERTISE US.

My attention was called to your paper by a reverend gentleman saying, "I received a copy of the Cynosure, also a letter asking my opinion of secret societies. I gave my opinion, for which they will never ask again." He also said, "I do not belong to any secret society. To any one asking me, shall I go in or not, would say no." But on the following Sabbath he condemned the R. P. church (and that in no gentle terms) for their opposition to secret societies. What did he mean?—I. N. Harsh.

FOR THE CONFERENCE.

I would be glad to add my name to the number of those who would call a convention in Chicago in June next—but my pecuniary state will not allow me to be present, and my influence must be small. I am greatly alarmed for religion and for our country, when I read of the secret societies and know they bring unending expense upon their members, consume their energies as well as their means, and render them unfit for the life of entire consecration to Christ. The oaths they take are inexpressibly shocking, the prayers of their ritual are a delusion, the purposes they seek are only fit for darkness, and the snare they spring upon their unsuspecting victims, is the nearly immovable grip of the great destroyer. I hope the convention will be held and that it may receive a blessing and diffuse a resistless influence over the land, and over the world in favor of open-handed aggression against all secret folly and all deeds that shrink from the light.—T. S. Hubbard, Stockbridge, Va.

INSURANCE.

I have watched the press, and conversed with many insurance agents for some thirty years; but have never seen or heard a single argument advanced in favor of insurance without assuming that it is in accordance with God's ways of supplying the needs of his people. The opposition given to this subject has been but very little, even less than that was given to secret societies some thirty years ago; or slavery fifty years ago. It has slumbered wonderfully, and needs to be awakened. I would like to get hte people to compare insurance with God's promises; its expensiveness compared with the savings bank.—Samuel Harper.

DON'T DESPISE THE DAY OF SMALL THINGS.

I send one dollar to be used wherever in your judgment it will do the most good. It would be a pleasure to make it more, but circumstances will not permit, and because I cannot do a "great thing" I do not want to feel indisposed to do a small one. Wishing that every effort for good may be prospered, I remain yours for the cause of righteousness.—John Pierce.

THE CONDEMNATION.

I have "become attached to the paper," and if it continues to advocate the same principles, shall probably take it as long as I take any paper: for I believe secret organizations are extremely injurious to the best interests of all the people, but most especially to their own members. Their teaching is false, their initiations degrading and their practices often unjust and cruel. Great numbers of murders have been committed by them in the last thirty years, and often their tyranny is outrageous. They are every way dangerous. I will do what I can for their suppression.—Jacob Davis.

CALL

FOR A

CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE

ON THE

SECRET LODGE SYSTEM.

We, the undersigned, believe that there is no good which can be accomplished, in times of peace and in a free land, by secret societies which cannot be secured more easily and perfectly by open organization.

We believe that much of the time and money so greatly needed by the cause of our Lord Jesus Christ is wasted in the large and unprofitable expenses of secret orders.

We believe that the union of Christians with men of the world in oath-bound organizations is forbidden by the Word of God and always injurious to the spiritual life of those Christians who enter such societies.

We believe that some oath-bound societies are clearly hostile to the peace and welfare of our country.

We therefore invite all those who sympathize with us in the views above expressed, to meet in "A Conference of Christians," to be held under the auspices of "The National Christian Association," in Central Music Hall, Chicago, May 14, 1891, at 9 A. M., to consult and pray respecting the best method of saving men, the churches, and our land from the injurious influence of such societies.

Joseph Cook, Boston.
Rev. James Tompkins, D.D., Chicago, Cong'l Supt. Home Missions, Illinois.
Rev. T. D. Wallace, D.D., Pastor 8th Presbyterian Ch., Chicago.
Rev. Geo. S. Dickerman, D.D., Pastor 1st Cong'l Church, Amherst, Mass.
Rev. Thomas B. Hyde, Pastor "Moody Church," Chicago.
Rev. O. P. Gifford, D.D., Pastor Bap. Church, Boston, Mass.

CONGREGATIONAL.

C Christiansen, Danway, Ill.
A E Allaben, Payson, "
A W Safford, Rock Falls, "
I N Tomes, Geneva, "
I Todd, La Salle, "
M M Langley, Bloomington, "
G M Williams, Adams, "
D W Wise, Granville, " E Colton, Roscoe, "
H Day, Glencoe, "
D E Holmes, Stark, "
A Thomson, Bartlett, " N Smith, Geneseo, "
J R Kaye, Amboy, "
C C Warner, Alton, "
Wm Smith, Bureau, "
M Post, Sterling, "
R L McCord, Sheffield, "
J L Fonda, Rantoul, "
A Hyde, Galesburg, " L N Stratton, Waukegan, "
G R Milton, Elgin, "
L Taylor, Rutland, "
W D A Matthews, Onarga, "
C Evans, Chandlerville, "
G E Hunter, Seward, "
E L Hill, Anna, "
A Harper, Port Byron, "
A W Parry, Spring Valley, "
J N Bedford, Norris City, "
L F Vulliet, Highland, "
W J Brown, Chicago, "
T B Hyde, Chicago, "
Wm Burgess, Canton, "
J Brewer, Wheaton, "
L W Hainer, Newark, New Jersey.
C T Shattuck, Amite City, Louisiana.
J E Bjorklund, Pierre, Wash.
George Baker, Kalama, "
J Howell, Almira, "
C L Hall, Ft. Berthold, N. Dakota.
M R Stimsen, Hope, "
G Staff, Sweden, Ohio.
M K Pasco, Belleville, "
S B Beard, Bowling Green, Ohio.
G Stanley Pope, Harriman, Tenn.
A A Myers, Cumberland Gap, "
S E Lathrop, Sherwood, "
B A Imes, Memphis, "
D I Hanford, Long Pine, Nebraska.
S W Johnson, Catalpa, Neb.
E D Seward, Laclede, Miss.
H S Mills, Huron, South Dakota.
O T Nelson, Sioux Falls, " N Netzler, Eureka, "
J R Mclean, Macon, Ga.

Rev. A. J. Gordon, D.D., Pastor Bap. Church, Boston, Mass.
Prof. H. M. Scott, D.D., Cong'l Theological Sem'y, Chicago.
Col. George R. Clark, Supt. Pacific Garden Mission, Chicago.
Rev. John Henry Barrows, D.D., Pastor 1st Presbyterian Ch., Chicago.
Prof. James R. Boise, D.D., Baptist Theological Sem'y, Chicago.
W A Benedict, Orange Park, Florida.
J O Tasker, Linwood, Neb.
A Willey, Northfield, Minn.
S L Gerould, Hollis, N H
A L Gridley, Kidder, Mo.
G L Shull, Harlan, Iowa.
H L Marsh, Fairfield, "
B Adkins, Bloomington, Wis.
J B Clark, Ellis, Mass.
W T Briggs, East Douglas, Mass.
S Hopley, Lee, "
E Harmon, Wilmington, "
D Wight, Natick, "
O T Dean, Holbrook, "
G S Dickerman, Amherst, "
A J Chittenden, Woodbine, Ky.
W D Hart, Wiltsee, Conn.
E B Clemmer, Leona, Kan.
J E Storm, Clarks, Neb.
H W Houlding, Riverside, Cal.
L Wilson, Cynthiana, Ind.
J Ordway, Salem, Conn.
J D Pettigrew, Paris, Texas.
J Marks, Kellogg, Iowa.
M. A Kelsey, Hart, Mich.
L Ellms, Freedom, Maine.
E L Anderson, Ashley, Mich.
E Martin, Crested, Butte, Colo.
J M Ashley, Ithaca, Mich.
J H Jenkins, San Bernardino, Cal,
W P Hamilton, Childersburg, Ala.
W J Skelton, Wilmington, N. C.
M Jackson, Beaufort, "
M R Carlisle, Dodd City, Texas.
M E Sloan, Woodville, Ala.
M Thompson, Helena, Texas
J S Walker, Rutland, Ga.
C Farmsworth, Williamsburg, Ky.
W Callen, Burroughs Station, Ga.
J W Freeman, Dudley, N. C.
C W Preston, Verdon, Neb.
A M Beming, Corning, Iowa.
J F Frederickson, Helena, Montana.
A S Kedzie, Grand Haven, Mich.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

E Shaw Doverport, Iowa.
W R Baldridge, St. Charles, Iowa.
A Pattison, Birmingham, "
C H Mitchell, Keota, "
C C Potter, Scotch Grove, "
J C Scott, Knoxville, "
C T McCoughan, Winterset, "
J C White, De Witt, "
J Parker, Cedar Rapids, "
J Calhoun, Indianola, "
S F Clark, Oskaloosa, " U P Wood, St Charles, "
S R McLaughlin, Elvira, "

P Swan, Burlington, Iowa.
L Proudfoot, Albia, "
J A McCalimout, Newton, "
D R Mitchell, Orilla, "
J M Weeder, St Charles, "
S T Hersee, Corning, "
H P Jackson, Greenfield, Ohio.
J A Wilson, Wooster, "
J P Lytle, Sago, "
J C Roe, Kenton, "
R B Harsha, Gavers, "
W R Hutchinson, Savannah. "
S M Krohn, College Corner, "
W R Jamison, Scio, "
J G Kennedy, Wellsville, "
H T Leiper, Moor's Salt Works, "
John Bell, Hayesville, "
W T Warnock, Summerfield, Kan.
A K Straue, Idaville, Ind.
H C Marshall, Rock Island, Ill.
J B Galloway, Vernon Wis.
J D Smith, Lodi, "
T M Chalmers, Lawrence, Kan.
W T Ferguson, Sunbeam, Ill.
J Boyd, Polk, Conn.
D S Kennedy. Sandwich, Ill.
O S Marrow, Lincoln, Neb.
W P McNary, Tarkio, Mo.
J W Cleland, Peotone, Ill.
W M Butler, Martin, Mich.
W J Buchanan, Media, Ill.
O G Buckett, Dakota, Ill.
J Ingles, Scotland, Indiana.
J Cleland, Chicago, Ill.
W H French, Rushville, Ind.
A Mayer, Bloomington, "
R S McClenahan, Gordon, Neb.
J T Wilson, Monmouth, Ill.
H McCormick, Rankin, Ill.
J Harper, Smithville, Ill.

REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN.

R W Chestnut, Marissa, Ill.
M A Gault, Blanchard, Iowa.
J Hannah, Hampshire, Ill.
T P Robb, Linton, Iowa.
J C K Milligan, New York, N. Y.
J S T Milligan, Denison, Kan.
J M Favis, New Concord, Ohio.
C D Trumbull, Morning Sun, Iowa.
J S Thompson, Utica, Ohio.

PRESBYTERIAN.

C H Cook, Sacaton, Arizona Ter.
D Riggs, Senecaville, Ohio.
Wm R Park, Alexandra, Neb.
S Hodge, West Union, Iowa.
S C Dodd, Randolph, Ia.
J D Owens, Spratt, Ohio.
B F Worrell, Glenwood, Ill.
C R Hunt, Colfax, Iowa.
W A Service, Howell, Mich.
W Parker, Altona, Ill.
N Hughes, Cleveland, Ohio.
T D Wallace, Chicago. Ill.
M H Jackson, Chi., "
J H Barrow, " "
E C Oggel, Pullman, "
J H Vander Hook, Chi., "
E Middleton, Austin, Ill.
R. D. Scott, Chicago, Ill.
Nels Rylander, " "

BAPTISTS.

E H Persen, Grandy Center, Iowa.
M L Brown, Antigo, Wis.
L A Hall, Council Bluffs, Iowa.
O P Gifford, Brooklyn, Mass.
L G Jordan, Decatur, Ill.
J L Barlow, Bloomington, Wis.
H W Tilden, Des Moines, Iowa.
A A Rohnstrom, Meriden, Conn.
L W Frink, West Boylston, Mass.
A D Freeman, Downers' Grove, Ill.
E W Hicks, Toulan, Ill.
N Dunn, La Salle, Ill.
C K W Howard, Wheaton, Ill.
J Griffin, Hortonville, Wis.
J Harley, Pottstown, Tenn.
T O Wold, Chicago, Ill.
J E Jackson, Chicago, Ill.
J Meier, Chicago, Ill.
J E Ambrose, Leaysone, Ill.
O G Engstrand, Chicago, Ill.
J H Austin, Goshen, Ind.
A R Myassuray, Clarinda, Iowa.
R Bosisto, Corning, Iowa.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTISTS.

J W Morton, Chicago, Ill.
G W Hills, Milton Junction, Wis.
S H Backcock, Walworth, Wis.
C A Burdick, Farina, Ill.
S R Wheeler, Dodge Centre, Minn.
J H Hurley, Welton, Iowa.
N Wardner, Milton Junction, Wis.
M H Ernst, Albion, Wis.
M G Stillman, Utica, Wis.
S Rumppus, Farmington, Ill.
G M Cottrill, Nortonville, Kansas.

(Continued on 12th page.)

PREMIUMS

FOR CYNOSURE SUBSCRIBERS.

Stanley's Adventures in the Wilds of Africa.

By Hon. J. T. Headley. A graphic account of the several expeditions of Henry M. Stanley into the heart of the Dark Continent. It covers Stanley's expedition to find Livingstone, his crossing the continent and exploration of the Congo from its headwaters to the ocean, his establishment of the Congo Free State, and his last great achievement—the discovery and deliverance of Emin Pasha, in 1889. Twenty-five illustrations, 539 pages, 8vo., bound in cloth. A book of extraordinary interest to all classes of readers.

Price postpaid $1.00.

We send it free to every old subscriber who sends a new name with his renewal and $3.00. To anybody for two new subscribers for one year each. This offer is good only till June 1st, 1891.

Africa and its Explorers.

Livingstone, Stanley, and other celebrated travels and adventures in Africa. The interesting story of all the celebrated travellers in Africa, including Barth, Du Chaillu, Burton, Speke, Grant, Sir Samuel Baker, Schweinfurth. Moffat, Thomson, Livingstone, and Stanley. Naturally, it conveys more general information, and is of greater popular interest. than could be given in the narrative of any one traveller. This is a much larger book than "Stanley's Adventures." Numerous illustrations. A book every one needs to be up to the times.

We make an extraordinary offer of this book till June 1st, for three new subscribers, or for a renewal and two new names. All for one year each.

The "Uncle Tom's Cabin" of the Horse.

BLACK BEAUTY,

His Grooms and Companions.

This is the most popular book ever written on animal life. Over 100,000 sold in England and a greater number in America. Prof. Blaisdell of Beloit College has prepared a topical index.

This book is as entertaining as "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and is written with a great moral purpose,—to inculcate the principle of mercy to dumb animals. EVERY BOY SHOULD READ IT!

We will send it to every boy or girl who reads the Cynosure, if they will send us a new subscriber and $1.50 on or before June 1st, next.

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. M. H. Nichols, 520 Kearney St., San Francisco, Cal.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter, Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimball, New Market.
Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.
Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Berea, Ky.
Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Annawan, Ill.

The Christian Cynosure.

. BLANCHARD, Editor.
HENRY L. KELLOGG, Associate Editor and Publisher.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, APRIL 30, 1891.

We insert and recommend our readers to read the articles on Agnosticism in this number, and so close and take leave of that class of discussions,

"Which find no end in wandering mazes lost."

To us, Prof. Curtis seems to have uttered more sense and sound philosophy in one brief sentence than in all his article beside. That sentence is this: "The aids to faith are many, and the surest guide is the Bible itself."

But the readers of the Cynosure, especially our young readers, will find quoted the names of some leading German critics who have written of God and religion, inspired by the fumes of beer and tobacco; and who, with great learning and acute intellects, in universities founded for the Christian religion, have exalted philosophy and sunk the Bible under their day-dreams and "swimming fancies." The Protestant Reformation, since the middle of the sixteenth century, has not by their aid advanced one step in Europe, but rather gone back.

THE TEACHING OF ALBERT PIKE.

His teachings are the religion of the secret orders, so far as they have any, and the American press has lately given these teachings to the world, endorsed as no other ever were, by the owners of the temples of darkness and their worshipers.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean and the press generally tell us: "General Albert Pike was one of the most remarkable men of the century." "Had he lived at an earlier day he would have been taken for a wise man or a prophet." The largest audience room in our national capital was draped in black, a platform projecting twenty feet before the pulpit, also draped; candlesticks four feet high, with burners, were set in triangles about his coffin, with a multitude of observances on a similar scale of expense, were got up to receive his coffined corpse, for a nocturnal orgy at midnight of two hours.

His hateful life as an apostate from liberty to slavery; his swindling of the poor Indians from whom he extorted one fee of $100,000; his secession and rebellion—all, all obliterated and forgotten, and one general laudation of him echoed from ocean to ocean by the reflection of Masonry by the press. It is surely speaking within bounds to say that his religion was the religion of the secret lodges of this country.

WHAT WAS THAT RELIGION?

The Chicago Inter-Ocean tells us, April 6, 1891. He says:

"I have a profound conviction, the only real revelation, which to me makes absolute certainty, that there is a Supreme Deity, the intelligence and Lord of the universe, to whom it is not folly to pray. That our convictions come from him, and in them he does not lie or deceive us: and that there is to be for my very self another, a continued life, in which this life will be as if it had never been, but I shall see and know again those whom I have loved and lost here. There is no God, or there is a just and merciful God, who will deal gently and tenderly with the human creatures whom he has made so weak and so imperfect."

Reduced to propositions, this then is the religion of the secret lodges:

1. There is no revelation for a man but his own convictions or opinions.

2. There is a supreme intelligence to whom it is not folly to pray.

3. We shall be the same persons in the next life and yet this life be "as though it had never been.

4. And God, if there be a God, will be too merciful to punish the wicked.

This is, of course, moral shipwreck, and but another name for mere infideity. Every man is as much entitled to his "profound" convictions as another man. Who or what is to decide when profound convictions clash and contradict; and yet this jumble of absurdity and contradiction is to yield "absolute certainty."

Then our "very self" is to continue the same in the next life that it is in this, and yet all of this life is to be an eternal blank "as though it had never been." And yet he is to know his old friends there and renew old acquaintances. If this be so, is there no danger Gen. Pike may meet some of our Union soldiers there whom his Indians scalped and tomahawked at Pea Ridge? And how can the past be to him "as though it had never been," and yet men be the very same there they are here. And then if God will be too merciful to make any difference between right and wrong, suppose wrong should come uppermost and give an eternity of crime, outrage and suffering?

"———Can such things be,
And overcome us like a summer cloud,
Without our special wonder?"

And yet this weak specimen of absurdity and self-contradiction; this American who apostasized from, opposed and sought to destroy all American principles; this man, so abandoned of God and goodness, has been the Prophet and High Priest of the Masonic religion for the last forty years, since 1859, the year previous to Lincoln's election, during which long period he has looked on the bloody agony of his country, like a priest on the tortures of the Inquisition, to come forward smiling when the groans are silent and the victims are buried; quarter himself and family on the taxes which his secession-and-slavery war made necessary; and now that he is dead his corpse is thrust into the First Congregational church at Washington, in grim triumph over the principles of New England by which God defeated the labor of his life to destroy Christianity and popular government.

But the Lincolns of humanity are not all dead yet. They were not all killed by the bullet of Wilkes Booth. A holy mother, amid the timber-skirts of slave-ridden Kentucky, found her Saviour there, and gave her country and the world a son, who abhorred the secret lodge and its infidel altars; a man whose life is a refutation of all the falsehoods which Freemasonry ever shammed. He called a cabinet around him, Seward, Chase and Stanton, backed by Stevens, who, like himself, believed in the religion of his godly Baptist mother, and saved the capital and the government which Pike's midnight funeral has disgraced. And God is still marching on.

Is it possible that the American churches can long fail to see eye to eye and strike hand to hand against a religion which defies heaven and destroys earth?

WHAT IS THE TROUBLE?

Why do not the churches which baptize their members into Christ, move together solid against Christ's enemy? Why are all the so-called Christian papers either silent on the subject of the secret altars which are bringing pestilence called "grippe" on the nations, and "wars and rumors of wars" (Matt. 24: 6), declared by our underground population against their employers, crowds led by foreign socialists who denounce capital, law and government, like mad dogs biting the hands that feed them? Or, if they say anything, why do they avoid giving offense to the very same elements in their own congregations? Why is all this fatal ignorance and non-committalism, amid wrath-tokens, like those horrors which preceded the destruction of Jerusalem and the desolation of Judea?

The answer is ignorance,—ignorance, which, as John Quincy Adams said, men are "careful to preserve."

There are good people, lovers of Christ, enough in the United States to-day to save society from dissolution if they knew what was the matter. But they do not. They can discern the face of the sky, but they do not discern the signs of the times. Four thousand coke miners march on their employers. They are so far from starvation that they can employ "brass bands," and salary wretches, whom in their secret "orders" they are drilled to obey; and when the government orders sheriffs and soldiers to return the fire of these mad men, those soldiers and sheriffs are taken up by justice warrants, and put on trial for their liberties and their lives! And while we are thus following in the wake of the French populace, which shouted in Paris, "tout l'eveque a la lanterne,—"every bishop (preacher) to the lamp-post." Our ministers and churches are looking on silently like cattle in a slaughter-yard, waiting for their turn to come!

We are told that "the demand for a well-trained ministry was never greater than now;" and millions are raised and being raised to support and train young men to teach religion to men. Now, not to speak of the Jesuits,—begin at Harvard and go through the schools and seminaries of the United States, and how many graduates, after seven years in college and three in theology, will be taught the theory and practice of the secret lodges, which outnumber the churches of the United States more than three to one? How many will know that the coke war in Pennsylvania, whose underground fires are not yet quenched by the flow of blood, originated, not in a complaint about wages, but in a demand that the employers should dismiss all non-union men? —men who would not swear secret oaths of obedience to their orators, who bless with the name "martyrs" those anarchists who knocked down sixty and killed seven policemen, and were hung for it in Chicago!—and who call that execution "murder!"

On graduation day, this coming season, how many "thoroughly trained and equipped" graduates will know anything or say anything about disloyal secret oaths, whether Jesuit, Mormon or Masonic? Which institution will give us the statistics and the teaching and example of Christ, matters which will meet them, in limine, as they enter the door of public life?

And yet American Christians, now living, are equally honest and more intelligent than their ancestors. What is the explanation of this stupor, like that which preceded the Deluge in the days of Noah, and every devastating judgment of God since? The Hebrew prophets attributed such stupor to the punitive providence of God. Thus in Isa. 6: 10, "Make the heart of this people fat, and make their ears heavy, and shut their eyes, lest they see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their hearts, and convert, and be healed."

But we have supposed that American Christians were not Jews; that Christ's kingdom is to come, and the earth be filled with his knowledge as the waters cover the seas. And we hope so still, though "in the last days perilous times shall come." And if anything can open the understandings of the American churches, it would seem the life, death and orgies of Albert Pike must do it. Let us see.

"MADNESS IS IN THEIR HEART."

Eccl. 9: 3.

Read and ponder the following from the Chicago Evening Journal, April 21st inst:

"The thirty-sixth annual reunion and convention of Scottish Rite Masons, Valley of Chicago, began at 10 o'clock this morning in the asylum in the American Express Building, and will be in session three days. Four bodies will take part, namely: Van Rensselaer Lodge of Perfection, Chicago Council, Princes of Jerusalem, Gourgas Chapter, Rose Croix, and the Oriental Consistory, S. P. R. S. The Van Rensselaer Lodge is in session to-day with James B. McFatrich, thrice Potent Grand Master, officiating. As Grand Secretary Gil W. Barnard put it, the object of the gathering is to confer degrees upon the candidates who live outside of Chicago and are unable to be present at the regular meetings of the order. Up to noon to-day there were sixty-two candidates to be worked upon. The attendance to-day was quite large, and by to-morrow it is expected that over three hundred delegates from Illinois, Kansas, Arkansas, Wisconsin and Indiana will be present. Among the degrees conferred to-day were those of Secret Master, Perfect Master, Intimate Secretary, Provost and Judge, Intendant of Building, Elect of Fifteen, Sublime Knight Elect, Grand Master Architect, Knight of the Ninth Arch and Grand Elect Perfect and Sublime Mason."

No Indian ghost-dance ever exceeded the madness and folly of the above performances, and yet done by white men in the city of Chicago. Surely the race of fools is not dead yet. The readers of the Cynosure should get and read this leading Masonic rite, which is to be had at the Cynosure office. Thousands have been sold to Masons and Anti-masons. The first twenty-five degrees were invented by priests in the Jesuit College of Clermont, Paris, in 1754, and called "The Rite of Perfection." It was named "Scottish" by the apostate Presbyterian Ramsay in hopes to draw Scotch lodges to support the banished Stuarts, papists, in their claim on the English throne. The infidel wing of French Masons, some years later (1761), formed the Council of Emperors East and West, adopted the Ramsay Rite of Perfection and sent it over by the Jew, Morin, whom they made their "Sovereign Inspector General," who set up for himself in St. Domingo. His employers recalled and cancelled their warrant and published Morin as an "audacious juggler." But Morin kept on making "Sovereign Inspectors General;" made money; turned up in Charleston, South Carolina; and aided in preparing the present French rite, called Scottish, and disappeared, whether by secret assassination, or changing his name and retiring with a fortune, no one knows. These facts are taken from standard Masonic writers, Folger and others.

The first "Supreme Council" (Albert Pike's) was opened in Charleston by John Mitchell and Dr. Dalcho in 1801, and aided in making that city the political pest-house of the Rebellion. The rush of candidates into such a concern shows the lodge waters are troubled and presages its doom.

—Everybody may have a share in the good work of sending us a May subscriber. Beside the reward of doing good, we give you also a valuable inducement. See our premium offers.

—The Washington agent, Bro. W. B. Stoddard, writes that the effects of the grip are still fatally felt in New York. He works in New Jersey this week, visiting Perth Amboy and Newark, and expects to return to Washington before next Sabbath.

—The New York Independent for April 23 contains nearly one hundred communications from archbishops and bishops of various churches on the subject of opening the World's Fair on the Sabbath day. The number makes a notable document for the integrity of the Sabbath and the upholding of the American custom of preserving that day for religious rest.

—A Lutheran pastor said the other day that the so-called "benefit" or assessment secret societies were worse in an important sense than Masonry or Odd-fellowship. It is enough to deter a sensible man from joining the latter to read their oaths, but the little orders dissemble and make so plausible a show of pecuniary advantage that men who mean to avoid the lodge are yet attracted, and their scruples overcome in such a degree that they will join and are then too often lost to the church.

—Pastor Becker has full space in this number to argue the compulsory school law of Wisconsin. For the sake of his argument we could wish him less disposed to use severe terms towards antagonists. It must be observed, also, that the clause of the Bennett law providing that private tutorage and parochial schools might be continued without the least dread of the law, is not noticed in the argument. It may be true, as he avers, that secret society opposition to the Lutheran churches and to the Catholic priests was the occasion of the law. We have never seen this charge before, and if it be true would like to see the proofs. We agree with our Lutheran brethren that no good thing is likely to come out of that Nazareth.

BLACK BEAUTY FREE.

Everybody who will send a new yearly subscriber to the Cynosure during May (with a request for the book) will receive a handsome copy of the fascinating story, entitled "Black Beauty," the Uncle Tom's Cabin of the Horse. This is a Special offer for every boy and girl, and everybody who owns a horse should read this book. It will be worth more to your animals than a dollar's worth of oats. Try it.

All Reformed Presbyterians who purpose to attend the anti-secret conference soon to be held in Chicago, can be furnished with credentials as delegates by notifying the undersigned. We hope many will find it convenient and see it their duty to attend. By order of Synod. J. S. T. Milligan,

Ch'n Standing Com. on Secret Orders, R. P. C,, Denison, Kan.

Pennsylvania Christian Anti-Secret Association.—This Association is opposing the Jesuitic secret empire of Pennsylvania, which is composed of numerous secret societies, that are secretly and slyly operated by Jesuits, in various disguises. It is opposing the numerous plundering rings, which are based upon and upheld by the aforesaid secret power. It is opposing the demoralizing liquor power of the State, which is protected by the same Romish influence; the liquor dealers being mainly Roman Catholics and secretists. And it is also opposing the Roman Catholic church, which is now mainly a demoralizing political machine, that is operated by the sly, cunning and crafty Jesuits, "for the good of the order." All citizens of Pennsylvania who desire more light in regard to this Association, and the demoralizing institutions here named, are requested to address, with stamp, the Corresponding Secretary, Edward J. Chalfant, York, Pa.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Rev. D. W. Wise of Granville, Ill., is expected to begin his pastoral labors with the College church, Wheaton, next Sabbath.

—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, New England secretary, left this city Friday for Boston and home. He intended spending the Sabbath in Oberlin with his daughter, Mrs. J. W. Fifield.

—The dear friend of God and good men, Rev. C. C. Foote, was last week lying near the point of death, at his home in Detroit. We pray that a few more years may be added to that useful life if the Lord will.

—Rev. O. M. Van Swearingen of Crystal Lake, Ill., author of "Stone Ezel," a pamphlet on Odd-fellowship, preached in the College church, Wheaton last Sabbath. The evening service was a union meeting and Bro. Van Swearingen's subject was the duty of the church toward prohibition. It was voted to be printed.

—Mrs. Mary E. Gough, widow of the great temperance evangelist, John B. Gough, died at her home near Boylston, Mass., last week Monday, aged seventy-one years. Mrs. Gough was a Christian reformer, like her husband, and both warmly sympathized in the efforts of the N. C. A. to remove the secret orders from American society.

—Rev. L. A. Johnston, pastor of the large First Swedish Lutheran church of Rockford, Ill., has been engaged to deliver a lecture at Rock River Assembly, Dixon, Ill., next August, on "The Swedish Element in American Civilization." Pastor Johnston represented the Swedish churches in the Conference of 1887 on the lodge held in Hershey Hall, in this city.

—Universal sorrow is felt in Topsham, Vermont, at the sudden death of Deacon Josiah Divoll, who passed away about 7 A. M., last week Monday, aged 84. He had not been very well during the winter, but pneumonia was the immediate cause of his death. He has been a long and constant patron of the N. C. A. and of all Christian reforms. His late articles on the religious responsibility of governments in the Cynosure, will be remembered.

—Rev. A. D. Zaraphonithes, the Greek missionary, and his family left this city on Monday afternoon on their return to Greece, where they will continue the work of Christian teaching begun in the island of Andros some twelve years ago. The prayers of many friends follow them in their self-denying labors. Bro. Zaraphonithes is a member of the National Christian Association, and on his return will write occasionally of his work for Greek evangelization.

—A characteristic story is told of the late Dr. Howard Crosby, which, it is understood, came from himself originally. His house was once entered by a burglar, whom the doctor himself captured and who was sentenced to twelve years' imprisonment. But for three years the minister kept up a correspondence with the convict, converted him, secured his pardon and later had the satisfaction of seeing him become a prominent and respected citizen in a distant town and blessed with a wife and child.

Spring is now here in earnest. Get your garden tools ready. First of all you need a Garden Cultivator. The Cynosure has one for you—and it is the best! We have made special arrangements with the manufacturers, so that all our subscribers can get one at very advantageous rates. See! For your renewal and a new subscription, or for two new subscriptions and $4.00 additional, we send you a $6.00 machine, or you may say you pay for the machine $6.00, and get your subscriptions worth $3.00 for $1.00.

But the two-wheeler is what everybody wants. We send this for a new and old subscription (or two new subscriptions) and $5.50 additional. That gives you the two copies of the Cynosure for a year for the trifle of 50 cts. Freight or express extra in all cases, unless four machines are taken at once.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C., April 22, 1891.

The Young Men's Christian Association has adopted an excellent method of attracting and holding the attention of young men, by means of a series of helpful talks by men of prominencc. Every intelligent and ambitious young fellow likes to hear the personal experience of men who have attained positions of eminence in the world, and when such a man tells him that temperance and Christianity are adjuncts of the greatest helpfulness to those struggling to make their way up, besides affording him the only hope for future happiness, he cannot lightly dismiss the information; he knows that the speaker knows whereof he speaks, because those very adjuncts havc helped him to get where hc now is; in fact no more striking lesson in favor of temperance or religion can be had than a few remarks in their favor from our successful men and womcn; alas, that more of them do not show a disposition to make these remarks.

Justice Lamar, of the Supremc Court, delivered the talk of last Sunday afternoon, and he made it very interesting to the large audience, composed almost exclusively of young men; he told them of the influences lasting through his whole life, which followed listening to three talks by eminent men in his youth, and how, when his mind was perplexed, the thoughts of what these good men said had served to make him serene and strong again. Next Sunday Justice Brewer, of the Supreme Court, who is an ardent prohibitionist, will do the talking.

The test case involving the constitutionality of the recently enacted law against allowing the use of the mails to newspapers that publish advertisements of lotteries, which was to have come up this week before the United States Supreme Court, was postponed on account of the illness of Attorney-General Miller, who is suffering from an aggravated attack of the grip.

Bishop Paret, in one of his recent sermons, gave some very good advice about Bible reading. Said he: "There are two ways to read the Scripture—both good. One, is slowly, verse by verse, with constant prayer and thoughtfulness, searching for the full beauty of the Word; the other way, scarcely less necessary to a proper absorption of the spirit of the Bible, is to read rapidly, a whole book at a single reading, so that a broader, more comprehensive understanding of the grand and magnificent truths of Christ's Word can be obtained. I once advised a lady to read through the Word according to one of the Apostles, say Mark, at a single sitting. She said it was impossible. I then asked her if she had never read a novel through at once, and told her that the Gospel of Mark was shorter than an ordinary novel. If one is interested there will be no difficulty in finishing one of the books of the Bible in a single sitting."

There has been more or less comment among church people that Mrs. Annie Besant should have been able to procure a church in which to deliver a lecture advocating the substitution of "theosophy" for Christianity. The lecture was delivered to a small audience Monday night in one of our city churches.

A quaint-looking little woman in the person of Miss Olof Krærer, a native Esquimau, who had lived in Greenland until she was 15 years of age, and in Iceland for several years, stood by a table which was nearly as tall as herself (she is but forty inches in height, and her age is 31 years) Monday evening and told a large audience many interesting things about the country which has days four months long and nights six months; which has no schools, no churches, no ministers, no doctors, no lawyers and no rulers; where the people live in snow houses, dress in furs and eat fish, oil and fat meat. This lady was educated in the missionary schools in Iceland, and later went to Canada. During the last six years she has traveled, lecturing on her native land. At the close of her lecture she retired for a few minutes, and when she reappeared it was in her native costume, which is entirely of fur and makes her appear like an animal of some sort, and sang a native song that delighted the younger portion of her audience. *

The arms we sharpen for a conflict to-day may be used, perhaps a century hence, in contests we have not as yet anticipated.

The Home.

GO TELL THY FRIENDS WHAT GOD HAS DONE.

Go tell thy friends what God has done,
His grace to thee proclaiming;
That for such mercy every one
May keep his altar flaming:
No chain to bind thee needed now;
One word was by him spoken,
The crown replaced upon thy brow,
And every fetter broken.

Thou hadst thy dwelling with the dead,
No hand could bind or tame thee;
Thy dearest ones in terror fled,
Nor love nor pride could shame thee;
But now to thine own self restored,
Clothed with faith's vesture fitting,
Thou knowest who of thee is Lord,
And at his feet art sitting.

Go tell thy friends what God has done;
Well-nigh their hearts were breaking
When thou didst their entreaties shun,
Life's purer paths forsaking:
Go tell to them the welcome tale—
Well may they pause and wonder
How Jesus' simplest words avail
To rend such chains asunder.

Go tell thy friends what God has done!
Such is his mercy's fashion.
What glorious triumph he has won,
On thee what great compassion:
That they the work of grace may see,
To snatch from sore temptation:
That they may take and drink with thee
The cup of his salvation.

—J. E. Rankin, D. D.

MRS. GREY'S SACRIFICE.

Mrs. Grey drew a little breath of pure content as she stood by the cheerful grate fire in her cozy little library. She had just finished her morning's work of putting the parlor to rights.

"I believe," she said softly to herself, "that I am just as near being perfectly happy, as it is possible for any one to be. I ought to be content, certainly, with such a dear good husband and a pleasant home."

Then, having assured herself that everything was in order for the day, she ran up stairs and took up her Bible for her morning chapter. It was in Malachi. She wished as she opened to her place that it was one of the Gospels or Epistles. Those were written for everybody as long as the world should last, but she never thought of finding any special work for her own life in the Old Testament. She read it because it was a part of the Bible, and she thought that she must.

So now this morning as she read, her thoughts were not on her reading, but down stairs, wondering what kind of a spread would be prettiest for the little stand in the back parlor, and if the new statuette would not look better between the two front windows.

Suddenly she stopped. What was that she had just read?

"And if ye offer the blind for sacrifice, is it not evil? and if ye offer the lame and sick, is it not evil? Offer it now unto thy governor, will he be pleased with thee, or accept thy person? saith the Lord of hosts."

Her Bible slipped from her hands as she sat gazing into the fire.

What kind of sacrifices and offerings had she brought to God? Gifts to her had been rich and plentiful; what had she offered unto him?

"The more John does for me the more I want to do for him," she thought with crimsoning cheeks. "I just try to think of things to please him, and to do for him, but I am afraid it isn't so about God. I don't see as I've given anything but old clothes that we could spare as well as not, and the regular contributions, but then I spend twice as much for things I do not really need."

"I gave myself to God, of course, a long time ago, but I am afraid that has been anything but a perfect offering. And I do believe," she exclaimed in her earnestness, "that, imperfect as I am, instead of giving the best of myself to God I have given it to John, to society, and to my own pleasures."

"I never would have gone into any evening company as tired and worn as I went to last Thursday evening's meeting."

"O dear! if the Lord was displeased with his people in those days, what must he be with me?"

It was with a very penitent, humble heart that Mrs. Grey knelt to plead for the future.

She had an errand down town that morning. On her way home she met Dr. Rogers. She knew him slightly; he was a member of the church they attended, but she was not prepared for his bright smile of greeting and outstretched hand.

"I believe the Lord sent you to me," he said. "I was just asking him to show me some one for a teacher in the Foundry Mission school. Won't you and your husband each take a class? I was almost in despair, for we are so short of workers just now; but I could not make up my mind to give up the field, for the harvest is plenteous."

Mrs. Grey was on the point of refusing, decidedly, when suddenly her morning's reading flashed into her mind.

Here was a chance for genuine sacrifice, for the mission school held its session Sunday afternoon, the only afternoon when John was at home, and they did enjoy it so! To be sure it would not take all the afternoon, but it would spoil it.

"It wasn't," she pleaded with herself, "as though they spent the time as some did, paying or receiving visits. To think of giving up those nice long talks and hours of Bible study together for teaching those rough foundry boys and girls! No, she could not," she decided, as she hurried along. She wanted to get as far away from that troublesome doctor as possible.

And yet should she always offer unto the Lord that which cost her nothing, that which was cast off like her last winter's cloak that she gave to a poor woman last week, that which was left over from everything else?

A sudden sense of bitter shame at her own ingratitude swept over Mrs. Grey. He, the Lord of hosts, had redeemed her; he had filled her cup of blessings full and running over. Could she refuse anything?

The hot tears sprang to her eyes, and turning, she rapidly retraced her steps to Dr. Rogers' office to say: "We will take the classes if you are willing. I can promise for my husband without waiting to ask him. He is always ready to do his duty, and I hope I shall be in the future."

—Intelligencer.

"I'M GOING TOO."

BY SUE W. FERRIS.

I was tired and discouraged. Everything had gone wrong that morning, and the world looked dismal and dreary enough. From the hot, crowded kitchen I went into the cool, quiet sitting room where Grandma and Maudie sat. I sank into a rocking chair and said with a sigh,

"Oh, dear! I wish I were in heaven."

"My dear," said placid old Grandma, "when the right time comes the good Lord will take you to heaven. You are learning your lesson now and when you know it well you will be called up higher."

"Well, I'm glad we have a promise of rest when we get there. When one thinks of all the commotion and turmoil there is on the earth, it is hard not to sigh for the perfect rest and peace of heaven," I answered.

Maudie listened to our words with wide-open, blue eyes. After a while she said, "Well, if Auntie is going to heaven, I'm going to put on my new cloak and hood and go too."

We laughed at the child, but after all what did she not teach us? How she reminded us that we may lead the little ones very easily up the shining road to heaven! If we but walk aright ourselves, the little feet will follow gladly and quickly. Let us but clasp the little hands in ours and urge them with gentle, loving words and they will be very ready to "go too." How great a power is love in this work-a-day world! With those dear to us we will walk bravely through trials and temptations, content to feel the loved presence near us and the dear hand in ours. The darkness of sorrow is less cheerless if there is one who loves and suffers with us, and joy is intensified if others rejoice with us. Yet the very fact that the little ones follow us so closely, should teach us to guard our steps very carefully lest they stray aside into forbidden paths of sin and folly. Don't let the innocent children go into danger through us. Let us turn back quickly when we hear their voices say, "I'm coming too."

Maudie's words rang in my ears all day, and I found myself thinking of her "new cloak." Dear child, she wanted to look as nice as possible to go with Auntie, and probably the uppermost thought in her childish brain was that of being "dressed up" to go visiting. Yet we all need new cloaks at our journey's end, even along the road.

The spotless robe of Christ's righteousness must cover our sin-stained souls before we can stand before the great white throne. We all need to don the wedding garment provided for each of us, before we sit down at the marriage supper of the Lamb.

The "new cloak" will be so pure and spotless that even as it drops upon our shoulders all sin will be washed away, every defect made perfect, and "we shall be like Him."

Walk steadily on, then, O weary one. Let not the dangers affright thee, nor the obstacles hinder thee. Go onward and upward and let the little ones "go too." Lead them and help their tender feet over the rough stones of the way.

A TALE OF A DUTCH HERO.

In the days when Charles IX. was king of France, when Philip II. reigned over Spain, and our land [England] was governed by good Queen Bess, the people of Holland and the Netherlands were called upon to endure the most fiery persecution the world ever witnessed.

For many generations the Dutch had enjoyed more liberty than was usual at that stage of the world's history. Their cities possessed charters and privileges of which they were justly proud, and to which they owed their prosperity. As a natural consequence education advanced, and the people were accustomed to freedom of thought and argument.

In this good soil the seed of the Reformation took deep root. Nowhere did the doctrines of Luther spread so rapidly, nor bring forth so rich a harvest.

Then came persecution. The cruel and bigoted King of Spain, believing himself to be ordained of God to sweep hersey from the face of the earth, let loose upon the smiling provinces all the terrors of the Spanish Inquisition.

Already they had suffered much for the cause of religion. During the reign of Charles V. many thousands laid down their lives for the truth, but Philip II. exceeded his father both in cruelty and tenacity of purpose. Henceforth no man's life was safe. Liberty was crushed and a dark cloud of oppression settled over the land. Men and women were tortured, drowned, strangled, burnt alive, or buried alive, for no other crime than reading the Bible, praying with their children, and teaching them to look to Jesus as their only Saviour.

It would shock you too much were I to tell you a tithe of what these poor Christians endured at the hands of their fellow Christians. Saddest of all human delusions, when religion is used as a mask for tyranny! Happy are we who have the privilege of serving God according to the dictates of reason and conscience!

In Holland cruelty and injustice produced their natural result; the people rose up against their oppressors, and an army was sent by Philip to reduce them to obedience. Thus the misery of war added to the terrors of the Inquisition.

The Dutch was a commercial rather than a warlike people. Stern necessity obliged them to fight for their homes, and for their wives and little ones; but at first the well-disciplined Spanish troops had them at a terrible disadvantage.

In one way, however, they were superior to their foes. They were as much at home on water as on land; and in winter they could skim about upon the frozen seas and lakes to the great confusion of their enemies. When the battle was fought upon water or upon ice it was the Dutchman's turn to win.

But the Spaniards were persevering as well as brave. They soon bought skates and learnt to use them, though not so skillfully as those who had been accustomed to them from childhood.

Dirk Willemzoon was one of those who suffered for conscience sake. Although he was innocent of any offence beyond the reading of his Bible and attending religious meetings, he was taken prisoner, tried and condemned to death.

Dirk felt it hard to submit to this cruel injustice. He was young and life was sweet—even life such as it then was in Holland. He set his wits to work out a plan of escape.

His plan succeeded. Once more he was free. Free, but not safe. He must still hide from his enemies. In this, alas! he was not so fortunate; his retreat was discovered by a Spanish soldier, and he was pursued across the open country. At no great distance was a lake, now a broad sheet of frozen water. Here was a chance for Dirk. He knew that upon ice he could soon outstrip his pursuer.

He was right. The Spaniard was a bold runner, but upon that slippery surface he was no match for the young Dutchman. Moreover, at this season, the lake was not to be traversed without danger. Winter was nearly over; already there had been mild spring days, and the ice was unsafe. It trembled and shook beneath the flying footsteps of the hunter and his prey.

Dirk was no stranger to the lake. He knew what parts to avoid. The soldier lacked this useful bit of knowledge. Suddenly there was a loud crack, a cry, a splash. The fugitive turned to look, and behold! his enemy was gone. A large hole in the ice surrounded by many a deep crack —that was all now visible.

But as he looked the head of the drowning man reappeared above the water. He stretched out his hands and grasped the edge of the ice, which bent beneath his weight. Dirk saw that he could not get out unaided. He was caught as securely as any rat in a trap. In a few minutes he must sink.

Dirk was safe now. Intense gratitude for his escape filled his heart to overflowing. "The Lord hath delivered me!" he cried. "It is not my work. Truly God hath fought for me; He hath overthrown my enemy like the Egyptians in the Red Sea."

But this thought was rapidly succeeded by another. "I say unto you, love your enemies; do good to them that despitefully use you and persecute you."

Would he not be disobeying his Saviour's command if he left this man to perish? It was a terrible moment for poor Dirk. He covered his face and fell upon his knees. A fierce battle raged within his soul, the powers of good and evil striving for mastery. God gives us all grace to fight such battles on our knees.

It was soon over. The Spaniard was presently amazed to see the young Dutchman returning across the ice, but the sight brought him no comfort.

"He comes to slay me with his dagger," thought he. "Well, 'tis more a soldier's death thun drowning like a kitten in a tub."

So he resigned himself to his fate with the stoicism of one who has faced death too often to fear it. To his astonishment, however, the young man showed no desire to kill, but seemed, on the contrary, anxious to save him. He advanced cautiously along the quivering ice, then lay down, and, creeping toward the hole, stretched forth his hands and drew the soldier out of the water.

There is but one way in which such a story should end. If the Spaniard had no reward to offer he must at least grant freedom to the man who had risked his life to save him. But, alas! this tale has a far darker sequel.

Whatever his feelings may have been while in the ice-hole, the soldier was no sooner safe on dry land than the instinct of the bird of prey revived. The man was in his power yet—the man he had followed through so many dangers. Should he let him go, and so lose the reward of his valor? No! The young Dutchman was his lawful captive, and back to prison he must go.

Motley, from whose pages we have drawn this sketch, tells us that the Spaniard was subsequently stricken by remorse and would have released his prisoner, but was prevented by the burgomaster of Aspern, who bade him remember first his duty to his king.

We are not disposed to give the soldier much credit for this tardy repentance. It was never strong enough to induce him to open his door to his captive.

Dirk's noble action met with no reward in this world. After languishing in prison for some weeks, he was led out into the market-place, tied to a stake, and burnt to death. Even then we may be sure that brave Dirk Willemzoon never for a moment regretted his generous self-sacrifice. He had followed his Master, for, like him, he had laid down his life for his enemy; and to him also was granted grace to say with that dying Master, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."—The Quiver.

TEMPERANCE.

THE NAPOLEON OF TRACT DISTRIBUTORS.

There has just passed away, in his 78th year, at his residence, Halifax, Yorkshire, after a few days' illness, a remarkable man, a native of Dundee, Mr. Charles Watson, who was popularly known in temperace circles as the "Napoleon of tract distributors." Mr. Watson was born at Dundee on June 22, 1812. He was very successful in his business life, one of his last works being the ventilation of Sandringham palace. Ill health compelled him to retire from business, and he devoted his energies largely to the promotion of temperance.

Mr. Watson was firmly convinced that the more temperance literature is scattered broadcast over the land the sooner will the voice of the people demand local option. Accordingly he for more than forty years supplied gratuitously temperance tracts and books. Speaking at the alliance meeting some years ago, he stated that in twelve months he had distributed nearly 8,000,000 copies of tracts. He had invited ministers of religion to apply for the tracts, offering a parcel of 5,000 to any minister who would secure their judicious distribution, and showed a parcel containing 1,500 applications from ministers and others, each of whom agreed to pay the carriage of the parcels. These tracts cost Mr. Watson more than £2,000. Writing to a contemporary he said:

"I have completed the distribution of the free grant of 8,000,000 Christian temperance tracts offered to clergymen, ministers and missionaries. There have been about 2,600 applications. The 8,000,000 tracts weighed twenty-five tons and contained 25,000,000 pages of reading. It would take twenty-five railway drays, each carrying a ton weight, to convey the 8,000,000 tracts from the raiway station to Providence house. The population of Great Britain and Ireland is 35,000,000. On an average five persons are allowed to make a family. There are therefore 7,000,000 families in Great Britain and Ireland. As many tracts have been sent out as would supply a tract to each family and have 1,000,000 over."

Mr. Watson has been a total abstainer for fifty years. He was a vice president of the United Kingdom alliance, a member of the executive of the British Temperance league, president of the Rhodes Street Wesleyan Band of Hope, a vice president of the Halifax and District Band of Hope union and of the Halifax Temperance Society.

Dr. Crosby's Latest Verdict.—The recent death of Dr. Crosby lends interest to what was, perhaps, his latest utterance on the liquor question. Its significance is increased by the well-known fact that he did not accept the testimony of science that alcohol is a poison, injurious in any amount, to the human system. Consequently he did not believe, theoretically, in total abstinence or prohibition. Yet here is his judgment, expressed in a recent article in the "Forum."

"This is the most important question now before the American public. Tariff, railroad, the Negro, the fisheries, Canadian reciprocity, Pan-American alliance, and the silver question, are all of secondary consequence when compared with this matter of the fundamental morals of legislation and society. It would be well if the attention of our citizens could be diverted from all other questions and concentrated on this, until it should be settled that rum is not to rule our land and spread its filth and corruption over the glorious potentialities of the heritage with which a generous Providence has endowed us."

Responsibility of the Christian Church.—I am speaking for the church now, and I am free to say that unless she is deliberately ready to make a covenant with death and an agreement with hell, her voice ought to be unanimous for the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of strong drink. If that were her voice the government and legislators and congressmen would not belong in hearing it and acting accordingly. It should be enough for the Christian that his Bible says, "Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that putteth the bottle to him and maketh him drunken," and when God says "Woe," no government has a right to say "Weal." To me it is as clear as day what the voice of the church ought to be on this question, unless she is ready to be left behind in working righteousness and to be out-moraled by the moralist and out-humaned by the humanitarian.—Dr. A. J. Gordon.

Twice this fall we have known of boys who failed to secure good positions because they smoked. And it is reported of a prominent merchant in Georgia that he promptly rejected an applicant who appeared with a cigarette in his mouth, saying to him: "The next time you want a place do not go into a house smoking one of those things." If all employers should take a similar stand, it would have more influence upon boys than any amount of legislative action, or of appeal from parents and pupit. In another instance we heard of a young girl who applied for, and secured, a situation as book-keeper, which had been denied her brother because he was addicted to the use of cigarettes. The cases furnish a practical argument against smoking which, if more general, would rouse boys to see what they are in danger of losing if they persist in the harmful and expensive habit.—Congregationalist.

A laborer at the Dundee harbor lately told his wife, on awakening, a curious dream which he had during the night. He dreamed that he saw coming toward him, in order, four rats. The first was very fat, and was followed by two lean rats, the rear rat being blind. The dreamer was greatly perplexed as to what evil might follow, as it has been understood that to dream of rats denotes coming calamity. He appealed to his wife concerning this, but she, poor woman, could not help him. His son, a sharp lad, who heard his father tell the story, volunteered to be the interpreter. "The fat rat," he said, "is the man who keeps the public house, that ye gang till so often, and the twa lane anes are me and my mither, and the blind ane is yerself, father."—Scotch Paper.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE OLD TESTAMENT.

LESSON VI.—Second Quarter.—May 10.

SUBJECT.—Israel's Overthrow Foretold.—Amos 8 : 1-14.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he seemeth to have.—Luke 8: 18.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

Daily Readings.—M.—Amos 5: 1-27. T.—Amos 6: 1-14. W.—Amos 7: 1-17. Th.—Amos 8: 1-14. F.—Amos 9: 1-15. S.—Deut. 28: 45-51. S.—Luke 12: 42-48.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The summer past.—vs 1–3. Hitherto the judgments sent on Israel had been reformatory in their design, but now the end was approaching. There is "a sin unto death" with nations as well as individuals. God could not pass by them any more. There was nothing startling or fearful in the basket of fruit that Amos saw, as in his previous visions, and yet it had a more terrible significance than the scourge of grasshoppers or the devouring fire, for it meant that the summer of Israel's prosperity was over. So all may be outward peace when the soul is nearest to spiritual death. Decay is ever the next stage to ripeness, and already the nation's heart was rotten at the core. The situation was beyond remedy, and yet no thought of her approaching doom troubled her, though her temple songs were soon to be exchanged for lamentations, and death in its most dreadful form would reign triumphant in her ivory palaces. There is nothing in the prospect of death that will change a sinful nature, or make the frivolous thoughtful after they have once grieved away the Spirit of God. Their dead bodies would be cast out in silence. Fear of the enemy would not allow of any funeral rites. So the name of the wicked will pass into final oblivion, and only the name of the righteous shall live to all eternity recorded in the Lamb's Book of Life.

2. The sin of oppression.—vs. 4–10. To their other crying sins they added hypocrisy. They kept the Sabbath, and perhaps very strictly, so far as the outward observance was concerned; but they had no delight in it. Its holy hours were a weariness to them. Like many at the present day, their thoughts were all on their business, and they counted every interruption a loss. The fact that their gains were illegitimate made their sin all the greater. By a system of monopolies, trickery and grinding oppression, they were all the time growing richer while the poor were growing steadily poorer, and in many cases had been reduced to such straits as to sell themselves for bondservants to obtain the necessities of life. God is always the champion of the poor. He hates robbery for burnt-offering. With what feelings then must he regard the underpaid labor of toiling multitudes in these modern times? A curse is pronounced on him who keeps back the laborer's wages by fraud. Forms of oppression may change, but the principle is always the same, and there is enough in our own land of heartless grinding of the poor to make us tremble. It is startling to see the same spirit of dishonesty and greed that prevails now so accurately described by one who lived nearly three thousand years ago. They sold the refuse of the wheat. They adulterated the very staff of life, and were thus, as Pentecost remarks, "the father of our whole modern system of adulterations in almost every kind of merchandise." The prophets of Israel and Judah were stern rebukers of these sins, and they should be denounced by every Christian minister. Those who are afraid that by so doing they will offend their wealthy hearers, are not in the line of the true "apostolic succession," for James fearlessly told the rich men of his day that they were only heaping riches together against the time of vengeance, for the cries of them whom they had robbed "had entered into the ears of the Lord God of Sabaoth." Nothing has done so much to alienate the masses from Christianity as the feeling on their part that the church courts the rich and great. They fail to distinguish between ecclesiasticism which is entirely of the world, and the true church of God that is ever the friend and champion of the toiling and the oppressed. "Shall not the land tremble for this?" Shall it not feel the shadow of coming evil like a hideous night-mare—a haunting ghost in all its halls of revelry? Again these words of the prophet bring us back to our own time. What means this widespread feeling expressed by some of the most wise and thoughtful among us, that dark times are before our nation—the result of crying evils, which we know to be evils and yet tolerate? Unjust legislation in favor of wealth, the brutalizing influence of the licensed saloon, the infidel teachings of the lodge, and an alien foreign element, ignorant of the first principles of American citizenship and with no desire to learn—these are a few of the dangers that menace our existence as a nation. "It shall rise up wholly as a flood"—an image of overwhelming calamity. The catastrophe, swift and resistless, would spare none.

3. A spiritual famine.—vs. 11–14. During all her countless backslidings Israel had not been deprived of her prophets. This worst of judgments—to be deprived of any method of communion with God, was yet to come. The heaviest punishment of sin does not consist in any of its outward results, but in the leaving of the sinner to himself,—when the voice of God no longer speaks to him, and while he may hear the word preached it never comes to him with any personal application. Seeing he sees not, and hearing he hears not; for through persistent unbelief he has lost forever all power to believe. This is the sin against the Holy Ghost which can never be forgiven. "They shall wander from sea to sea,"—a striking example of the Jews to-day, scattered and dispersed among all nations, fainting for the bread of life and finding it not except as they receive Jesus Christ. But we need not confine the truths here taught to the Jews, when so many nominal Christians, forsaking the Fountain of living waters, run to and fro seeking after every new religious fad or scientific opinion, or new doctrine that pretends to be "a word from the Lord." This is their judgment: to faint with thirst, yet find no water in these broken cisterns. "They that swear by the sin of Samaria, the calf-worship of Dan and Bethel,—even they shall fall and never rise up again." A solemn warning to them who in our own times swear so many and such terrible oaths to the false gods of Masonry.

SIGNERS TO THE CALL (Continued from 7th page).

EVANGELICAL ASSOCIATION.

W Houpt, Salix, Pa.
M C Morlock, Hinckley, Ill.
W W Shuler, Afton, Iowa.

SWEDISH EVANGELICAL MISSION COVENANT IN AMERICA.

J Thompson, Proctor, Ill.
G Norsin, Holyoke, Col.
K Newquist, Chicago, Ill.
A Mellander, Iron Mountain, Mich.
J Gustafson, Moline, Ill.
A G Nelson, Rush City, Minn.
J Johanson, Galesburg, Ill.
P Gustafson, Pine Bluffs, Wyoming.
J A Sandgren, Buxton, N Dakota.
P E Dillner, Manchester, N. H.
O Noren, Kansas City, Mo.
P H Boe, Greenview, Ill.
E G Hjerpe, New Britain, Conn.
C A Nilson, Portland, Oregon.
C M Youngquist, Loomis, Nebraska.
J Wenstrand, Keokuk, Iowa.
A Lidman, Princeton, Ill.
J Hagstrom, Blakeley, Wash.
C F Pamp, Lake View, Ill.

OTHER LUTHERAN.

F J T Fischer, Elmhurst, Ill.
Henry G Stuckmann, Elmhurst, Ill.
O Juul, Chicago, Ill.
S M Krogness, Larchwood, Iowa.
P C Traudberg, Chicago, Ill.
L H Norem, Sioux Falls, S Dak.
C E Cesander, Geenva, Ill.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

W E Read, Biggs, Cal.
C E Gibson, Rockford, Wash.
J H Soule, Eldena, Ill.
W. H. Parsons, Jonesville, Mich.
S C Olds, Larchwood, Iowa.
O B Jacox, Kingston, Ill.
F Lines, Ottawa, Ill.
J W Richards, Plano, Ill.
J Nate, Chicago, "
D T Kahl, Winslow, "
S H Swartz, Chicago, "
A B Mettler, " "
H D Kamp, Blue Island, "
B F Berryman, Evanston, Ill.
A W Benton, " "
A. Anderson, Evanston, Ill.
H. G. Stouffer, St Charles, Iowa.

WESLEYAN METHODIST.

J D Russell, Round Top, Pa.
D W Rose, West Union, Iowa.
W H Ross, Rivers Junction, Mich.
H W Johnston, Freetown, West Africa.
S A Manwell, Pittsford, Mich.
Ev Thompson, Senecaville, Ohio
J A Preston, Carl, Iowa.
J A C Rose, Carl, Iowa.

FREE METHODIST.

O V Ketels, Chicago, Ill.
F D Christi, " "
W P Ferries, Evanston, Ill.
S K J Chesbro, " "
J Leeper, Senecaville, Ohio.
E G Cooper, Albany, Mo.
G P Wilson, Plymouth, Iowa.
W B Olmstead, Holland, Ohio.

UNITED BRETHREN.

P Beck, Grafton, Cal.
S T Newcomer, Lanark, Ill.
W E Mosier, Leaf River, Ill.
J J Margileth, Mt. Carroll, Ill.
J L Harrison, Leaf River, Ill.
N D Wolfard, Hartsville, Ind.
Geo M Freese, Washington, Ill.
O F Smith, Mt Carroll, Ill.
C Y Smith, " "
J C Springstun, Vesta, Neb.
F Fisher, Gridley, Cal.
E Clow, Glenville, Minn.
C Bender, Mendota, Ill.
C W Wagner, Casey, Ill.
J P Thomas, Scranton, Kan.
J P Hershiser, Mich.
J W Smithicum, Fontanelle, Iowa.

EDITORS.

D W Collins, Philadelphia, Pa., "Christian Instructor."
A J Gordon, Boston, Mass., "Watchword."
Joseph Cook, Boston, Mass., "Our Day."
C W Sherman, St Louis, Mo., "Vanguard."
J W Sproull, Alleghany, Pa., "Reformed Presbyterian and Covenanter."
D B Willson, Alleghany, Pa, ditto.
B T Roberts, North Chili, N. Y., "Earnest Christian."
Alonzo A Hoyt, Cambridgeport, Mass., "Independent Christian."
W A Brinkley, Memphis, Tenn., "Living Way."
H S Hallman, Berlin, Ont., "Gospel Banner."
Joseph A Booker, Little Rock, Ark., "Baptist Vanguard."
W T Ellis, Portland, Oregon, "Fire and Hammer."
S H MeNeel, Chesley, Ontario, "Associate Presbyterian."
Miss Joanna P Moore, Baton Rouge, La., "Hope."
John Phillips, Chicago, Ill., "Western Catholic News."
N R Johnston, Philadelphia, Pa., "Our Banner."
A Hallner, Otto Hopfeldt, Chicago, Ill., "Mission Friend."
A T Jennings, Seneca Falls, N. Y., "Gospel Record."
John W Pritchard, New York, "Christian Nation."
H A Day, Brighton, Mich., "Wesleyan Advocate."
Wm Dillon, Dayton, Ohio, "The Christian Conservator."
E B Graham, Omaha, Neb, "The Midland."
W L Enlow, Birmingham, Iowa, "Free Press."
D N Yoell, Minneapolis, Minn, "Swedish Mission Covenant."
H R Holsinger, Waterloo, Iowa, "Brethren Evangelist."
L B Kent, Jacksonville, Ill, "Highway and Banner of Holiness."
A B Shelby, Milford Square, Pa, "Mennonite."
J D Severinghaus, D D, Chicago, Ill, "Lutheran Housefriend."
S P A Lindahl, Rock Island, Ill, "Augustana."
Gust Theder, Minneapolis, Minn, "Minneapolis Veckoblad."
C W Boquist, Minneapolis, Minn, Gen'l Manager "Minneapolis Veckoblad."
Mary Allen West, Chicago, Ill, "Union Signal."
B R Jones, Chicago, Ill, "The Free Methodist."
J A Collins, Chicago, Ill, "Christian Instructor."
C W Pritchard, Chicago, Ill, "Christian Worker."
Thos. K. Doty, Cleveland, Ohio, "Christian Harvester."
C Lillethun, Red Wing, Minn, "Bornevennen."
I A Sommer, Berne, Ind, "Bundesbote."

EDUCATORS.

H M Scott, Prof, Congregational Theological Seminary, Chicago, Ill.
J G Royer, Pres Mt Morris Coll, Ill.
C W Francis, Prof in Atlanta University, Ga.
Henry K Edson, Prof in Iowa College, Grinnell, Iowa.
Fred W Foster, Principal Chandler Normal School, Lexington, Ky.
Henry S De Forest, Pres of Talladega Coll, Ala.
E M Cravath, Pres Fisk University, Nashvill, Tenn.
A K Spence, Prof, ditto.
Charles A Blanchard, Pres Wheaton Coll, Wheaton, Ill.
Darien A Straw, Prof, ditto.
C M Lowe, Prof, ditto.
Elliot Whipple, Prof, ditto.
H A Fischer, Prof, ditto.
George H Schodde, Prof in Capital University, Columbus, Ohio.
A Pfueger, Prof ditto.
George A Woodard, Principal Gregory Institute, Wilmington, N C.
Chas H Abbott, Instructor Normal Institute, Grand View Tenn.
Harry L Beals, Prof De Pauw University, Greencastle, Ind.
Joseph A Thompson, Pres, Tarkio Coll, Mo.
T J Kennedy, Pres of Amity Coll, College Springs, Iowa.
J G Craighead, D.D., Dean of Theological Department Howard University, Washington, D C.
F W Stellhorn, Prof in Lutheran Seminary, Columbus, Ohio.
Catherine C Cromer, Teacher in Lutheran School, Indianola, Iowa.
G Kroening, Prof Lutheran Theological Seminary, Springfield, Ill.
John Yerissker, Prof Lutheran Seminary, Robbinsdale, Minn.
N N Morton, Prof, Baptist Theological Seminary, Morgan Park, Ill.
James R Boise, Prof, ditto.
Daniel Irion, Pres Elmhurst Coll, Ill.
J H Harnby, Teacher Mt Morrls Coll, Ill.
G N Falkenstein, Prof, ditto.
Salome A Stoner, Instructor, ditto.
Wm L Pearson, Prof in Penn Coll, Oskaloosa, Iowa.
S M Hadley, Prof, ditto.
Andrew J Steele, Principal Le Moyne Normal Institute, Memphis, Tenn.
John D Irons, Pres of Muskingum Coll, New Concord, Ohio.
James Harper, Pres Xenia Seminary, Xenia, Ohio.
D MacDill, D. D., Prof, ditto.
J E Todd, Prof, Tabor Coll, Iowa.
Frederick Schaub, Pres, German-English Coll, Galena, Ill.
F E Hirsch, Prof, ditto.
Samuel Brooks, Prof, Kalamazoo Coll, Mich.
Geo W Botsford, Instructor in Cornell University, Ithaca, N Y.
A E Turnur, Pres, Lincoln University, Lincoln, Ill.
Ernest Richmond Atwater, Tutor in Oberlin Coll, Oberlin, Ohio.
F F Jewett, Prof, ditto.
Henry Churchill King, Prof, ditto.
James Douglas, Prof in Oberlin Seminary, Pulaski, N Y.
E G Paine, Pres of Hartsville Col, Hartsville, Ind.
W O Dinius, Ag't Hartsville Coll, do.
I Terborgh, Prof, ditto.
D R Elabargar, Prof, ditto.
O W Pentzer, Prof, ditto.
J T Carrington, Prof, ditto.
A A Smith, Pres of Northwestern Coll, Naperville, Ill.
H J Kiekhoefer, Assisting Pres, ditto.
J Lerch, Treasurer, ditto.
Miss Mary S Bucks, Teacher, ditto.
H F Kletzing, Prof, ditto.
H C Smith, Prof, ditto.
Geo W Sindlinger, Teacher, ditto.
S L Umbach, Prof in Union Biblical Institute, Naperville, Ill.
E F Bartholomew, D D, Prof in Augustana College, Rock Island, Ill.
C O Granere, Prof, ditto.
T N Hasselquist, D D, Prof, ditto.
A W Williamson, Prof, ditto.
C W Foss, Prof, ditto.
V O Peterson, Prof, ditto.
Revere F Weidner, Prof, ditto.
Anders O Bersall, Prof, ditto.
H A Thompson, ex-Pres of Otterbein University, Franklin, Ohio.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Milton Wright, Dayton, Ohio, Bishop of United Brethren in Christ.
Geo E Shipman, M D, Chicago, Ill, Superintendent Foundlings' Home.
Geo W Clark, "The Liberty Singer," Detroit, Mich.
Mrs R R Johnston, Oakland, Cal, Pres. State W C T U.
T B Arnold, Chicago, Ill, Superintendent Chicago Industrial Home for Children.
James Tompkins, Chicago, Ill, Congregational Superintendent Home Mission.
J M Browne, St Charles, Iowa, Pres St Charles Deposit Co Bank.
Wm Goessele, Chicago, Ill, Presiding Elder, Chicago District, Evangelical Association.
M Harry, Marion, Kan, General Missionary of the Seventh-Day Baptist for Kansas and Nebraska.

SCROFULA

Is that impurity of the blood which produces unsightly lumps or swellings in the neck; which causes running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. It is the most ancient of all diseases, and very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. If you suffer from scrofula, try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Every spring my wife and children have been troubled with scrofula, my little boy, three years old, being a terrible sufferer. Last spring he was one mass of sores from head to feet. We all took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and all have been cured of the scrofula. My little boy is entirely free from sores, and all four of my children look bright and healthy." W. B. ATHERTON, Passaic City, N. J.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

C H Kiracofe, Dayton, Ohio, United Brethren Missionary Secretary and Treasurer.

Geo R Clark, Chicago, Ill, Supt Pacific Garden Mission.

T L Riggs, Oahe, So Dakota, Missionary to Dakota Indians.

J D Wyckoff, Galesburg, Ill, State Evangelist Congregational Home Missionary Society.

W H Chandler, Princeton, Ill, State Evangelist Congregational Home Missionary Society.

Rev N C Mallory, D D, Pastor North Ave Baptist Church, Chicago.

J W Dunnenold, Lansing, Ill., (Dutch Reformed.)

H Vander Werp, Roseland, Ill., (Dutch Reformed.)

J P De Jong, Englewood, Ill., (Dutch Reform.)

J E Wolfe, Vinita, Indian Ter., (Church of God.)

M L Worcester, Kingston, Ill., (Church of God.)

N T Carpenter, Santa Clara, Cal., (Advent Christian.)

B L Blount, Irvington, Ind., (Christian Church.)

A L Williamson, Dover, Ill., (U. V. Church.)

J Moore, Richmond, Ind., (Friends.)

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—B. Fay Mills, the well-known evangelist, has been leading the churches of Cleveland in a series of union meetings.

—On the West Side, Sabbath the 19th, five hundred Sunday-school scholars signed cards; and in the East End, the Sabbath previous the number was still larger.

—Rev. C. H. Yatman is now holding a series of successful union meetings in Findlay, O. From there he goes to Pueblo, Colo, Mrs. Kriss, of New York, accompanied by her mother, is singing for him, with great power.

—The Christian Union declares that 'Protestants are now increasing in America more rapidly than the population, and Roman Catholics less rapidly. The Protestant communicants number a little over 12,000,000, the Romanists a little less than 5,000,000."

—An extraordinary wave of religious revival is sweeping over Cornwall, England. The Methodist churches especially have been scenes of such manifestations of the Holy Spirit's influence as have not been witnessed there within the memory of any living person.

—The twenty-ninth International Convention of the Y. M. C. Associations of the United States and Canada meets this year at Kansas City, Mo., May 6–10. Reduced railway fare is given on most of the roads.

—The First Congregational church, Marietta, Ohio, Rev. C. E. Dickinson, pastor, received seventy-four members on a recent Sunday, sixty-three on confession. These are a part of the results of the labors of Rev. B. Fay Mills.

—A petition signed by Joseph Cook and a number of representatives of the Massachusetts Sabbath Union, has been sent to the Legislature against the preparation, printing, sale and delivery of newspapers on the Lord's Day, on the ground that there is no just nor sufficient reason why a discrimination should be made in favor of the publishing and sale of newspapers over any other kind of business or labor on the Lord's day.

—According to Rev. Dr. Dunning, who writes in the Andover Review, (he is Dr. Dexter's successor in the Congregationalist,) there is lamentation among the farming population of the Northeast, there being ninety-five towns in Maine where no religious services are held, while there are more country villages in Illinois without the Gospel than in any other State in the Union. This is a bad showing, and is along the lines of the census revelations which show the New England farms becoming depopulated and the second church service discontinued. But the wheat and the tares are growing together very rapidly in some localities—especially the tares—the great State of Illinois standing fifth in the scale of education and fortieth in the grade of Christian religion.—Christian at Work.

—A correspondent of the Reading Philadelphia Kirchenblatt, writes: "The churches that hold fairs deserve to lose their charter, for no church received its charter to obtain money in any and every way it pleases. The State ought to take cognizance of the matter, and close such churches, as a wholesome example for others."

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from April 20 to April 25, inclusive:

S Bushy, A Lent, L Taft, J Cochrane, Rev W H Ross, S Gates, J Ferguson, W O Percival, P Gates, W N Dean, B Fuller, A Honeywell, N R Corning, Mrs M B Park, A L Bell, Mrs O R Strong, A Gleason, J A Bogle, J R Lyons, Rev J Excell, G J Williams, I Crawford, A Rosekrans, J B Crumb.

Doctors may differ in opinion as to the cause of that feeling of languor and fatigue so prevalent in the spring; but all agree as to what is the best remedy for it, namely, Ayer's Sarsaparilla; it makes the weak strong, and effectually removes that tired feeling.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring	1 05	@	1 09
Winter	1 03	@	1 10
Corn—No. 2	71½	@	72
Oats—No. 2	53½	@	57
Rye—No. 2	88	@	90
Bran per ton	17 00	@	18 00
Hay—Timothy	12 00	@	16 50
Butter, medium to best	12	@	26
Cheese	05	@	12½
Beans	1 75	@	2 25
Eggs	13½
Seeds—Timothy	1 17	@	1 25
Flax	1 17	@	1 22
Broom corn	03	@	04½
Potatoes, per bu	80	@	1 08
Hides—Green to dry flint	04½	@	07½
Lumber—Common	10 00	@	13 00
Wool	15	@	34
Cattle—Choice to extra	5 60	@	6 25
Common to good	1 75	@	5 50
Hogs	3 90	@	5 15
Sheep	3 25	@	6 25

NEW YORK.

Wheat	1 17	@	1 34
Corn	81	@	85
Oats	59	@	71
Eggs	15
Butter	12	@	27½
Wool	14	@	39

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	2 60	@	6 00
Hogs	3 00	@	5 05
Sheep	5 50	@	6 00

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer who will send me their Express and P.O. address. T. A. Slocum, M. C., 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

PAINLESS. EFFECTUAL.

A WONDERFUL MEDICINE.

For BILIOUS & NERVOUS DISORDERS SUCH AS Sick Headache, Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, Constipation, Disordered Liver, etc., ACTING LIKE MAGIC on the vital organs, strengthening the muscular system, and arousing with the rosebud of health The Whole Physical Energy of the Human Frame.

Taken as directed these famous pills will prove marvellous restoratives to all enfeebled by any of the above, or kindred diseases.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS,
Price, 25 cents per Box.
Prepared only by THOS. BEECHAM, St. Helens, Lancashire, England.
B. F. ALLEN CO., Sole Agents for United States, 365 & 367 Canal St., New York, (who if your druggist does not keep them) will mail Beecham's Pills on receipt of price—but inquire first. (Mention this paper.)

SCOTT'S EMULSION

DOES CURE

CONSUMPTION

In its First Stages.

Be sure you get the genuine.

Have you Seen Evangelist Wolfe's New Paper?

John 3:16. Do you want a bright, lively, and outspoken Gospel paper, published in the Cherokee Indian Nation? Subscribe for "John Three-Sixteen" Only 25 cents per year. Specimen copies free. Address "John Three-Sixteen" Company, Vinita, Cherokee Nation, Ind. Ter.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

COMMENCEMENT THURSDAY, JUNE 25TH, 1891.

Full College Courses, Preparatory School, Business School, Musical Conservatory and Art School. Fifteen Professors and Instructors.

Send for Catalogue.

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

VASELINE.

FOR A ONE-DOLLAR BILL sent us by mail we will deliver, free of all charges, to any person in the United States, all of the following articles, carefully packed:

One two-ounce bottle of Pure Vaseline	10 cts.
One two-ounce bottle of Vaseline Pomade	15 "
One jar of Vaseline Cold Cream	15 "
One Cake of Vaseline Camphor Ice	10 "
One Cake of Vaseline Soap, unscented	10 "
One Cake of Vaseline Soap, exquisitely scented	25 "
One two-ounce bottle of White Vaseline	25 "
	$1.10

Or for postage stamps any single article at the price named. On no account be persuaded to accept from your druggist any Vaseline or preparation therefrom unless labelled with our name, because you will certainly receive an imitation which has little or no value. Chesebrough Mfg Co., 24 State St., New York.

Between Two Opinions: OR THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR. By Miss E. E. Flagg, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages; cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid, 25 cts.

THE WOMAN'S NEWS

IS THE ONLY GENERAL WOMAN'S NEWSPAPER IN THE UNITED STATES,

—AND IS THE—

LARGEST WOMAN'S NEWSPAPER EVER PUBLISHED.

The publishers offer the Largest Cash Commissions and the Best Premiums ever given by any newspaper.

Agents Wanted Everywhere.

Send for Sample Copies and Terms for Agents. Address,

THE HOSTERMAN PUB. CO., Springfield, Ohio.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians

CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entir Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33d inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated'

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated' comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

General Washington Opposed to SECRET SOCIETIES. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

Lodge Notes.

While receiving the third degree in a lodge at Wichita, Kan., the candidate, Dr. J. L. Lawrence, fell dead from heart disease.

There are now about forty-five Oddfellows insurance companies, from which the income last year approximated $1,669,023.97.

The cost of the last session of the Grand Lodge of Illinois was $11,777.40. The Grand Officers and Representatives were paid for 180,380 miles traveled.

The publishers of the Modern Woodman, the official organ of the M. W. A., have been denied admission of the paper to the mails as second-class matter. As transient postage would amount to more money than the puplishers get for publishing the paper, the January number of the Modern Woodman was sent in bundles by express to clerks of camps for distribution to the members.—Freeport Journal.

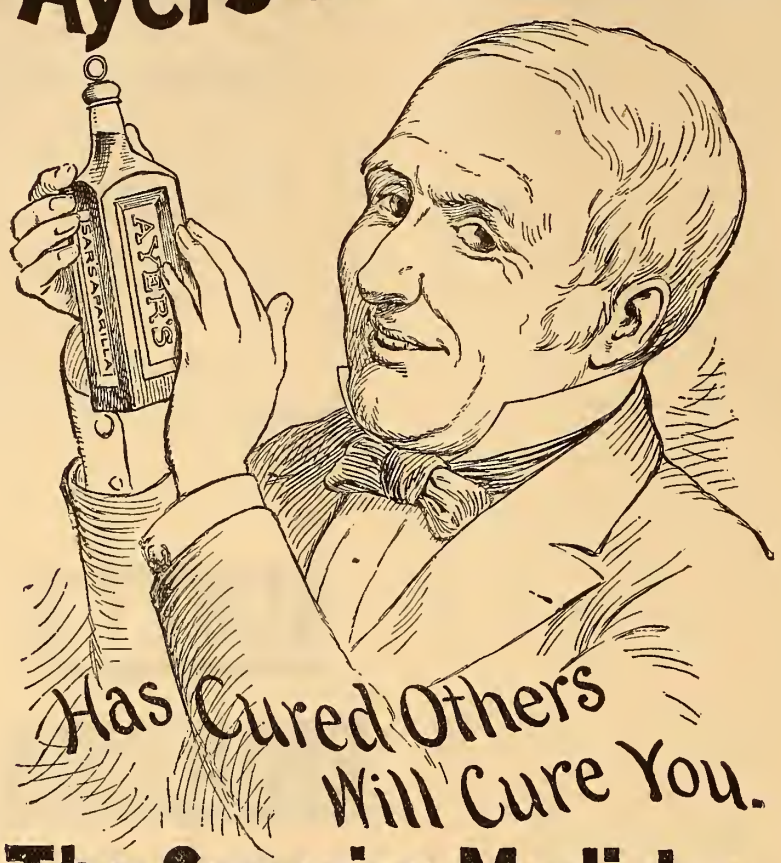
The Supreme organization of the Patrons of Industry at Lansing, Michigan, lately elected trustees for two years. The constitution was amended, reducing the per capita tax due the county from subordinate lodges from 15 to 10 cents, and from county to State from 20 to 16 cents, State to supreme from 5 to 4 cents, and the charter fee from $3 to $2. The convention decided against independent political action.

A mutual boycott has been instituted, says a Dubuque dispatch, between the Farmers' Alliance of this State, and the State Business Men's Association. The Alliance is instituting co-operative farmers' stores all over the State. They hire cheap managers and sell goods at just enough advance to pay expenses. The Business Men's Association has sent notice to all jobbers that none of their members will buy from firms who sell to the Alliance.

A dispatch from Cleveland, Ohio says: "'The Union,' the secret organization composed of nearly all the fire insurance companies in the United States, which has been in session at the Hollenden for several days, will conclude its work tomorrow. The organization is so secret that no one outside the ranks knows the names of the members. A bulletin in the nature of a black-list is issued every month for the benefit of the members. It contains the names of the persons whom it is best for insurance men to leave alone. All of the meetings held here have been secret.



"Colonel Julius A. Brown, of Monticello, Ill., commanding the Second Regiment Patriarchs Militant, I. O. O. F., has been elected Brigadier General, and has been assigned to the command of the Fourth Brigade Patriarch Militant of Illinois, Division of the Lakes. The command embraces the south half of the State of Illinois. This will cause a vacancy in the office of colonel of the Second Regiment." This is a lodge story; but an ordinary reader would suppose some government existed within our government, and was preparing for war. There is no other explanation of these warlike terms.

The Committee of One Hundred, says the Daily News of this city, a secret organization, otherwise known as the C. C. C., and made up of representatives of various American societies, held a long and exciting meeting at 208 LaSalle street last evening. So far as could be ascertained the meeting was called to consider the disbanding of the organization, some of the members believing that there was no necessity to perpetuate it. There has also been some disagreement over the political action taken by the committee. The meeting last night was characterized by loud and fervent oratory and concluded with a overwhelming decision to continue the organization on the same line which it has followed in the past.

A Childless Home.

Smith and his wife have every luxury that money can buy, but there is one thing lacking to their happiness. Both are fond of children, but no little voices prattle, no little feet patter in their beautiful home. "I would give ten years of my life if I could have one healthy, living child of my own," Smith often says to himself. No woman can be the mother of healthy offspring unless she is herself in good health. If she suffers from female weakness, general debility, bearing-down pains, and functional derangements, her physical condition is such that she cannot hope to have healthy children. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a sovereign and guaranteed remedy for all these ailments. See guarantee printed on bottle-wrapper.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Has Cured Others
Will Cure You.

The Superior Medicine

AYER'S Sarsaparilla has cured others and will cure you. It will cure you of Indigestion; it will cure you of Liver and Kidney Complaints; it will cure you of any disease originating in impure blood. AYER'S Sarsaparilla is the best medicine to take during the months of MARCH, APRIL, MAY. It is pleasant to the taste, powerful in its action, and always efficacious. It relieves that tired feeling, restores the vigor of health, and makes the weak strong. It quickens the appetite, aids digestion, and is the best—THE SUPERIOR MEDICINE—for all diseases peculiar to SPRING. Take AYER'S Sarsaparilla. Don't be induced to believe that anything else is just as good. Remember AYER'S Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which it is said, HAS CURED OTHERS, WILL CURE YOU.

THERE ARE MANY USES FOR SAPOLIO

To clean tombstones.	To renew oil-cloth.	To renovate paint.	To brighten metals.
To polish knives.	To scrub floors.	To wash out sinks.	To scour bath-tubs.
To clean dishes.	To whiten marble.	To remove rust.	To scour kettles.

EVERYBODY USES IT.

Dentists to clean false teeth,	Engineers to clean parts of machines.	Housemaids to scrub marble floors.
Surgeons to polish their instruments.	Ministers to renovate old chapels.	Chemists to remove some stains.
Confectioners to scour their pans.	Sextons to clean the tombstones.	Carvers to sharpen their knives.
Mechanics to brighten their tools.	Hostlers on brasses and white horses.	Shrewd ones to scour old straw hats
Cooks to clean the kitchen sink.	Artists to clean their palattes.	Soldiers to brighten their arms.
Painters to clean off surfaces.	Wheelman to clean bicycles.	Renovators to clean carpets.

EVERY ONE FINDS A NEW USE.

Beecham's Pills cure Bilious and Nervous Ills.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated, "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each.

Patriarchs Militant Illustrated

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

Sovereign Grand Lodge

OF THE

Independent Order of Odd-Fellows,

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885.

Compiled and Arranged by John C. Underwa
Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED,

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton Colleg

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association
221 West Madison St., Chicago.

The St. Louis Sermon

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover.

Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

WILL SELL FOR

Regular Price.		Selling Price.
	FIVE CENTS.
$ .15	"A Woman's Victory, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp.	$ .05
$ .10	"Washington Souvenir." Portraits of Geo. Washington and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freemasonry. Size 18x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home.	$ .05
	SIX CENTS.
$ .10	"Secret Societies." A Lecture delivered at Oberlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Paper, 36 pp.	$ .06
$ .20	"Reasons Why Secret Societies cannot be Fellowshiped by the United Presbyterian Church." By Rev. J. W. Bain. Pages 149.	$ .06
	TEN CENTS.
$ .15	"My Experience with Secret Societies." By a Traveler. Paper, 51 pp.	$ .10
$ .25	"Sketch of the Life of James G. Birney." His relation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in history. By General William Birney. Paper, 32 pages.	$ .10
	TWENTY CENTS.
$ .30	"Songs for the Times," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohibition and W. C. T. U. meetings. Boards, 152 pages.	$ .20
	TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.
$ .75	"Berea College," Kentucky. An interesting history of the founding of that College for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 87 pages.	.25
	FIFTY CENTS.
$1.00	"National Suicide and its Prevention." The following will show the drift of the book: Measure or Standard of Value; What is Honest Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lumry. Cloth, 224 pp.	$ .50
$1.50	"History of Secret Societies in France," or "The Cradle of Rebellions." By Lucien De La Hodde. Translated from the French by Gen'l. J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp.	$ .50

Sent postpaid to anyaddress on receipt of the selling price.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

10,000

Another ten thousand edition of the trac

KILLED, AND NO INQUEST.

This is a large 4-page tract at 30 cents per pound, 15 cents for half pound, and 10 cents for a third of a pound. It is an illustrated account of the death of Rev. J. W. Johnston, while being initiated by the officers of Huntington Lodge, W. Va., in January of this year. Sent postpaid at the above price. Address,

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St Chicago

FARM NOTES.

FARMERS AS FRUIT-GROWERS.

A farmer on one hundred and forty acres of land asks me what fruits he can raise and not have them interfere seriously with farm work. He has two small boys whom he wishes to interest and keep contentedly on the farm if possible, and he further asks whether he couldn't make fruit growing pay as a sort of annex to his farming. As to the latter part of the inquiry I would answer decidedly no, if the farming is done as it might and should be. I know a number of farmers, with farms half that size who are wholly occupied in managing and working them in regular farm crops. I have a neighbor with less than 100 acres who paid 25 cents each for grubbing up a ten-acre orchard of apple and pear trees just coming into bearing, that he might devote the ground to a rotation of crops. The neighbors all considered him crazy but the outcome has proved that the land has been more profitable in farm crops than in orchard. The last season six acres of this land produced 800 bushels of potatoes, worth $1.18 per bushel. This man is an enthusiast in farming and not in fruit growing, and more successful in some of his farming than the majority. When he was grubbing his orchard it seemed to me that it would have been wiser to have grubbed two rows and left two rows alternately, and this would have left long strips capable of unimpeded cultivation while it gave an extra chance to the remaining trees. There are many orchards where such a course would give new life to the trees left and possibly result in no diminution of the crop. . . .

Either farming or fruit growing will fully occupy the energies and brain of any cultivator of the soil, and it is better to push business in the way of increased yield and reduced expense than to add another pursuit requiring a different outfit of tools and a different line of experience. There are some fruits that succeed tolerably well in drained, rich ground without much cultivation, especially if they are where fowls run, and of these no farmer ought to fail to have enough to supply his family. These, in the order of ease of growth and minimum of care, are cherries, grapes, blackberries, pears, summer and fall apples, quinces and currants.—Vick's Magazine for April.

SUGAR BEETS IN WISCONSIN.

Professor W. A. Henry, of the State agricultural station, has been for some time experimenting with beet sugar and has given the results of his investigation in a bulletin just issued. The experiments were made under direction of Secretary Rusk. The summary of bulletin is as follows: Six varieties of sugar beets grown at this station contained 14.81 to 26.76 per cent of sugar in the juice; the coefficient of purity ranged from 82.2 to 87.3 per cent. About half an acre of each variety was grown and the yield of washed beets varied with the different varieties from 16 to 26 tons per acre. The estimated yield of sugar varied from 2 to 3½ tons per acre. In a well managed factory about 80 per cent of this quantity would be recovered as pure granulated sugar. Careful account of work done in planting and cultivating the beets showed that it cost from 84 cents to $1.38 to grow a ton of beets. This does not include the cost of harvesting and delivery, which may be considered as about equal to that of growing the crop.

ENERGETIC ROOTS.

I observed roots of an apple tree, large as my arm, running below the bottom of a gravel pit ten feet deep. I once had business with a man digging sand from a pit in a wheat field in June, and seeing the soil filled with roots to great depth, removed one intact, which led to the stalk of wheat above, showing that all were wheat roots. The one removed measured eight feet. Roots of strawberries run two or three feet deep, or less, depending on circumstances. If planted near or over a drain, where the soil is well areated, no excessive moisture, they will go to remarkable depth. I was shown a common stone ditch in Michigan that had been clogged by roots of wheat so as to prevent passage of water for the season. Near our nursery the strawberry manure was once plowed in as thickly as a man could tramp it in the furrow, in order to loosen the firm texture of the soil. In reploughing the next year the belt of rotted matter could be distinctly seen. In this belt the clover roots had run horizontally. I drew out one that been loosened by the plough that measured eleven feet. No doubt the decay of roots of our forest trees left the subsoil full of outlets for surplus water, rendering lands tillable that must now be drained, the outlet formed by the tree roots having become filled.—Green's Fruit Grower.

USED THEM IN HIS BLOW-GUN.

Doctor—"Well, my fine little fellow, you have got quite well again. I was sure the pills I left for you would cure you. How did you take them, in water or in cake?"

Boy—"Oh, I used them in my blow-gun."

The little fellow put the nasty, great, griping, old-fashioned pills to a good use. At most, all his internal economy needed was a dose of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They are tiny, sugar-coated granules, easy to take, and are gently aperient, or actively cathartic, according to size of dose. As a laxative, only one tiny Pellet is required.

The "Pellets" cure Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels. In explanation of their remedial power over so great a variety of diseases, it may truthfully be said that their action upon the system is universal, not a gland or tissue escaping their sanative influence.

The "Pellets" are put up in vials, hermetically sealed, therefore always fresh and reliable, which is not the case with pills put up in wooden or pasteboard boxes.

The "Pellets" are purely vegetable, and operate without disturbance to the system, diet, or occupation.

They are a convenient vest pocket remedy.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets are the cheapest pill, sold by druggists, because they are guaranteed to give satisfaction in every case, or their price (25 cents a vial) is refunded. You only pay for the good you get.

Can you ask more?

Manufactured by World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

That Tired Feeling.

It is remarkable how many people there are who have That Tired Feeling who seem to think it is of no importance or that nothing need be done for it. They would not be so careless if they realized how really serious the malady is. But they think or say "It will go off after a while." We do not mean the legitimate weariness which all experience after a hard day's work, but that all gone, worn-out feeling which is especially overpowering in the morning when the body should be refreshed and ready for work.

IT IS A MISTAKE

To allow this condition to continue, as the body may soon become debilitated beyond recovery, or some serious disease may gain a tenacious foot-hold. The craving of the system for assistance should be gratified by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great building up medicine. It purifies and vitalizes the blood, regulates the digestion and really does "Make the Weak Strong."

Made a New Man.

"In the spring of 1890 I experienced that tired, dull feeling, and what sleep I had nights seemed to do me no good. Dyspepsia seized me, and each morning in the effort to get rid of the bad taste I had severe vomiting spells. I was much discouraged. My druggist suggested Hood's Sarsaparilla. I took two bottles and am happy to say it made me a new man, and I never was better than now." JOHN MACK, foreman Springer & Willard's stock farm, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

To overcome the marks of age, all who have gray beards should use Buckingham's Dye for the Whiskers, the best and cleanest dye made for coloring brown or black.

THE BEST.

EVERITT'S MAN-WEIGHT

HOE, CULTIVATOR PLOW, ETC., SINGLE AND DOUBLE WHEEL.

Will Revolutionize Hand-Power Cultivation—Makes Keeping a Horse an Unnecessary Expense in Many Cases.

This new Invention is a Great Boon to all Cultivators of the Soil, and must be Classed with the Great Inventions of the Age, yet it is so simple that the natural question with every one is, "Why did I not think of that?" And so nicely does it fill a want existing with thousands of gardeners, nurserymen, seedmen, florists, and farmers, that after the first trial they invariably conclude to "never do without it."

All other Garden Tools, Seed Drills, Rollers, etc., can be attached and run with our propeller with many times the power and greater ease than by hand power.

SINGLE WHEEL cultivator, with attachments, price $6.00. W't, 15 lbs.

DOUBLE WHEEL, with attachments, $8.00. W't, 20 lbs.

With every Double Wheel Machine the extra parts are furnished necessary to convert it into the single wheel machine, without extra charge. Thus practically giving the two machines for the price of one.

This best of all hand cultivators to every worker for the Cynosure free as follows:

Two-wheel for 15 new subscribers. ($22.50.) Single-wheel for 12 new subscribers. ($18.00.)

Two-wheel machine, 1 renewal and one new subscriber for $8.50. Same for two new subscribers.

Single wheel and same for $7.00. Express or freight extra.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

SEE THIS!

The latest, most complete edition

Over 235 choice

Reform Songs for the Times.

Only 30c a copy, or 20c by the 100

—AND—

"THE TOBACCO MANIA."

$1 per 100.

For sale here and by the author,

GEO. W. CLARK,

76 W. Montcalm St., Detroit, Mich.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY, candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

BUSINESS.

NEW AND OLD.

The Cynosure will continue to supply all ts subscribers, new or old, who send $1.50 for the paper, with the Health Calendar and Ropp's Commercial Calculator, as follows: The paper and the Calculator, leatherette bound, No. 1, (publisher's price 50 cents) for $1.70. Morocco bound (price $1.00) for $2.00.

The paper and Calendar (publisher's price 30 cents) for $1.65. The Calculator (No. 1.) or a Calendar free to every old subscriber sending $3.00 for renewal and a new subscriber.

The Calculator is a book of great value for every farmer, mechanic or business man.

The Calendar contains a temperance bill of fare for every day, and hundreds of good recipes. It hangs on the wall in constant sight.

NEW OFFERS.

The Cynosure and the Cosmopolitan Magazine (publisher's price $2.40) to new subscribers only $3.00. To others $3.25.

The Cynosure and Pres. C. A. Blanchard's new book "Educational Papers" for $1.70 to all subscribers.

NEWEST AND BEST.

Read the advertisement of the Manweight Cultivator on another page.

This grand machine which everybody should have who has a garden, whether farmer or gardener or not, we are able to offer at excellent rates to Cynosure subscribers.

We will send the cultivator free to every one who will send us a club of 15 new subscribers at $1.50 each; or the single wheel for a club of 12 new names.

For $8.50 we will send the two-wheel cultivator and the Cynosure two years to new subscribers or a year each to a new and an old. This gives two subscriptions for 50 cts. The single-wheel machine and the same subscriptions for $7.00. We don't pay transportation.

We would be glad to put 100 of these machines at work killing weeds and raising new subscriptions. It is an investment none will regret.

50,000

SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CYNOSURE would bring our reform to the POINT OF SUCCESS. LET US "KEEP EVERLASTINGLY AT IT."

BLACK BEAUTY Is one of the most popular books of the day. It is said that about two million copies have been sold. Every boy and girl should read it, and learn to feel compassion for the dumb beasts that spend their lives in the service of man. We will give a copy free to every one of them who sends us a new subscriber before June 1.

WAR NUMBERS,

HARPER'S WEEKLY,

April, '61, to August '65, complete, in fair order. Cynosure office, 221 West Madison St.

PENSIONS OLD CLAIMS Settled Under New Law.

Soldiers, Widows, Parents, send for blank applications and information. PATRICK O'FARRELL Pension Agent, Washington, D. C.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

The new treaty between the United States and Spain is perhaps the best tribute to the value of the reciprocity amendment to the McKinley law that has yet been obtained. By the terms of this new treaty the Spanish colonies, including Cuba, are allowed to discriminate against the mother country, Spain, in favor of the United States.

Thomas A. Heenan, United States Consul at Odessa, Russia, now at Washington, believes that war will soon break out in Europe. He says that Russia has by cunning disregarded the treaty of Berlin, and has now thirty or forty war ships in the Black Sea, and that it is only a question of time when the Czar will seize Constantinople.

CHICAGO.

Threats made Sunday by the laborers at Jackson park were carried out Monday. All but about fifty of McArthur Bros.' 800 or 900 men struck for an increase of wages and a reduction of working hours. Work proceeded rapidly, however, and hundreds of new men were at work in a few days.

In a fire Thursday on Chicago avenue, several families were rendered homeless, and two or three persons perished.

COUNTRY.

The municipal elections in Northern Illinios went strongly against license last week. In Joe Daviess Co. 22 towns as against one last year voted against the saloon. Every town in Piatt county voted anti-license.

Tuesday at 10 A. M. the special train bearing President Harrison and party reached El Paso, Texas, where citizens and representatives of the Mexican government joined in an enthusiastic demonstration. After a stop of two hours the train proceeded through New Mexico. Great enthusiasm was manifested in San Diego, Cal., Pasadena and Santa Barbara where the party arrived Friday.

Wednesday Chief Justice Green, of Oklahoma, decided that women are eligible to public office.

The Wisconsin Legislature passed a joint resolution in favor of the election of United States Senators by the people.

Kansas farmers are preparing to hold wheat until it is worth over $1 a bushel. It is proposed to raise a fund in the Alliance to aid those who otherwise would be forced to sell.

Two hundred and seventy witnesses have been summoned by the New Orleans grand jury to testify in regard to the Mafia lynching.

The New York Farmers' Alliance, which closed its meetings Thursday at Hornellsville, declared against the third party movement, and rejected all overtures from the Knights of Labor and the Greenbackers.

Because he refused to stop driving a horse at a furious rate of speed in Erie, Pa., Thursday, Harry Anderson was shot and dangerously wounded by Dr. Ball, an officer of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Posters were distributed calling a meeting of the white men Saturday for the purpose of protesting against the appointment of Harry Bloch (colored) as postmaster of Opelousas, La., and to take such further steps as the exgencies of the case may require. This means more murders.

Laborers at the lumber yards, Burlington, Iowa, drank freely of water from an old well, and as a result of poison from sewarage five of them are dead and several others are not expected to live.

At Spring Valley, Minn., Monday, John Wright bet a dollar that he could run across the railway bridge in advance of an approaching train, but the train overtook him, and he lost his bet and his life at the same time.

A report reached here from Rockwood, seventy-six miles from Chattanooga on the Cincinati Southern road, that twenty-five miles from that place, Sunday April 19th, a party of twenty or thirty mountaineers, armed with rifles, rode into a tan-bark camp situated on the Cumberland mountains, and without warning shot and killed six Negroes and wounded ten. The mountaineers had been discharged for incompetencey and took this method of vengeance.

The organized Italian stone-masons of New York, precipitated a riot Friday which, but for the timely interference of the municipal police, would have culminated in bloodshed.

During attempted evictions of strikers at Uniontown, Pa., Wednesday, a pitched battle was fought between the deputy sheriffs and the Hungarians. Many of both parties were wounded. The arrival of a company of militia stopped the fight.

FOREIGN.

In England labor unions will celebrate British Labor Day—the first Sunday in May—in force. A great demonstration will be held in every large town, and in London 50,000 men and several thousand women will march in procession.

The natives of Portuguese Guinea, west coast of Africa, have revolted and have hoisted the French flag. The garrison on the Island of Bissao has been overpowered and all the Portuguese officers and soldiers have been massacred. The rebels on the island Bissao number 6,000. They have had two battles with the Portuguese and have completely routed them, 400 native levies and four Portuguese officers being killed and twenty-one men being wounded.

A colony of Boers, under the protection of Portugal, will establish a republic in Mashonaland or Manicaland.

The latest mail from Madagascar brings a report that the Sakalavas of Marombo have massacred the governor of Tubear and fifty-seven Hova soldiers, after the Sakalava king had promised the governor an audience. Thirteen Hova customs officials were also murdered.

Count Von Moltke, the famous German field marshal, died suddenly at Berlin Friday evening, aged 90.

The workingmen of Paris, Berlin, Rome, and other European cities will celebrate May 1st.

Late advices from Peru tell of disastrous rainstorms and floods, the damage amounting to millions of dollars.

Influenza continues to spread in England. A large number of the members of the House of Commons are now ill. The committee on the Manchester railway bill has been obliged to suspend its sittings for a week owing to the malady attacking committee members, counsels and witnesses.

By an explosion of 265 tons of gunpowder Thursday in the powder magazine of Pooze Pantaleo, a few miles from the city of Rome, seven people were killed and over 200 injured. Buildings in the vicinity were demolished. Great alarm was created at the Vatican. All the windows of the Pope's library were broken and a number of "precious" relics were destroyed. In addition many valuable panes of colored glass in the principal windows of St. Peter's were smashed to pieces. The handsome stained glass window over the chair of St. Peter was also broken.

 Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

DR. PRICE'S
Cream Baking Powder.

Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

DONALD KENNEDY
Of Roxbury, Mass., says

Kennedy's Medical Discovery cures Horrid Old Sores, Deep Seated Ulcers of 40 years standing, Inward Tumors, and every disease of the skin, except Thunder Humor, and Cancer that has taken root. Price $1.50. Sold by every Druggist in the U. S. and Canada.

AGENTS WANTED both sexes. $25 to $50 per week EASILY MADE. SAMPLES FREE. Send for terms. W. C. Wilson, Kansas City, Mo.

Snug little fortunes have been made at work for us, by Anna Page, Austin, Texas, and Jno. Bonn, Toledo, Ohio. See cut. Others are doing as well. Why not you? Some earn over $500.00 a month. You can do the work and live at home, wherever you are. Even beginners are easily earning from $5 to $10 a day. All ages. We show you how and start you. Can work in spare time or all the time. Big money for workers. Failure unknown among them. NEW and wonderful. Particulars free.

H. Hallett & Co., Box 880 Portland, Maine

WALL PAPER

SAMPLES SENT FREE of spring patterns with borders and ceilings to match. One half million rolls offered at wholesale prices. White blanks 4c to 6c, Gilts 8c to 35c. Embossed Gilts 10c to 50c. I will send you the most popular colorings, and guarantee to save you money. ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant, 147-149 W. Madison-st. Chicago

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St., N. Y.

PASTOR KOENIGS TRADE MARK NERVE TONIC

Recommended as the Best.

LE MARS, PLYMOUTH, Co., IA., May, 1889.

I suffered from temporary sleeplessness from overwork for two years, for which I used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, and can recommend same as the best medicine for similar troubles.

F. BORNHORST.

A GREAT BLESSING.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 1, 1887.

I can most truthfully testify to the fact that here in Cleveland, several cases of epilepsy, which were cured by the medicine of Rev. Father Koenig, of Ft. Wayne, Ind., have come under my personal observation. In other similar cases great relief was given even if up to this time they have not been entirely cured. It would certainly be a great blessing if the tidings were more widely circulated that many could be cured by this medicine.

REV. ALARDUS ANDRESCHECK, O. S. F.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

KOENIG MEDICINE CO.,
50 West Madison, cor. Clinton St., CHICAGO, ILL.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.
Price $1 per Bottle. 6 Bottles for $5.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIII., No. 34. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MAY 7, 1891. WHOLE No. 1,097.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Send all business letters relating to the paper to THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by ex press money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.... 1
The Conference..... 8
Laura Haviland, the Woman Apostle..... 8
Personal Mention..... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
The Great Romish Rebellion in India..... 1
The Secret Lodge (Poetry) 2
The Relation of the Churches to the Temperance question..... 3
From the Brooklyn Churches..... 4
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 4
REFORM NEWS:
Close of the brief New York Campaign..... 4
CORRESPONDENCE:
Trusted Iowa Reformers; Lodge Paganism and Despotism; National Reform in Boston; New Orleans and New Iberia; Bits of Things; The Destroyer of the Church.....5,6
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 9
LITERATURE..... 6
THE N. C. A 7
AGENTS AND LECTURERS.... 7
Program of Conference.... 8
THE HOME.....10
BIBLE LESSON.....11
RELIGIOUS NEWS.....12
NEWS OF THE WEEK.....13
HOME AND HEALTH.....14
FARM NOTES.....15

See pages 7 and 16 for premium offers.

ANNUAL MEETING

OF THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, MAY 13, 1891.

The Annual Meeting of the National Christian Association will occur on Wednesday, May 13th, 1891, at 10:30 o'clock A. M., in the Carpenter Building, 221 West Madison St., Chicago, Ill., for the election of officers, and the transaction of other important business.

MILTON WRIGHT, President,
EDWIN R. WORRELL, Rec. Sec'y.

PRAY FOR THE CONFERENCE.

It has been suggested, and we would urge the plan, that at some convenient hour during next Sabbath, prayer meetings be held for the success of the Conference, wherever two or three who sympathize with its objects can get together. This meeting will be to continue the battle against the arch-enemy of the church of Christ, and to set forward the standard of the Lord's hosts. But we have no power against the devil except through Christ Jesus who has conquered him. It is by faith in Christ's victory we must also conquer. Let there be thousands of prayer meetings for this blessing on the Conference.

The Italians find their secret societies of assassination are active enough at home without troubling us across the ocean in their defense. A dispatch from Rome lately tells of the trial of 179 members of an order called the Mala Vita at Bari, a seaport city of 60,000 in the southern province of the same name. Of the accused many are well-known criminals, but most of them are workingmen, masons and coopers; young, well-dressed and with an air of innocence. Over 600 witnesses were called for this remarkable trial, and thirty counsel prosecute and defend. A majority of the men claim, it is said, to be entirely ignorant of such a society,—a familiar but not long effective lodge trick. But some have confessed that they have, under fear of death and by order of their secret and probably unknown superiors, stabbed and wounded men. One of the witnesses from Naples revealed the names of many members of this lodge. Another denounced seventy members and declared there were 220 not yet arrested. He described the society as divided into Camorristi, Puodiotti, and Giovanotti, the lower grades being subject to the higher. This evidence and that of other informers caused great excitement in the court, the prisoners increasing the confusion by their shouts and gesticulations, until the uproar grew almost into a riot. While such scenes are transpiring at home, Italy should be slow in provoking war because Americans object to their introduction in this country.

LAURA HAVILAND.

All the bishops of the Methodist churches in this country, numbering twenty-six, are unanimous and unequivocal in their opinion that there should be no opening of the World's Fair on the Sabbath day. With an exception or two, the twenty bishops of the Protestant Episcopal churches agree with them. The Episcopal chiefs among the colored churches and the Moravians are a unit on the same side. The Roman Catholic bishops are divided, some favoring an afternoon opening, others none at all. The opinions of these church leaders should reflect that of the people, as well as point the way toward a perfect observance of the day.

The lottery company of Louisiana have gained a temporary victory. Last year they applied for a renewal of their charter for twenty-five years, offering to pay over a million dollars for the privilege. A bill embodying the requisite amendments to the State constitution, known as the lottery amendments, was adopted by a two-thirds vote of the Legislature. But Governor Nichols vetoed it, although the friends of the measure argued that he had no right to do so under the constitution. God struck a senator with death, and so prevented the passage of the act over the veto. Then the Secretary of State refused to promulgate the act, and the lottery company sued for a mandamus to compel the secretary to issue the paper, so that a lawful election could be held, in which it was hoped the popular vote would adopt the amendment, aad establish the crime for a quarter of a century more. The U. S. district court has decided for the lottery, and the case will go again to the people for endorsement or rejection. Since the case was on issue in a popular election before, the tide of opposition to the infamous business has risen higher and higher. The U. S. mails are closed to it and its agents are prosecuted sharply in our Northern cities. It is sincerely hoped that this outside influence will have its effect upon the voters of Louisiana, and stimulate them to an act of courage by which this question will be settled, and settled right.

The Tract Society anniversary mentioned in our Washington letter was the sixty-sixth. During the two-thirds of a century the Society has issued 7,853 different publications in this country. Nearly every State was visited by some of its 151 colporteurs last year. These private workers found 21,854 families who never attend church and 5,719 with a copy of the Bible. These colporteurs have a broad field among the estimated population of twenty million not reached by the denominational agencies. By their side are laboring the agents of the American Sunday School Union. Though in some respects their work is imperfect, yet their agency is of vast importance in its evangelizing force. The Tract Society still retains its conservative management, which years ago was subjected to severe criticism because of its sins of omission on the slavery question. It is still unlikely to issue tracts advocating unsettled or at at least unpopular reforms. Yet so far as it circulates sound Scripture truth, it aids all true reforms; for all truths are consistent with each other; and if all men obey the command to love God supremely and their neighbor as themselves, that breaks up lodges everywhere.

THE GREAT ROMISH REBELLION IN INDIA.

BY REV. WALLACE J. GLADWIN.

10,000 souls secede from Rome.—Feuds and fightings in the so-called United Church.—A bishop calls on our correspondent.—What can Western Christians do in this important crisis in India?

Before me lies a pamphlet entitled "The Church Militant in Ceylon and in India. Audi alteram partem. By a Catholic. Ceylon, Columbo, December, '88."

I was in Columbo at that date, and met Dr. Pinto, the delegate to Portugal and Rome, who is one of the chief leaders in this remarkable secession from Rome. On my return from America I met Bishop Alvares, the head of the movement. From my personal acquaintance with these leaders, from the publications of both sides, and from my observations among Padroadists, Propagandists and Syrians I can give some accurate information as to this great religious revolution.

1. THE PADROADISTS (pronounced, pad-roe-add-ist.) The pamphlet says:

"The Catholic religion and Western civilization were first brought to the East by the Portuguese who, by their heroic deeds and martyrdom in many cases, gave to the church of Rome hundreds of thousands of converts all over Asia. History is clear and positive on this point. For these favors done to the church, the popes granted to the Portuguese monarchs the right of patronage over the Eastern churches."

This immense jurisdiction meant thousands of comfortable positions for Portuguese priests and officials, for state and church mutually helped each other's cause and shared the spoils. The many thousands of descendants of those original converts are called Indo-Portuguese, and are usually the most bigoted and blindest of Romanists. They abound along the western coast of India and in Ceylon.

2. THE PROPAGANDISTS. The Congregatio de Propaganda Fide was instituted in Rome in 1627, with the object of sending bishops and priests to propagate the Catholic faith in pagan countries. It was doubtless a part of the great scheme of the Jesuits for conquering the whole world to the power of the Pope. In 1636 the famous and infamous oath of secrecy was promulgated in the order of Jesuits. In 1639 the Propagandist bishops and priests were sent to India. Then commenced—

3. THE TWO HUNDRED YEARS' WAR. The Portuguese resented the encroachment upon their preserves. In 1677 "the learned and saintly bishop of Braga" was sent as delegate of Portugal to Rome. In his long and strong appeal to the Pope such charges as the following occur: "The Propagandists violate our rights and blacken the authority of our kings; they disturb the peace in the State of India and usurp the limits assigned to us by the Holy See." He says, "they were neither upright nor honest men." etc., etc.

Such were the charges of an archbishop in 1677, and the pamphlet before me, printed 211 years after (1888), describes the Propaganda priests in even stronger terms. It says: "They perjured and they lied; they assaulted churches and they desecrated graves; they falsified documents, and they rebelled against lawful authority; they perpetrated every imaginable iniquity to the disgrace of the religion of Jesus the meek."

Mark you, this is a quarrel that has been going on inside the Roman Catholic church all these two centuries. Boasted unity—what a sham! Let us have a little more of the Padroadists' opinions of their Italian-Romish brethren. They say that several newspapers, books, pamphlets, and other publications in India have from time to time laid bare some of the Propaganda doings, all having given up the task as too tediously nauseating; for there is nothing, almost, which these propagators have not stooped to do, from the smallest peccadillo down to the making of sham miracles. It was only a few years back that His Lordship Leo Menrin, a Jesuit vicar apostolic of Bombay and bishop of Ascalon, attempted a miracle by suspending a statue of the blessed mother of God at Chandol, Bombay, by means of a rope fastened to the backbone of the image, and getting the latter to move up and down at his command in the church. Providence undertook to unmask the hero, for at the moment the miracle was being performed before a large crowd, to prove to them that the Padroadists were a lot of schismatics, the rope gave way and the statue fell to the ground and was shattered into pieces, amidst the confusion of the preacher and the parishioners.

We cannot follow them through even an index of this tedious internal conflict. It was carried on, as only papists make war. See the Book of Revelation. Here is an open charge. That Cardinal Tournon was killed by the Jesuits in China, and a strong hint that other leaders were murdered by them. The Pope sent out concordats and commissioners. The Propagandists fought as tigers, or as vipers, as occasion required. In 1883 they even petitioned the British government, "a secular Protestant power," against their Portuguese co-religionists.

4. THE CRISIS came in 1888. Dr. Lisboa Pinto, having visited Portugal and Rome as a delegate of the Padroadists, and finding the papal throne so fully in the hands of the Jesuits that nothing short of a blind, slavish submission could ever secure peace, the Portuguese, to the number of about 10,000, revolted from the papacy. Not having sufficient light and grace to come out into the New Testament independency, they joined an Eastern church.

5. THE SYRIAN CHURCH. With its Patriarch at Antioch in Syria, the Syrian Church has had a strong chain of churches in South India for centuries. I visited them in 1889, just before I sailed for America. One church they told me was 400 years old. They are better than the Romanists in some points, though still in dull twilight as to saving truth.

6. THE POSITION OF THE INDO-PORTUGUESE is most interesting. From my conversations with Dr. L. Pinto and Bishop A. F. Alvares, as well as from their publications, I feel that this revolution among the Romanists of India is very important to the cause of saving truth, and ought to be improved by special activity on the part of the people of God. See these ten thousand souls groping their way out of deep midnight into vague twilight; out of Egyptian bondage into wilderness wanderings. Who will help to guide them out into the light of grace and the Canaan of free and full salvation?

7. WHAT CAN BE DONE? India is said to have a million and a half of Roman Catholics, and as far as I know, there is not one Protestant missionary at work specially for their salvation. Who will come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty dragon of anti-Christ?

First, We need a large supply of Scriptures to send among these people. Especially are small portions needed to sell at one or two pence each; Scripture leaflets to be given out freely, wall texts for posting and text cards for the young, etc. These should be in Portuguese, chiefly, followed by many in Mahrati, Canerese, Malayan, Tamil and Singalese.

Second, Some special mission workers are needed for these people. They are following an apostate Christianity, which has degenerated into heathenism. Romanism is terribly in the way of the true conversion of souls in India. For years I have been circulating books and tracts against it, but that is not enough. The Romanists need evangelizing. They need the personal labors of consecrated, careful and spiritual workers. "Who then is willing to consecrate his service this day unto the Lord" for this line of work in India?

Third, Earnest prayers, is needed that workers and means may be speedily available in this great work for souls.

Yours in Christ for "all Asia."

WALLACE J. GLADWIN.
Co-editor India Watchman.

Bombay, India.

P. S.—Since I commenced the above letter, God has blessed us with the conversion of an ex-novitiate of the Benedictines. He is happily saved, and is now helping in my office. He wrote the above copy of my letter. Praise God with us and expect far greater blessings.

THE SECRET LODGE.

BY R. S. MORTON.

The secret lodges are all wrong,
Nor, can it e'er be doubted,
However cunning, bold and strong,
They will some day be routed!

Because, no Scripture can be found
Which favors their pretension;
We know their theory is unsound,
A scheme of man's invention.

Freemasonry, and all its kin,
Proposes a salvation,
With no atonement made for sin,
And no propitiation!

It will not do, for all men are
Born under condemnation,
And all their works, however fair,
Can't purchase their salvation.

And, woe to those who build their hope
Upon fraternal Orders!
They are a sliding, fatal slope,
Which on perdition borders!

And such is Lodgery to all
Who trust it for salvation;
It will at last upon them fall,
And seal their condemnation!

The only hope for ruined man
Is found alone in Jesus;
'Tis he, and only he, who can
From condemnation free us!

Millville, Canada.

"ITALIAN COLONIES."

[Bishop Atticus G. Haygood, D.D., in the Advance.]

During the excitement that followed the New Orleans uprising against what was believed to be the murderous Mafia, the people of this country were made familiar with a very ugly phrase, "The Italian colonies." From most of our larger cities the morning telegrams brought reports of the meetings, the sayings and doings of Italian immigrants. The resolutions adopted by some of these meetings were exceedingly bitter against our government. Newspapers published in our cities and printed in the Italian language, denounced our government and called on the kingdom of Italy to take active measures. Some went so far as to say that in the event of war the Italians in this country would "side with the mother country." And these people continue to come by the ship-load.

It is most natural that the Italians in the United States, as well as in the dominion of King Humbert, should have been profoundly excited by the slaying of their countrymen; it is a great pity that they did not last fall hold meetings to denounce the assassins who shot to death, in front of his own house, Chief Hennessey.

But what, let us inquire, is an "Italian colony?" Are these people American citizens, or subjects of the King of Italy? There is reason to believe that the majority of Italians taking part in these bitter indignation meetings are citizens, by naturalization, of the United States. What are they when they denounce our government and call upon Italy to make war upon us? Just what any other American citizen would be who should do the same thing—traitors. Have they not, under the most solemn oaths, renounced allegiance to Italy and sworn allegiance to the government of the United States?

Suppose the people holding these meetings and calling on Italy to make war upon us are not naturalized citizens; suppose they are still the bona fide citizens of the kingdom of Italy; what, then, is their attitude? They are visitors here, guests on sufferance, denouncing with bitter threats our government, that, in its broad tolerance, gives them opportunity to pursue their business and protects them when they obey the laws. One class of these people, naturalized citizens, have forgotten, most likely despised, their allegiance to the government of the United States; the others, unnaturalized and still claiming the protection of Italy, abuse their privilege of residence and do all they can to foment trouble between our country and theirs.

The people of the United States have been the most generous and prodigal of their gifts to foreigners. History cannot match the welcome we have given to the men of other nations. They have shared every opportunity our nation enjoys. We have given them cheap homes on our public lands; we have allowed them to become citizens and voters before they can write or speak our language intelligently. We have still one right that we should enforce: that they shall, in return for the favors granted them, become American citizens. We want no "Italian colonies" in this country; nor German, nor Hungarian, nor other foreign colonies. Every such colony is in itself a storm-center and, to the full extent of its influence, a menace to our institutions.

There is no other government in the world that would have tolerated for an hour such meetings, such speeches, such editorials, such resolutions as the American people have witnessed and listened to during the last few weeks. Suppose the Americans in Italy had met in Rome, or Naples, and conducted and expressed themselves as the Italians did in many of our American cities. True, no other nation is strong enough to allow what we allow. But no nation is strong enough to harbor thousands of hostile foreigners in its bosom. This "Italian colony" business should be considered by the American people. Foreign newspapers published in this country and hostile to this country ask a little too much liberty.

Some things recent events make tolerably plain to those who really love our institutions and the government that supports them.

1. The Chinese are not the only people to be kept out. Low-class people of every land should be turned back at Castle Garden, or at whatever other gate to our inheritance they approach. Our laws concerning immigrants are too lax; such people as have been holding these fierce meetings, for the most part, are injurious, and we do not want them.

2. No foreign language should be taught in our public schools and the study of English should be compulsory. If Italians and others don't like to learn the language of our people, let them stay away or go hence.

3. Native Americans should give no aid or countenance to newspapers published in foreign languages in this country.

4. Full citizenship should not come so cheap. It is bad for native, English-speaking Americans that any foreigner may vote him down after a few years' residence. It is bad for the foreigner himself, for, so voting, he votes without knowledge. Now and then a foreigner may become a capable citizen in seven years, and to deny him the ballot longer might be a hardship; but laws do not contemplate the exceptions. Is there any other country on earth that allows every right and function of citizenship so cheaply?

The average foreigner needs twenty-one years to unlearn his old-world notions and to be capable of American citizenship quite as much as the boy just born needs twenty-one years to learn enough to be a voter. The boy just born waits twenty-one years; it would be a short probation for the Italians who have been calling on King Humbert to chastise the government of their adoption.

Sheffield, Ala.

THE RELATION OF THE CHURCHES TO THE TEMPERANCE QUESTION.

A PAPER READ BEFORE THE LATE MEETING OF ELGIN CONGREGATIONAL ASSOCIATION, GENEVA, ILL., BY REV. O. M. VAN SWEARINGEN; AND VOTED TO BE PRINTED.

Perhaps a better form of expression would be, "The relation of our churches to the question of the prohibition of the liquor traffic." I take it as granted, however, that as Christian people we are enabled in the light of recent years to see eye to eye in this matter, so that the temperance question has come to mean, Shall intoxicating liquors be sold under any form of law to be used as a beverage?—a question involving the existence of the American saloon.

While all are in favor of what is known as moral suasion for the drinker, I think the members of our churches generally are opposed to the liquor traffic in any form. I need scarcely speak to you, to-day, of the stupendous importance of the question I am discussing. I am persuaded that it is the most important one now engaging the attention of the American people. The liquor question in some form is constantly coming to the surface. You can scarcely ride upon a railroad train without hearing people talking about it; when you go to the postoffice, men are discussing it; newspapers, when not subsidized by the liquor power, denounce the saloon system; in the churches ministers preach about it; in our mid-week prayer meetings it is made the subject of prayer; in political conventions politicians clench their fists and swear about it, and demand that "this thing be not mixed in." There is not a section of our land where this temperance fever is not felt to-day.

What is the message borne to us on these waves of tumult? No matter what our political opinions, the message brings to us the conviction that somewhere in the political organism of this nation there is cause for it. There is poison in the veins of the body politic which produces this fever of unrest, and of which the saloon is the eruption; and it will not answer any longer to hurl the epithets "crank" and "fool" at the agitators. These "cranks" and "fools" now embrace the best men of our times. And do you ask me when this excitement will cease? I answer: Never; until the grog-shop is forever eliminated from the political machinery of this country, and that will never be so long as the grog-shop has an existence. The liquor-king of this country cracks his whip of political corruption over our professional politicians and commands, "Do what I want done or die." Joseph Cook once said that King Alcohol has the Democratic party by the throat and the Republican party by the beard."

Do you deplore taking the question into politics? You cannot help yourself. It is already there, but not by the action of temperance men. The saloon led the way in making it a political question. Though having gone into politics itself, it cries to the church and its ministers, "Keep out of politics. Attend to your own business, and let us alone." But since the saloon appeals unto Cæsar, unto Cæsar the church must go. Why, a man can scarcely run for office on a regular party ticket but the rum power will demand that he prostrate himself at the foot of the throne. If he seeks a nomination for any important office, he must go into the convention with the marks of his defilement upon him. The smell of his breath must admit him to favor with the delegates from the grog-shops.

Do you think it not so bad as this? Investigation will prove the facts. That very class of men is doing our law-making and manipulating the political machine to-day. Just take a look at that Senatorial party accompanying the remains of Senator Hearst to their last resting-place in California a few days ago. If any credit can be given to reports, it was one of the most disgraceful junketing tours ever sent out at public expense. The funeral train was plentifully supplied with liquors; and it is asserted that the drinking and carousing became so disgraceful that the management of the road was forced, in the interest of common decency, to prohibit the further dispensing of liquors before the train reached Chicago. On the return trip, according to dispatches from different points along the route, the most disgraceful scenes occurred. Ten barrels of empty bottles and many that were not empty constituted a portion of the freight, (according to a prominent railroad man,) when the train reached Dallas, Texas. Not a drop of water could be found on board the train; even the water-tanks were filled with orange-wine. The empty bottles were carried back to Washington in order that the Sergeant-at-Arms might "O. K." the expense bill.

This Senatorial party was denounced by people and press all along the line for its bad example to the country and the expense to the people entailed by such junketing trips. The conduct of the party was a national disgrace. It is stated that the affair will cost the tax-payers anywhere between $40,000 and $100,000. All honor to Senator Stanford for refusing to allow his car to remain attached to the funeral train!

In our own State body drunken Legislators are frequently seen; and I have it from the lips of a former member of the Illinois Legislature that the transaction of business was often impossible on account of the "fuddled" condition of our Representatives at the State Capitol. A special from Jefferson City, Missouri, dated March 28th, states that the Missouri Legislature closed amidst scenes of drunkenness and debauchery. On Sunday preceding the close, all the saloons were running wide open, and were thronged from morning until late at night with Senators and Representatives, drinking, singing, yelling and carousing. Gov. Francis gave a reception at the executive mansion which was attended by about one hundred Legislators, nearly half of them drunk. The refreshments were beer, milk-punch, and Jefferson City whisky. With two or three exceptions, the entire St. Louis delegation passed the whole week in one prolonged spree, drinking, gambling, and otherwise violating the laws. The fact is that in the legislative bodies of our States and Territories the habit of drinking is so common that drunkenness is no mark of distinction.

Do you inquire the cause of all this? Because the politics of our country are so completely under the liquor power that no political party can hope to elect its candidates without its consent; and the Christian voters walk meekly to the polls and elect the men named by the saloon, and who could never be elected save by Christian votes. Our several States are largely governed by the great cities located in them, and almost every great city in America is governed by the American saloon. Whisky is the dictator in the great cities.

It is plain that the churches must take hold of the matter and redeem our cities from rum-rule or our free institutions are a failure. And, I believe they will yet arise in the majesty and might of awakened conscience and indignant protest, and proclaim a declaration of independence from the most degrading and pitiless tyranny that ever corrupted and cursed a people.

But let us view the importance of the temperance question from another point. Let us take an economic point of view: The productive industries of the Republic on sea and land do not much exceed ten billions of dollars, while a thousand millions of dollars are expended for liquors. The national thirst consumes every year more than one-fifth of the annual income of the United States from all agriculture, all manufactures, all fisheries, all mines of gold, silver, lead, iron, copper, coal, marble, stone and petroleum, together with all the earnings of all the railroads, or a sum equal to all the live stock in the American Republic. This is just what is used up every year in strong drink!

The total wages of the laboring classes is less than four-fifths of our annual drink bill. The clothing bill of the United States for men, women and children, including clothes, boots and shoes, hats, bonnets and gloves, hosiery and other articles, is only about one-fourth of the liquor bill for the same time. If the money were devoted to the purchase of flour, it would buy five barrels to every man, woman and child in the country. Now, suppose that flour loaded on teams, ten barrels on each load and allow each team twenty-four feet, it would form a procession extending nearly four times around the globe.

Why, the liquor bill of the United States would pay the national debt in a year and a half. Now, if this money could be saved, which is worse than thrown away (for it breeds indolence and crime and suffering and woe), this nation would never hear the wail of hard times from now till the millennium.

Turn, if you please, these millions into legitimate channels of trade and you have inaugurated a grander scheme of protection than was ever dreamed by political economists, for you have provided for the protection of the home and the helpless ones in it.

But, look in another direction. Our churches must regard the subject with intense interest. In the liquor-traffic we have the most wide-spread, destructive antagonism Christianity has to meet in all our land.

Look at the facts. God has a trifle over sixty thousand temples and eighty thousand ministers for the salvation of men. Satan, or Bacchus, has over two hundred thousand temples and five hundred thousand priests for the destruction and damnation of men. Four rum-holes to every church and six bar-tenders to every minister. Then thirty times as much money is spent every year in drinking places as is given for all church and benevolent purposes in the whole country.

Think of this: The annual drink-bill of the United States is over four times larger than the value of all the church property of all the denominations. In one year the money spent for no good would build four times as many churches of the same grade as now exist. But worse still, the results of this traffic defy description. It sends one hundred thousand criminals to prison annually, and two hundred thousand more to the poor-house, and sends two hundred thousand orphans into the street shelterless, shivering and hungry. It sends to drunkards' graves not less than seventy-five thousand men and women. Seventy-five acres of drunkards' graves filled by seventy-five thousand fellow beings every twelve months. See the horrible procession marching in fours, one hundred and eighty-four miles long. Every eight minutes from January to December one falls out of the ranks into a drunkard's grave, and the saloons have another ready to put in his place, so that the horrible procession is kept full. And then hear the voice of the Almighty declaring that no drunkard shall enter into the kingdom of heaven. Seventy-five thousand souls doomed to endless woe by drink annually.

Have Christian churches nothing to do with this evil? Some one has said, "That is a godless soul that is not concerned with God's quarrel."

What, then, is the relation of our churches to the drink question? I answer, that relation must ever be one of uncompromising and eternal opposition to the whole saloon system. The question you wish to have answered is, how to rid the land of the curse of the saloon? or rather, what part must the churches bear in its extinction?

They must avail themselves of the means of warfare within their reach. The preachers do preach against the saloons, and the church is vocal with prayer for the abolition of this great curse.

The whisky people do not hear the sermons; and God fails to answer prayers which men are able to answer themselves.

What do I mean? Just this: There are but two ways to deal with the saloons: license them or prohibit them. Every man must take his choice. He shall not dodge and take comfort in calling it "tax." Nobody but temperance men ever call a saloon license a tax. Saloon-keepers always call that document a "license," a privilege to engage in just the sort of business that decent, law-abiding people object to. The law says he may sell, and every voter is responsible for what the law says. But does not that thought involve the duty of the citizen at the ballot-box? Indeed it does.

The question, as I have already said, is a political one as well as a moral one. And I have also intimated that it is not a political one by the choice of temperance people. People who advocate prohibition are not to blame for dragging the temperance question into politics. As far back as 1867, before a temperance party had been organized, the Brewers' Congress, assembled in the city of Chicago, resolved: "That we will sustain no candidate of whatever party in any election who is in any way disposed toward the total abstinence cause." And they have frequently reiterated that sentiment from that time to this.

Now, what followed that declaration in 1867? We all know that for years one political party has been frantically proclaiming its undying opposition to what it calls sumptuary legislation. Nor has that party been alone in bidding for the saloon vote. As far back as the Greeley campaign, another great party went into the campaign, emphasizing its position as the brewers' party, by the adoption of the famous "Raster Resolution." This resolution was so carefully worded that its meaning might be misunderstood by the casual reader; but Mr. Raster himself declared that it was against temperance and Sunday laws, and that the whole platform committee so understood it. And that same party at its last national convention "renewed its allegiance to all previous platforms," so that candidates elect stand on the same platform to-day. I only mention these things in passing to show the great peril to this nation in the existing party competition for the liquor vote, thus courting the favor of the criminal classes, and bartering away the public morals and the purity of the ballot for party success. Also to show how Christian temperance men have closed their eyes to facts, and have continued from year to year to fight with tongue and pen and prayers, and then have defeated their own aims at the polls in State and national elections.

To my mind, the whole matter is plain. The saloon must be voted out. It is the only way to get it out. It will never be voted out while professional politicians make the issues in politics. Why? Let us get the answer to a question or two. What is the policy of the Democratic party in this State and in the nation touching the liquor traffic? License. What is the policy of the Republican party in this State and in the nation touching the liquor traffic? License? Then what shall the voter do who is opposed to the license of the traffic? Let every Christian voter answer that question for himself.

What, then, are our conclusions?

1. The saloon ought to go.

2. The saloon is in politics for its continued existence.

3. It is therefore a question for settlement at the ballot-box.

4. Politicians will never make the question a political issue. They dare not do so.

5. The Christian sentiment of the churches of the land must make it such, and demand the opportunity for the expression of Christian sentiment at the polls.

6. It will become the supreme issue in politics when the Christian temperance sentiment of this nation demands it, and never before.

Finally, the principles of the religion we profess will ever make our churches the sworn enemies of the saloons. The saloons are the sworn enemies of the churches. Our people must therefore bear aloft the banner of their warfare bearing the inscription, "NO COMPROMISE," and refusing to be deceived by false issues, press the battle of an aggressive warfare "For God and home and native land."

FROM THE BROOKLYN CHURCHES.

The productiveness of a single life is illustrated in the late pastor of Lafayette avenue. He founded a Young People's Association of wide fame. Dr. Clark told Dr. Gregg that he got the idea of the Christian Endeavor movement from this successful association. So if he is the father, Dr. Cuyler is the grandfather of this now international organization.

There are now over 15,000 local societies of Christian Endeavor in thirty-two evangelical denominations. The Presbyterians lead, the Congregationalists next, then the Baptists, and the Methodists are fourth. Each of these four denominations have over 2,000, the Presbyterians having 3,500. Dr. Clark has gone abroad, but will return in June and be present at the International Christian Endeavor Convention, to be held July 9th to the 12th, in Minneapolis.

The papers seem very much troubled here because Dr. Talmage has decided to have a clean shaven face. The Brooklyn Eagle says that his side whiskers reduced the effect of his massive cheeks and rocky forhead; they seemed to say to his mouth, "Thus far, no further;" they looked at a distance like fire escapes, but removed leave a bovine face canine. He has paralyzed one branch of American art, that of caricature, and made a lot of chromos unsaleable. The charge of moral obliquity is gravely added, the assumption of the similitude of youth just at the door of ripened age. New York papers have been so much interested in the matter, they print the face with and without the beard; go into details of description that seem to suggest a clever advertising agent behind the whole matter.

The theme of Talmage's first sermon in the new house yesterday, was an account of the stones he had brought from the Holy Land to beautify this costly sanctuary, about which some positive assertions were made, as for example: "That stone was one of the rocks rent at the crucifixion. It heard the cry, 'It is finished.' Those stones marked 'Mt. Sinai;' felt the earthquake when the law was given." He is very sure about this. No devout Catholic is more convinced of the genuineness of his relics than Dr. Talmage is in reference to these. Opinions of scholars are of no weight, when one has an end to gain. Archdeacon Farrar says in his "Life of Christ," that we know nothing about the locality of Calvary, for data are wholly wanting; fortunately, too, for he says we need no relics in spiritual worship.

The startling accident which some days ago befell the new pastor of the Church of the Covenant, and which it is feared will end fatally, awakens wide sympathy among those who had seen with admiration the promising beginning Rev. Dr. Bothwell has made here. While holding a small cork between his teeth, he laughed and it slipped into the trachea and lodged in the left bronchus. He lies in the hospital and has to bear a third operation Wednesday. He was formerly president of Straight University.

The coming meeting of the State Conference will be a meeting of unusual importance, on account of the efforts of the Plymouth Church to secure the presence of those who are the most talked of people just now. One is Dr. Rainsford, the popular rector of St. George's. "Just too lovely for anything," as one enthusiastic lady says, as quoted by the Tribune to-day. One "whose performances are equal to Bernhart" to delight her. He has a noble physique. It would not be strange if he were annoyed as Dr. Phillips Brooks has been by fashionable yet hysterical women, who flit from theatre to church and church to theatre in search of sensuous excitement. The eccentric Thomas Beecher of Elmira, will talk on a Working Church. Prof. Briggs, President Harper and other of the "advanced thinkers," will have their say, but men of still larger calibre, like Dr. McCosh of Princeton, will contribute to the profit of the occasion.

Initial steps have been taken looking towards the possible union of Brooklyn and New York City. That there would be some decided advantages in such municipal consolidation cannot be doubted. On the other hand, there are evils incident to the management of gigantic corporations, such as the government of a city of several millions.

OCCASIONAL.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Cigar smoking in the lodge,—Another Masonic minister in trouble.—The lodge and prohibition.—A degenerate legislature.

No thoughtful person who reads the secret society column of a daily paper, ought to have any doubts regarding the convivial tendencies of the lodge, and what kind of influence it is exerting on our young men who join it. Here are a few clippings out of hundreds that might be given: "While the Sir Knights were enjoying their cigars they were agreeably entertained with speeches." "After cigars were lighted, Chief Veteran Charles H. Vollintine called to order," etc. "Sociability reigns unchecked"—speaking of the meetings of a well-known and popular secret society—"and the best of cigars fill the air with their blue, fragrant smoke." What Christian wife, mother or sister can read items like the above, and not feel alarm at the very thought of their dear ones joining these fraternities; and being drawn into the associations, and listening to the talk indulged in under this inspiration.

The unpleasantness between Rev. Mr. Lewis, Baptist pastor of Malden, and his people, is taking up considerable space in the papers. As to the truth or untruth of the charges made against him, only those who are acquainted with the affair from the beginning can judge; but like the majority of pastors charged with immoral conduct, he is, according to the statement of these same newspapers, a member of the Masonic lodge at Malden, and a regular attendant at its meetings. No wonder these blind leaders of the blind so often fall into the ditch, and find that all their lodge relationships cannot wash them clean again in the eyes of reflecting Christian people!

"The Board of Police Commissioners granted 858 licenses this noon." So reads an item of local news in the Boston dailies yesterday. The whole number to be granted is 896. Think of it! Nearly nine hundred rumsellers granted a license to put out the light of domestic happiness in thousands of homes, and murder, body and soul, as many unfortunates as they can trap into their dens.

The old burying ground on Copp's Hill, it is said, stands in the way of the projected harbor improvements, and will have to go. It is not pleasant to think that the dead who have rested quietly in their graves so many years must be disturbed for such a cause. I do not believe any foreign foe will ever break the quiet of those peaceful mounds with the thunders of a hostile cannonade, but who can predict what scenes of strife and bloodshed may yet be the result of our free and loose way of dealing with the moral problems now pressing upon us? If the American Theosophical society, which has just closed its annual convention in Steinert Hall, is to be believed, our fate for the next hundred years is in their hands; but this is too esoteric a religion and deals too much in metaphysical phrases that nobody very well understands, ever to be a rival of Christianity. It is rather singular that the local branches are called lodges, and the magazine which is its organ in London is named Lucifer.

Not one of the least evils of lodge methods in temperance is that it divides Prohibitionists, and causes petty feuds and small quarrels to take the place of that brotherly union without which there can be no large nor successful planning to defeat the common enemy. It seems that even among members of the same order, there is not always the brotherly charity one would look for; else why does Mr. Stearns of the National Temperance Society, who is himself a Good Templar, circulate reports to the injury of a deceased brother and chief of the order, John B. Finch? The story that the latter received money from Democratic sources to help the Prohibition party, and that this was winked at by the leaders, sounds a little stale; but if it could be known how much the lodge has had to do with the non-partisan question that has caused so many splits in the temperance ranks, it would be a very interesting story.

The frivolous character of the men that Massachusetts sends to her General Court was well illustrated last week when Senate and House decided to have an early and a short session Monday, in order to give them time to go to a base ball game to which they had received invitations. One blushes for such degenerate legislators.

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

REFORM NEWS.

CLOSE OF THE BRIEF NEW YORK CAMPAIGN.

160 W. 36TH ST., NEW YORK, April 30.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Returning from a lecture, near midnight at the New York end of the Brooklyn bridge, I saw a little boy scarce ten years of age trying to sell some papers that nobody wanted at that time of the night. His head and feet were bare; as the chill ocean breeze swept past, his whole frame would seem to shake. The big tears which he strove in vain to repress found their way down his cheeks. I could not tarry to inquire his history. Perhaps drunken parents awaited his return with threats of punishment unless he brought the required amount of money. How thankful should the boys be who read the Cynosure that they have Christian parents!

I have largely carried out the program sent in last week's report. The addresses given in Rev. Kidd's and Rev. Carson's churches were on the evenings usually given to the prayer meeting. Many personal kindnesses and expressions of approbation were given. The lecture in the Free Methodist church, Brooklyn, as I had anticipated from last year's experience, was warmly received. The pastor did not forget the potatoes, as he happily termed the collection, evidently referring to a story with which his people are familiar. I find such "potatoes" as I received very essential to reform work, especially in cities. Any having recent copies of the Cynosure that they desire to distribute can be assured they will not be wasted if sent to Rev. J. T. Logan, No. 124 16th St. Brooklyn, N. Y. Bro. Logan has prepared a table in his church where reform literature is kept to distribute to those who may profit by receiving it.

I took dinner on Sabbath with Bro. John McLean, one of our right-hand men in Brooklyn. He invited me to teach a class of young ladies and address the Sabbath-school, of which he is superintendent. About one hundred and fifty bright faces looked up into mine as I talked of one who foolishly thought he could get away from God. Jonah got into trouble, and had to return before he could get peace, just as every one will who does as he did. It is foolishness to try to run or hide away from God, because we can't do it. After Sabbath-school I preached the Word to Rev. Andrews' people. Bro. Andrews labors under many difficulties. The section in which his church is located is largely German, and there are other churches which they choose rather than the United Presbyterian.

Perhaps no one in this section labors more hearly against the lodge than Pastor Skov, of the Danish-Lutheran church, Perth Amboy, N. J. I found my lecture had been thoroughly advertised and every thing in readiness when I arrived on Tuesday evening. A collection together with many remarks told of the people's interest. There are those who will gladly assist in securing a large hall where the people more generally can be accommodated on my return.

Pastor Jacoben of another Lutheran church, expressed his approbation by subscribing to our paper. Accompanied by Pastor Skov, I secured the subscription to our paper of nearly all of his people we were able to see in the short time I could remain. Nearly every one in New York seems to be moving or cleaning house. I will move too from here to Jersey City; thence to Newark, N. J., where I speak Friday evening. Thence home. May we all reach our Father's home on high at last. W. B. STODDARD.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TRUSTED IOWA REFORMERS.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—For the past two weeks the weather, roads, moonlight and sacrificing ministers, have all conspired to make my reform meetings unusually successful. I lectured in Iowa county, at Victor, Ladora, Geneva Bluff and Marengo. I was gratified by my consultation with Bro. S. A. Gilley, pastor of the Wesleyan church at Marengo. He is radical, clear-headed, and understands the trend of reforms and "what Israel ought to do." As president of the Iowa Christian Association, he proposes to work up next fall a State Anti-secret convention that will include the discussion of all collateral reform issues. He considers it unwise to nominate a separate anti-secret ticket at the present time in Iowa, because prohibition is the absorbing issue, and the influence of anti-secret reformers should be exerted to prevent that party from being controlled by secretists. He has twice been candidate for Congress on the Prohibition platform, and has renderd important service to the anti-secret and national reform cause, by securing resolutions in convention platforms, recognizing Christ's supremacy and excluding recognitions of secret organizations.

Last week I lectured twice at Independence, Walker, Greenwood, Hoover's church, and once at Quasqueton. Bro. Geo. Fry, pastor of the Wesleyan church at Walker, worked up these meetings, and drove me from point to point. Not one in a hundred outside of the Wesleyan church would sacrifice as much in reform work. I was deeply interested in the struggle of the Wesleyans for moral reform, at the Hoover church near Quasqueton. This elegant church is a monument to the self-sacrificing liberality of Charles Hoover, Sr., who built it entirely at his own expense. He settled here before the war and his sons and grandsons now number about a score. When he was digging all alone for the foundation of this church, it inspired him with new strength when neighbors passed and scoffed and said he would never succeed. But from the time it was completed an element in the community who hated the radical reform principles of Wesleyanism have been keeping up a constant fight to get the church from Wesleyan control. But they have failed in every effort to silence the testimony of these witnesses, whose testimony so torments them. I more and more admire the Wesleyan church for its uncompromising attitude to anti-secrecy and other reforms. I know of no denomination that occupy as high ground on this question. They have no fellowship with secretists in their church conferences or associations; not even will they have a representative of another church in their conferences, who is a member of a secret order. I believe theirs is the only consistent position. We certainly have fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness if we have any organic church association with secretists. M. A. GAULT.

NATIONAL REFORM IN BOSTON.

BOSTON, Mass., April 27th, 1891.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—I reached the "Hub" last Thursday morning. That afternoon I preached for Rev. Wm. Graham in the First Reformed Presbyterian church. Their church is located on the corner of Ferdinand and Isabella streets. The house and lot cost them $65,000. It is a valuable and desirable property. Bro. Graham has a congregation of 400 members. There are few more painstaking, laborious and successful pastors. He stands as the unflinching foe of the lodge.

On Friday evening I preached in the General Assembly Presbyterian church, corner of Barkley and Columbus avenues, Rev. Wm. Adams, D.D., pastor. This congregation has 600 members. There was an audience of 400. Providence prepared the way. When we went there we found Bro. Adams in his study. He was suffering from the grip. As soon as we stated our business, he said: "God has sent you here. I did not know how I would get through this evening's service. But the way is clear now. You will have a congregation of 400." The secretary of the Y. M. C. A., Mr. McDonald, was present. At the close he came forward and asked if I would not come over and give that same talk to their young men on Sabbath afternoon a week. This arrangement was made at once.

On Saturday afternoon I heard the Sabbath-school lesson expounded in Tremont Temple. Perhaps 500 teachers were present. Tremont Temple, by the terms of the legacy, is open for all public reform movements. The Union Baptist congregation worships there. Their last pastor, Rev. Dr. Haynes, was an attractive and sensational preacher. He had the house filled to its utmost capacity. The conservative element were not satisfied. So he withdrew and united with the M. E. church; and is now serving the People's Church, which was built by Dr. Hamilton. The Temple congregation has called Dr. Lorimer, of Chicago, their former pastor. I have consulted the deacons of this congregation about having a reform sermon in Tremont Temple next Sabbath evening.

Rev. John Hood, the pastor of the U. P. church, opened his door at once. Also Rev. Hurley, of the A. M. E. church, offered his pulpit. Rev. Burton Crankshaw, of the Second Baptist church, Cambridge, set a day for the National Reform cause in his church. There are many evidences that God is with us in this work.

J. M. FOSTER.

LODGE PAGANISM AND DESPOTISM.

AVALON, Mo.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The coming conference soon to convene in Chicago will mark another milestone in this rapidly growing agitation. With Mr. Ronayne, I believe the vulnerable point in secret chicanery is the obligation, and yet the educating and conserving mission of the church of Christ must not be underestimated. It will carry a tremendous responsibility to the final judgment on these great reforms, involving the vital principles of human equity, and vastly so as to the giant evils encroaching upon the religious character of the American people.

The rites performed in a professed Christian church edifice in the nation's capital over the remains of the notorious rebel, Albert Pike, shows to what dark depths the moral sense of propriety of a popular Protestant church may descend at this late day. Such bald heathenism is a disgrace to our very civilization and a daring affront and insult to every believer in the God of the Bible and the holy Christian religion. Let the coming conference, and every clergyman, and synod, and religious body and assembly, by resolution, in the pulpit, with the pen, and in every way possible repudiate and denounce this outrage. It is certainly the last straw and the culmination of lodge idolatry in America. It will show to Joseph Cook, D. L. Moody, F. E. Willard and other Christian workers the vast importance of immediate and united effort to withstand and stay the rapid development of revolting paganism even in our orthodox church houses. Where are the real Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, and followers of the lowly Nazarene? Are they asleep or recreant? Where the religious workers stop, the patriot and citizen should take it up. What must be the loyalty and Americanism of intelligent men and women who can look upon such rebel Pike-ism and despotic lodgeism without indignation and bitter aversion?

But this is only the beginning of the end. A large class of farmers are now following the lead of such notorious ex-rebels as the Col. L. L. Polk and Knights-of-the-Golden-Circle B. F. Clover in the Negrophobiaed Alliance. Even old soldiers and their sons will blubber about "patriotism" and demand big "pensions" in Grand Army halls, and then go straight to a Pike-Masonic low-twelve tableaux, or a Polk-Clover love-feast. Church people who are sending missionaries to the Negroes, and foreign lands, will sit quietly down amid lodge sun-worship or plight their allegiance to a Negrophobiaed order. Think of it! Bishop Taylor in Africa laboring for the heathen, and praying people drawing the color line in the Alliance.

Will every true American who reads this hastily written article sit down and write us a few lines as to what he or she thinks, and as to whither we, as professed patriots and Christians, are drifting, and if it is not about time for a general movement in every community for our Christian civiiization and good government. We want to hear from thousands, as the times are ripe for action. Should we not move forward together in this great work? Is civil liberty and right worth contending for? Speak right out and say it now. Away with lodge despotism and paganism in the United States. M. N. BUTLER.

NEW ORLEANS AND NEW IBERIA.

STRAIGHT UNIVERSITY,
NEW ORLEANS, La., April 18, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The closing days of the winter term were busy ones. I prepared a paper on Mission Work for the State Congregational church meeting which met in New Iberia.

A pleasant party started from here to enjoy our spring vacation in that beautiful little city. It is truly the home of flowers. My friend, Miss Oertel, and myself, roomed at Miss Farley's while there, and received a very warm welcome. I think she is a noble woman and is doing a noble work. Her garden was filled with handsome roses and we fairly reveled in them.

We wandered along the banks of the Teche; saw the very trees under which, in fancy, Evangeline slept. It was certainly enough to invite to slumber and to soothe a troubled heart. To be sure, we might have made a mistake in the trees.

A sixteen mile ride on a rickety baggage car brought us into one of the greatest salt mines in the world. It is an island of about two hundred acres, and is supposed to be all salt. They have bored a thousand feet and have not as yet reached the bottom. Our guide took us down on "a trap" for 170 feet. The atmosphere was very warm and the mine dark. He carried only a small light on his hat and another in his hand. We had not gone far before he lighted some dynamite, which illuminated the mine and gave it somewhat the appearance of a crystal palace with its huge pillars, for these have been left in the blasting to help support the mine. The supply seems exhaustless. Surely God has made wonderful provision for the wants of man.

The remaining fifteen minutes were well spent in viewing the country. There were really some hills about the mine, the first I have seen in the State.

While we enjoyed all these beauties of nature, one of our main objects was to attend the convention. The weather was very unfavorable at the commencement, and I have a vivid impression of New Iberia mud and ditches, but the attendance from abroad was large, and the people there warm and interested. The largest attendance was Thursday night, when the house was packed to its utmost.

We had two able sermons, many instructive and interesting papers, and earnest and encouraging reports from the various churches and schools throughout the State. I believe all felt that it was good to be there, and came home with new ideas, and more zeal for the Master's work.

The river was very high, and both ways we had to be transferred by boat, as the railroad was under water. We saw many houses surrounded, and the only way to town was by boat. I suppose the suffering among the poor is simply terrible.

School opened with the prospect of a successful term, and already a quarter of it has flown.

Last week several of us visited a cemetery here called St. Roch. It is some three miles from the University. It was a hot, dusty day, and the cool, shady willows there were refreshing. The chapel itself is almost entirely covered with ivy and presents a quaint and beautiful sight. Within were candles burning, many offerings brought by devoted followers, and a life-like image of Christ in the tomb. The prints were visible in his feet and side, and, to me, it presented a horrible and startling appearance. It seems awful that such things exist in a nominally Christian nation. Many finely dressed persons came while we were there, and went through a good deal of ceremony. There are fourteen chapels scattered about the yard; in each one of these they stop and pray. It seems sad to see how deluded they are, for many are apparently sincere. Unfortunate ones come here for healing, and it is claimed that many cures have been wrought. In the chapel are crutches, casts of hands and feet, an eye, etc., which they say have been left by persons cured.

Certainly there is much work to be done in our own land to lead the people from darkness into light, and only a great amount of earnest effort from many of Christ's followers can ever bring about the millennial day. May God speed the day when right shall triumph and the wicked cease to rule.

M. L. STODDARD.

BITS OF THINGS.

JONESVILLE, Mich.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—A clergyman in this vicinity who once joined the Freemasons, but is now opposed to the lodge, has said in effect that a true man entrapped by Masonic intrigue and misrepresentation will quickly leave the order.

I have permission to send the name W. H. Parsons, pastor of M. E. church, Jonesville, Mich., to be appended to the call for a Christian Conference on the Secret Lodge system. The presiding elder of this (Coldwater) district refused his name, saying he never signed for nor against, and that agitation of the character of secret societies is a source of their growth in real strength as well as numbers. He had previously said in a lecture in regard to the result of a certain affair, that Masonry, money or some other evil influence must have helped to bring it about.

The son of a prominent Freemason says he once had a notion of joining the order, but had changed his mind, and he thinks that the lodge is becoming unpopular.

An Anti-mason to whom I sent the petition to Congress thinks a son of his, who is a Freemason, stole it. He had put it with other valued papers that he found all right, but the petition was missing.

"All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside."—U. S. Constitution, Article 14 of Amendments. Is not this proof that women are citizens?

R. D. NICHOLS.

THE DESTROYER OF THE CHURCH.

PORTLAND, Ind., April 24th, 1891.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—As we have in our midst an "announcement" that goes beyond the limits of Christian privileges, I wish to make known the same to Christian workers. In the Portland Sun and Portland Commercial, there is an "announcement" that there will be a reunion of Odd-fellows, seventy-second anniversary, to-wit: members of the order will meet at their hall in Portland, Ind., Sunday, April 26, 1891, at 10 o'clock, A. M., and proceed in a body to the M. E. church, where the following program will be carried out, etc.

Thus we see this hydra-headed monster bursting the church-doors open, and with its tail around the pulpit, says, churches will suspend their established First-day meetings, and come and unite with us in our—what? Holy Sabbath observance as Christians? No!—Odd-fellow march and regalia.

If men and women who claim to be Christians, will permit this to take the place of Christ's Gospel, it shows that they love "darkness rather than light." How long will it be if this is permitted until such gatherings will take the place now occupied by the church?

Our ministerial associations certainly can see and know its "opposing" influences on their work; and if they are really in earnest about declaring the truth; if they are not merely working for their "bread and butter; if they are taking their stand to prove that the Bible and its teaching is not a farce, how can they preach against intemperance as conflicting with the church work, and permit another evil at the same time that is threatening as great, if not a greater, danger to their work? A law that will prohibit one evil and tolerate another is not reason, is not right. In all of Jesus Christ's teachings you will not find one instance where he licenses one evil. Ought men to abridge Christ's teachings, and add these organizations as church auxiliaries when they are sapping the church of its evangelizing power?

ROBERT L. HEARN.

LITERATURE.

ORDAINING WOMEN. By Rev. B. T. Roberts, Editor of the Earnest Christian. Pp, 160. Price 75 cents. Published at the office of the Earnest Christian, Rochester, N. Y., and for sale at the Free Methodist Publishing House and by the F. H. Revell Co., Chicago.

The earnest and eloquent plea of General Superintendent Roberts in the last General Conference of his church, for the enlargement of woman's sphere by ordination to preach, foreshadowed this volume. It was evident he had deeply revolved this topic in his mind, and although he was not able to entirely remove deep-seated prejudice and carry the point, there is no doubt many who heard him were convinced of the substantial correctness of his views. This is a subject on which much has been said on both sides, but the woman's side has seldom been more clearly and tersely argued. He shows how that prejudice has been gradually breaking down which has kept women dumb in meetings where others were obeying the command to be witnesses; and how also her legal condition was advancing; quotes from the early fathers about deaconesses; shows that they are fitted for the Gospel ministry and that their service is often required. His chapter on ordination is instructive; but in that on deacons he manifestly confounds the general with a particular use of the Greek term, making Paul and Peter "deacons" just as much as Stephen or Philip, which certainly is not so if the 6th of Acts has any significance. On the whole this must be regarded as an able contribution to an interesting and growing subject.

ALDEN'S MANIFOLD CYCLOPEDIA of Knowledge and Language. Vol. 26. John B. Alden, New York and Chicago.

This volume brings this popular enterprise down to the preposition Of, to which is given one-third of a page,—a fact which reveals one feature of the thorough manner in which the work is conducted. Articles on all the States whose name begins with N, except Nebraska, appear. New York City is liberally treated. Nile, Nihilism, Newspaper, Numismatics, etc., have articles of unusual length. Oberlin College and Oberlin Theology have over two pages, but not the latest information, since the late election of President Ballantine is not reported. Neither is the census of 1890 always consulted. Nevertheless the information is generally brought well down to date and the whole work is of great value to all sorts of people who are seeking information.

The May Missionary Review is a strong number. "Let us Evangelize the World in this Generation" is the legend on its banner, and the subject of Dr. Pierson's opening editorial which is an eloquent exhortation to the whole people of God to undertake his work with a zeal commensurate to the importance of the cause. Among the "Modern Missionary Marvels" is the work among the Karens of Burmah, which within twenty years has shown surprising results in response to the preaching of Baptists. Dr. Brockett, of Brooklyn, writes of this great work. "The Protestant Missions before Cary" is written by Rev. D. L. Leonard. Old Dr. Happer, who has given forty-seven of the best years of his life to China, dwells upon the call "One Thousand more Missionaries for China" with thrilling interest. The report of the great meeting in Cleveland, O., of the Student Volunteers, is written eloquently by M. W. Moorhead. This was a notable meeting, and the report is very complete and valuable.

Our Day departs from its ordinary course by printing a fine portrait of the late General Sherman for a frontispiece. There is no reference to the plate in the text. Rev. Dr. Gordon opens the number with an eloquently told story of the Student Volunteer Missionary Movement. Dr. Gordon was among the speakers at the great meeting at Cleveland, O., last February, representing 6,200 volunteers for foreign missions. Dr. Gordon justly regards this movement as one of the most remarkable in the history of the Christian church. John B. Donaldson of Minneapolis writes incisively of the value of independent vote which is cast without regard to party. This is the vote, he argues, that must break the power of the saloon as with a rod of iron. The man who goes to the polls with conscience leading as well as reason will feel honored as he reads. Ex-President Magoun attended the Jewish Conference held in Chicago last fall. He writes of its novelty and effect. No one who ever heard either of the tribes of Hutchinson singers will ever forget them; and they will all enjoy Dr. Howard's review of their remarkable career from the standpoint of reform. Mr. Cook's lecture is on "Self-Surrender to the Self-Evident in Science and Scripture." The book reviews and editorial notes are in keeping with the high character of the publication.

Scribner's Magazine for May contains important articles in two notable illustrated series—the first of "The Great Streets of the World," and the second of the "Ocean Steamship" articles. A. B. Frost has made eighteen drawings for the "Broadway" article, which are as complete an interpretation of the varied life of that thoroughfare as Richard Harding Davis's picturesque and vivid text. Andrew Cargill, an Edinburgh banker, writes of "Shakespeare as an Actor," giving in brief compass a complete account of all that is known of that phase of his career. Henry Irving's collection of rare Shakespearian prints, which the author has had permission to use for this purpose, furnishes the greater part of the illustrations.

The Evangelical Repository opens with a review of Sir Edwin Arnold's latest poem, "The Light of the World," which is deservedly more popular than "The Light of Asia," which gave him a wide reputation fifteen years ago. Rev. D. R. Miller writes the review and wields a discriminating pen. His chief criticism is thus expressed: "The gifted author has not taught what Christ taught. He has given us a new Redeemer, not the Redeemer of the Evangelists. It is a beautiful creation of his own. The book is remarkable, not for its glaring untruths, but for its gorgeous and resplendent half-truths." A "General Review of Mission Work in Egypt," "The Apostle Paul in Rome," "Henry IV. at Canossa" and "Cities as Centers for United Presbyterian Effort" are other valuable articles.

It is said that Hjalmer Hjorth Boyesen thinks he has given the best work of his life in a singular story in the May Cosmopolitan. Two war stories, one by Archibald Forbes, the famous war correspondent, and the other by Albion W. Tourgee, author of "The Fool's Errand," are a rather questionable attraction. In addition, this number contains an article on New Philadelphia, for which the drawings were made by Harry Fenn. Some wonderful flash-light photographs illustrate the underground workings of a Leadville Silver Mine, and the sketch of this rich mineral region is very instructive. Dr. Koch and his Lymph, by one who went to Berlin to study the subject, is worth reading, albeit the lymph has had its day and is no longer a fetish or a cure.

Postal Savings Banks. On the 2nd of February last Mr. Mitchell presented in the Senate the argument of Hon. John A. Wanamaker, Postmaster-General, in favor of the postal savings system with supplementary documents. It is issued as a public document and deserves to be widely read and considered. Mr. Wanamaker shows that popular sentiment requires the system; and the experience of other countries shows that it is not only feasible but highly desirable. He contrasts the private banks, and shows their insecurity and inconvenience compared with the proposed government system.

Annual house-cleaning loses its terrors amid the bright and cheerful hints of the Ladies' Home Journal. It must be a dull housewife indeed who cannot find encouragement and substantial help in the cheery words of Maria Parloa, Christine T. Herrick, Helen Jay and Isabel A. Mallon in the May number of that magazine which is pervaded with the breeze and sunshine of spring. Another feature of special interest to girls is the very suggestive article on "The Care and Dressing of the Hair," with numerous illustrations.

PREMIUMS

FOR CYNOSURE SUBSCRIBERS.

Stanley's Adventures in the Wilds of Africa.

By Hon. J. T. Headley. A graphic account of the several expeditions of Henry M. Stanley into the heart of the Dark Continent. It covers Stanley's expedition to find Livingstone, his crossing the continent and exploration of the Congo from its headwaters to the ocean, his establishment of the Congo Free State, and his last great achievement—the discovery and deliverance of Emin Pasha, in 1889. Twenty-five illustrations, 539 pages, 8vo., bound in cloth. A book of extraordinary interest to all classes of readers.

Price postpaid $1.00.

We send it free to every old subscriber who sends a new name with his renewal and $3.00. To anybody for two new subscribers for one year each. This offer is good only till June 1st, 1891.

Africa and its Explorers.

Livingstone, Stanley, and other celebrated travels and adventures in Africa. The interesting story of all the celebrated travellers in Africa, including Barth, Du Chaillu, Burton, Speke, Grant, Sir Samuel Baker, Schweinfurth. Moffat, Thomson, Livingstone, and Stanley. Naturally, it conveys more general information, and is of greater popular interest, than could be given in the narrative of any one traveller. This is a much larger book than "Stanley's Adventures." Numerous illustrations. A book every one needs to be up to the times.

We make an extraordinary offer of this book till June 1st, for three new subscribers, or for a renewal and two new names. All for one year each.

The "Uncle Tom's Cabin" of the Horse.

BLACK BEAUTY,

His Grooms and Companions.

This is the most popular book ever written on animal life. Over 100,000 sold in England and a greater number in America. Prof. Blaisdell of Beloit College has prepared a topical index.

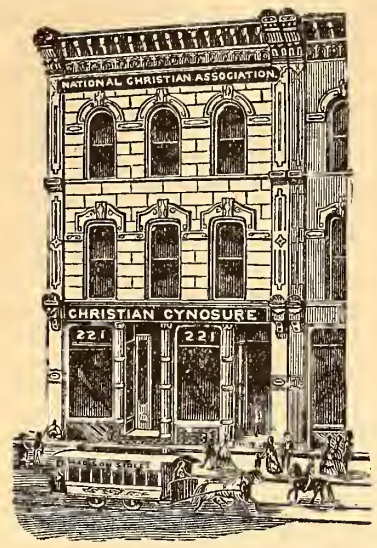
This book is as entertaining as "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and is written with a great moral purpose,—to inculcate the principle of mercy to dumb animals. EVERY BOY SHOULD READ IT!

We will send it to every boy or girl who reads the Cynosure, if they will send us a new subscriber and $1.50 on or before June 1st, next.

BEULAH SEMINARY,

Clarksville, Mich.

A Christian School, one of the best and cheapest to be found. Methodistic in doctrine, unsectarian in spirit. Students of all classes and grades made welcome, so long as they prove themselves worthy. The course of study is practical and complete. If you wish to prepare for college or university, come to Clarksville. Vocal and Instrumental music taught by a thoroughly competent teacher. Many other special inducements. Good board at the Seminary Hall, only $2.00 per week, including room rent. Any who wish can work one hour per day, and pay $1.50 per week.



Business Department.

The Business department in this new school is no mere pretension. It is under the instruction of Prof. J. J. Sadler, a teacher who has with great success for years made a specialty of preparing young and old for Book-keeping, and Commercial calculations in every department of business; in the most thorough manner; in the least possible time; at the least possible expense.

Prof. Sadler graduated at Bryant & Stratton's Business College, many years ago, and is one of the best Commercial teachers of the State.—Over one hundred students in attendance. Circulars sent free on application. Address,

MRS. ETTA SHAW, Principal,
or PROF. J. J. SADLER, Secretary,
CLARKSVILLE, MICH.

General Washington Opposed to SECRET SOCIETIES. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania, March 8, 1837, at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)
AND OFFICE OF
The Christian Cynosure,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Bishop Milton Wright Dayton, O.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. Geo. R. Mil ton, Elgin, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Rev. E. R. Wo rell, Washington Heights, Ill.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, J. M. Hitchcock, Jerome Howe, G. R. Milton, Wm. Pinkney, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, W. W. Wait, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell.

The object of this Association is:
"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves Harris, Mass.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS —Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., S. A. Gilley, Marengo; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Lecompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas. Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Rowe, Guilford; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Isaac Hyatt Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN —Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies") degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order; over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover 50 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

CALL

FOR A

CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE

ON THE

SECRET LODGE SYSTEM.

We, the undersigned, believe that there is no good which can be accomplished, in times of peace and in a free land, by secret societies which cannot be secured more easily and perfectly by open organization.

We believe that much of the time and money so greatly needed by the cause of our Lord Jesus Christ is wasted in the large and unprofitable expenses of secret orders.

We believe that the union of Christians with men of the world in oath-bound organizations is forbidden by the Word of God and always injurious to the spiritual life of those Christians who enter such societies.

We believe that some oath-bound societies are clearly hostile to the peace and welfare of our country.

We therefore invite all those who sympathize with us in the views above expressed, to meet in "A Conference of Christians," to be held under the auspices of "The National Christian Association," in Central Music Hall, Chicago, May 14, 1891, at 9 A. M., to consult and pray respecting the best method of saving men, the churches, and our land from the injurious influence of such societies.

Joseph Cook, Boston.
Rev. James Tompkins, D.D., Chicago, Cong'l Supt. Home Missions, Illinois.
Rev. T. D. Wallace, D.D., Pastor 8th Presbyterian Ch., Chicago.
Rev. Geo. S. Dickerman, D.D., Pastor 1st Cong'l Church, Amherst, Mass.
Rev. Thomas B. Hyde, Pastor "Moody Church," Chicago.
Rev. O. P. Gifford, D.D., Pastor Bap. Church, Boston, Mass.
Rev. A. J. Gordon, D.D., Pastor Bap. Church, Boston, Mass.
Prof. H. M. Scott, D.D., Cong'l Theological Sem'y, Chicago.
Col. George R. Clark, Supt. Pacific Garden Mission, Chicago.
Rev. John Henry Barrows, D.D., Pastor 1st Presbyterian Ch., Chicago.
Prof. James R. Boise, D.D., Baptist Theological Sem'y, Chicago.
And over 400 others.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

1. Historical Sketch—National Christian Association.
3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
5. President C. G. Finney on the duty of Christians towards the Lodge.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
18. Despotic Character of Freemasonry.
19. Freemasonry, a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Nathaniel Colver, D.D., on Masonry.
33. Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
44. D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.

Chapters in American Politics.
Masonry vs. Prohibition.
Decline of the G. A. R.
Christianity and Odd-fellowship. Part 1, 4 pages; part 2, 4 pages.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. M. H. Nichols, 520 Kearney St., San Francisco, Cal.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimbal New Market.
Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.
Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Berea, Ky
Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Annawan, Ill.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. 25cts each.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Odd-fellowship Illustrated" (old work). "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templars Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange," and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in cloth for $1.00.

The Christian Cynosure.

. BLANCHARD, EDITOR.
HENRY L. KELLOGG, ASSOCIATE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MAY 7, 1891.

PROGRAM

OF THE CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE ON THE SECRET LODGE SYSTEM, MAY 14, 1891.

THURSDAY MORNING.

9:00. Conference called to order by Rev. E. R. Worrell, Secretary N. C. A. Board of Directors. Devotional Meeting, conducted by Rev. J. A. Collins, editor Christian Instructor, of Philadelphia. Prof. W. S. Nickle, of the First M. E. Church, Chicago, will lead in the singing.

10:00. Appointment of Committees on Enrollment, Resolutions, and Plan of Work.

10:30 Address subject, "The Temperance Orders," Rev. Alex. Thomson, pastor Congregational Church, Bartlett, Ill.

11:00. Discussions on the above address, led by Mary Allen West, editor Union Signal, Chicago; Rev. F. D. Christie, pastor F. M. Church, Chicago; Rev. J. B. Galloway, pastor Presbyterian Church, Vernon, Wis., and others.

11:30. Reading, subject, "Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?" from an address of Rev. B. Carradine, D.D., pastor M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., by Prof. Darien A. Straw, Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

2:00. Prayer, Elder Rufus Smith. Music, College Quartette.

2:30. Address, subject, "The Industrial Orders," Rev. C. F. Hawley, agent of the National Christian Association. Music, College Quartette.

3:00. Address, subject, "Organized Secrecy is the Evidence of Iniquity," Rev. Wm. Dillon, editor Christian Conservator, Dayton, Ohio.

3:30. Discussion on the above addresses, led by Prof. W. G. Morehead, D.D., Xenia, Ohio; Rev. Samuel H. Swartz, pastor M. E. Church, Chicago; Calvin Pritchard, editor Christian Worker, Chicago, and others.

4:00. Address, subject, "What Should be the Attitude of Christian Ministers toward Secret Societies?" Rev. C. D. Trumbull, pastor Reformed Presbyterian Church, Morning Sun, Iowa.

4:30. Music, College Quartette. Reports of Committees.

THURSDAY EVENING.

8:00. Music, Lyre Quartette. Prayer, Rev. J. D. McCord.

8:30. Address, subject, "What Hinders the Millennium," by Rev. J. Blanchard. Music, Lyre Quartette.

9:00. Address, subject, "Christ's Teachings Antagonistic to Secret Societies," by Rev. C. A. Bjork, pastor Swedish Evangelical Mission Church, Chicago. Music, Lyre Quartette.

9:30. Address, subject, "The Church of Christ vs. the Kingdom of Satan," Rev. F. O. Cunningham, D.D., pastor First Baptist Church of Somerville, Boston, Mass. Music, Lyre Quartette. Benediction. Adjournment.

MAY.—During this month some hundreds of our friends, are asked to renew their subscriptions. Some of them will thank us for reminding them that the year has come round again. We trust that they are not only well satisfied that $1.50 sent for the Cynosure is good investment, but also rejoice that they may in this way promote a good cause. Every name added to the list increases the ability of the N. C. A. to carry on the work more widely and successfully. If our list was doubled we could sustain one or two agents in the South. If we had 50,000, we could give ten or twelve workers enough to do. Please do the best possible work for our list. Take advantage of our premiums this month. They are worth sending for.

THE CONFERENCE! THE CONFERENCE!!

This important meeting comes next week Thursday, morning, afternoon and night.

It is at Central Music Hall, where most of the street cars of Chicago center.

The call is signed by near five hundred persons, among them the wisest and most judicious, enlightened and conscientious of the American people.

The program provided is an advance on those of former meetings.

The editorial leader of the Conservator of last week (April 30th) puts the cause on the right basis, viz., not on the wrong doings of lodgery, as the Morgan, Miller, Cronin and Hennessey murders; but on the sworn or promised secrecy of the lodges, which makes them a conspiracy against the world of outsiders, inviting to murder and every crime this side, and providing for the protection of the criminals.

But the Conservator editorial, sound and able as it is, falls short of the "punctum crimenis" of the secret lodge system, which is false worship. Every little lodge which administers an oath or pledge of secrecy has an altar; and an ALTAR MEANS RELIGION!

And even where the altar is omitted, every promise of concealment is sealed by a lifted hand, sign, grip or token, which, like the Patriarch Job's kissing his hand to the moon, is idolatry; and idolatry is Gentile or devil worship. "Sin is a transgression of the law." But, an altar, or act of man-devised, self-projected worship, however trivial, makes law impossible. For though the lodge or pagoda is "a throne of iniquity framing mischief by a law," it is not law but treason and defiance of God.

Moses punished theft by restoration; and under the law of Sinai, every transgression received a just recompense of reward. (Heb. 2: 2.) But the institution of a false worship at Sinai, followed by a frolic or dance-banquet, was met by an order to every one on God's side to gird on his sword and slay every man his neighbor, brother and bosom-friend: and the fire of that altar was extinguished by their blood. Three thousand bloody corpses were piled up about a banquet table, apparently as harmless as that which precedes a Masonic festival or Odd-fellows' ball.

Where there is no mediator there is no God; and where there is no God there is no law. And however apparently harmless or contemptible the idolatrous act, it contains in it dynamite enough, if not quenched, to blow the Universe off its hinges, and bring back

"Chaos and old Night!"

There is neither law nor Gospel, right or wrong, in a secret lodge. No Decalogue, no Cross, no Saviour,—and if the true Infinite God, who is only acceptable and reachable through a Mediator, were turned out or omitted from the religions of the earth, and only lodge-religions left, men would become moral maniacs, women prostitutes, and our whole race a race of unclean spirits. To be convinced of the truth of this fearful indictment, one has only to take a moral chart of our globe and mark the grade of the peoples who have no Christ.

If next week's Conference shall be enabled of God to set this one fact before the American churches, we confidently believe and trust those churches will awake, as did Nineveh, and preach the preaching of an imperfect man, but true prophet.

LAURA HAVILAND:—THE WOMAN APOSTLE.

The Cynosure has in years past made its readers acquainted with Mrs. Haviland, and the book containing her life and adventures. She is alive yet: and if her health permits her to be made the object of a general rally of reformers, we should be glad to see a large church crowded with listeners to the story of her womanly exploits. We hope at least that the Reform Conference, now at hand, will hold up her life to the nation as a Woman Apostle.

She was born 1809, in a little town in Canada West. Her parents were Quakers; her father a preacher, and her mother an elder among that interesting people. The Spirit of God who presided at the birth of the prophet Samuel and of John the Baptist, hovered over hers. And the chapter which opens her book with her religious experience, in our sober estimate, is one of the rarest of human writings. In a style as simple as the New Testament or John Bunyan, so that children can relish it, she holds up the transparent spirit of a young Quaker girl, which the Holy Spirit was convicting, convincing, and leading to Christ with the struggles of Satan to prevent it. That single first chapter is a whole volume of theology, clear as crystal and warm as sunlight. And her story moves on through her early marriage and motherhood into the solemn struggles of our nation for reform; from her forest log cabin home, to the "Raisin Institute," which she founded in Michigan; and thence to camps and hospitals, where she dealt with army officers and statesmen and Copperheads. And her progress throughout seems like the turnings of a kaleidoscope, each new figure appearing more striking than the last. Indeed, her whole narrative compares well with "Uncle Tom's Cabin;" with only this difference, that it is simple matter-of-fact.

"Truth is strange, stranger than fiction."

Of the many books which the war of the Rebellion has brought out, Mrs. Haviland's volume has this distinguishing excellence. It tells straightforward what she felt and saw and said and did; a single sentence often sets a whole character before us. Senator Ben Wade's frank and fearless words; General Grant's cool answer to the women claiming their slaves in his camp; General Hunter's condemnation of Copperhead surgeons,—in these are given full length portraits by Mrs. Haviland's incidental mention as she passes along.

Her school at Raisin, Mich., sent seventeen soldiers at the opening of the war; and Mrs. Haviland went to the front with supplies and comforts as a mother of our troops. She saw crowds of Negroes come to our lines for food who had not learned they were free till told by our soldiers.

She had for years aided fugitives from slavery, and visited, as a missionary, their settlements in Canada. She succeeded in relieving three thousand of our soldiers at Ship Island, who were oppressed by unworthy officers, and the officers were removed; and after years of such uncompensated and unwearied toil, the Freedman's Aid Commission, of which Dr. Duffield was president, gave her a commission and forty dollars per month, to travel and act as a ministering spirit, missionary mother and friend of our troops in hospitals, among the Freedmen who needed instruction; and, generally, to employ her large experience, excellent judgment, and her woman's heart to mitigate the sufferings of those made miserable by the war.

Her book has been widely read; but should be read by all who wish to know the interior of the terrible system of American slavery from which God has delivered our beloved country; that they may learn gratitude for our national deliverance and hope in the trials yet to come.

MRS. HAVILAND'S book will be sent during May only with one yearly subscription to the Cynosure for $2.50. The regular price of the book is $1.50. See 16th page.

Ex-Senator Blair of New Hampshire got as far as the Auditorium Hotel in this city on his way to China, as our minister, but no farther. The Celestial Empire refuses to receive him, because of his speeches against Chinese immigration. It must be regretted that Mr. Blair was chosen as the victim of diplomatic vengeance. Although we confess that he deserves it. There are several other gentlemen more deserving of it. Besides he has been the butt of endless ridicule because he was willing to carry some good principles to Congress and stand by them. In fact, such men are needed in Congress. It foreshadows national decay when they are banished to remote corners of the earth on foreign missions.

There is a wail in lodge papers over the small attendance on lodge nights, especially among the Odd-fellows. One lodge reports only nine members present on a certain night, four of these being visitors, out of a membership of three hundred. Every thing shows that the leaven of agitation is working, and that the lodges are being slowly abandoned by the better element. It is said a woman in a Connecticut town, who is a Grange lecturer as well as a pominent society woman, has been arrested for fraudulent use of the mails. As regards its moral influence the lodge is no respecter of persons, and many a sad story might be told of womanly honor and reputation wrecked forever by evil associations and late hours at these secret midnight clubs, even when their object is ostensibly a good one. These orders seem to be fairly driven to their wit's end to coin original names. The last we have noticed is the Order of the Gates Ajar, which has a peculiar semi-religious sound.

The first week with a new mayor was a great one for Chicago. Hempstead Washburne was sworn in Monday night of last week. Next day he sent for the chief-of-police, who had long been the henchman of Cregier, and quietly told him to shut up every gambling place in the city, with the warning that the police would be held responsible. Before night every den was closed, and the ill-favored crew that kept them is seeking other and more genial climes. Without waiting for an order the next night the police enforced the law and closed all the saloons at midnight on the West Side. The rule prevailed over the whole city in a day or two. Last Sabbath curtains were drawn and doors closed (but not locked) in all the saloons and vile resorts of the city. Mayor Washburne has also appointed Major R. W. McClaughry chief-of-police. This gentleman has made a great reputation for integrity, firmness and great executive ability in managing criminals in his years of service as warden of the great penitentiary at Joliet, and in Pennsylvania. His appointment is a pledge for the enforcement of law against crime-breeders and their agents. But Mr. Washburne promises not to use his authority to its full extent in promoting good order and restoring Chicago to its place in the line of American cities. To a deputation of citizens congratulating him on his first day's work, he said expressly that his sympathies were German respecting the saloon. We shall probably find that they are Irish also, so far as his Catholic wife is concerned. So the full-orbed sun which we hoped for our new day in Chicago, is yet in partial eclipse.

—The secret labor union strike in the coke regions of Pennsylvania is one of the most expensive on record. Last week was the twelfth of its continuance, and the men, it is estimated, have lost a full million dollars, while the operators and business men are out two millions and a half.

—A Hartford lady, touched by the appeal for a "Maternity" for Alaskan women recently made by Dr. Clarence Thwing at Sitka, sent a cheque for two hundred dollars, which will secure the erection, by the young men of the Training School, of a building ample for present use. A native has given the ground.

—Labor lodge "lumber-shovers" at Cleveland, engaged last week in a desperate fight against workmen who would not join them in their secret unions. Friday they attacked the non-union men, to whose rescue a large force of police hastened. But before they could reach the spot, the strikers had severely beaten several men with their clubs.

—A Saratoga, N. Y., daily lately charged on the testimony of a "drummer" that Gov. St. John leased a grove at Freeville, New York, during last campaign and paid for it with checks from W. H. Barnum, chairman of the Democratic National committee. The Saratoga paper and its veracious witness are now face to face with a letter from the owner of the grove, and another from Rev. J. W. Lawton, who did lease the place, both denouncing the story as a falsehood of the first water.

—Pastor Fritschel of West Superior, Wis., writes us that the Swedish and Norwegian pastors of that place and Duluth are kind and steadfast brethren, maintaining a good confession against secretism. At the meeting of the Lutheran Pastoral Conference in Duluth, April 20, the question, "How are secret societies to be regarded?" was fully discussed. In two weeks from that time they will consider how they are to deal with members of secret societies and yet fulfill their duties as pastors.

LONG WAITING.—A comparatively small number of our subscribers have postponed payment of their subscriptions, until the regular $2.00 rate for delayed subscriptions is due from them. They may yet take advantage of the "advance" rate by paying for two or three years at once, as the case may be, so as to bring their date well on into '92. We cannot promise to continue this favorable offer longer than June 1st, and we urge its acceptance by every consideration that the value of the Cynosure to a family and the promotion of the work of the N. C. A. can suggest.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—General Superintendent Roberts of the Free Methodist church is soon expected at Phœnix, Arizona, writes Bro. Fowler of that city. He also hopes to secure an address on the lodge question from Mr. Roberts during his stay. Few can speak more ably than he.

—The Monday papers announce the death of Dr. Bothwell of Brooklyn, mentioned in our "Occasional" letter from that city on another page. Several surgical operations failed to relieve the sufferer, and after two weeks of distress and agony death came to his relief.

—Rev. G. M. Elliott, formerly of the Reformed Presbyterian academy at Selma, Alabama, has been appointed soliciting agent for the "Industrial Missionary Association of Alabama," at a salary of $1,200 a year, and expenses. It is said that he has accepted the appointment, and expects to enter upon the work at the first of June.

—Rev. George Fritschel, son of the late Prof. Fritschel of Wartburg Academy, Mendota, Ill., returned to this country from Germany early in April. He completed his study for the pulpit abroad and was immediately called to be pastor of a Lutheran mission church in West Superior, Wis. He corresponded with the Cynosure during his residence in Europe.

—Rev. D. W. Wise, who is just beginning his labor as pastor of the College Church, Wheaton, is an Englishman by birth, and was during his boyhood employed in one of the mills of his home village. After his conversion he was led to desire usefulness in labors for the salvation of men, and was for some time accustomed to rise early on the Sabbath morning and preach at three different points, walking twenty-one miles in order to reach them and returning home late at night. Early Monday morning he must again be at his place in the mill at 6 o'clock. Some years since he came to this country, and has been an earnest and successful pastor in several places.

—"Joc Dixon" was a familiar name to our readers twelve or thirteen years ago. He succeeded Mr. Ronayne as master of Keystone Lodge, No. 639. His deceptive and hypocritical character was often commented upon by his former lodge master in those days. He posed as a great detective, and for a time was upheld by a lodge-subsidized press. He has endeavored to live on some public employment for years, though not often heard of. But the other day the Inter Ocean found out that Past Grand Master Cregier had attempted to get himself retained in office by making Dixon chief of detectives. The chief-of-police confessed that Dixon had been some two years on the force drawing pay, but there was no record of the fact to be found.

—Bro. J. P. Stoddard writes from Boston of the death of Captain Daniel Jones on Tuesday of last week, the 28th ult., at his home, No. 8 James street, Boston. Captain Jones was not widely known to our readers, although he attended the National Convention at Batavia, N. Y., and other meetings in New England. Mrs. M. E. R. Jones, his wife, was more active in the reform, and her gifts and labors have made her name familiar wherever a standard has been lifted against this lodge foe. Bro. Stoddard writes: "I venture nothing in saying that this sister in Christ and her afflicted child will have the sympathy and prayers of all who are interested in the work, which has found friends and liberal aid at their hands, in this deep sorrow that has fallen upon them. 'Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth them out of them all.'"

—On Thursday of this week a happy wedding ceremony will be performed at the home of Rev. Dr. C. B. Hulbert, ex-President of Middlebury College in Zanesville, Ohio. It will join the fortunes of Miss Gertrude Hulbert, a daughter, and Mr. Edgar Wylie of the Chicago Theological Seminary and young pastor of the Summerdale church in this city. Bro. Wylie graduated at Wheaton two years ago; never since he began in our reform, as publisher of the Christian Witness in New Hampshire, he has ever been ready to aid it in every way practicable. His eloquent speech at the Seminary reunion a few weeks since will be remembered. Miss Hulburt is a young lady of fine talent and education and earnest piety. She was from 1886 to '88 principal of the ladies' department of Wheaton College, and has since occupied a similar position in Mr. Moody's institutes in this city and Northfield, Mass. A thousand blessings be on these dear young people.

—The Cosmopolitan magazine which we are enabled to offer to our subscribers at very favorable rates, is widely recognized as one of the most interesting of our illustrated publications. Its publishers are anxious to secure permanent subscribers and make the Cynosure subscribers an excellent offer. It contains yearly some 1,500 pages of reading matter, a large proportion of which is finely illustrated. A profitable investment is offered in the Cynosure and Cosmopolitan for $3.00 to new subscribers to both; $3.50 to old subscribers to both; and $3.25 to all our present subscribers who do not take the magazine.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 29, 1891.

Owing to the illness, of Justice Bradley, the arguments in the Behring Sea case, and in the case involving the constitutionality of the law excluding newspapers containing lottery advertisements from the mails, which were to have begun before the United States Supreme Court this week, have been postponed until next October, the Chief Justice stating that the cases were so important that it was desirable to have them heard by a full bench. The briefs in the lottery case were filed. The counsel for the lottery maintains that the power vested in Congress to establish postoffices and post roads is limited by the first constitutional amendment forbidding abridgement of speech or of the press, and that the anti-lottery act abridges this freedom of the press and is unconstitutional because it makes Congress and not a jury the judge of the criminality of the subject matter of the publication.

Assistant-Attorney General Maury, in his brief on the Government side, argues that the right to establish a postal system, granted Congress by the Constitution, gives Congress power to make and shape that service according to its own will; and even if Congress should absolutely exclude all newspapers from the mails that would not constitute an abridgement of the liberty of the press; the power of Congress over the mails is similar to the police powers of the States, and it is only exercising this power when Congress cleanses the mails of the seductive, corrupting lottery advertisements that are more terrible in their effects than a pestilence, The attempt to raise the cry that this law abridges freedom of the press and puts the palladium of liberty in danger, is analogous to a cry that laws making it criminal to carry concealed weapons are an infringement of the constitutional right of the peole to bear arms. "The whole subject," says Mr. Maury, "is safe in the hands of the people, and they will be quick enough to take alarm at the first approach of danger, without listening for the slogan of this new sentinel of liberty, the Louisiana Lottery company."

Ex-Justice William Strong, president of the American Tract Society, presided at the celebration of the Society's sixty-sixth anniversary Sunday evening. Justice Brewer was one of the speakers. He said that perhaps no society had been subjected to more sneers, ridicule, scoffs, or had been made the butt of more irreverent jokes than this one, and yet he knew that these tracts had often been the means of changing human life and character, and that many a man could point to a simple little tract as the means by which he had been saved. The receipts of the society from all sources during the year just passed were $305,000. During its existence it has issued 7,583 district publications in this country and 4,593 in foreign countries, and some of these have been printed in 153 languages and dialects. It publishes six periodicals, two of which are printed in German.

Last Sunday afternoon's Y. M. C. A. meeting was crowded to overflowing to hear Justice Brewer talk of the power of a mother's love, which he characterized as the strongest earthly influence for the formation of character. When he feelingly repeated the familiar lines,

> "Backward, turn backward, oh time in thy flight,
> Make me me a child again, just for to night."

he struck a responsive chord that brought tears to the eyes of many of his hearers, and made some of them resolve for the sake of mothers long since dead, to henceforth lead a life that would meet the approval of those mothers, were they again alive. May those resolutions be faithfully kept.

*

According to a writer in the Nation, the Mafia have a playful manner of indicating to the friends of one of their victims the wherefore of his removal. If he has overheard the secrets of the society, his ears are cut off; if he has seen more than it is safe for one man to see, the skin of his forehead is flayed and turned down over his eyes, or if he has injured one of the Mafiosi, a hand is cut off. These mutilations do not hurt the victim, who is dead before they are inflicted, but they convey a lesson that is seldom lost on his surviving relatives. The authorities of Louisiana must strangle this society or Louisiana will become a second Sicily.—America.

THE HOME.

DEATH AND RESURRECTION.

"Earth to earth, and dust to dust!"
Here the evil and the just,
Here the youthful and the old,
Here the fearful and the bold,
Here the matron and the maid
In one silent bed are laid.
Here the vassal and the king
Side by side lie withering;
Here the sword and scepter rust,
"Earth to earth, and dust to dust!"

Age on age shall roll along
O'er this pale and mighty throng;
Those that wept then, those that weep,
All shall with these sleepers sleep.
Brothers, sisters of the worm,
Summer's sun, or winter's storm,
Song of peace, or battle's war,
Ne'er shall break their slumbers more;
Death shall keep his sullen trust,
"Earth to earth, and dust to dust!"

But a day is coming fast,
Earth, thy mightiest and thy last;
It shall come in fear and wonder,
Heralded by trump and thunder;
It shall come in strife and toil,
It shall come in blood and spoil,
It shall come in empire's groans,
Burning temples, trampled thrones;
Then, ambition, rue thy lust!
"Earth to earth, and dust to dust!"

Then shall come the judgment sign,
In the East the King shall shine;
Flashing from heaven's golden gate;
Thousands, thousands round his state,
Spirits with the crown and plume,
Tremble then, thou sullen tomb;
Heaven shall open on our sight,
Earth be turned to living light,
Kingdom of the ransomed just,
"Earth to earth, and dust to dust!"

Then thy mount, Jerusalem,
Shall be gorgeous as a gem;
Then shall in the desert rise
Fruits of more than Paradise;
Earth by angel feet be trod,
One great garden of her God!
Till are dried the martyr's tears
Through a thousand glorious years.
Now in hope of him we trust,
"Earth to earth, and dust to dust!"

—Rev. George Croly.

ARE MEN TO FURNISH ATTRACTIONS FOR THE CHURCH, OR GOD?

Dr. John Hall struck the right note the other night at the Presbyterian Union, Chicago, where he was the special guest of the occasion, when he held that the ministerial princes and palatial churches are the great hindrances to the evangelization of our cities. The need of the time is competent, godly ministers to occupy central halls and preach the Gospel to the poor, and pastors to go out and in, visiting and exhorting from house to house, as in former times. But will Dr. Hall's words be heeded? Will not the churches and the ministers admire the sentiments expressed, but still do as they have been doing? The effort to make Christianity attractive has very nearly deprived it of all sympathy among those who, of all men, need it most. Yet the rage for decorative art grows apace, and the great city churches of the Man "who had not where to lay his head" look more like the voluptuous halls of the great princes of the Gentiles for the great display of art and the gratification of æsthetic tastes.

"Touch lightly here," some will say. "Remember the alabaster box of ointment that one thought was wasted on the Lord." Ah, yes; we remember. Would there were ten thousand women with their alabaster boxes going through our streets anointing the feet of the foot-sore messengers of peace, who, without having where to lay their heads, are still devoting their lives to the work of the ministry among the poor. That would be Mary-like indeed. But what has that to do with lavishing God's tithes on frescoes and carvings and flowers to gratify and call forth the admiration of the rich and great? When the salvation of millions is at stake, it were a sin inexcusable indeed to condone the hindrances in the way of the Gospel chariot. Let the demand be made loud and long that all the churches leave off their trying to rival the world in art and architecture in the name of the Lord, and come down to the plain preaching, the foolishness by which it has pleased God to save them that believe.—Christian Instructor.

FAITH, NOT FESTIVALS.

Bro. Kent of the Banner has a sharp way of saysaying some good things. Speaking of the conversion of Africa, he says: "To work up charity balls and fairs, festivals, grab-bags, ring-cakes, and caliconeck-ties for socials is not the demand for Africa yet. The foolish, empty twaddle of the average young people's meetings will never convert and redeem the cannibal kings of Africa. When Jesus sent out his one hundred and twenty missionaries full of the Holy Ghost, to Christianize and civilize a world, they sold their possessions, threw the whole on the altar for God, and went at it. They would have died forever forgotten if they had gone into the modern church festival method of propagating Christianity."

When all this sort of worldly nonsense is utterly banished from the church, and the people give themselves to prayer, and "giving as God has prospered them," and for the love of it; then, and not until then, shall "the mountain of the Lord's house be established in the top of the mountains, and all nations shall flow unto it." If the time were spent in earnest prayer which is spent in getting up fairs and festivals, God would open the pockets of the people, without dragging it out of them by giving them an equivalent in baked beans, oysters and ice cream. Try it, and see what God will do for those who will not let him go.—Witness.

ORGANIZATION OVERDONE.

The wild mania after organizations within the church, which is so popular East and North, is being criticised strongly. The chairman of a late Christian conference, said: "Many of our churches are very busy at the present time in the formation of societies to supersede themselves." To this the Examiner says: "To one who believes that Christ made no mistake when he instituted the church to evangelize the world, there seems to be much in popular methods to justify this pungent criticism. Those specially interested in a given department of work are so inclined to make a 'hobby' of it, to regard it as the be-all and end-all of the church, and to judge harshly all who do not take their view of the relative importance of things. Young Christians—just because they are young, and, therefore, ardent and inexperienced—are especially liable to commit this error. For this reason they should be wary and watchful, lest in excess of devotion to their own peculiar organization they fail in devotion to larger interests."

THE WEAKNESS OF THE CHURCH.

The church in this land is strong enough to compel outward respect for God and his laws. No political party, no liquor interests, no combination of clubs, no association of money kings could put the church down if she would only be true to her Lord, and present a solid front against the world. I have said this many times, and been as often challenged for it. But I have never uttered words with more consideration. I am absolutely sure that I speak the truth. And the church ought to be ashamed of herself for doubting it. At the present time she cannot exert her legitimate power over the kingdom of Satan, because she is herself worldly. She ought to feel that she is enlisted under Christ, is called to follow his orders and fight the battles of her Lord. Too long and too much the world has shaped the life and ways of the professing church, and too long the church has consulted the world's ideas. It is her worldliness that gives the kingdom of Satan its strongest hold on the earth today. And its prince laughs at professors in thousands of cases when he hears them pray "Thy Kingdom Come." There is no doubt of this, and we ought to think of it in connection with this prayer. It is worse than a worthless form of words, it is an insult to God to offer it unless our hearts are with it, and we are living in sympathy with it in direct opposition to what is known in the Scriptures as the course of this world.—Rev. David Cole, D.D., Yonkers, N. Y.

RUNNING AWAY.

"I won't stand it much longer, any way," said Harry Barnes defiantly, digging the blade of his knife into a piece of wood.

"What'll you do?" asked his companion, a rather delicate looking boy, two years younger than he.

"I'll run away. That's what," answered Harry quickly. "And I tell you what, Fred, I've thought of a splendid plan for us—you'll go, of course?"

"Yes," said Fred, gloomily, "I'll do anything to get rid of being treated like a baby, and fed on slops. I think when a boy's twelve years old, he might eat what he's a mind to."

"So do I;" answered Harry, "but that's nothing to being errand-boy for a boarding house. It's 'Harry do this, and Harry go get that,' from morning to night, and I'm about sick of it. How do you suppose I like to bring a great dish of butter through the streets, and have Aunt stand in the door and call out, 'Hurry up! the table is waiting!' so everybody can hear? Why, I hardly ever get to school before the bell rings, and I never have time to play ball after school, I have so many errands to do."

"Why don't you tell her you won't do it?" asked Fred, "she isn't your mother."

"I did say something once," said Harry, "and got a precious lecture to pay for it, about being an expense to her, and she obliged to work hard for her living, and so on. It was sickening; I won't say anything—I'll run away, and mighty soon, too," he added, decidedly.

"Well, what is your plan?" asked Fred. "To go out West and fight Indians?"

"No;" said Harry scornfully. "Those stories are ridiculous! How could we get out West, to begin with, and how could we fight, if we did? My plan is better than that. It is this: to go to Brown's Tract, which is only forty miles, you know, so we can easily walk there, and shoot deer and things, and live in a cave or somewhere. I know we can do it," he went on excitedly. "I've heard some gentlemen at our house talk about it —they go every summer—and it's just as easy! I've listened to what they said, and I know what we want, and how to fish, and cook things, and everything!"

"What do we want?" asked Fred, "and how can we get it?"

"Well, we want provisions enough for a few days, till we get where the game is; and we want warm clothes, plenty of matches, and guns, of course. O yes, and fishhooks and lines; poles we can cut anywhere," he went on earnestly. "I tell you, Fred, we can have grand old times there by ourselves, with no one to order us around."

"Nor to make us eat oatmeal and stuff," added Fred. "Well, when shall we go, and how shall we get away?" he went on eagerly.

"We'll go as soon as we can slip out the things we need; and as for the way—nothing is easier, I tell you."

After a long talk, in which everything was arranged, the boys separated, and both went home with their heads full of plans and excitement. They had agreed to carry a part of their outfit to a certain place settled upon that very evening, so that they should not be too much loaded on the next one, when they intended to go to stay.

Accordingly, that evening they met at a certain corner, and made their way quietly towards an old barn in the edge of the city, that Fred happened to know was empty at present, and not hard to get into. They were both well loaded down, and this is what they had: Harry had brought a gun which had belonged to his uncle, and had seen service years ago, but was now out of repair, and rusty from long disuse. Harry thought he could clean it up, and to that end had brought some rags, and polish, and oil; any way —clean or not clean—they must of course have a gun. To this was added a suit of last winter's clothes; a pair of boots which had been cast off by one of the boarders, (and he had long wanted to wear); an old knapsack; a powder-horn—half full, a game-bag, an old silver watch that would not go, and half a dozen pocket-knives.

"I always have dozens of knives," said he, when Fred asked how he got so many. "Every boarder who wants to give me anything always gives a knife; I had five last Christmas," he added grumblingly; "but what have you brought?"

Fred displayed his treasures. An old-fashioned horse-pistol—"rather large," he said, "but good to shoot;" a box of caps, a sword that his father had worn in the war, an air-pistol that shot slugs, an overcoat of his father's (he couldn't find his winter clothes) and a hatchet.

"They're all first-rate," said Harry. "Now, to-morrow night we must bring provisions. We must have enough to last two or three days, till we can shoot something, and of course all the money we can get. We won't need any in the woods, but if we could get a chance to ride part of the way we'd be sure to get far away before they caught us. Once in the woods, and we can defy them!"

"I haven't much money," said Fred, "about fifty cents."

"Well, I haven't any more myself," said Harry, bitterly. "I never have any money, unless one of the boarders pays me for doing an errand; I believe Aunt thinks boys never want money. Never mind"—he went on, shaking his fist towards the house—"just wait till I get into the woods and become a hunter! you may keep your old money then!" and he snapped his fingers in utter contempt.

The next evening everything seemed to favor the boys, and at nine o'clock, as they had agreed, they met at the old corner, and hurried to the empty barn.

"Did anybody see you?" whispered Harry anxiously, as they hastily turned into a dark street.

"No; everybody went to meeting at our house," said Fred, "and I had a splendid chance to rummage the pantry. What did you get?" he asked eagerly.

"Oh, some pies and things," said Harry, who cared far less for that part of the fun than for hunting and fishing.

When safely housed in the barn, and Harry had lighted a candle he had brought, the treasures were spread out, and made a curious show. Fred—remembering bitterly what his mother would not let him eat—had emptied the cake-box, and now proudly displayed half of a rich fruit-cake, a whole cocoanut cake with frosting, and several pieces of jelly and chocolate cake. Besides these luxuries, on which his eyes rested greedily, he had brought a small jar of raspberry jam, and another of marmalade; and every pocket was stuffed with raisins, which he was eating all the time.

"I mean to have goodies enough for once," he said, exultingly. "We'll see how much it'll make me sick!—that's all stuff!"

He did see in due time; but now Harry opened his pack. He had been unable to get at the cake-box, but had made a tolerable haul in spite of that. He had two pies, a lemon and a mince; some lobster salad; part of a cold plum-pudding; two pockets full of nuts; a large slice of cheese, and a jar of picalilli.

In their whole stock there was not a particle of bread or plain meat—nothing but the richest of dainties. To their boyish notions there was nothing amiss; bread and meat and plain food were not at all to their taste.

They celebrated the first night by a feast, after which they spent some time in packing things into shape for traveling, leaving out a choice assortment of cake and pie for breakfast. Then they lay down on some hay, and tried to sleep. But whether because of their rich supper, or from excitement, they could not sleep, and were up and ready to be off by the first streak of daylight. They felt the need of haste now, for they knew it would not be long before they would be missed, and the rifled pantries would tell of their exploit.

Having dressed themselves in boots and overcoats, with sword, hatchet, gun and pistol by their sides, and heavily loaded with provisions, the two boys started out along the road. Before they had gone far, however, they were overtaken by a peddler's wagon which, with two strong horses, was just starting on a tour among the surrounding villages.

It was going their way, and Harry soon made a bargain with the driver to take them as far as he went on their road, and they climbed up to the high seat, very glad to be relieved of their heavy loads.

About the middle of the afternoon the peddler set them down near an entrance to the vast extent of woods belonging to the Adirondack country, and called Brown's Tract, with all their belongings, and not a cent in the world.

Little did the boys think of that, as they entered the gloomy woods exultingly, feeling that they had reached the end of their troubles, and the world was opening before them.

"First," said Harry, who as the elder always took the lead, "we must find a place to camp."

"We ought to have brought a tent," said Fred.

"It would be nice," said Harry, "but we had enough to carry without it."

"So we did", said Fred, "and besides, a cave'll be nicer."

"A cave is just the thing," said Harry, eagerly. "Let's look for one."

They spent the afternoon in wandering about in the search, and by great good luck, did find a hole in the side of a hill, which with a little enlarging and clearing out, did very well for a cave. In this they placed their treasures, and then gathered sticks for a fire, and cut some large branches to set up in the ground as a sort of screen before their cave.

It was quite dark before this work was all done, and beside the brightly blazing fire the two tired boys at last sat down, and spread out the remains of their food for supper. They had begun to tire of sweets, but they were hungry—having never worked so hard in their lives—so they made a hearty meal, especially Fred, who really stuffed himself, I'm sorry to say. Then piling the rest of the wood on the fire, they both lay down on the ground, rejoicing in the freedom of going to bed without undressing. Fred lay on his father's coat, and Harry, on his own extra suit, and both fell asleep.

Fred, however, did not sleep well; and after tumbling and tossing for an hour or two, tormented with fearful dreams, he awoke in agony. The fire was out, and it was pitch dark. The horrible phantoms of his dreams seemed before his frightened eyes; but worse than that, a terrible pain made him double up and fairly cry out with anguish.

Harry was on his feet in an instant.

"What is it?" he cried. "What's the matter, Fred?"

"Oh, Harry," moaned Fred, "I'm awful sick, and I've had such horrid dreams! O dear!"—as the pain came on again—"Oh, Harry! can't you do something for me? Oh! I wish mother was here! Oh! Oh! I shall die! I know I shall!"

So he went on groaning, crying, and rolling about in his pain. Harry was very much frightened, but had not the least notion what to do.

"Shall I go and see if I can get some wood and make a fire?" he asked.

"Oh no! don't go away!" moaned Fred. "I'm afraid to be left here alone. O dear! I wish mother was here! She could do something for me!"

"I wonder what made you sick," said Harry, in one of the rests between the paroxysms of pain.

"Oh, it was the cake and stuff, I suppose," said Fred. "Mother said it would make me sick, but I didn't believe it," he groaned; and off he went again into a worse pain than before.

Worse and worse he grew for some time, till Harry was thoroughly frightened, and at his wit's ends to know what to do.

"Harry," said Fred, when the pain had ceased for a moment, "I cannot stand many more such. I think I—I—shall—die. Will you go and tell my mother that I was sorry I ran away, and—and—give my love to Matey?"

Matey was his baby sister, and his particular pet, and at thought of her he fairly burst into tears of grief, such as the pain had not wrung from him.

"Oh no, Fred," said Harry, trying to speak cheerfully, though there was a queer choke in his voice, for he had never seen any one so very ill before, "I hope you'll be all well to-morrow, and you can go and see her yourself, if you want to."

"You may be sure I'll do that, if I ever see daylight, and can crawl out of these horrid woods," groaned Fred.

(To be continued.)

Frau Braun—Yes, mum; my husband haf had no luck for a long time mit his saloon, but now he haf got a splendit location and a fine business.

Frau Schmidt—Vere his new blace vas, anyhow?

Frau Braun—He's got a saloon under a hall vere der temperance odd fellers meet tree times a veek.—America.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE OLD TESTAMENT.

LESSON VII.—Second Quarter.—May 17.

SUBJECT.—Sin the Cause of Sorrow.—Hosea 10 : 1-15.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Your iniquities have separated between you and your God.—Isa. 59 : 2.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Jer. 4 : 1-9. T.—Jer. 31 : 15-21. W.—Hosea 5 : 8-15. Th.—Luke 23 : 27-31. F.—John 4 : 35-38. S.—Gal. 6 : 3-9. S.—Rev. 6 : 12-17.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. Israel's ingratitude.—vs. 1–4. "Israel is an empty vine." Murier translates, "a wide-spreading vine," rank and luxuriant, but bringing forth fruit only to himself, not to God; and so an empty, i. e., a worthless vine. We find the same idea expressed in Isaiah 5 : 4, "Wherefore when I looked that it should bring forth grapes, brought it forth wild grapes?" We must bear fruit of some kind, and the great question upon which hangs our eternal destinies is this: "Are we bearing fruit to ourselves or to God?" Israel used her prosperity for selfish ends, and in proportion as she was prospered she increased her false worships, spending on them what should have been given to God. Is there not a similar state of things to-day? Our nation in the short period of a century has become the richest on the globe; but how much is expended for pleasure, for show, for useless luxury! and what a pittance to the cause of Christ. But the resemblance comes even nearer when we think of the multitudinous forms of lodge worship that everywhere abound. Surely it may be said of us that in proportion to our prosperity has been the increase of these false altars. "Their heart is divided." A divided heart God abhors; then how must he regard a divided worship? "They have spoken words, swearing falsely," etc. The allusion here is to the breaking of their covenant with Shalmaneser (2 Kings 17 : 4). For this judgments were to follow thick and fast as the hemlock springs up in a newly-ploughed field. But how could national honor be looked for in a people that had broken their solemn covenant with Jehovah? Until we love the Lord with all the strength of our being we shall never love our neighbor as ourselves.

2. Judgment pronounced.—vs. 5–11. "They shall fear because"—rather "for"— the calves of Beth-aven." So far from saving them in their cruel strait, their false gods could not even save themselves. How many worship money, or as Ruskin calls it, "the goddess of Getting on?" But so far from saving them in the hour of calamity, the very riches in which they trusted are often swept away. And so with everything that the human heart idolizes in place of God. Instead of being a refuge they are a source of anxiety and trouble. How different, when we trust in the almighty, unchanging God! When we "fear" for any belief we hold, so that we are afraid to bring it to the light of reason and Scripture, there is great danger that it is a false belief. Christians, when they see how iniquity prevails often tremble for the truths they believe and love But they have no reason to fear. Infidelity may come in like a flood, but it is only the refuge of lies that shall be swept away. "Israel shall be ashamed of his own counsel,"—of setting up the calf worship as a politic measure. So they that make laws or cast their votes in the interests of the rum-traffic will some day be ashamed of their folly, though now they call it "policy." Like many other unrighteous political movements, this legalized calf-worship gained its object, and the two kingdoms, losing the tie of a common religious center, became rivals in peace and bitter enemies in war. But it had consequences more far-reaching than its shortsighted promoters dreamed. For when Israel was assailed by foreign foes she could not look for help to her sister kingdom, as she might have done if the bond of fraternal union between the two nations had not been severed by an unrighteous act of "policy" which defeated its own narrow ends. Judah returned from her seventy years' captivity and rebuilt her temple; while their altars, devoted to a false worship, were so completely abandoned as to be overgrown with thorns and thistles, and they themselves were "cut off" from the list of nations, in the graphic figure of the prophet, "like the foam upon the water." The most curious and learned researches have failed to discover any authentic trace of the ten lost tribes of Israel. This is what her false worships did for a people raised in point of privilege above all others

As a bond of union among men there is nothing like worshiping the true God together in the way he has appointed; and on the other hand nothing so tends to disintegration as a false worship where the true God is not. The question has been raised how long our goverment will stand; and some predict that with the many forces at work for its dissolution it will not stand another century. Yet even slavery did not destroy the Union; and great as is our peril from foreign emigration, we are strong enough to withstand the tide if our free institutions have not first been undermined by a foe from within—the same foe that destroyed ancient Israel. Her false worships brought in the consequent results,—national infidelity and unbelief,—precisely what the secret lodge worships are doing for America to-day.

3. Israel called to repentance.—vs. 12–15. Until the sword suspended over Israel actually fell there was space for her to repent, and thus avert these terrible judgments. While life remains the door of mercy stands open for the sinner; but the longer repentance is delayed the less likely he is to repent—just as with ancient Israel. They had ploughed wickedness and reaped iniquity, and it was not easy now to reverse all this—to sow righteousness and reap mercy: to break up their fallow ground,—those vices and superstitions that unless rooted up must choke and destroy all attempts at reform. How much fallow ground is there in our own hearts which need the ploughshare of truth driven through it? How much of our time, talent, or influence lies fallow, bringing forth no fruits of righteousness, only thorns and thistles? With all our anxiety for physical and mental culture, are we neglecting what is more important than either?—the culture of the soul.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—A letter from India to W. E. Blackstone, of this city, is to the effect that a young Indiaman who was once in this country with Dr. Thoburn, and who has become successful in the medical profession, has made his way in Thibet as a physician and missionary. The people welcomed him because of the qualification to heal their physical diseases, and he finds it possible to return to the country for another such expedition. He was sent first by a woman's foreign missionary society. This is a notable victory. We have often read in the last few years that Thibet was the only country closed against the Christian. Behold the open door!

—Rev. O. C. Wheeler, D.D., LL.D., the first Protestant preacher in California, died in Oakland, April 16, at 75 years of age. He was a graduate of Madison University, and came to Oakland in 1849 as a missionary for the Baptists. He built the first Protestant church on the coast with his own hands, and also delivered the first Fourth of July oration. The first free school was also established in his church.

—The Nebraska Conference of the Swedish Augustana Synod reports for the last year 39 congregations, 30 church buildings, 17 pastorates, $165,100 of church property, $14,472 indebtedness, 3,620 communicants, 327 baptisms, 30 parochial schools, and benevolence as follows: $2,884.89 for education, $208.10 for foreign missions, $2,121.02 home missions, $114.14 Utah mission, $699.18 church extension, $32,098.74 local expenses. Total for all objects $38,248.05.

—John McCracken, the colored barber who has been stirring up the First Methodist church at Mount Pleasant, Iowa, has received notification from Bishop Joyce that the proceedings against him were illegal, and that his membership cannot be severed by the pastor merely handing back his letter. Last winter McCracken joined the church by letter and in a few months, when certain members declared their intention of leaving, Rev. Mr. Thorn, the pastor, returned his letter. He appealed to Bishop Joyce with the above result, Bishop Joyce holding that the colored line could not be drawn in the church. Iowa churches are no place for the color line.

—The Methodist Episcopal church has three conferences in India. In connection with these conferences are 81 foreign missionaries, 57 native missionaries, 39 zenana missionaries, and 10,241 native communicants. There are 101 churches, 41,198 scholars in the Sunday-schools, and 20,458 pupils in the day schools. The baptisms last year numbered 4,308.

—The Finnish Lutherans in this country have a Bible Society, with headquarters in West Superior, Wis., which prints the Bible in the Finnish language. The Finnish pastors are very active in opening new mission fields for the ten new ministers they expect from Finland the coming summer. These ten men are only the vanguard of a much larger number coming across the ocean in the near future.

—Methodism in this country has over four and a half million members, led by over 30,000 preachers; Baptists nearly four million followers, led by over 28,000 ministers; Presbyterianism a million and a half, led by a ministry of 11,500; Lutherans 1,023,000, headed by over 4,200 preachers, beside, a host of smaller denominations, and a band of Sabbath school scholars numbering over 9,000,000. In the whole country there is a gain to the Christian churches the past year of 1,089,853 members, 4,867 ministers and 8,494 churches.

—Dr. Talmage's new Tabernacle was dedicated April 26. Immense congregations attended the services and the subscriptions toward the debt amounted to about $22,000. The building seats 5,500 people and the acoustics are said to be perfect.

—The year of missionary work in the American Sunday-school Union which closed March 1, 1891, was crowned with abundant tokens of the blessing of God. Eighteen hundred and twenty new Sunday-schools were organized, and 650 of them were in the Northwest in places hitherto entirely destitute of religious privileges, containing 7,665 teachers and 63,210 scholars. Aid was given to 2,068 other schools, with 13,201 teachers and 125,924 scholars; and besides this, 5,069 schools that had been previously reported were again aided, with 24,219 teachers and 218,711 scholars. In addition to all this direct Sunday-school work, the missionaries of the Society distributed by sale and gift 7,447 Bibles and 11,214 Testaments. They made 49,460 visits to families for religious conversation and prayer, and delivered 14,003 addresses. Between 4,000 and 5,000 persons professed conversion in connection with the evangelistic services conducted by these earnest and faithful men, and at least 130 churches have been developed from the Sunday-schools established by them, while regular preaching services have been inaugurated in many other places as an outgrowth of this Sunday-school work. F. G. Ensign, Chicago, is Superintendent of the Northwest.

—In 1875 the Livingstone Mission of the Scotch Free Church was opened on Lake Nyassa, Africa. This mission is now being reinforced. Six missionaries, among them an agriculturist, a house builder, a medical missionary, and two teachers, are going out. Four missionaries of the German Moravian Society and three from the Berlin Evangelical Society are on their way to Central Africa, the last part to the Transvaal. The North Africa Mission, occupying the field where the Rev. E. J. Baldwin formerly worked, has now some seventy workers in the field, scattered over Morocco, Algeria, Tunis and Tripoli.

—From March 1st, 1890, to March 1st, 1891, the American Sunday-School Union established 650 new Sunday-schools in the Northwestern district, into which were gathered at the beginning 2,759 teachers and 20,707 scholars. It also aided and visited other schools, in 2,745 cases where there were 14,020 teachers and 135,589 scholars, held 7,522 meetings, made 26,245 visits to families, distributed to the destitute 5,532 Bibles and Testaments, and put into circulation in these communities $5,070 worth of religious reading. Already 2,982 conversions have been reported from this work, and 85 churches have developed from it.

"Get Wisdom."

When you get that you will get Pearline. A million wise women have got it already. With it, they have clean clothes that are not worn out with rubbing or injured by chemicals, and everything in the house is spotless. Without it, they have harder work and worse results. But they'll never be without it.

Beware of imitations which are being peddled from door to door First quality goods do not require such desperate methods to sell them. PEARLINE sells on its merits, and is manufactured only by 200 JAMES PYLE, New York.

The Oft Told Story.

"I am glad, my child," says Mother to her eldest daughter, "to see you improving in health so rapidly. Hood's Sarsaparilla is doing wonders for you this Spring. You look better every day."

"Yes, mother, I feel so much stronger, too. Why, I can play all day, and not feel tired. And Hood's Sarsaparilla is so pleasant to take. Sister always wants a taste when I am taking it."

"Well, it is really a peculiar and a remarkable medicine. I have been reading its Phenomenal Record. Every statement is so fair that it carries conviction. In fact, Hood's Sarsaparilla seems to be thoroughly honest and reliable."

"Why, mother, Susie Smith says her mother bought some Sarsaparilla last week, which the man said was just as good as Hood's, but they did not like it and have thrown it away. Can anybody else make it as good as Hood's?"

"No. As I have told you very often, Hood's Sarsaparilla is The Best. It possesses merit peculiar to itself. I always buy of a regular druggist, on whom I can rely to give me the genuine Hood's Sarsaparilla. I know that Hood's has done us much good, and I will not waste time or money trying any other." Read what another say about Hood's Sarsaparilla:

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER

"I write to tell how much good Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for me. Sometime ago I had diphtheria and was sick for a year afterward, being weak, blind and helpless. I used one bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla and it made me real strong." MATTIE A. COBB, 235 Prairie Avenue, Providence, R. I.

"As my little girl wanted to write and tell you how well she liked Hood's Sarsaparilla, I thought I would say a few words. I think it is the greatest blood purifier ever brought before the people. Some of my friends say 'go away with your medicine.' I said the same once, but my opinion has been changed considerably since my little girl has taken Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. GEO. N. COBB, Providence, R. I.

THE BEST.

EVERITT'S MAN-WEIGHT

HOE, CULTIVATOR PLOW, ETC., SINGLE AND DOUBLE WHEEL.

Will Revolutionize Hand-Power Cultivation—Makes Keeping a Horse an Unnecessary Expense in Many Cases.

This new Invention is a Great Boon to all Cultivators of the Soil, and must be Classed with the Great Inventions of the Age, yet it is so simple that the natural question with every one is, "Why did I not think of that?" And so nicely does it fill a want existing with thousands of gardeners, nurserymen, seedmen, florists, and farmers, that after the first trial they invariably conclude to "never do without it."

All other Garden Tools, Seed Drills, Rollers, etc., can be attached and run with our propeller with many times the power and greater ease than by hand power.

SINGLE WHEEL cultivator, with attachments, price $6.00. W't, 15 lbs.

DOUBLE WHEEL, with attachments, $8.00. W't, 20 lbs.

With every Double Wheel Machine the extra parts are furnished necessary to convert it into the single wheel machine, without extra charge. Thus practically giving the two machines for the price of one.

This best of all hand cultivators to every worker for the Cynosure free as follows:

Two-wheel for 15 new subscribers. ($22.50.) Single-wheel for 12 new subscribers. ($18.00.)

Two-wheel machine, 1 renewal and one new subscriber for $8.50. Same for two new subscribers.

Single wheel and same for $7.00. Express or freight extra.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St., N. Y.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—"Civil Service Gazette."

Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins, by Grocers, labelled thus:

JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London, England.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY, candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

Labor Day, May 1, was celebrated by fifty-one labor unions. A parade occurred in the morning, in which about 3,500 men participated. Speeches in favor of an eight-hour working day were made on the Lake Front by several prominent agitators.

Gamblers are now to be treated as vagrants. Last week the men known to be gamblers who were seen standing in front of former gaming places were notified to stop loitering on the streets or they would be arrested.

FIRES.

The fiercest and most disastrous forest fire on record in Atlantic county, N. J., for thirty years, was raging Thursday night in the vicinity of Conovertown and Port Republic, making it as light as at noonday. The pines in the neighborhood of the places mentioned took fire from a spark from an engine.

Harrisville, N. Y., a village in the Adirondack region, was destroyed by fire Monday. The loss is estimated at $100,000.

Three girls were burned to death and two other persons were badly burned at a fire in a fireworks factory in Morrisiana, N. Y. The flames were started by an explosion of powder. They spread rapidly and in a few seconds the entire building was on fire.

Flames raged in a forest near Millville, N. J., all day Tuesday and were for a long time uncontrolled. A swath through the timber six miles long and four miles wide has already been burned. The loss cannot now be estimated.

A school teacher and her pupils near Mann's Siding in northern Michigan had a narrow escape from a forest fire. The schoolhouse was surrounded by flames before the inmates were aware of it. A little band of wood-choppers rushed through the fire and rescued them.

Fire Tuesday in the Center Block at Franklin, Pa., destroyed $100,000 worth of property, on which there was $42,000 insurance. A large portion of the village of Forestport, N. Y., burned, causing a loss of $50,000. The Pioneer furnace at Negaunee, Mich., was damaged $4,000 by flames. W. A. Case & Sons' copper and sheet iron works at Buffalo, N. Y., were damaged $20,000, on which there was an insurance of $20,000.

At West Brimfield, Mass., Tuesday 400 acres of brush and timber were burned over, the result of a fire set by school children.

COUNTRY.

President Harrison and party visited Sacramento Saturday and were greeted by a salute of twenty-one guns and an immense crowd of people. On his return to San Francisco the President visited the University of California and the deaf and dumb asylum. The President attended the First Congregational church Sabbath morning. The rest of the day he remained in his rooms. In the evening he crossed over to Oakland, where his train was waiting, and shortly after midnight, started for Portland, Oregon.

Amidst the plaudits of thousands of citizens, the blare of trumpets, the beat-

(Continued on 12th page.)

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from April 27 to May 2, inclusive:

N Benham, E D Slayton, N Callender, P Baldwin, Mrs S Swartz, S P Bushnell, J S Harnden, Rev H J Richardson, D D Worman, E Wylie, E L Dilley, H Wilcox, S Blanchard, J H Fake, R A Cullor, T Camp, Rev P Hilmen, Miss E R Burdick, P Dunkes, S F Robinson, S P Marshall, Rev A Pflenger, D J Ellsworth, Dean Ferson, Mrs D E Will, T Coggshall, S J White, W Tisdell, B Fuller, C P Potter, Rev E J Buehrer, Mrs L H Hull, R May, Mrs P D Shearer, E B Ridgeway, S B Kokanour, A L Spencer, J Decker, Prof C G F Miller, J Ekman, J R Yoes, J Brown, O H Collins, Rev A C Bedford.

The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health.

At this season nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is worthy your confidence. It is peculiar in that it strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. Give it a trial.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

Children always Enjoy It.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

of pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda is almost as palatable as milk. Children enjoy it rather than otherwise. A MARVELLOUS FLESH PRODUCER it is indeed, and the little lads and lassies who take cold easily, may be fortified against a cough that might prove serious, by taking Scott's Emulsion after their meals during the winter season.

Beware of substitutions and imitations.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer who will send me their Express and P.O. address.
T. A. Slocum, M. C., 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

PLAYS Dialogues, Tableaux, Speakers, for School, Club & Parlor. Best out. Catalogue free. T. S. DENISON, Chicago, Ill.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring	1 02	@ 1	06½
Winter	1 06	1	06½
Corn—No. 2	68	@	70½
Oats—No. 2	53	@	58¼
Rye—No. 2	86½
Bran per ton	13 50	@14	75
Hay—Timothy	12 00	@16	50
Butter, medium to best	12	@	27
Cheese	05	@	12½
Beans	1 75	@ 2	25
Eggs	13½
Seeds—Timothy	1 08	@ 1	30
Flax	1 17	@ 1	18
Broom corn	03	@	04½
Potatoes, per bu	75	@ 1	10
Hides—Green to dry flint	04½	@	07½
Lumber—Common	10 00	@13	00
Wool	15	@	34
Cattle—Choice to extra	5 75	@ 6	40
Common to good	1 75	@ 5	70
Hogs	3 80	@ 5	10
Sheep	3 50	@ 6	50

NEW YORK.

Wheat	1 09½	@ 1	29
Corn	79	@	83
Oats	59	@	70
Eggs	15½
Butter	14	@	29
Wool	14	@	39

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	2 40	@ 5	75
Hogs	3 50	@ 4	85
Sheep	5 50	@ 6	00

STANDARD WORKS
—ON—
SECRET SOCIETIES.
FOR SALE BY THE
National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. ☞A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan ABDUCTION. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the INITIATE. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature AND TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: OR FREEMASONRY SELF-CONVICTED. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before THE GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

Masonic Salvation, as taught by its standard authors. This pamphlet is a compilation from standard Masonic works, in proof of the following proposition: Freemasonry claims to be a religion that saves men from all sin, and purifies them for heaven. 111 pages, price, postpaid, 20 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret SOCIETIES. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

HOME AND HEALTH.

HOW TO DRINK MILK.

Don't swallow milk fast and in such big gulps. Sip it slowly. Take four minutes at least to finish that glassful, and don't take more than a good teaspoonful at one sip.

When milk goes into your stomach, it is instantly curdled. If you drink a large quantity at once, it is curdled into one big mass, on the outside of which only the juices of the stomach can work. If you drink it in little sips, each little sip is curdled up by itself, and the whole glassful finally finds itself in a loose lump made up of little lumps, through, around, and among which the stomach's juices may percolate and dissolve the whole speedily and simultaneously.

Many people who like milk and know its value as a strength-giver, think they cannot use it because it gives them indigestion. Most of them could use it freely if they would only drink it in the way I have described, or if they would, better still, drink it hot. Hot milk seems to lose a good deal of its density; you would almost think it had been watered; and it also seems to lose much of its sweetness, which is cloying to some appetites.

If the poor only knew and appreciated the value of milk taken in this way, I am sure there would not be so much beer drinking among them. There are thousands of hard-working scrub-women, wash-women, factory-girls, and even shop-girls in this city, who drink beer with their meals because it gives a little stimulant to their tired bodies, and do not understand that it is only like applying a whip to a weary horse instead of giving him oats. If they only knew, they would find in this simple draught as much real strength as in a barrel of beer.—New York Tribune.

BEFORE YOU CLEAN HOUSE.

Long before the calendar says it is time to begin house-cleaning, says the Ladies' Home Journal, you should look over the magazines, papers, disabled furniture, discarded garments, and household ornaments which even twelve months accumulate so wonderfully. Be brave, and do not save an indiscriminate mass of articles against the possible needs of the seventh year of which we hear so much. Give away the best of the old garments and sell the remainder to the junk man. The magazines and papers which you do not intend to have bound or to utilize in your scrap-book, will be eagerly read in some hospital or other institution. Even the funiture and ornaments will greatly brighten the dreary surroundings of some poor family. Have the courage of your convictions in dealing with the contents of trunks and boxes. Dispense with non-essentials and systematize the remainder, and your reward will be a delightful sense of space and a feeling of almost physical relief.

HOW TO LAY A CARPET.

Lay the linings on the floor, putting a small tack here and there to keep them in place. Put the carpet on the floor, unrolling it in the direction in which it is to be laid. Begin to tack it at the end of the room which is the most irregular. If there be a fire-place or bay-window in the room, fit the carpet around these places first. Use large tacks to hold the carpet temporarily in place: they can be withdrawn when the work is finished. When the carpet is fitted to a place, use small tacks to keep it down. Tack one end of the carpet, stretching it well; then a side, then the other end, and finally the other side. Be careful to keep the lines straight and to have the carpet fit tightly; for if it be loose it will not only look badly, but will not wear well.—Maria Parloa, in the Ladies' Home Journal.

Mrs. Million's Ride.

When Mrs. Million goes to ride she travels forth in state,
Her horses, full of fire and pride, go prancing from the gate;
But all the beauties of the day she views with languid eye,
Her flesh in weakness wastes away, her voice is but a sigh.
For Mrs. Million is in an advanced stage of catarrh, and all the luxuries that wealth can buy fail to give her comfort. She envies her rosy waiting-maid, and would give all her riches for that young woman's pure breath and blooming health. Now, if some true and disinterested friend would advise Mrs. Million of the wonderful merits of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, she would learn that her case is not past help. $500 reward is offered by the manufacturers for a case of catarrh in the head which they cannot cure.

We are often deceived in the age of people having beautiful and luxuriant hair, not knowing that they use Hall's Hair Renewer to keep gray hairs away.

The time to purify the blood is in MARCH, APRIL, MAY. The medicine to take is AYER'S Sarsaparilla, which is SUPERIOR in combination, SUPERIOR in proportion, SUPERIOR in appearance, and SUPERIOR in all that goes to strengthen and build up the system weakened by disease and pain. AYER'S Sarsaparilla gives tone to the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys, and Bowels. It quickens the appetite, and imparts to the system a healthful feeling of strength and vigor. When taken for Scrofula, Catarrh, Rheumatism, or for any other disease originating in impure blood the results are positive, thorough, and lasting. These statements are true only of AYER'S Sarsaparilla. Be sure to ask for AYER'S. IT CURES OTHERS, WILL CURE YOU.

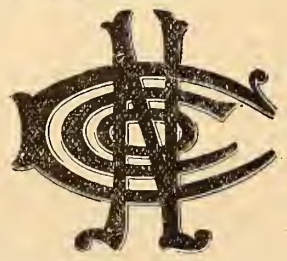
EVERY WATERPROOF COLLAR OR CUFF



BE UP TO THE MARK

THAT CAN BE RELIED ON

Not to Split!

Not to Discolor!

BEARS THIS MARK.

TRADE CELLULOID MARK.

NEEDS NO LAUNDERING. CAN BE WIPED CLEAN IN A MOMENT.

THE ONLY LINEN-LINED WATERPROOF COLLAR IN THE MARKET.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the REPUBLIC, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY

ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entir Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33d inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated'

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated' comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The

Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots,

WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

Washington.
John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.
James Madison, 4th President of the United States.
Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.
Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.
Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.
John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.
Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.
William Wirt, Attorney-General.
John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.
John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.
Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.
Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.

Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, postpaid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

FIFTY YEARS and BEYOND;

OR,

Old Age and How to Enjoy It.

A ost appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHROP.

Introduction by
REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D.,
(Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of that now is, and to give comfort and help life that is to come.

"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors one gray head and refuses to consider the oldish man burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"The selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveller to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1

Address. W. I. PHILLIP,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago Il

SEE THIS!

The latest, most complete edition
Over 235 choice

Reform Songs for the Times.

Only 30c a copy, or 20c by the 100

—AND—

"THE TOBACCO MANIA."

$1 per 100.

For sale here and by the author,

GEO. W. CLARK,

76 W. Montcalm St., Detroit, Mich.

Farm Notes.

THE DAIRY COW.

Gov. Hoard, at the New York Dairy Convention, spoke on the above topic, and following is a digest of what he said: Breeding is the foundation of the dairy cow. I want her a born dairy cow. Nature says invariably do not breed from a mistake. She does not make mistakes. The average production of milk per cow in Wisconsin is 3,000 pounds per annum, which means 125 pounds of butter, while there are others that average 300 pounds of butter per cow per annum. The cow breeds from her blood, not from her performance. Breeding is based on herediity. Select the sire for your herd which has the individually wanted qualities, and whose antecedents for generations have had the same qualities, and use that sire on cows of like characteristics, and your chances for failure will be reduced to a minimum.

While riding with my wife and lusty babe in a buggy one day, the little one bitterly cried for its natural sustenance, which its mother said she could not give, as she was suffering from a chill. "What will we do?" "I must have some warm drink; I must be warm before the child can get his dinner," said the mother. Every mother knows this. This was a revelation to me, and solves one of the dairy-cow problems. Cold water, cold stables, and turning cows out in the cold are all antagonistic to the production of milk. And still nine-tenths of the farmers furnish their cows with so much of this cheap commodity—cold—that it costs them $10 or $15 per head more to keep them through the winter; besides it diminishes the income in shutting off the milk supply. This is burning the candle at both ends. Something warm to drink, and a warm, comfortable habitation are as essential in the case of the mother cow as in that of the mother of the babe in the buggy.

WHERE THE GOVERNMENT SEEDS GO.

The seeds sent out by the Department are mostly given to members of Congress. According to the tabular statement, Senators, Representatives and Delegates in Congress were given 3,732,112 packages, leaving only a little over a million to be sent to individuals, experiment stations and agricultural societies. And this explains why the Seed Division has grown as it has, and Congress is willing to make appropriations for it. Politicians own it and use it for their own purposes, while the original purpose for which it was established has vanished from sight. The Agricultural Department, on the whole, we regard as admirable, and it is doing excellent work for the country; but the Seed Division has been degraded to low political uses at the expense of the people, and the better informed portion of the community demand its improvement or abolishment.

One-tenth part of the money now appropriated for the Seed Division would be entirely sufficient for all good uses. The rest of it is worse than wasted, and the officers of the Agricultural Department know it, and the people know it!

Under the appropriation act of Congress, from July 1, 1888, to June 30, 1889, the whole number of packages sent out was 4,852,512. Of this number 4,018,031 are vegetable and flower seeds, leaving only 834,481 of all other kinds, mostly under the head of field seeds. But among these 548,009 packages are turnip seeds! There are left only 150,910 packages which might possibly prove to be really of any value—about one-seventeenth part of the whole. And this agrees wonderfully well with what we have previously said in these pages, that if the government should appropriate $5,000 for the Seed Division for its legitimate use in the dissemination of new and valuable seeds, it would be ample. As far as relates to vegetable and flower seeds, we say, without fear of contradiction, that the Seed Division has never sent out a new and useful variety. In the nature of the case they cannot do so, since they procure their stock of these seeds from the seedsmen who have already put them on the market. In the very last report of the Secretary of Agriculture, 1889, correspondents who have received vegetable seeds report on the value of Early Mohawk and Early Red Valentine Beans, Danvers Yellow Onion, Champion of England Peas, the Deacon Lettuce, All Seasons Cabbage, and some others, all of which have been sent out by seedsmen, and most of them for many years.—Vick's Magazine for April.

COPYRIGHT, 1890.

"My dear," said Dr. Bradley's wife,
While sitting in our church, last week,
"Judge Browne is dozing in a draught—
He'll be so ill he cannot speak."
"Oh! never mind, my dear," said he,
"I'll cash the 'draft' some time next week."

A "slight cold" settling upon the lungs of one whose blood is tainted with scrofula, nearly always results in consumption.

For removing scrofulous humors from the blood, curing scrofulous sores and ulcers, and Consumption (which is lung-scrofula) in its earlier stages, by removing their underlying cause, and for purifying the blood of all humors or poisons, no matter of what name or nature, as well as for toning up the system generally, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is acknowledged by all who know anything of it, to stand at the head of all remedies.

All the year round, you may rely upon Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to purify the blood and system. It's not like the sarsaparillas, that are said to be good for the blood in March, April and May. The "Golden Medical Discovery" works equally well at all times, and in all cases of blood-taints, or humors, no matter what their name or nature.

It's the cheapest blood-purifier sold through druggists, no matter how many doses are offered for a dollar, because you only pay for the good you get.

Your money is returned if it doesn't benefit or cure you.

Can you ask more?

"Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol to inebriate, and no syrup or sugar to derange digestion.

It's a concentrated vegetable extract; put up in large bottles; pleasant to the taste, and equally good for adults or children.

A young lady of Jefferson, West Virginia, declares that she was all run down before taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla; but that now she is gaining strength every day. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is certainly a wonderfully effective tonic for the feeble and delicate.

Beecham's Pills cure Sick-Headache.

Holden with Cords. Or the Power of the Secret Empire. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

THE WOMAN'S NEWS
IS THE ONLY
GENERAL WOMAN'S NEWSPAPER IN THE UNITED STATES,
—AND IS THE—
LARGEST WOMAN'S NEWSPAPER
EVER PUBLISHED.

The publishers offer the Largest Cash Commissions and the Best Premiums ever given by any newspaper.

Agents Wanted Everywhere.

Send for Sample Copies and Terms for Agents. Address,
THE HOSTERMAN PUB. CO.,
Springfield, Ohio.

FOR MINISTERS
THE
"STORIES OF THE GODS"
is especially adapted. They will at once derstand the references to the idolatrous systems of the nations. And the idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus more clearly seen and easily understood. Will you furnish each pastor in your place with one of these pamphlets?

PRICE, ONLY 10 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison Street, Chicago

The St. Louis Sermon

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover.

Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

WILL SELL FOR

Regular Price.		Selling Price.
	FIVE CENTS.
$ .15	"A Woman's Victory, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp.	$ .05
$ .10	"Washington Souvenir." Portraits of Geo. Washington and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freemasonry. Size 18x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home.	$ .05
	SIX CENTS.
$ .10	"Secret Societies." A Lecture delivered at Oberlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Paper, 36 pp.	$ .06
$ .20	"Reasons Why Secret Societies cannot be Fellowshiped by the United Presbyterian Church." By Rev. J. W. Bain. Pages 149.	$ .06
	TEN CENTS.
$ .15	"My Experience with Secret Societies." By a Traveler. Paper, 51 pp.	$ .10
$ .25	"Sketch of the Life of James G. Birney." His relation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in history. By General William Birney. Paper, 32 pages.	$ .10
	TWENTY CENTS.
$ .30	"Songs for the Times," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohibition and W. C. T. U. meetings. Boards, 152 pages.	$ .20
	TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.
$ .75	"Berea College," Kentucky. An interesting history of the founding of that College for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 87 pages.	.25
	FIFTY CENTS.
$1.00	"National Suicide and its Prevention." The following will show the drift of the book: Measure or Standard of Value; What is Honest Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lumry. Cloth, 224 pp.	$ .50
$1.50	"History of Secret Societies in France," or "The Cradle of Rebellions." By Lucien De La Hodde. Translated from the French by Gen'l. J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp.	$ .50

Sent postpaid to anyaddress on recelpt of the selling price.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

10,000

Another ten thousand edition of the trac

KILLED, AND NO INQUEST.

This is a large 4-page tract at 30 cen per pound, 15 cents for half pound, and 10 cents for a third of a pound. It is an illustrated account of the death of Rev. J. W. Johnston, while being initiated by the officers of Huntington Lodge, W. Va., in January of this year. Sent postpaic at the above price. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St Chicago

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

BUSINESS.

NEW AND OLD.

The Cynosure will continue to supply all ts subscribers, new or old, who send $1.50 for the paper, with the HEALTH CALENDAR and ROPP'S COMMERCIAL CALCULATOR, as follows: The paper and the Calculator, leatherette bound, No. 1, (publisher's price 50 cents) for $1.70. Morocco bound (price $1.00) for $2.00.

The paper and Calendar (publisher's price 30 cents) for $1.65. The Calculator (No. 1.) or a Calendar free to every old subscriber sending $3.00 for renewal and a new subscriber.

The Calculator is a book of great value for every farmer, mechanic or business man.

The Calendar contains a temperance bill of fare for every day, and hundreds of good recipes. It hangs on the wall in constant sight.

NEW OFFERS.

The Cynosure and the Cosmopolitan Magazine (publisher's price $2.40) to new subscribers only $3.00. To others $3.25.

The Cynosure and Pres. C. A. Blanchard's new book "Educational Papers" for $1.70 to all subscribers.

NEWEST AND BEST.

Read the advertisement of the Manweight Cultivator on another page.

This grand machine which everybody should have who has a garden, whether farmer or gardener or not, we are able to offer at excellent rates to Cynosure subscribers.

We will send the cultivator free to every one who will send us a club of 15 new subscribers at $1.50 each; or the single wheel for a club of 12 new names.

For $8.50 we will send the two-wheel cultivator and the Cynosure two years to new subscribers or a year each to a new and an old. This gives two subscriptions for 50 cts. The single-wheel machine and the same subscriptions for $7.00. We don't pay transportation.

We would be glad to put 100 of these machines at work killing weeds and raising new subscriptions. It is an investment none will regret.

50,000

SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CYNOSURE would bring our reform to the POINT OF SUCCESS. LET US "KEEP EVERLASTINGLY AT IT."

MRS. HAVILAND'S wonderful book "A Woman's Life Work," should be read in every family. It will be sent to everyone who will send a full year's subscription to the Cynosure and $1.00 in addition. The price of the book is $1.50. We make this special offer for May only.

BLACK BEAUTY is one of the most popular books of the day. It is said that about two million copies have been sold. Every boy and girl should read it, and learn to feel compassion for the dumb beasts that spend their lives in the service of man. We will give a copy free to every one of them who sends us a new subscriber before June 1.

Only $20

ODELL DOUBLE CASE TYPE WRITER

It has 78 Characters, and is the only Type Writer with Check Perforator attachment. Is fast taking the lead of all Type Writers. Special terms to Ministers & S.S. Teachers. Send for circulars. Odell Type Writer Co. 85 Fifth Av. Chicago.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

ing of drums, the booming of cannon, ground was broken Monday of last week for the monument which is to be raised at the tomb of Gen. Grant at Riverside Park.

The lower House of the Pennsylvania Legislature Tuesday passed the compulsory education bill by a vote of 116 to 49. The bill requires that all children between the ages of 8 and 12 years shall attend school at least sixteen weeks each year.

A joint resolution empowering the general government to acquire title to lands for the construction of the Hennepin Canal was adopted Tuesday by the Illinois Legislature.

The ballot reform bill was passed by the Illinois house by a vote of 145 yeas to no nays. This is a modification of the Australian law.

At Cincinnati Monday Judge Gregg fined base-ball players each $2 and costs for violating the Sunday law. Mayor Mosby declares that no more professional base-ball games shall be played in Cincinnati on Sunday.

The Supreme Court at New Orleans Monday decided the lottery mandamus case in favor of the lottery company.

During the month of April 60,449 immigrants landed at the port of New York, the largest number for April since 1882. At Baltimore 11,700 persons were landed in the same period; 3,267 were landed Thursday.

A vein of natural gas was struck at Bloomington, Ill., yesterday at a depth of 98 feet. The pressure is so great that all attempts to place a cap on the tube proved ineffectual.

This is the twelfth week of the coke strike in Pennsylvania, and the cost thus far is figured at $3,500,000. The men have lost $1,000,000 in wages.

Pittsburg, last week, fairly started in the eight-hour movement, with 5,000 carpenters out and placing other trades in such a peculiar position that 10,000 members of other building organizations will soon follow.

The first sod of the tunnel to be built between Detroit and Windsor, Ontario, was turned Thursday afternoon.

People arriving at Paris, Texas, from Purcell and other points in the Indian Territory, say that the Negroes are coming over from Oklahoma and begging for something to eat. Their condition is said to be something pathetic. They were deluded into coming to Oklahoma last fall in large numbers, and have found none of the good things promised them.

Dr. R. G. Mauss, a noted Washington physician, killed himself Thursday while crazed with la grippe.

Five hundred carpenters quit work at Youngstown, Ohio, yesterday, because the contractors refused to recognize other unions in the building trades.

FOREIGN.

A cabinet crisis is imminent in Vienna. The Germans and Conservatives are divided on the school question. Neither party has a majority and no reply to the speech from the throne can be voted.

In Turin and Milan the police have arrested many anarchists on the charge of inciting the military to mutiny.

The London Pall Mall Gazette gives great prominence to a scheme which is said to have been drafted in order to transport Hebrews from Poland and from the southeast of Europe to an immense tract of uninhabited land in Australia or Brazil.

Dispatches from Corfu give the particulars of a serious outbreak of the Greeks against the Jewish inhabitants. The Greeks recently spread a report that the Jews had murdered a Christian girl for the feast of the passover. The Jews were assaulted in spite of the troops called out to protect them.

The Chilian legation in Washington received April 27 the following telegram: "The First Naval division of the Government of Chili on the morning of the 22d of April, in the port of Caldera, attacked iron-clads Blanco Encalada and Huascar, and destroyed them both by the use of whitehead torpedoes thrown at the first moment. The government vessels Almirante Lynch and Condell received no damage whatever, and are preparing to attack the rest of the rebel squadron."

An imperial decree has been issued forbidding racing on Sundays, and advising the local authorities to permit races to be held only on working days as the best method of hindering workingmen from attending them.

Chili.—The warship Blanco Encalada, which was one of the vessels taken possession of by the rebels at the breaking out of the insurrection, was sunk on April 23 in Caldera Bay by a torpedo fired by the new gunboat Almirante Lynch, killing 200 persons.

The attendance at the labor meeting in Hyde park, London, Sunday, was variously estimated from 200,000 to 300,000. The procession in connection with the meeting included workers at all the trades, and was many miles long.

The details of the labor trouble at Fourmies, France, are received that six women, several children and eight men were killed on the spot, while twenty were seriously wounded, several fatally, gives the affair the character of a massacre. The soldiers were merely exposed to stone-throwing, but they replied with successive volleys from Lebel rifles. The local popular commotion is intense and it finds a response in the growing excitement in every working center.

Puget Sound catechism and its chief city SEATTLE, WASHINGTON Send stamp to Eshelman, Llewellyn & Co., Seattle, Wash.

AGENTS WANTED both sexes. $25 to $50 per week EASILY MADE. SAMPLES FREE. Send for terms. W. C. Wilson, Kansas City, Mo.

PENSIONS OLD CLAIMS Settled Under New Law. Soldiers, Widows, Parents, send for blank applications and information. PATRICK O'FARRELL Pension Agent, Washington, D. C.

$3000 A YEAR! I undertake to briefly teach any fairly intelligent person of either sex, who can read and write, and who, after instruction, will work industriously, how to earn Three Thousand Dollars a Year in their own localities, wherever they live. I will also furnish the situation or employment, at which you can earn that amount. No money for me unless successful as above. Easily and quickly learned. I desire but one worker from each district or county. I have already taught and provided with employment a large number, who are making over $3000 a year each. It's NEW and SOLID. Full particulars FREE. Address at once, E. C. ALLEN, Box 420, Augusta, Maine.

VASELINE.

FOR A ONE-DOLLAR BILL sent us by mail we will deliver, free of all charges, to any person in the United States, all of the following articles, carefully packed:

One two-ounce bottle of Pure Vaseline	10 cts.
One two-ounce bottle of Vaseline Pomade	15 "
One jar of Vaseline Cold Cream	15 "
One Cake of Vaseline Camphor Ice	10 "
One Cake of Vaseline Soap, unscented	10 "
One Cake of Vaseline Soap, exquisitely scented	25 "
One two-ounce bottle of White Vaseline	25 "
	$1.10

Or for postage stamps any single article at the price named. On no account be persuaded to accept from your druggist any Vaseline or preparation therefrom unless labelled with our name, because you will certainly receive an imitation which has little or no value. Chesebrough Mfg Co., 24 State St., New York.

DR. PRICE'S Cream Baking Powder.

Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

A Pure Cream of Tartar Powder.
Superior to every other known.

Delicious Cake and Pastry, Light Flaky Biscuit, Griddle Cakes, Palatable and Wholesome.
No other baking powder does such work.

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

Kennedy's Medical Discovery cures Horrid Old Sores, Deep Seated Ulcers of 40 years standing, Inward Tumors, and every disease of the skin, except Thunder Humor, and Cancer that has taken root. Price $1.50. Sold by every Druggist in the U. S. and Canada.

WALL PAPER SAMPLES SENT FREE of spring patterns with borders and ceilings to match. One half million rolls offered at wholesale prices. White blanks 4c to 6c, Gilts 8c to 35c. Embossed Gilts 10c to 50c. I will send you the most popular colorings, and guarantee to save you money. ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant, 63-65 W. Washington-st. Chicago

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

COMMENCEMENT THURSDAY, JUNE 25TH, 1891.

Full College Courses, Preparatory School, Business School, Musical Conservatory and Art School. Fifteen Professors and Instructors.

Send for Catalogue.

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

PASTOR KOENIG'S TRADE MARK NERVE TONIC

A NATURAL REMEDY FOR

Epileptic Fits, Falling Sickness, Hysterics, St. Vitus Dance, Nervousness, Hypochondria, Melancholia, Inebrity, Sleeplessness, Dizziness, Brain and Spinal Weakness

This medicine has direct action upon the nerve centers, allaying all irritabilities and increasing the flow and power of nerve fluid. It is perfectly harmless and leaves no unpleasant effects.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Kœnig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

KOENIG MEDICINE CO.,

50 West Madison, cor. Clinton St., CHICAGO, ILL.

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

Price $1 per bottle. 6 bottles for $5.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIII., No. 35 | CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MAY 14, 1891. | WHOLE No. 1,098.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Send all business letters relating to the paper to THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.... 1
The Annual Meeting and Conference 8
The Mafia Grand Jury... 8
Personal Mention..... 9
The Death Record..... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Has the Grand Army of the Republic been a Beneficent Institution? 1
God Remembers (Poetry) 2
The K. P. in Kansas..... 2
SELECTED:
Standing Armies a Failure..... 3
The New Orleans Grand Jury on the Mafia..... 3
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 4
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 4
LITERATURE..... 6
REFORM NEWS:
A Lecture Course in Minnesota..... 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
Are the Churches Responsible; Hoping for a Change; Chauncey Depew on Masonry; An Odd-fellow Object Lesson of their Penalty; Pith and Point.....5,6
THE N. C. A 7
AGENTS AND LECTURERS.... 7
THE HOME.....10
TEMPERANCE.....11
RELIGIOUS NEWS.....12
BIBLE LESSON.....12
NEWS OF THE WEEK.....13
DONATIONS.....13
HOME AND HEALTH.....14
FARM NOTES.....15
BUSINESS.....16

See pages 7 and 16 for premium offers.

MAY.—During this month some hundreds of our friends, are asked to renew their subscriptions. Some of them will thank us for reminding them that the year has come round again. We trust that they are not only well satisfied that $1.50 sent for the Cynosure is good investment, but also rejoice that they may in this way promote a good cause. Every name added to the list increases the ability of the N. C. A. to carry on the work more widely and successfully. If our list was doubled we could sustain one or two agents in the South. If we had 50,000, we could give ten or twelve workers enough to do. Please do the best possible work for our list. Take advantage of our premiums this month. They are worth sending for.

"Here is my motto: Down with the lodge, and let Christ have the pre-eminence in all things." This is the grand sentiment with which a Congregational pastor of Washington closes a letter to the Conference. Let us take up the shout and make it ring round the world.

Queen Victoria is quite an old lady to be paying the debts of her renegade Grand Master son, the Prince of Wales. But it is reported that since her Cabinet dare not ask Parliament for the amount, the indulgent mother has just given the great Mason $1,500,000 with which to pay his debts. The Masons all over the world are very proud of their Prince Albert Edward.

The International Y. M. C. A. Convention at Kansas City struck twelve on the Sunday opening of the World's Fair. They not only earnestly but respectfully urged that the Fair remain closed and in its normal condition on the Sabbath, but it was unanimously adopted that the secretaries all over the country ask exhibitors to make the appearance of their exhibitions contingent upon the Sunday closing. That is the most practical, business-like suggestion we have yet seen. Let us all aid in carrying the resolution into effect.

The Evangelical Alliance, meeting this year in Florence, Italy, was not so much in the notice of Christendom as usual. It was, however, animportant meeting to Protestantism in the old home of persecution. Naturally the historic associations of the spot where Savonarola preached and burned, aroused sympathy for those who are suffering for the sake of the Gospel, and the German Lutherans of the Baltic who are feeling the hand of Russian autocracy were remembered. Such topics as the opium traffic, slavery in Africa, cooperation in missionary work, were discussed; and a professor of the University of Naples, nominally a Catholic, exposed the corruptions of that church unsparingly.

Knight Templar Masonry in Chicago is more respectful than usual this year toward the religion it mocks and rivals. Instead of taking the Sabbath day for its visits to the houses dedicated to the only true God, it chose Ascension Day, so-called, and marched into Bishop McLaren's Episcopal Cathedral, a block from the Cynosure office; and into Dr. Gunsaulus's Plymouth Congregational church on the South Side. Dr. Gunsaulus was to perform for them, but was unwell, and Rev. Frank Bristol, a popular Methodist preacher, took his place. The Saviour, whom these men mock in their oaths, in their cup of damnation, and Hiram Abiff resurrection, truly ascended to the right hand of his Father. He sent, according to his promise, the Holy Comforter to convict of sin, righteousness and judgment. What has the system which these men profess, to do with the God who is now with us? The angel prophesied (Acts 1) that Christ would come again in power and glory as he went away. What will these men of the lodges do in that great day of his appearing?

The young German Emperor aims to be an all-round reformer. He has set aside the old regime in its first representative, Bismarck; he has made such engagements in behalf of the working classes that they hold him to be a leader of socialism; he is insisting that members of the royal family never forget the dignity of their station; and he is last said to be taking charge of religious worship as few heads of state churches have of late ventured to do. He has undertaken to amend the church ritual and cut out parts which he declares "too theatrical." This is doubtless an excellent change, for the nearer he can bring his state church worship to the simplicity and spiritually live condition of the New Testament churches, the more glorious will be their work for the kingdom of God. But the latest report says that William is going yet farther, and has ordered the court chaplains to cut down their sermons to a ten-minute length. On several occasions he has been detained in church from five to seven minutes more than the time allotted for divine service. "This," he says with significant emphasis, "is not to occur again." This is assuming that these "divine" services are a mere attachment of a human court, or else that the young Emperor is putting on airs like Nebuchadnezzar. If the Lord is King of kings, William can afford to tarry in his presence five minutes a week.

The threatening skies of the last of April are clearing rapidly in the labor world. A united effort to secure an eight-hour day was well planned, but the time has past for the hour to strike. Last year all eyes were upon the carpenters of this city. But their attempt has given little or no satisfaction to either employers or men. Possibly in view of the difficulties and expenses of the Pennsylvania coke strike, Mr. Gompers and his labor unions were constrained to postpone their movement at the last hour. The coke strike is costing the laborers immediately engaged millions of money, and steel mills depending on their product are beginning to shut down, and lay off their thousands of workmen. Employers and men should take a hint from the European situation. In Republican France the merry-making May-day of last century has become a day of alarms and massacre. The demonstrations and threats of workmen were met by armed men. But in Germany, where Socialism is at home, there was quiet. Not because demonstrations were suppressed, but the workingmen look upon the Emperor as an intercessor and friend whose care for their condition has disarmed their antagonism. American employers can afford to be not only just but generous. If an eight-hour day will be of positive benefit to their men they should arrange for it before it is asked, or before the request becomes a demand. If they will unite to suppress the saloons, secure Sabbath rest for working men and supplant secret labor unions by open American societies for recreation and improvement, labor questions would lose their sharp teeth.

Life is much reduced in simplicity when we resolve to live one day at a time, and to make that day blessed to others. The cares and the vexations and the troubles of life are allayed or banished under the spell of this central purpose. —Christian Register.

HAS THE GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC BEEN A BENEFICENT INSTITUTION?

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

The G. A. R., according to the testimony of Geo. L. Clymer in the Century of May 1890, was organized April 6th, 1866, at Decatur, Ill. Its "impressive ritual" and "solemn oath" were "taken from the Masons and Odd-fellows," and "with slight modifications" remain to the present. It has now more than half a million of members and has led to the formation of at least three other subsidiary secret orders, the most important of which is "The Sons of Veterans," now numbering nearly 100,000 men and designed to take the place of the G. A. R., which shall expire by limitation.

What has been the practical influence of this secret organization? Without any impeachment either of the motives or character of the many excellent citizens who are its members, I believe—

1. That it tends to promote the spirit and practice of war. I do not think this was or is intended; but just as reading the Police Gazette, or the exploits of "The Wild West" fills the youthful mind with images of violence and crime and leads directly to its commission; and just as the reading of the life of Daniel Boone, as their almost only book, has led the mountain people of Kentucky to keep up the barbarism of border warfare, and made it sometimes impossible to hold courts without military protection, so all recounting and glorying in the deeds of war tends to promote their repetition. What Pope said about vice is equally true of warfare:

> "[War] is a monster of such frightful mien,
> That to be hated needs but to be seen;
> But seen too oft, familiar with its face,
> We first endure, next pity, next embrace."

The military parades and the glorying in the deeds of our Revolutionary Fathers, which characterized the first fifty years of our national history, manifestly tended to foster the spirit of war. But for this, it would have been hardly possible that the purely useless war with Great Britain in 1812 to 1815, and the perfectly unjustifiable conflict with Mexico in 1846 to '48, could have ever taken place. If we are ever to reach that prophetic period when men shall beat their swords into ploughshares and learn war no more, it will be when we cease to recount and to glory in scenes of fratricidal strife.

2. We believe the G. A. R. tends to promote sectional animosities.

War begets abiding hatred between those engaged in it. Individual soldiers may not cherish animosities but national hatreds rarely die out. For more than a century after our Revolution, the people of the United States and the people of Great Britain, though kindred in race and in religion, continued to hate each other and to glory in each other's calamities. The only reason was, that they had been at war with each other, and rejoiced in their military achievements.

The chronic bitterness between Ireland and England is the result of war. When on each returning July 12th, the Orangemen celebrate the battle of Boyne, the average Irishman is always filled with wrath, and if it is not followed by scenes of violence and blood it is not for want of incentive or disposition. The secret order of Orangemen have been a great obstacle to the peace of Ireland; and in like manner I think the G. A. R. stands in the way of the unity and peace of our nation. It is well that our youth shall study the causes and results of the late war, but for the honor of our common religion let us not parade the scenes of fratricidal strife, but rather like the sons of Noah,

> "Walk backward with averted gaze
> And hide our shame."

3. I object to the G. A. R. because it is a secret society. I do not stop to enquire whether it is oath-bound or pledge-bound. Its form of obligation, its ceremonies of initiation, and its ordinary doings are intended to be hidden from the public. Organized secrecy in a free government and in time of peace, and especially when it includes matters of public concern, is wholly without occasion or excuse. Nay, more, it violates the inherent right of all men to fully investigate whatever concerns their personal interests or the general good. Secrecy, as a method of organized effort, finds no warrant in the sacred Scriptures, but is everywhere condemned. "Secret societies," says Joseph Cook:

1. Can be shown historically to have often led to crime.
2. Are natural sources of jealousy and just alarm to society at large.
3. Are especially unfavorable to harmony and mutual confidence among men living together under popular institutions.
4. Are dangerous to the general cause of civil liberty and just government.
5. Are condemned by the severe denunciations of many of the wisest statesmen, preachers and reformers.
6. Are opposed to Christian principles, especially to those implied in these three texts: "In secret I have said nothing." "Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." "Give no offence in anything, that the ministry be not blamed."
8. Are forbidden to church members by some Christian denominations, and ought to be by all.

Now, in view of this general character of secret orders; in view of the fact that our country is honey-combed with them; that they confront us on every side; that they are depleting our churches; teaching men to substitute the selfish principles of giving that we may receive as much again in the place of Christian charity, and to do in the name of the lodge what they ought to do in the name of the Lord Jesus; that some of them teach a religion that has no Divine Mediator, even erasing this name from His own holy Word; in view of the fact that others teach that the laws of the lodge are paramount to the laws of the land, and that in many places they cause violence and blood, —in view of all these facts, no Christian can afford to belong to any secret society, however worthy its objects, lest he give countenance to those that are not innocent. For just as surely as the man who takes an occasional glass of wine will find himself powerless to preach a temperance crusade, so will the man who belongs to any secret society find his mouth shut when he seeks to rebuke others. The manifest duty is to "Cry aloud and spare not. Lift up thy voice like a trumpet and show my people their transgressions." But how shall we do it except as we "abstain from the very appearance of evil."

My last and most serious objection to the G. A. R. is that it undertakes to secretly consider, to influence, and control public and national interests; and that for the selfish benefit of its members it has largely increased the burdens of public taxation. The right of personal or of mercantile privacy becomes a crime when it is subversive of public interests. What concerns the public welfare cannot be innocently hidden from any law-abiding citizen. Now, it cannot be denied that every legitimate object of the G. A. R. is a public concern. To provide for the destitute soldier, to promote the spirit of patriotism and to preserve the memories of the war (so far as they ought to be preserved), are duties which commend themselves to every good citizen. To say that no one who was not an actual soldier shall not be permitted to know of, and participate in, their promotion, is a personal and public wrong. There are many good citizens who took no part in the physical strife who are as intensely interested in all that relates to the soldiers and to the country as those who fought its battles. There are many men and women whose long and useful lives have been one brave and earnest conflict with every form of oppression, and yet are denied all access to the counsels of those whose glory is, that they "delivered the spoiled out of the hand of the oppressor." This is a wrong; but it was a greater wrong to use their secret power in securing appointments, elections and national legislation.

I do not accuse them of being a political party. They are, like the liquor interest, a controlling factor in all parties. Half a million of voters, bound together by common interests, and a secret pledge, are a power before which political parties will bow down, and to secure their support will mutually bid against each other. In the last Presidential election the Republican party bid highest. They put in nomination a member of the G. A. R., and elected him. Had not Mr. Cleveland alienated this organization by vetoing some pension legislation, he would probably have served another term.

Of the great army of office-holders in Washington, the vast majority, that are not soldier's widows, wear the buttons of the G. A. R. Incompetency has been no barrier to appointments, when demanded by the order. The case of Corporal Tanner is a single example. For the last ten or twelve years there has been a continual clamor for increase of pensions. It has been the burden of the G. A. R. publications, especially of the National Tribune. It has been the theme of their orators in all their public meetings, and we have a right to infer that it has absorbed the attention of their secret councils. So great has been their influence over our national Congress that nearly all that they have asked has been conceded. Each concession, however, has been followed by a renewed demand until the amount now drawn from the pockets of the people is such as was never dreamed of at the close of the war. So great has it become that at the last national meeting, the commanding officer advised that there should be a suspension in the demand lest it excite a public reaction.

What that legislation has been, let me briefly indicate. At the close of the war there was, as it was supposed, an ample and permanent provision made for pensioning all wounded and needy soldiers. The cost of the war was enormous, but no one thought of our pensions being more than a moderate and steadily diminishing burden. In 1872, our pension appropriations were in round numbers $28,000,000. Gen. Garfield in a carefully considered speech in the House of Representatives said that this vast sum would gradually but steadily diminish. In 1878 they were $27,000,000. Then began the clamor for an increase. The secret power of the G. A. R. became known and felt. Hundreds of members of Congress knew that to vote against the demands of the G. A. R. meant political death. In 1889, the amount paid for pensions was $87,624,779. In 1890, it was $106,936,855, and the Secretary's estimate for 1891 is $133,000,000, or more than two dollars for every man, woman and child in the nation. At the present rate of increase there is a strong probability that it will reach $200,000,000 per year.

We are astonished at the passive endurance with which the nations of Europe bear the burdens of their immense standing armies, and yet not one of them bears so great a burden as ours. The cost of our army is a trifle. Our great war debt is steadily diminishing, and yet after twenty-six years of peace, our pensions are growing and are perfectly enormous. Great Britain, with a regular army of 225,000 men and an effective force of 618,000, pays for their maintenance $75,000,000. France, with a regular army of 580,000, pays $111,000,000. Germany, with the best appointed army in the world of 492,000, soldiers, pays $92,000,000; while Russia, with her 814,000 troops, pays but $94,000,000.

Our national expenses per capita, including Revolutionary pensions, were in 1810 but seventy-three cents; in 1890 they were $4.19. (The above statistics are from an article by Senator Carlisle in the Forum for Feb., '91.) At the lowest estimate each voter of the nation pays on an average ten dollars a year in pensions, which goes mainly to members of the G. A. R. Now I am not opposed to pension legislation. I will not now stop to consider whether this enormous drain is just and needful; but I respectfully submit that it is a matter of public concern, and that the public has a right to know both why and how it is drawn from their pockets. To say that it is none of our business; that the members of the G. A. R. have taken a pledge of secrecy and must keep it, is to add insult to injury. The question is, had they any right to make such a pledge? or if made, have they a right to keep it? No court will hold that a covenant to do what is contrary to the public good, is legally or morally binding, and I respectfully appeal to the members of the G. A. R. that they dispense with the secrecy element in their organization as being needless, hurtful and anti-republican.

Berea, Ky.

GOD REMEMBERS.

BY VICTORIA ALEXANDRA BUCK.

"Behold, I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands."—Isa. 49: 16.

Oh! ye weary ones and sad ones,
Ye who tire of earthly strife,
And would fain lie down and slumber,
Weary with the march of life;
Is thy way so sad and lonely?
Whatsoe'er thy life may be,
In the midst of all remember,
That thy God remembers thee.

Down the long and silent ages
Comes the echoes of his voice.
Thrilling souls like martial music,
Bidding all our hearts rejoice;
Ah! my soul, what is thine answer?
Say, what shall thy station be?
Dost thou know with all his greatness
That thy God remembers thee?

Past are all those days of pleasure,
Ended all the hours of pain,
And I would not live them over,--
Do not wish them back again:
Yet, whate'er awaits my future,
Whatsoe'er my life shall be,—
Oh, my soul, be still! Remember
That thy God remembers thee.

THE K. P. IN KANSAS.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—K. P. are the initials we sometimes use for one of our great commercial arteries, the Kansas or Union Pacific R. R., but I have reference now to the Knights of Pythias.

There lies before me the Sprig of Myrtle for April. This seems to be the organ of the Knights for this State and is singularly full of information about the order, which, as the paper is official and edited by a "Past Grand Chancellor," one may avail himself of without any outcry about "perjury" and so forth.

We find that there are 210 lodges in the State and the order is increasing. The "net increase in membership for the six months ending Dec. 31, 1890, was seven hundred and forty-seven." Two hundred of these are assigned to the county in which your correspondent lives. Dec. 31st last the total number was 10,537. The total assets of the lodges at that date were $151,486.26; over $70,000 being invested in "paraphernalia, furniture," etc.

What is all this for? What is the genius of this institution? There is a Grand Lodge in this State, and above that a Supreme Lodge, each with a long string of dignitaries: Chancellors, Prelates, Masters of Exchequer, Keepers of Seals, and so on. Besides the ranks of Page, Esquire and Knight, there is the Uniform Rank with an apparently full military organization. There are Generals of various degrees and offices, Colonels, Majors, Captains, Lieutenants, Surgeons, Adjutants, Chaplains, and so on. Kansas appears as a brigade, with four regiments, located in different parts of the State.

Still farther, there is, as we are informed by a flaming advertisement, the Endowment Rank, with a membership in the world of 24,000, and an endowment of $51,000,000.

The gentler sex have been brought into line also, for there is a "Supreme Temple of Pythian Sisters," and a "Grand Temple" in this State. One must believe in a Supreme Being to enter this "temple," but "religion and politics" are barred.

The foundation of this order is said to be "the four links of Love, Equality, Friendship and Purity." "The great lesson taught and exemplified within is the Golden Rule." From these quotations it will be seen that the Golden Rule is admitted, but the Author of that rule excluded. It is the attempt to attain the virtues without the author and exemplification of the virtues. Deism, this is the genius of the order of the Knights of Pythias.

In the issue of the journal before me there is a long exhortation about the standard of life, nobility, innate nobleness, the highest qualities, manhood, the noblest work of God, etc. It is a theory of life, but there is no Christ in it.

The initiation of a candidate is spoken of as "a season of refreshing." There seems to be a decidedly social air to the order, to put it very mildly. Banquets and balls are reported. One lodge reports two or three annual public balls which were "popular" and "a source of income. One "brother" writes, "Our lodge is enjoying a good run of 'biz.' One Esquire and two Knights last night with lunch, coffee, limburger, bologna and other things that go with them. Visiting brothers from three or four adjacent towns didn't get home till the 'wee sma' hours." The italics are as they stand in the Sprig of Myrtle. I am not "going behind the returns;" this is all in the official journal published by our former anti-prohibition Lieutenant-Governor.

Those who have studied this lodge any will be interested in a letter complaining of the great expense attending the Amplified Third Rank." "A proper outfit" is needed at such an expense that even rich lodges are burdened, or else it will "take a great stretch of the imagination to see the beauties of the dramatic work."

I believe the Knights of Pythias lodge to be practically one of the worst enemies of the Christian religion. We have all heard time and again in the sermons of the past about the "moral man" who seeks to go to heaven without any Redeemer, and by his own goodness. But in these latter days, and in the K. of P., and like orders, we have this moralism organized. It is sufficiently obstinate in isolated cases but what shall we expect when this non-Christian sentiment is organized? The greater part of the K. P.'s are young men, most of them those of whom we so often hear as not "darkening the church doors." I suppose the church conferences will keep on discussing the questions, "How to reach the young men," and "Why are not more men in the churches?" but they will not ask whether the lodges have anything to do with the trouble. But that is where the men are; being trained in moralism and religion without Christ. Every town almost has from two to four times as many lodges as churches. A town in Kansas of perhaps 1,400 people where I formerly lived has three churches and thirteen lodges. Why are not more men in the churches?

Let me close with two quotations from some "Resolutions of Condolence" which appear in the journal at my elbow. They may throw some light on the genius of the K. of P.:

"The Supreme Chancellor of the Universe did receive the spirit of our brother ——— to the castle hall of the faithful and believing knights in the realms of immortal glory." "The bright dawn of the new day came calmly to our brother, and he met it with a moral heroism worthy of Pythian cardinal virtues."

All this but no Christ.

Fraternally yours,

Douglass, Kan. T. C. MOFFATT.

STANDING ARMIES A FAILURE.

The cable has been loaded down recently with rumors of dissatisfaction among the rank and file of the British army. More than once this latent discontent seems to have broken out into open rebellion. About a year ago a battalion of the Grenadier guards was exiled to Bermuda for open mutiny at Wellington barracks, London, and the other day another battalion of this famous regiment made a similar display of insubordination. The men refused to go on parade when ordered to do so by their officers, and have drawn up a long list of grievances against the latter.

These troubles with British private soldiers are especially disquieting to her majesty's government, through the knowledge that the English standing army is but illy prepared at the best to protect the nation's honor in the event of a grave national crisis. The life of a regular army is the maintenance of discipline, even in times of peace. While still all-powerful as to her navy, England's standing army has steadily deteriorated during the last couple of decades, both as to numbers and efficiency. English military writers agree that a thorough reorganization is necessary before Britain can meet any belligerent power of importance on land, but the supreme difficulty seems to be in securing for the rank and file of the army desirable material, even under increased inducements.

The whole subject involves a necessary comparison of the respective systems of mercenaries and volunteers. All European nations rely upon enormous bodies of mercenary soldiers for the preservation of national security and peace. To keep these standing armies up to the competitive standard, national treasuries are drained. This burden upon the people is exhausting, and it is not proved that it is an absolute safeguard. In nations like England, where the democratic idea is steadily growing and permeating the intelligence of all classes, the difficulty of maintaining these mercenaries has become a national problem. Mutiny smoulders and Parliament trembles.

Military writers of the old world are beginning to point to the absence of a great standing army in the United States as one of the secrets of this nation's prosperity and security. The American union has demonstrated in its experience how a nation can raise the greatest of modern armies in the presence of a national crisis, and how such an army can perform its patriotic mission and then dissolve.—Chicago News, April 23.

THE NEW ORLEANS JURY ON THE MAFIA.

FROM THE GRAND JURY REPORT.

"The extended range of our researches has developed the existence of the secret organization styled 'Mafia.' The evidence comes from several sources fully competent in themselves to attest its truth, while the fact is supported by the long record of blood-curdling crimes, it being almost impossible to discover the perpetrators or secure witnesses. As if to guard against exposure, the dagger or stiletto is selected as the deadly weapon to plunge into the breast or back of the victim or silently do its fearful work. Revenge was their motto. Jealousy found solace in these methods while the burning vengeance of the vendetta sought satisfaction in the life blood of an enemy.

"Officers of the Mafia and many of its members are now known. Among them are men born in this city, of Italian origin, using their power for the basest purposes, be it said to their eternal disgrace. The larger number of the society is composed of Italians and Sicilians who left their native land, in most cases, under assumed names to avoid conviction and punishment for crimes there committed, and others were escaped convicts and bandits, outlawed in their own land, seeking the city of New Orleans for the congenial companionship of their own class. These men knew the swift retribution of the law in Italy, for hundreds have been shot down at sight by the military in the mountains of Sicily without a second thought.

"To-day there is recorded in the office of the Italian consul in this city the names of some eleven hundred Italians and Sicilians landed here during several years past showing the official records of their criminality in Italy and Sicily. Hundreds of them are among us to-day. We doubt not the Italian government would rather be rid of them than be charged with their custody and punishment. Such is the well-known character of a part of the Italian colony, as it is called, who are domiciled in this city and its vicinity. It cannot be questioned that secret organizations whose teachings are hostile to the fundamental principles of the government of the United States must be a continual menace to the good order of society and the material welfare of the people.

"As to the name of Mafia, socialist, nationalist, or whatever it may be, whether located in New Orleans, Chicago, or New York, the meetings of their members create and disseminate seditious opinions with a manifest tendency toward overt acts, whose commission partakes of the rankest treason.

"We may say that the many societies created and chartered for the laudable purpose of exercising a healthful influence in the various departments of the body politic enjoy a hearty approbation and are productive of good results. But in marked contrast to all those is the Mafia, whose every thought and act is in opposition to law and order, as contemplated by every nation of the civilized world, and in open defiance of the statutes of this State and nation and the cherished traditions of our people.

"Law is truly regarded as the embodiment of the wisdom of all ages and its just execution is the safeguard of society by the punishment of transgressors; its just execution expresses the will of the people in condemnation of crime, but where this lofty principle is contemned by the practice of assassination for revenge or spite, and concealment under the most binding oaths, renders powerless the efforts of the law to reach the chief actors and to secure witnesses, it becomes the duty of the people in the exercise of their sovereign rights to issue their decree of condemnation. That verdict has been rendered, the power of the Mafia is broken—it must be destroyed as an element of danger; a creation of leperous growth in this community. . . .

"No question is more intimately connected with the subject matter of this report than that of immigration. It deeply interests the people of the whole country by reason of the good results following the landing on our shores of large numbers of meritorious and law-abiding foreigners, or the damage attendant upon the introduction of a vicious or indolent class who leave their native country for that country's good, seeking an asylum here, soon again to follow in the footsteps of the past. We know that this question more deeply concerns the city of New Orleans than it does any city on the Atlantic seaboard. The great importance is forcibly expressed in the columns of the public press till there seems to be an awakening to the danger that threatens the situation and the necessity for a radical reformation.

"That past immigration laws were sadly deficient or badly administered is indicated by recent legislation of the national Congress, and even these new regulations will not be effective unless strictly enforced by the proper officials charged with such duties. That is the intention at present and for the future, yet by some design or other the details of the law may be evaded. For instance, so high an authority as the Italian consul, in this city in his sworn statement before the grand jury charged that nine Italians were recently landed from the steamship Entella whose names were not on the passenger list. This point has been referred by him to the Italian government and is being investigated, the steamer being due at Palermo about this time. The consul claims that 941 persons were landed while the passenger register showed 932 names. If it is finally shown that these nine Italians were so landed in violation of the laws of both nations they should be returned whence they came and the steamship Entella heavily fined.

"We have stated in our remarks about the Mafia that several hundred Italian criminals are in this city to-day who should not have left their native land without the endorsement of the American consul as to character, and should not have been permitted to land here. The time has passed when this country can be made the dumping-ground for the worthless and depraved of every nation. The crisis is reached, and on the magnitude of the issue it becomes the duty of the next Congress to quickly enact such vigorous laws that complete protection be afforded henceforth against these evils.

"At the same time we shall plainly say from our own experience and knowledge that a large part of the Italian colony in this city is recognized as a worthy class. As if by common consent the fruit and oyster business has drifted into the hands of the Italians, the volume of which in wholesale and retail lines reaches immense proportions. What more do they want? What more could they ask?

"No other country on this earth would extend to any new comers such privileges, and what do we ask in return? Simply that they, like all others of foreign birth, should conform to existing laws by which their persons and property are protected. To assimilate in thought and deed with our own people in denouncing the wrong and upholding the right; to rise above the fears and persuasions of secret societies, helping to crush their power, and above all else showing an allegiance to the principles of the national and State governments with no doubtful fidelity, realizing that the one flag as the emblem of freedom, no less the index of a nation's power, is the Stars and Stripes, which must and shall be respected.

"It may be thought we have exceeded the bounds that should compass the report of a grand jury, but let it be remembered the subjects embraced are of such extraordinary character in connection with the events of the recent past that to some extent we are compelled to refer to them from our positions as citizens as well as from our present official relations to this honorable court."

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Fickle spring—A slight mistake—Religious matters—A —question for the State to solve.

If the spring had purposely varied her moods in order to suit all the contradictory weather prophecies that have been put forth, she could not be more capricious. There have been days when the winds were soft and balmy as if blowing from off a bank of flowers in the very heart of summer's domain, and the faint, misty green of the leafing woods transported one into dreamland. And now!—cold, raw clouds, driven by a chilling breeze that nips all our poetic fancies with its knife-like edge, and reports of heavy frosts in various localities, make us sensible how futile is counting on an early spring in a climate where one day will so reverse all the promises of the next. But how different is a frost in May from one in September! How quickly in the former case Nature rises to repair damages, springing with a rebound into more vigorous life than ever, just as when the heart is young and elastic it will defy the most crushing sorrows. But when the blood begins to flow feebly in her veins, like old age overtaken by disaster, she seems to have no courage to fight the losing battle. She can only sigh over her fallen leaves and blackened flower-beds, and look forward to the spring-time's blessed resurrection, thus teaching in her decay even sweeter lessons than in her prime.

The recent earthquake in this section, though it did little harm except to chinaware, at least showed us that we are not entirely exempt from such things on our coast. No wonder that earthquakes are among the signs of the approaching end, for surely there is nothing to inspire a feeling of utter helplessness and terror like being unable to trust the stability of the solid earth under our feet; nothing more calculated to remind one of the great final judgment. But funny things will happen at the most solemn time, as in the case of the lady living in one of our suburban towns, who being a devoted spiritualist, when she awoke in the night and felt the bed rock and sway, was sure that "the spirits" caused the strange motion, and could scarcely be convinced that it was due to any cause more sublunary.

The resignation of Rev. A. A. Miner, if accepted, will dissolve a pastorate that has extended over forty-three years. So long a service in one pulpit is unique in the city's ministerial annals. The duties of a pastor taken in connection with his labors in the reform field, must press heavily on him, as he has reached the age of 77. It has been jokingly said of the doctor, in allusion to his grand work for temperance, that "the only trouble with him was that he could never let rum alone." But he is no one-line radical, and for any evil to attract his notice is enough to bring down upon it his sledge-hammer blows.

It seems to be settled that Tremont Temple is to have Dr. Lorimer, Chicago's Knight Templar minister. Perhaps the lodge feels the need of having more, or at least more popular champions to offset the names of Gordon, Gifford, Grant, Cunningham, and others. There seems to be very little indeed in the ministry of our rich and fashionable churches to recall the Pauline ideal, but the genuine "pastor," the man who cares for souls more than for anything else in the world is still to be found. For instance, Wilmington, in this State, has a clergyman—let his name, Rev. W. A. Thurston, be proclaimed and duly honored—who, when the silver-mine was recently discovered in that town, though he had from the first a quarter interest in it, gave up his share, feeling that he must devote himself heart and soul to his ministerial calling and could not be cumbered with any money-getting claim on his time and attention. Surely the Gospel has not lost its power while it can boast such advocates. To quote from one of our most secular papers: "If there is a live man anywhere who has fresh and earnest words to speak to men on the greatest subjects . . . . . there is no lack of people who are gathered together to listen to the preaching or to engage in the worship. The people are hungry for spiritual help and guidance." This is so. There is a famine of the Word, and wherever there are men, or women, who will lift up the standard of a higher and holier ideal, and exhort in the language of Bernard:

"Strive, man, to win that glory,
Toil, man, to gain that light;
Send Hope before to grasp it,
Till Hope be lost in sight,

they may be certain of finding hearers.

Many good people, when Wm. F. Davis was imprisoned for refusing to ask for a permit from Rum and Romanism to preach on the Common, criticised his course as lacking in respect for constituted authorities, but nothing has more impressed me with the righteousness and wisdom of it than to see how eagerly the news was caught up and chuckled over by the Boston dailies, that "Rev. E. Davies who was imprisoned for preaching on the Common, had just adopted the wise course of asking for a permit." Rev. E. Davies is an English evangelist, and another man altogether; but the devil's party is often quicker to see when a principle is at stake than the other side. And that there was a principle involved in the brave stand he took, and a very important one, is proved by the delight they manifest at the idea of his having receded from it.

The Farmers' Alliance intends to send organizers into New England to work among the farmers in anticipation of the Presidential contest of '92. If it makes them spend their time at picnics, listening to labor agitators to the neglect of their crops, as it has their Western brethren, the less they have to do with a society officered by ex-rebels, and fostered by the Knights of Labor, the better for their pockets. It is a curious fact that the farmers' vote, which used in Massachusetts, at least, to be almost exclusively Republican, has now turned the other way. Probably one reason is because the farms are being so largely abandoned to foreigners, who in the country as well as in the city slums seem to gravitate naturally to that party. One thing is pleasant to notice: that there is a decided falling off, according to census reports, in the tobacco crop of Massachusetts and Connecticut, owing to a decrease in the number of acres under cultivation.

The House has just passed a bill excluding the bond investment companies, so that now all the endowment orders can have a fair field and swindle the people so long as they will consent to it or it continues profitable. Through the collapse of the "Beneficial Order of Earnest Workers" in Philadelphia, it is said that over $4,000 has been lost in Fall River, mostly by the mill operatives. These "earnest workers" made the mistake of having for officers men who pocketed a quarter part of the receipts, taking $75,000 in six months for their services. I do not know how Pennsylvania law treats these swindling orders, but I notice that said officials have been arrested for obtaining money under false pretenses, and the question very naturally arises: how are such men to be arrested or in any way punished with any show of consistency or justice when the State makes herself a partner in their sin?

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

—Among the kind and cheering words for the Conference we must not forget to mention an excellent editorial in the Free Methodist, and also several notices in the Christian Worker of the Friends church. In one of these Bro. Pritchard says: "Friends have always been opposed to secret societies; to make that opposition felt we need to be aggressive, and to be effectively aggressive we need to join in the ranks of our brethren who are fighting these battles. At this Conference will be a good place to meet these leaders."

—Rev. J. A. Collins, the western editor of the Christian Instructor, in a notice of the Conference urges attendance in these forcible words: "It is earnestly hoped that the friends of fair, open dealing between man and man will show their interest in it by their presence, prayers, and financial help as far as possible. Certainly our liberties are put in jeopardy when secretism undertakes to run our civil affairs. There is danger ahead."

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 6, 1891.

How small the world is after all. Thirty years ago two young men, one a lawyer and the other a minister, worked side by side in the Master's service in the then small and turbulent frontier town of Leavenworth, Kansas. This week the same two men, both having attained high worldly honors, stood together in the pulpit of a Washington church and took prominent parts in the celebration of the sixty-third anniversary of the Washington Bible Society, a non-denominational organization, the purpose of which is to put a Bible into the hands of every child in Washington, who does not already possess one of their own.

One of these gentlemen was Rev. Dr. A. W. Pitzer, whose reputation as an effective pulpit orator is a wide one—he, for the eighteenth consecutive time, presided over the annual meeting; the other was Associate Justice Brewer of the United States Supreme Court, who was one of the speakers. In the course of Justice Brewer's remarks he said: "Men of education and culture, who love their country and their race, and who rejoice to see their fellow men grow better and better, will do all in their power to help on the Society's work. The great army of vice that threatens to undermine the life of the Republic is not an army of Bible readers. Nothing will do more than the Bible to make a good citizen out of a bad one."

Rev. Dr. Bartlett, in a few well-timed remarks, gave his attention to the class of alleged scientists whose efforts to pick flaws in the Bible have of late occupied so much space in the secular and religious newspapers of the land, and which are beginning to be taken notice of by the occupants of the pulpits of our churches. "The authenticity of the Bible," said Dr. Bartlett, "is supported by more outside history than any other ancient book. Not a fact has been alleged against the Bible that is not based on a supposition. Thirty years ago I heard a snuff-taking old professor in Germany advance the very same arguments that are now being put forth as something new. There is not one fact underneath all the frothy arguments. The history of the Bible is that of the civilization of the world. A close observer can see in these recent arguments the stitches where the same old arguments of the Germans have been patched together. I think it a good thing that, now when materialism is so rampant and the world hustles so, these discussions have sprang up, else we might forget the grand old Bible. Every blow of the flail thrashes fresh wheat from the Bible, which is the sun of the religious world that never changes, while the church, which may be likened to a clock, often needs tinkering."

A curious lack of proper restriction upon the licensed liquor traffic of the national capital was brought out by the petition of a poor woman to the local authorities, asking that certain saloon-keepers, who had disregarded her personal requests, be prevented from selling liquor to her husband, who is, she says, an habitual drunkard. The petition was referred to the chief of police, and he in turn referred it to the attorney for the District of Columbia in order to ascertain his legal authority in the premises, and that official, after a careful search, said there was no law by which these saloon-keepers could be prevented from selling the poor woman's husband all the liquor he wanted, notwithstanding his being a habitual drunkard and the piteous appeal of the wife. Congress offers a splendid field for temperance missionary work.

Washington has a model police judge. The other day a prisoner arraigned before him began to plead as an extenuation for the crime he had committed the fact of his having been drunk. "Stop," said the judge; "I want it understood that no person who violates the law while in a state of intoxication need expect any leniency on that account in this court; he who deliberately clouds his brain must take the consequences."

"The friendship of Jesus" was the subject upon which Bishop Hurst, of the Methodist Episcopal, preached a powerful sermon here last Sabbath. He elaborated upon the three notable friendships formed by Christ, viz., that with Lazarus and his sisters, Mary and Martha; that with his disciples, Peter, James and John, and that exhibited in the remarkable scene at the cross, where he commended Mary and John to each other. *

REFORM NEWS.

A LECTURE COURSE IN MINNESOTA.

No. 74 S. Robert St.,
St. PAUL, Minn., May 5, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The following appointments have been made for me in this State: May 20, Tripolis; May 21, Svea; May 22, Willmar; May 23, Mamse Lund; May 24, New London; May 25, Atwater; May 26, Grove City; May 27, Litchfield; May 28, Dassel; May 29, Cokato. I would like to ask the prayers of God's people that I may be guided by the Holy Ghost in this work.

S. M. Sayford, an evangelist, is holding meetings in this city, at the House of Hope Church. He preaches a sermon every evening and gives Bible instruction every afternoon. The meetings are well attended and a few have arisen for prayers. He is to continue this week.

During the past year or more a store, on the busiest street in the city, Seventh street, has been occupied by the Y. M. C. A., in which cheap meals have been served and Gospel meetings held every evening until last week, when it was closed. Now, excepting the Sayford meetings, and the mid-week prayer meetings of the churches, there is no place in the city, except the Salvation Army, where Christian religious services are held between Sabbaths. But the pagan religious service of the lodges are in full blast, and sometimes occupy the churches with their religious worship, on Easter, and other days. And there is but little religious life in the Salvation Army.

The fact is, and there is no mistake about it, the lodges have silenced the churches' testimony against lodge demonology. Likewise the Y. M. C. A. The secretary forbids true testimony in the Y. M. C. A. meetings against Masonry and in defence of Christ. His president is a Freemason. When a Freemason remonstrated with an Anti-mason for his testimony against Masonry, the secretary admonished the Anti-mason to keep away from the meetings. When the churches and the Y. M. C. A. will allow as clear a testimony against lodge demonology as the Free Methodists, for example, do, we shall have more confidence in their sincerity as followers of Christ. WM. FENTON.

CORRESPONDENCE.

ARE THE CHURCHES RESPONSIBLE?

BOSTON, May 4, 1891.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—In New York they ask, "How much is a man worth?" in Philadelphia and Richmond, "Who were his ancestors?" in Boston, "What does he know?" The financial, genealogical and literary standards obtain in these contiguous cities. Boston prides itself on its learning. Its great dailies all bear the marks of scholarship. The deeply thoughtful lectures of Joseph Cook are listened to by crowded audiences on Monday noons during their season. Harvard and Boston Universities give tone to the city.

The Reformed Catholics hold services every Sabbath in the First and Second Reformed Presbyterian churches. They have full houses and great enthusiasm. They show up the faults of Rome. It is doubtful whether their work is calculated to promote personal piety to any great extent.

Phillips Brooks was elected bishop last week. It is doubtful whether as bishop he will wield so wide an influence as preacher. But perhaps his pulpit work has reached its climax. It is diverting to read that Father Ignatius in New York has come out boldly against Heber Newton and invited him to leave the Episcopal church. He thinks a man should leave a denomination the moment a liberal idea enters his head. This idea prevails in the churches quite extensively. It is pure sectarianism. These denominational distinctions in the church are human devices, and not of divine ordination. They serve the important temporary purpose of giving emphasis to certain important truths. But they are not to be regarded as a desideratum. And to say that a man who thinks and searches the Bible must go, the moment he discovers an additional idea that may not be embodied in his denominational creed, is to put a premium on intellectual indolence, and a discount on earnest Christian thought. This is a shame and a disgrace. Let the words of Charles Sumner be pondered, "Nothing from man's hands, nor law, nor constitution, can be final. Truth alone is final." Let those who would make human creeds a Procrustean bed, and all who are longer than it must be cut off, and all who are shorter must be stretched upon the rack until they reach the required length, ponder the words of Milton, "Give me liberty to know, to utter and to argue freely, above all liberties."

An ancient law-giver wished to make his institutions permanent. To this end he enacted that any one who proposed to alter or amend them should come into the assembly with a halter about his neck. And if his proposition failed he was to be immediately hung up. Such a regulation many would have obtain in the churches; only with this difference, that any one who proposes a modification must be hooted out before his brethren have had time to act upon the proposition. It is time for a larger liberty. These denominational differences must be compared that they may be removed and all united under Christ the Head. The church's work suffers because the means and strength of the denominations are frittered away in individual effort instead of united effort. If the atoms of a hammer are separated they are light as a feather. But when they are united and wielded by the blacksmith's arm they are powerful. The churches, divided and subdivided, are weak and impotent. But if they were united under Christ, what a power for good! "One shall chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight." The armies of Rome and Alban were drawn up for battle. It was decided that the conflict should be settled by the three sons of the two opposing generals fighting to the finish. The three sons of Horatius were wounded, but fighting together they slew two of the Gracci. The third fled for his life. The wounded men pursued him and were separated. Then the Graccus turned and slew them singly. The policy of Satan always has been to divide and conquer the church. The church has been in the Reformation period 400 years, and yet out of 1,500,000,000 human beings in the world, all of whom are perishing for lack of knowledge, 1,000,000,000 have never heard of Christ. Why? Because the churches are divided and do not co-operate in the work of the Lord. The world will not believe on Christ until the churches are united. "That they all may be one, that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

If the churches in Boston decreed it, all the saloons would be gone within twenty-four hours. If the churches in America demanded it, all the saloons would be hermetically sealed within one month. But the churches do not act together in this. Is it any wonder all the denominations are being disturbed? Could we expect the Head of the church to let them rest in the great sin of neglected duty?

The National Christian Association is the image of the church's lost unity, and they are smiting the giant of secretism in our land,—a work the churches are grossly neglecting. The National Reform Association is an image of the church's lost unity, and is striking down the idol of secularism in our land,—a work the churches generally are neglecting. The W. C. T. U. is an image of the church's lost unity, and is driving out the saloon,—a work the churches are neglecting. Let the churches heed these providential reproofs of her sinful divisions and unite in the work which God has given her to do.

On Sabbath afternoon we were cheered by the presence of Secretary Stoddard at the Second Reformed Presbyterian church. He has inaugurated a series of parlor talks on Monday evenings. These are to be tributary to public lectures that are soon to be given weekly. Seven city pastors have agreed to take turns in attending weekly meetings in a hall. He proposes to secure the consent of some nine more. These will serve as a support which will make the work an assured success.

As he and his good wife left the church in the rain, he said to me, "Would it be right for us to take the street cars and come and hear you preach in E. Cambridge to-night?"

When I dissented, he said, "In New Orleans we walked six miles rather than use the cars on Sabbath, and we will not begin to-day."

Prof. D. B. Willson and his wife walked several miles in Baltimore through the rain on Sabbath, with nothing to shelter them but a sunshade, rather than use the street cars on the Lord's day. There are still those who have conscience enough to obey God even when it involves inconvenience. The pastor of the Second Baptist church, where we preached in the evening, said, "In Boston Christians go to the store and buy pork and beans on Sabbath. That is breaking the Fourth Commandment." J. M. FOSTER.

HOPING FOR A CHANGE.

MILLVILLE, N. J.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I herein send you a few signatures for the Call for the Conference on the anti-Christian Lodge System. I called upon the pastor of the First M. E. church of our city, who is quite well known for his faithful adherence to, and fearless advocacy of prohibition and other vital reformatory measures, about a week ago to request him to give the Call the benefit of his signature. But he said that he knew absolutely nothing of such societies, having never belonged to any of them save the I. O. G. T., and, therefore, he could not consistently give us the use of his name in the advancement of this reform. He however, knew enough of the Odd-fellows to preach them a sermon in the church edifice, where he officiates, last Sabbath evening (a proceeding which the editor of the New York Christian Advocate, the chief organ of the Methodist Episcopal church, says is "An outrage on common sense." —See last September 25th Advocate.) In this discourse he extolled the Christless order for their exercise of "Practical godliness," in their "Benevolence"(!) toward the widows and orphans, the sick and afflicted of their selfish mercenary "order."

He said that this was but the negative side of Christianity, but insisted on calling it "Practical godliness" and "Christian benevolence," etc., and produced many large and high-sounding figures and statements concerning the amount of money expended by this order for this "Christ-like" work (see Matt. 6: 1–5).

He did not make any mention of the many thriving life and accident insurance companies, who are also sending out perhaps thrice the comparatively paltry sums of these secret mercenary orders, and are yet growing immensely rich through their practice of a similar "godliness." But perhaps he has reserved all this until a time when he shall preach a set sermon to the Girard, Manhattan, Total Abstinence, or other insurance companies, purely business concerns, when we shall expect to learn more concerning the assets and liabilities of these open and perfectly legitimate, though entirely mercenary, corporations.

But we must be charitable toward the good brother, for he knows nothing of the inside workings of these societies; and so, seeing he is not likely to know them to his satisfaction in any other way, let us rest in hope that after he has passed through the various initiations, he will see things in an entirely different light. God grant that it may be so. D. D. TOWER.

CHAUNCEY DEPEW ON MASONRY.

CHICAGO, May 6.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—The longer I live, and the more I learn of the moral teachings of the "most excellent tenets" of that most notorious of all secret societies, Freemasonry, the more I learn to love and admire the latent beauties of that truly wonderful and time-honored system. For truly it is a system, a system of blasphemy, a system of horrible oaths and penalties of death, a system of falsehood and fraud unexcelled by any thing diabolical or wicked on top of the earth; and when I say that I love and admire the latent beauties of that system, I mean that I love it as men are supposed to love a rattlesnake, or poison, or any other deadly or venomous animal.

I was reading lately in the secret society department of the Chicago Times something relating to Masonry and its moral teaching that I thought was very edifying. Mr. Chauncey M. Depew, the railroad magnate, and Presidential aspirant, was represented as being an active member of Kane Lodge in New York city. At a recent meeting of the lodge it seems that Bro. Depew made a short address in which he informed his fellow Masons that Adam was a Freemason. Well, when anything seemed to go wrong under the Adamic roof-tree, and mother Eve berated the old man until his temper was fairly up, he used to go off to the barn all by himself and open a Masonic lodge. Bro. Depew went on to say that Adam was his own Worthy Master and his own tyler. He shook hands with himself; gave himself the grip and word, including, of course, Boaz, Shibboleth, Jachin, and all the rest of it; and having whispered the grand, omnific word, "Mah-hah-bone," into his own ear "on the five points of fellowship," he returned to his bamboo-covered tent with his "passions" so "subdued" that the sweetest kind of peace reigned in his family for a long time thereafter.

Now it may be possible that our good Bro. Depew spun this truthful yarn at a lodge meeting merely as a good joke; but, after all, it is no joke that Adam was a Mason. He was, and there is no use in denying the vast antiquity of Freemasonry. Adam was, indeed, a Mason. He is the first man on record who is said to have worn an apron; but then Bro. Depew forgot to tell his astonished brethren that it was the devil who invested him with that same apron, and who was therefore the Grand Master of that most ancient and ——— order.

I believe it was the truly noble Abraham Lincoln who once said that this government of ours is "a government of the people, by the people, and for the people;" and so of Freemasonry, it can be truthfully said that Masonry is a government of the devil, by the devil, and for the devil, and that many of our talented preachers are his most faithful and trusty lieutenants. Masonry old! yes, indeed, it is old, as old and as wicked as Satan himself. E. RONAYNE.

AN ODD-FELLOW OBJECT LESSON OF THEIR PENALTY.

ST. PAUL, Minn.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—When Mr. Barnum, the great showman, said, "The people like to be humbugged," he stated a fact upon which his fortune was based. And none of the unregenerated portion of the race, to whom only it could apply, took umbrage at the slur cast upon them,—all being so well agreed in the promotion of Satan's work.

To-day the Odd-fellows (made odd by alienating themselves from their maker, God, by turning to the fables of sun-worship), to the number, it is said, of 2,000, with about 200 collared "Rebeccas," in carriages, paraded the streets in military array, headed by a platoon of policemen. They had some of the gewgaws of their worshipful ceremonies in a boat mounted on wheels and drawn by six horses. Over the stern of the boat a gallows was projected, from which an effigy was suspended by the neck with the words attached,

"I GAVE IT AWAY."

The Odd-fellows themselves seemed to enjoy the humbug by way of a joke at their own expense. For since their secrets were all published by Ezra A. Cook, of Chicago, in 1881, in "Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated," they have had nothing to give away; and if they had any secrets that could be given away, the effigy on the gallows would occupy the most honorable position of all the crew in the parade, verifying the words of the poet:

"Right forever on the scaffold;
Wrong forever on the throne."

The city papers refuse to print a statement like the above. The Globe, however, offered to print it for one dollar a line, or about $40. These daily papers print only such sermons as are preached by Universalists and such preachers as treat the Bible Masonically. They glory in prize rings, theatres, lodge paganism, and all such like The shame of woman's nakedness pasted on the bulletin boards for the purpose of defiling the city and destroying the race, they call "the female form divine," and would thus deify vice.

The Dispatch said, "The Salvation Army makes the Sabbath evenings hideous by their singing in the streets." These editors prefer, doubtless, to attend the theatre on Sabbath evenings unmolested by the singing of hymns to the praise of their Maker whom they dishonor.

I have been reading the words of a commentator on the prophecies of Ezekiel, chapter 7: "No calls, no alarms, no threatenings avail, until grace enters the soul." And the words of the prophet himself, verse 17, "All hands shall be feeble, and all knees shall be weak as water." If we are to be saved we shall "loathe ourselves;" for the city is drenched with just such idolatry as the prophet denounced, but under the names of Freemasonry, Odd-fellowship, Grange, Good Templars, etc., etc. Odd-fellowship is a fraud and a swindle on the community. W. FENTON.

PITH AND POINT.

A VICIOUS PARTNERSHIP.

When I lectured at Kingsville, Mo., I found a singular illustration of the union of the State and the lodge. The town-school and the Masonic lodge put up a two-story building on the edge of town, the upper floors being used for the lodge, and the lower for school-rooms. What a novel way to inspire a reverence for Masonry in the minds of young American citizens. At Salem, Iowa, I found the Methodist church had pooled with the Masons in erecting a church-lodge building; the first floor was used as the Methodist church, and the upper, as the Masonic lodge room. The women composed almost the entire working force of the church, because after a revival the young lady converts remained below in the church, but the young men were soon graduated up into the lodge. Thus in this singular combination of the church and Baal, the church is the under dog in the fight.—M. A. GAULT.

THE LIST OF SIGNATURES.

I herein send you another signature for the "Call," Rev. Wm. C. Schenck of Mays Landing, N. J. Wish I had time and opportunity to get many more. I am glad to see that the Cynosure this week contains a list of the signatures received so far. Their publication is a good idea. It serves to show us that the enemies of the lodge are not all in their graves, i. e., do not all of them belong to the generations of the past as a great many of them do. But, the rather, seems to show that this needed reform is one of the living, burning issues of to-day.—D. D. TOWER.

IT HAS THE SAME EFFECT AS AN OATH.

The lodge is established here and they say this exposure is not right; that the ritual was changed six years ago, and will be changed again inside of a year. While they deny a great many things, they do not say anything about the most important things; it is simply the minor points they speak of. There is one thing that they deny that is quite important, and that is that they do not take any oath. They say they simply pledge themselves on their sacred honor.—MISS ELDA HINSHAW, New Providence, Iowa.

HELP THE READING ROOM FUND.

Through the kindness of your agent, who was in our city and who visited our Association last year, your valuable paper was donated to our Reading Room by some friend. It would be a great help to us if you could secure the renewal of this friend for our Association. The Cynosure is well read by those who visit our rooms; and, although we are not able to pay for it ourselves, we would deeply regret having to do without it.—W. A. HUNTON, Gen'l Sec'y Colored Y. M. C. A., Norfolk, Va.

AT WORK IN EARNEST IN ARKANSAS.

I like a paper that stands for the truth, "the whole truth, and nothing but the truth," without having to swear to it. I shall induce others to take the paper, and shall henceforth be a worker for Christ's church on earth, unadulterated by idolatry, heathenism and traditions. I am having some correspondence with ministers that are combating Y. P. S. C. E. and the Y. M. C. A. I have asked them to let the lambs alone and tackle the lion (Masonry). I am going to call them cowards if they don't.—A. J. MILLARD.

POINTERS.

Please send some sample copies and we will see what we can do for new subscribers. Have not had time to do any work here yet in that line.—A. G. M., De Witt, Ark.

The pound of tracts you sent came all right and many of them are already on their mission of mercy. I am told that some have been made angry, but I expected that.—E. S. B., Buxton, Kans.

Bro. C—— is an anti-secret man, but is preaching to a lodge-ridden M. E. church, and writes me he needs help. Please send him a few tracts such as you think will be best.—A. L., Winnebago City, Minn.

God bless you and the associates in the blessed work of soul-saving and soul-warning. I love the ring of your fearless paper. May it grow more and more positive for the truth.—J. E. WOLFE, Vinita, Ind. Ter.

I am glad that you still continue to send me the Cynosure. I love to read it. It assists me in keeping out the devil's secret power from my church. I will do all I can to get my members and friends to take it.—WASHINGTON CARTER, New Texas, La.

I am trying to do what I can for the advancement of the truth.—J. F., Gering, Neb.

LITERATURE.

ALDEN'S CYCLOPEDIA OF UNIVERSAL LITERATURE. Vol. XIII. P. 476. Price, cloth, 40 cts. John B. Alden, New York.

What more charming company is there pertaining to human life than that of men and women whose life thought and work has been embalmed in books. Such a cyclopedia is a kaleidoscope of literature. Every turn of a leaf brings to view a new genius, each with his own peculiar fascination of style or topic; and the mind wanders amid the pictures of poetry or the more serious draperies of prose, like a happy child in a garden of rare flowers, whose happiness is only restrained by the fact that its arms cannot hold all that its eyes may covet. This volume extends the work to the topic "Longstreet," beginning with the celebrated Finland epic, "The Kalevala." Its biographical sketches are brief but compendious, and the selections from the numerous authors are made usually with good judgment. But some will be disappointed in noting the brief space given to some favorite author; thus Sidney Lanier, who wrote our centennial cantata in 1876, is given but two selections, and Lucy Larcom but one.

The long promised papers (two in number) on the Court of the Czar Nicholas I. are begun in the Century for May, the frontispiece of the magazine being a portrait of the Emperor Nicholas. These papers are by the late George Mifflin Dallas, in his day one of the most distinguished statesmen of the country. Mr. Dallas describes minutely the social movement and the luxury of the court. He tells of "A Dramatic Visit from the Emperor," who came to see him incog., on the minister's arrival, "A Court Presentation," the "Burning of the Winter Palace," "The Russian New Years," etc. These papers furnish a remarkable contrast to those by Mr. Kennan. "Pioneer Mining Life in California" is a description from personal experience of adventures and mining methods in 1849 on the tributaries of the Sacramento River and of the Trinity, by Hon. E. G. Waite, Secretary of State of California. The first article in the number is a paper by C. F. Holder entitled "Game Fishes of the Florida Reef," strikingly illustrated after sketches by the author. Ex-Minister John Bigelow gives a chapter of secret history which he calls "The Confederate Diplomatists and their Shirt of Nessus." Mr. Bigelow shows how the institution of slavery handicapped every effort made by the Confederate diplomats, and he severely criticizes the government of Jefferson Davis as lacking in knowledge of and regard for foreign prejudices, and wanting a firm hold of facts as they were. Other interesting papers are those on "Visible Sound" by the English singer, Mrs. Margaret Watts Hughes, with comment by Mrs. S. B. Herrick of the Century staff. Mrs. Hughes succeeded in producing with her voice and preserving a number of shapes of flowers, etc. The experiments are described by the singer, and their origin is scientifically explained by Mrs. Herrick, who describes also other experiments.

J. O. Davidson, the marine artist, has written and fully illustrated a short serial of adventure in St. Nicholas for May, entitled, "Chan Ok," which describes the capture of a noted Chinese pirate of the present day; it is based on fact, and, indeed, but a few months ago a steamer was destroyed by these piratical Chinese outlaws in the very waters wherein the action is supposed to take place. Among other attractions we find a clever bit of verse with pictures by Margaret Johnson, in which children of different nationalities extol their native foods; a verse by John Albee called "The Manners of Sheep;" an allegory, "A Lesson in Happiness," by W. J. Henderson; "My Microscope," an article on some interesting objects in minute life, by M. V. Worstell, and an amusing dialogue by Oliver Herford, "The Professor and the White Violet."

The National Geographical Society, a Washington organization composed of many eminent government scientists, will repeat the expedition of last summer to Mount St. Elias, Alaska, described so graphically in the April Century. The party will be made up of three people with Professor Israel C. Russell, of the Geological Survey, last year's leader, in charge. This year the party means to ascend the mountain. The party will start next month.

The Congressional Library Building, which will be finished in 1896, will contain shelves for 1,500,000 books. This is expected to supply the needs of the library for thirty years, the present rate of increase being about thirty thousand volumes a year. As there is room in the building for shelves to accommodate 2,500,000 more volumes, it will be a century before another building will be required by the library.

PREMIUMS

FOR CYNOSURE SUBSCRIBERS.

Stanley's Adventures in the Wilds of Africa.

By Hon. J. T. Headley. A graphic account of the several expeditions of Henry M. Stanley into the heart of the Dark Continent. It covers Stanley's expedition to find Livingstone, his crossing the continent and exploration of the Congo from its headwaters to the ocean, his establishment of the Congo Free State, and his last great achievement—the discovery and deliverance of Emin Pasha, in 1889. Twenty-five illustrations, 539 pages, 8vo., bound in cloth. A book of extraordinary interest to all classes of readers.

Price postpaid $1.00.

We send it free to every old subscriber who sends a new name with his renewal and $3.00. To anybody for two new subscribers for one year each. This offer is good only till June 1st, 1891.

Africa and its Explorers.

Livingstone, Stanley, and other celebrated travels and adventures in Africa. The interesting story of all the celebrated travellers in Africa, including Barth, Du Chaillu, Burton, Speke, Grant, Sir Samuel Baker, Schweinfurth, Moffat, Thomson, Livingstone, and Stanley. Naturally, it conveys more general information, and is of greater popular interest, than could be given in the narrative of any one traveller. This is a much larger book than "Stanley's Adventures." Numerous illustrations. A book every one needs to be up to the times.

We make an extraordinary offer of this book till June 1st, for three new subscribers, or for a renewal and two new names. All for one year each.

The "Uncle Tom's Cabin" of the Horse.

BLACK BEAUTY,

His Grooms and Companions.

This is the most popular book ever written on animal life. Over 100,000 sold in England and a greater number in America. Prof. Blaisdell of Beloit College has prepared a topical index.

This book is as entertaining as "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and is written with a great moral purpose,—to inculcate the principle of mercy to dumb animals. EVERY BOY SHOULD READ IT!

We will send it to every boy or girl who reads the Cynosure, if they will send us a new subscriber and $1.50 on or before June 1st, next.

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. M. H. Nichols, 520 Kearney St., San Francisco, Cal.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

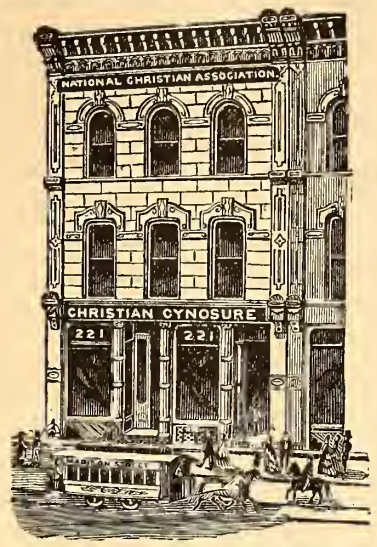
STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.



New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimbal New Market.

Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.

Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Berea, Ky
Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Annawan, Ill.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)
—AND OFFICE OF—
The Christian Cynosure,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Bishop Milton Wright Dayton, O.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. Geo. R. Milton, Elgin, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Rev. E. R. Worrell, Washington Heights, Ill.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, J. M. Hitchcock, Jerome Howe, G. R. Milton, Wm. Pinkney, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, W. W. Wait, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell.

The object of this Association is:
"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves Harris, Mass.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS —Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., S. A. Gilley, Marengo; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Lecompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas. Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagle ville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Rowe, Guilford; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Isaac Hyatt Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant York; Treas., J.C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN —Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order; over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover 50 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. ☞A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' LETTERS on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan ABDUCTION. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a LEAGUE WITH THE DEVIL. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the INITIATE. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature AND TENDENCY OF FREEMASONRY. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees OF FREEMASONRY. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: OR FREEMASONRY SELF-CONVICTED. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian, seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before THE GRAND LODGE OF ILLINOIS. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

Masonic Salvation, as taught by its standard authors. This pamphlet is a compilation from standard Masonic works, in proof of the following proposition: Freemasonry claims to be a religion that saves men from all sin, and purifies them for heaven. 111 pages, price, postpaid, 20 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret SOCIETIES. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

The Christian Cynosure.

. BLANCHARD, EDITOR.
HENRY L. KELLOGG, ASSOCIATE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MAY 14, 1891.

THE ANNUAL MEETING AND CONFERENCE.

MAY 13TH AND 14TH.

This number of the Cynosure is to reach both these meetings. Let us review the past, and consider the present.

The false religions of our earth are substitutes for the true, which is supreme love to God and equal love to man. The book of Job, supposed by scholars to be the oldest human writing extant, contains traces of sun and moon worship, (31: 26, 27), which was practiced by the later Jews (Eze. 8: 16), and is continued in modern lodges. But the Pentateuch is "Scripture given by inspiration of God;" and we learn from Genesis, 4: 3, that false or self-projected worships were begun in the family of Adam by the first murderer, Cain, while Abel worshiped Christ "by faith." And from the beginning to the present day, human degradation has followed false worship, and human elevation the true.

We know, too, from the Bible, that the true religion is to expel the false. In the sublime book which closes the canon we read from the beloved disciple, John, Rev. 5: 13: "And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them, heard I saying, Blessing and honor, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb, forever and ever." And human degradation and suffering are to cease with false worships, "And there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain." Rev. 21: 4.

Without attempting to fathom these stupendous changes, it is safe to infer from reason and Scripture, that right and truth are mightier than wrong and error; that the religious devices of men and devils will disappear; and the kingdom of Christ, which is "righteousness, peace, and joy," prevail.

THE STORY OF THE LODGE.

Nine hundred and twenty-six years after the Son of God took our human form and toiled as a carpenter, a few mechanics at York, England, formed a rite of three degrees, and called it Freemasonry. It was tinctured with religion and furnished an occasion for an evening jollity and debauch. This lasted 791 years, till the year 1717, when the well-known Apple-tree tavern lodge dropped stone masonry and formed a religious mockery, promising to send men to heaven without Christ: thus forming a harlot daughter of the mother-harlot at Rome.

But there was an elder daughter than this. In 1534 Loyola, Lefevre, and Laynez went to Rome and moved Pope Paul III. to create the order of Jesuits. And though all Europe has suppressed them, deriving a supernatural vitality from its Satanic source, this order of the Jesuits never was stronger or more malignant than today. Nor are these pests confined to enlightened lands. Secret lodges practicing religious rites are spread all over Asia, Africa and the islands. No tribe, class, or race of human beings are sunk so low, but these lodges can reach them and sink them lower still. The first murder on earth was committed in the interest of false religion. And Pritchard of London, Miller of Belfast, Morgan of Batavia, Cronin of Chicago, Hennessey of New Orleans, and a host more, have been murdered according to the oaths and obligations of false religion.

THE MODERN DISCUSSION.

In October, 1867, a convention was called at Aurora, Ill., to consider these secret lodges. Sixty years ago nothing was more unpopular than a secret lodge. The lodges had sunk out of sight, and now the argument has been carried against them. The laws of Vermont still fine their oaths up to $200; and the best minds of the pulpit and platform denounce them as displeasing God and destroying men. But the dark spirit which guides them, executed a flank movement by dropping the names of the mother and model order, which had the temples, and forming multitudes of orders with different names, but the same nature; and when once formed they all shield their parents.

WHAT, THEN, IS TO BE DONE?

ANSWER, 1. We must fix it in our minds that these orders are not of God's planting, and they must and will be "rooted up" before Christ's kingdom comes.

2. That mere testifying against them will not destroy them.

3. The mission boards are the popular religion of a country; and if our mission boards can be moved to supply their missionaries with information and argument against the lodges, the mission churches will exclude them. Joseph Cook's speech against disloyal secret oaths has been sent to their missionaries by the following boards: the Baptist Home Missionary Union, Temple Court, New York; the American Missionary Association, Bible House, New York: the Illinois Home Missionary Society; the New West Commission.

4. We suggest that the present Conference appoint a committee to request the old American Home Missionary Society, Bible House, New York; the American Board, Boston; the Presbyterian, Lutheran, and all mission boards in short, to supply their missionaries with information on the secret lodges.

5. To induce the formation of anti-secret and prohibition prayer meetings, wherever church sentiment is opposed to prayer for the overthrow of "the unfruitful works of darkness."

6. To continue and increase the funds for the support of lecturers, and send them, if possible, to all parts of the United States.

7. To take measures to question candidates for office, and withhold votes from members of lodges sworn to conceal their proceedings from the public.

8. To recommend that Christians and citizens in every village, who view the lodge as heathenism, draw up and present to members of Masonic lodges a kind and respectful request to discontinue and suppress so wicked a system.

THE MAFIA GRAND JURY.

The report of the New Orleans grand jury last week was a singular and remarkable document. We print about one-sixth part of it in which it refers to the Mafia. Indictments were found against six men, the detective, D. C. O'Malley and six of his companions. The charge against them is attempting to bribe talesmen for the jury. Of the parties engaged in the mob and massacre nothing is said but in extenuation of their crime, if it is not, indeed, actually approved.

The verdict recounts in prolix sentences the circumstantial evidence that has come before them, on which the indictments are found. This makes a bad case, but O'Malley defies their charges and maintains his innocency.

It must appear to every careful reader that a report of such vast length, with so insignificant a conclusion, cannot be a legal document. It is rather an apology for public crime by a political committee, one of whose purposes seems to be to confuse the popular mind with a multitude of words, which not one man in a thousand will read. It is also a confession that the machinery of criminal justice is quite out of order in New Orleans. That city is declared to be ruled by a detective agency on one hand and by a mob on the other. We cannot wonder that a secret society, the White League, endorsed by the Masonic Knights Templar of the country, so easily controlled the city years ago; or that the massacres of colored people have been frequent in some parts of the city.

In all our large cities, but perhaps more notoriously in New Orleans, the lawless condition of society is due, in great measure, to the secret lodges, which are nightly training men to obey unknown superiors; making familiar their members with scenes or threats of murder; and breaking down public conscience by imposing ghastly oaths, or pledges of most sacred honor, which are intended to have the force of an oath. The question of more or less foreign immigration, is of small moment compared with the indifference to fundamental, moral and constitutional law, shown everywhere by Americans who have been tricked into some night school of despotism and deception, called a lodge.

—Three prayer meetings were held Sabbath afternoon in difierent parts of Wheaton for the blessing of God upon the Conference this week. Our reform needs more prayer. We shall gain greater victories, and see Satan fall from the throne of his power only by this means.

—We regret to see from a report in the Standard that the old Baptist pioneer preacher, Wheeler, who lately died in Oakland, California, had the burial of a heathen. His funeral was conducted in a Masonic temple on a Sabbath afternoon, and with Masonic ceremonies.

—A Grand Army paper, published at Sturgis, Mich., in its April issue said: "Milford Johnston, Co. K, 120th O. V. I., of Grand Ledge, was a Mason and got the privilege of going and coming while prisoner at Camp Ford, Tyler, Tex., and thereby helped comrades and himself to many comforts."

—The Gospel Messenger, representing the conservative wing of the same church, has also an editorial in reply to a correspondent asking for the rule of the church on secret societies. Editor Brumbraugh replies that no member of the church can belong to an oath-bound lodge and honestly remain in the church. He must by so doing be acting and living a lie, and thus be unfitted for Christian fellowship.

—The evangelist Houser, whose emphatic testimony against secret societies will long be remembered in Wheaton, has been conducting successful meetings at Woodstock in this State, and began another work in Freeport, May 2d. Some of the Woodstock people complain in the Chicago daily papers of his pugnacity on denominational points. Probably he struck the lodge a blow and thus roused opposition.

—The Brethren Evangelist, of Waterloo, Iowa, edited by Elder H. R. Holsinger, replies in excellent spirit to a correspondent in a late number who defends some forms of secretism. He says that unfortunately, many of the otherwise faithful members of this branch of the Brethren church "have been deluded by the fascinating temptations of secrecy." This is a matter of great regret, and is an evidence that there should be more and better instruction given the people to fortify them against this iniquity.

—In order to conclude their annual business, the N. C. A. Board met on Saturday morning. Sickness and death caused the absence of several members, and a quorum was not present. But the reports of various committees of the Board were heard, their approval being deferred until an adjourned meeting. These committees are on Finance, on Buildings, on New Publications, International Conference and Revision of By-laws. These reports indicate, on the whole, a favorable condition of the Association's work.

—The Elgin Association of Congregational Churches, which met at Geneva, Ill., lately, unnaimously adopted the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, the traffic in intoxicating liquors is, in our opinion, the cause of more sin and misery than any other thing, and is also the greatest enemy of the Church of Christ:

Resolved, That as an association we enter our protest against the license system. We believe that license, either high or low, is a sin against God and a direct assault upon the highest interests of the church, the state and the home.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Elder J. L. Barlow has lately removed from Bloomington, Wis., to Richmond, McHenry county, in the northeastern part of Illinois.

—Rev. C. F. Hawley returned to his home in Wheaton last week from the Michigan work, in order to prepare for his Conference address.

—W. B. Stoddard, our energetic Washington agent, has canvassed his district and intends coming to the annual meeting this week to report in person.

—Rev. A. J. Chittenden, for seven years pastor of the College Church, Wheaton, and member of the N. C. A. Board, hopes to be with us from Kentucky in annual meeting and conference this week.

—Rev. Dr. Richard Edwards, late Superintendent of Public Instruction for Illinois, whose address at the eightieth birthday celebration of the Cynosure editor last January will be remembered, has been secured by Blackburn University, Car-linville, as its president. Dr. Edwards was recognized as the most efficient Superintendent of Education Illinois ever elected to that position. He did more to bring the public schools of the State to a high standard than any man who ever held the position.

—Rev. L. G. Jordan is one of two colored Prohibition orators who have been invited to speak at National Prohibition Park, Staten Island, this year. He is engaged July 21 and 22. He is still in Wisconsin, we believe, doing a good work for a good cause.

—Rev. Joseph A. Booker, President of Arkansas Baptist College and editor of the Baptist Vanguard of Little Rock, respectfully challenges a neighboring Baptist paper to discuss the lodge question in their respective journals. The brother editor inclines toward the secret orders but dreads their cost.

—Capt. William Wilson, of Menomonie, Wis., was the founder of the great lumber firm of Knapp, Stout & Co., we understand, and one of the partners. The papers report the sale of this biggest lumber corporation in the world to Eastern capitalists. The figures of the sale are put at $7,000,000 or $8,000,000. The firm employs about eight thousand men and has immense yards at St. Louis, Dubuque and other points. Its headquarters are at Menominee, Wis., where it owns several hundred thousand acres of pine lands. It has also a number of mills at various points, and a fleet of rafts on the Mississippi.

MRS. HAVILAND'S book will be sent during May only with one yearly subscription to the Cynosure for $2.50. The regular price of the book is $1.50. See 16th page.

THE DEATH RECORD.

CHARLES C. FOOTE.

Departed this life peacefully for an heavenly, on Sunday noon, May 3d, 1891, at his home, 88 West Columbia St., Detroit, Mich., Rev. C. C. Foote, at the ripe old age of 80 years and 33 days.

He has been well known for half a century as an earnest worker in the Abolition and Prohibition reforms,—and as an ardent supporter of the National Christian Association opposed to secret societies. His taking off was by the "grip," which finally settled upon his lungs. He said a short time before his death, "This is my last sickness,—I am fighting my last battle!"

He has fought a good fight and finished his course and has gone to be crowned. He was faithful and true to every good cause of God and humanity and fearlessly and sharply outspoken against everything he concieved to be wrong.

The writer sat by his bedside as his life went so quietly out as a child going to sleep. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord—yea, saith the Spirit, for they rest from their labors and their works do follow them:"

> "All the loving links that bind us—
> While our days are passing by.
> One by one we leave behind us—
> While our days are passing by.
> But the seeds of good we sow,
> Both in shade and shine shall grow,
> And shall keep our hearts aglow,
> While our days are passing by."

Bro. Foote leaves a widow, two sons and one daughter—the latter the wife of Rev. George R. Milton, of Elgin, Ill. G. W. C.

The Detroit Tribune of Monday, May 4th, published the following interesting particulars of Bro. Foote's life. A full and most interesting sketch was published in the Cynosure of March 25th, 1886. The Tribune says:

Mr. Foote had resided in Detroit for thirty-seven years, and at various times occupied many of the city pulpits. He was a man of strong convictions and intensely earnest in expressing them. At an early period of his life he was a Presbyterian, and later became an independent Congregationalist, but for many years his religious views were non-sectarian and undenominational. He placed the Gospel above creed, and long ago abandoned all sectarian prejudices. As a preacher he was earnest and thoughtful, and in the course of his long and varied career he invariably commanded the respect even of those who differed from him.

Born in Olean, N. Y., April 1, 1811, Mr. Foote had spent over fifty years in the ministry. His first pastoral charge was a Congregational church at Maumee City, O. Thence he was called to Stone church, Genesee county, N. Y., and in 1847 he came to Michigan, finding his field at various times in Mt. Clemens, Troy, Farmington and White Lake. At the latter place he preached in a non-sectarian church for fourteen years. He made Detroit his headquarters in 1854, coming here as the agent for the famous Refuge Home society of ante-bellum days. Several directors of the society resided in Detroit and he was their trusted representative. He became well known as a "conductor" on the "underground railway," and had many curious and sensational experiences in helping the flight of fugitive slaves to Canada.

In 1848 he was the candidate of the Abolitionists, the Liberty party, for Vice-President, it being the second time that party had put a Presidential ticket in the field. After the war he became the Detroit agent of the Freedmen's Aid Society, and in that capacity did much able and devoted work.

In 1869 he became chaplain of the Detroit House of Correction under Superintendent Brockway's administration, and ministered to the prisoners for four years. His health suffered from his prison work, and he suffered an attack of anemic apoplexy, which left him somewhat broken in bodily estate. But his vitality was remarkable, and though he has been failing for months past he made a gallant fight against the insidious grip that finally put a full-stop to his career.

REV. C. C. FOOTE.

From the very inception of the Prohibition party Mr. Foote was one of its active spirits, and his temperance work, with tongue and pen, was earnest and unceasing. Several times he was nominated by the party for office, though success never rewarded its efforts. Among his strongest convictions was a bitter opposition to all manner of secret societies, which he frequently attacked through the press and pamphlets. He had devoted much time to mission work during the past eighteen years and was recently chaplain of the Seamen's Bethel.

Mr. Foote was twice married, and leaves a wife and three children—Charles A Foote of Corning, Ia.; Gertrude, wife of Rev. George Milton of Elgin, Ill., and E. Irving Foote of the Yosemite Valley, California. Funeral services will be held at the residence to-morrow at 3 P. M., by Rev. C. E. Hulbert of Unity church, and the interment will take place Wednesday at White Lake, Mich.

JAMES P. LYTLE.

A great light went out on the 20th of April when this eminent United Presbyterian pastor died. A brief notice of his death and life is subjoined from the Christian Instructor of Philadelphia. It must be added that probably no minister of his denomination has written more and labored more faithfully for the truth against the lodge anti-Christ. A few have spoken more often in conventions, and Rev. J. W. Bain and Dr. Cooper who each wrote a volume against secretism may have exceeded with the pen, but we doubt it. In his own State he could always be relied upon to aid to the utmost any of our reform conventions. He once or twice apologized for not writing more often in these columns, saying that he saw so great need of instruction and warning in his own church that he preferred devoting all his energies to that particular work. The columns of the United Presbyterian were open to him, and there are before us from that paper: 1. An address before the faculty and students of Allegheny Theological Seminary, Dec. 2, 1884, on the distinctive principles of the United Presbyterian church, in which he ably discusses the lodge. 2. In February, 1889, he turns to this theme again in a series of three able articles in the United Presbyterian. 3. In the same paper, Dec. 25, 1890, he began a series of four articles on the "Genesis of Anti-secretism in the United Presbyterian Church." These were all published within a year. His contributions were perhaps not so frequent in previous years, but were always able, dignified and true. The Instructor says of the death of this good man:

"Dr. Lytle had not been in robust health for some four weeks, but had not ceased to attend to his usual pastoral duties. He preached as usual on Sabbath, April 19. On Monday he was busily engaged in visiting the sick in his congregation, returning home late in the afternoon. After supper he sat down to rest. A groan was heard by his son who was near, and who on seeing his father found he was seriously ill. With his consent the son ran for a physician, who reached him very soon only to see him unconscious, and in a few minutes he expired. The disease was apoplexy. Dr. Lytle was a full cousin of the late Dr. R. H. Pollock, with whom he was on terms of the closest intimacy until the death of the latter with the same disease. He was born in Ligonier Valley, Pa., and had entered his 70th year. For three years he was associated with Dr. Pollock as editor of the Presbyterian Witness.

"In September, 1855, he became pastor of the congregation where he spent his ministerial life—almost thirty-six years. His ardent piety, his devotion to the interests of his congregation, his sterling integrity and his steady adherence to the principles of his profession, are well-known throughout the church. For a genial, unaffected, social disposition he had few equals. It is likely that many will suppose that they were nearer to him than any others, because he seemed to come so close to them. But he had the power of being thus to very many.

"Dr. Lytle was one of the ablest writers in the church. His contributions to the papers of the church, especially to the United Presbyterian, whose readers will miss his productions, showed him to be a master in any department where he selected a field for discussion; and these writings were generally most readable in style and full of interesting matter.

"A congregation of which he had long been a spiritual father, will feel intensely this great bereavement, for they greatly loved him. The Presbytery of Muskingum were in session the next day at the neighboring town, New Concord, and passed suitable resolutions of respect to his memory, and on the following day, April 23, as a body, attended his funeral, thus laying to rest the remains of one who was a father and counsellor to many of them. Dr. Lytle was indeed 'lovely in his life.'"

DANIEL BROWN.

This early Illinois settler and steadfast Christian reformer has passed away. He was 87 years old April 13, and lived at Ottawa, Illinois, for forty-five years. Says the Ottawa Times of May 2:

"He died at his home, 1,102 Post street, at 10 o'clock this morning, of old age, having been confined to his bed for the past ten weeks, although gradually failing for over a year.

"Mr. Brown was born in the town of Adams, Mass., in 1804. He came west in 1845 and located at Earl, but in 1846 came to Ottawa and has resided in the same place he died all these years. He was a carpenter by trade, but owned a fine farm in Earl township. For twenty years he worked at the Cushman reaper works, building the second machine of that kind constructed here. He had been living a retired life for many years.

"Deceased was formerly a member of the Baptist denomination, but never united with the church in the West. He was a Christian man, and lived a consistent life, always cheerful, kind and happiest when he could make others happy. He was a staunch Abolitionist, a member of the Anti-masonic American party and opposed to all secret organizations.

"Mr. Brown was thrice married. By his first wife, whom he married in 1856, one daughter survives—Susan C., married to Thomas H. Higgenbottom. His second wife was Ruth Blackinton, who died in 1839. In 1842 he married Mary Walker, who died three years ago last February, leaving one daughter."

J. C. HANNA.

In this sad death chapter we should not omit the name of this young pastor, who died in Philadelphia, April 24th ult., at the early age of 26. He had for two or three years been preaching in Oakland, Cal., Philadelphia, and elsewhere. His father, Rev. Dr. T. H. Hanna, who has been long known to our readers as pastor of the First U. P. church, Monmouth, Ill., reached Philadelphia just too late too see his son alive. To him was the sad duty of bearing the body back to the Illinois home where Pres. McMichael, Prof. Moorehead and others rendered kindly aid and sympathy in the last obsequies.

THE HOME.

WHAT IS MAN?

PSALM 8.

What are men that He should heed us? cried the King of sacred song,
Insects of an hour, that hourly work their brother insect wrong.

While the silent heavens roll, and suns along their fiery way,
All their planets whirling round them, flash a million miles a day.

Many an Aeon moulded earth before her highest, man, was born,
Many an Aeon too may pass when earth is manless and forlorn.

Earth so large, and yet so bounded—pools of salt, and plots of land—
Shallow skin of green and azure—chains of mountains, grains of sand!

Only that which made us, meant us to be mightier by-and-by,
Set the sphere of all the boundless heavens within the human eye.

Sent the shadow of Himself, the boundless, thro' the human soul;
Boundless inward, in the atom, boundless outward, in the Whole.

—Alfred, Lord Tennyson, in Locksley Hall Sixty Years After.

BRADLAUGH, THE INFIDEL, SILENCED.

After a large meeting held in one of the mining districts of England, some time since, in which the notorious infidel poured forth his blasphemous words against God, against Christianity and against Christian people, he took his seat with an air of triumph. At this moment a laboring man, a miner, asked permission to say a few words in reply to what Mr. Bradlaugh had been saying. Permission being granted, this plain son of toil spoke as follows: "Mister Bradlaugh, I want to tell you something. Jem and I work in the coal mine. Some months ago we both joined the Methodists; and after awhile Jem he went to hear infidel lectures, and left the church and was one of them, a real infidel. A few months afterward Jem and I were working in the mine, and all at once we heard a cracking, and lumps of coal kept falling down close to us. Jem cried for mercy. Oh, if you could have heard him pray! I never heard a man cry for mercy louder than he did. And I tell you, Mr. Bradlaugh, there's nothing will knock the infidelity out of a man quicker than lumps of coal falling about his head."

The whole audience was convulsed with laughter, and the champion of infidelity was silenced.

"God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound those which are mighty—things which are despised—to bring to naught things which are, that no flesh should glory in his presence."

Take the following instance, in which a poor woman, and a widow, too, silenced the haughty despiser of religion:

The hall was crowded. The speaker used his wit and humor against the Word of God, which, by the way, is the "sword of the Spirit." People listened and wondered. The speaker vauntingly imagined he had laid out Christianity and destroyed the Bible. At the close of the lecture the speaker said: "If any one in the audience wishes to say anything in reply to what has been said let him come forward and we will hear him. After a brief pause, no man being ready to reply, a middle-aged woman stepped forward with a Bible under her arm and said: "Mr. Chairman, I would like to say a few words in reply to the speech we've just heard." Permission being granted she addressed the infidel lecturer as follows:

"Seven years ago I was left a widow with six small children to provide for. In these dark days of sorrow and bereavement my greatest comfort was found in this book (holding her Bible before the infidel). Now, sir, I want you to tell these people what you've got better than the Bible. You have spoken a full hour against this blessed Book. Now tell us what you've got better than God's Word?

The infidel replied, after much laughter by the audience, "My good woman, I've no wish to interfere with your comfort or enjoyment."

"That is not the question," she said. "I want you to tell these people if you've got a better book than the Bible. That book has spoken to me words of cheer and comfort in my days of weeping, and I'm sure I never could have brought up my children as I have done, without this precious Bible."

The infidel had to confess he had no other book to give instead of the Bible! The meeting broke up, and the consciences of men and their common sense were with the widow who had silenced the proud infidel. "A woman slew him." "The weakness of God is stronger than men, and the foolishness of God is wiser than men." And again: "Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, but let him that glorieth, glory in the Lord."—J. E. in Christian Press.

A JOURNALIST' ANSWERS INGERSOLL.

Possibly the best antagonist of Robert Ingersoll is A. C. Wheeler, a New York journalist, who has long been known under the name "Nym Crinkle." In a lecture entitled, "Skylarks and Daisies," he replied to Mr Ingersoll's "Myths and Miracles." He commenced his lecture by stating that he spoke not as one charged to defend the evangel, but as a man of the world, a man of the nineteenth century, depending on the foundation of the civilization in which he was protected in life and in property, educated and freed. He did not question the sincerity of Mr. Ingersoll. He simply doubted that gentleman's omniscience. He simply believed that that gentleman's faith in himself and his own errors was sufficient to remove mountains. He quoted from the infidel's lecture on "Myths and Miracles" as follows:

"All these old fellows were sun gods. There was Samson. He was a sun god. When his hair was cut off he lost his beams of light. There was Apollo, another sun god. He shot the demon of darkness with his rays of llght. There was little Red Riding Hood and there was Christ, another sun god. It won't do. They say he raised people from the dead. Well, why didn't he raise somebody we knew? If you was to go around trying to start a religion by raising people from the dead, you would raise somebody of some importance, wouldn't you? Why didn't he tell us something of importance? Wouldn't you? Why didn't he tell us something about slavery when he was on the cross? Why didn't he utter those inspired words, 'Liberty, equality and fraternity?' I tell you it won't do."

Mr. Wheeler simply burlesqued this to show its shallowness. He said that in another year, if agnosticism succeeded in getting up a class of pupils, this style would undoubtedly be adopted with effect by the infidel teacher. He could then say: "There was the Goddess of Liberty; she was a sun god. She shot the demon of bondage with her shaft and men worshiped her. There was a Hail Columbia and Uncle Sam, another sun god.

"There was the man who struck Billy Patterson, and there was George Washington, another sun god. They said he was a father of a free country. Well, why didn't he abolish slavery, if he was? If you were going round trying to start a free country you wouldn't own slaves, would you? Why didn't he tell us, in his farewell address, about Mormonism and rapid transit? Why didn't he utter those inspired words, 'Be sure you are right, then go ahead?' "

The effect of this satire of Mr. Ingersoll's method of mixing up historical and mythical personages was, to say the least, hilarious. He poured all his sarcasm upon Mr. Ingersoll's statement, made in one of his lectures, that he could write a better book than the Bible himself. "If," said he, "you can only get that sentence into the heads of the people, they will never bother much with what Mr. Ingersoll thinks of the Bible. They will be too completely overwhelmed with what he thinks of himself." Mr. Wheeler's closing tribute to the spirit of Christianity was worthy of the best pulpit. It was fervid, pictorial, eloquent. He told what a newspaper man in the great metropolis, who had spent the greater part of his life in active journalism, knew about it. He spoke with earnest reverence of that Master whose mission opened with a benediction of peace and closed with a prayer for his own murderers, and then said:

"During twenty odd years of eventful toil in the great city, I never found a depth of misery so deep, a poverty so rank, a crime so atrocious, a despair so black, that some humble follower of that Master did not find it out. Into all the holes and corners of wretchedness where vice and poverty, like twin wolves, had hunted down their prey, the policeman and the reporter always found the hooded sister or the missionary ahead of them. They were the first to come. They were the last to go. They stayed and put up their supplication when all else of earth had forsaken the wretch. They followed him to the prison cell, and they stood beside him on the gallows, and they never forgot in all the obliquy of sin and the cry of human vengeance the eternal brotherhood of man. And they wanted no pay, and they got no praise. They were doing that Master's work. True, it was 1800 years ago when he called them and bid them go out and bind up the broken hearts and dry the tears, and thus, with tender touches of tone, they carry out his mission; and in that time empires have fallen and races have become extinct, but these little streams have widened and deepened till they encircle our globe like its atmosphere and sweeten myriads of arid hearts."

RUNNING AWAY.

(Concluded.)

After what seemed ages to the boys, daylight began to creep into the woods, and at last Fred was easier, and fell into a restless sleep, and Harry crept out to get some wood for a fire. A fire built, the next thing of course was—breakfast. There was still quite a stock of eatables left, but somehow Harry felt a strange disgust at the thought of them, and could not drive away haunting thoughts of bread and butter, beefsteak and everyday things that he had always despised. So he sat down moodily by the fire, uncertain what to do.

"Harry," said Fred, feebly at last, "I feel better this morning, and I'm hungry as a bear."

"What shall I get you?" asked Harry; "there's some of the fruit cake and a piece of the mince-pie we had last night."

"Oh!" gasped Fred, "it makes me sick to think of them! Why didn't we bring some sandwiches?"

"Or some cold meat," added Harry, "or even potatoes! a potato roasted in the ashes would be delicious. We were fools to think we could live on cake and pie."

"I don't believe I'll ever touch cake again," said Fred; "bah! it makes me sick to think of it!"

"Well; let's go out and shoot a rabbit, or something," suggested Harry, whose spirits began to return with the daylight, and Fred's recovery.

"I would," said Fred, "but I don't believe I can stand up; my legs feel so weak and shaky."

"Well, I'll go and bring you something," said Harry.

"Oh, don't leave me here," pleaded Fred. "Can't you catch a fish or something near here, in that brook over there?"

"I can try," said Harry; and so it was settled. Providing a pile of brush for the fire, and settling on a signal in case of trouble, Harry rigged up a fishing-pole, and started off.

But something was amiss with the fish, or with the fisherman, for not a nibble did he get, though he sat there patiently for hours, dreading to go back without something for Fred.

At last he grew alarmed at the long silence, and went hastily to the cave. The fire was out, and Fred lay in an uneasy slumber, his cheeks very red, and his hands burning hot. He muttered and talked in his sleep, and at last Harry spoke to him. He opened his eyes, but stared at Harry as though he had never seen him before, and in fact, was in a high fever and delirium.

Harry had never seen fever, and he was now terribly frightened; but what could he do? There was not a person that he knew of, nearer than twenty miles, and he dare not leave Fred alone to go for help, even had he known where to go.

There was absolutely nothing he could do, but sit down and wait, and eat some cake and pickles for dinner. After a few hours Fred came out of his fever, but so pale and weak that Harry was more alarmed than ever.

Again he could eat nothing, and again it was dark. Harry provided a big pile of sticks, intending to keep the fire all night, and feeling wakeful he sat there and began to think a little.

"I ought to have known better," he thought,

"than to bring a weakly boy like Fred out here, though I never saw him real sick before. His mother took care of him, I suppose, and that's why he couldn't eat things. By-the-way, I wonder how she feels about him now! What would she say if she could see him here, on the damp ground, too sick to move! She would blame me—because I'm older. Suppose he should die! I should never dare to go back. I must try to get him home—but how can I do it?" Always his thoughts came back to that—"I must get him home, but how can I do it?"

Hours went by, and Harry fell into a light sleep, but was suddenly awakened by a sound—a footstep? in these silent woods!

He started up in an instant. The step was heavy and slow on the dead leaves of their fallen screen; no doubt the steps of an animal—perhaps a bear.

He could not see an inch before him, and he dare not move lest the creature should hear. He felt around for a weapon, but could only get his hand on his uncle's big gun. This he carefully drew up near him, and held it ready to strike any animal which should try to get in. He had been unable to make it shoot, with all his cleaning, but it was heavy, and would do very well as a club. He was sure he could knock an animal senseless with it. So he stood there ready. His arms grew tired, and his back ached; still he dared not move.

Sometimes the step moved off a little, and Harry breathed easier, and hoped the creature was going away; and then, just as he began to think he must sit down, it would come back again, nearer than before.

All this time Fred was sleeping, and more quietly than during the day.

"I hope he'll be well in the morning," Harry thought, in one of the pauses when the animal seemed to be going away. "If he is, we can go on," was the first feeling, "but what can we do if we go on?" was the next. "We have seen no game; even if we saw any our gun won't go off, and if it would, we don't know how to shoot; I can't catch fish; there seems to be nothing to eat; it's awful lonesome out here; and—and—if a fellow get's sick it's horrid. I believe I'd most as lieve go on errands, after all."

Now the steps drew near again, and he braced himself up for the blow.

"Suppose this bear—or whatever it is—gets in at us, and kills us—or half kills us—suppose it should get hold of Fred! Would I be a murderer? —for it's my fault that he ran away; he'd never thought of it if I hadn't put him up to it." So he went on, in that long anxious night, thinking, and in deadly fear of the animal, till it seemed to him that his hair must have turned gray.

At last, when his arms were so stiff it seemed as though they had grown to that position, and he was so tired he could hardly stand, a faint light began to steal through the trees. He strained his eyes to see the monster which had frightened him so long. Now he thought he saw it on one side, but the growing light showed that to be a stump; then he thought it was on the other side, lying full length on the ground, but that turned out to be a trunk of a fallen tree. For some moments he had not heard the step, and he was beginning to think the animal had gone; but suddenly he heard it on the other side, quite plainly, evidently very near.

As quick as his stiff limbs would move, he wheeled, ready for a blow—nothing was there! Then the sounds came again, and looking down he saw at his feet—a monstrous toad!

His gun fell to the ground. This then was the creature whose hops among the dry leaves had kept him awake all night! For a moment he was furious, and determined to kill that ugly toad; but before his arms were limber enough to use, he thought better of it. In after years he used to laugh at that night's terror, but now, he had been too frightened to laugh.

Fred awoke at this moment, and seemed more like himself; in fact, the long fast had cured him. He sat up and looked around. Neither of the boys spoke of what filled their hearts. The woods were gloomy in the gray morning light. Fred looked slowly all around without a word; at last his glance fell upon his friend, sitting silent and forlorn. Their eyes met; the same thought was in them both.

"Let's go home," said Fred.

"Well! let's," said Harry.

"We were geese to start out this way," said Fred.

"We were idiots!" responded Harry.

"Let's go now."

"Agreed."

They both rose, and as one boy started for home.

"Our things!" suddenly exclaimed Fred, after they had gone a few steps.

"Who cares for them!" said Harry savagely, "let 'em stay; I wouldn't carry one home."

No more was said; grimly they both trudged on. After walking an hour or more, Fred spoke again:

"Are you sure this is the right way?"

"I don't know; I suppose it is," said Harry, and still they kept on.

Another hour passed—still no end to the woods.

"I'm sure this is farther than we went that day we came in," began Fred.

Harry stopped. "The truth is, Fred, I haven't a notion which way to go; I suppose if we go straight we'll come out somewhere after awhile."

"Perhaps so," said Fred, "but it's hundreds of miles to the other side, I believe."

Well; they were lost—that was plain. Every way they looked was a vast depth of woods. Harry climbed a tree, and peered out over the branches, but he could see nothing but a sea of tree-tops. He came slowly down.

"Did you see anything?" asked Fred, eagerly.

"Yes; millions of trees," said Harry bitterly. "Fred, I don't believe we'll ever get out of these woods," and he sat down at the foot of the tree.

"Don't you suppose they'll send after us?" asked Fred, with white, scared face.

"Yes; I suppose your folks will," said Harry. "I don't know's my Aunt will; but they might hunt a week, and not find us."

"And they won't know which way we went, besides," said Fred, suddenly.

"Sure enough," assented Harry, aghast at this new thought. "That peddler might tell, but he won't get back there for months, and they would not think of him, if he did."

A silence followed.

It was three days after this, that a party of half a dozen men, with Fred's father at their head, who had been searching the woods ever since the boys were lost, came suddenly upon the runaways. They lay upon the ground—apparently asleep, Harry on his face, Fred with his arms over his eyes. Ragged, worn out—half starved—it was hard to know his son. But they were evidently suffering, and Mr. Hartley stopped before them.

"Boys!" he said.

Harry started up, but stared as though he did not know them; Fred did not move.

"Is that you, Harry Barnes?" said Mr. Hartley, excitedly, "and what—what ails Fred?"

"Nothing," said Harry slowly, as though half asleep. "He's there"—and he looked towards his friend.

Mr. Hartley hurried up to the silent boy, drew his hands down, and shook him.

"Fred! Fred!" he called, excitedly.

Slowly Fred's eyes unclosed, and he recognized his father. He tried to speak, but his mouth seemed parched, and no sound came out.

"He's exhausted—nearly starved," said one of the men.

A little liquid food was poured down his throat, while Harry, who was stronger, ravenously devoured a piece of bread, and rapidly came to himself.

"What have you had to eat?" asked one of the men.

"Nothing," said Harry, "except a few pine seeds—and some leaves."

"Why didn't you come out of the woods?" asked another.

"Got lost," said Harry, looking eagerly at the meat in the provision bag.

In a few minutes a litter was made of branches, and Fred—laid upon it—was carried off by two men, while Harry, leaning on two more, managed to walk.

A few hours brought them to the place where the party had left a wagon; and after one night spent in a farm-house, and another day on the road, they reached home. By this time Fred was able to talk a little, but he was at once carried to his bed, and a long fit of illness followed. The exposure, sleeping on the damp ground, and want of food, were too much for his naturally delicate constitution, and he just escaped dying.

Harry was tougher, and so came out less hurt, though even he felt its effects for some time.

But both boys were completely cured of any desire to run away. Harry resumed his errand running without a murmur; and as for Fred, not only did he accept plain food without much grumbling, but he never could endure the taste of cake after that wretched night in the woods.—Olive Thorne in Temperance Investigator.

APPLE BLOSSOMS.

Why do they come? I know, I know,
I guessed their secret long ago.
They put on their dresses of pink and white,
And come when the days are long and light,
And smile, and smile
For a little while,
To tell the children that some fine day,
When summer is hurrying fast away,
Rosy apples will hang up there
Just where the bonny blossoms were.

And soon, when the spring winds softly blow,
The pretty things say good-by and go.
Where—who knows?—but I wish they'd fly
To ask Mother Nature if she would try
To hang those apples of gold and red
At once, for the little ones sighed and said
They could not wait
Till it grew so late,
But begged she would send them altogether,
Apples and blossoms in sweet spring weather.

—Selected.

TEMPERANCE.

OUR CONSUMPTION OF LIQUORS, COFFEE AND TEA.

A recent report of the government bureau of statistics brings down to date a per capita representation of the annual amount of distilled spirits, wines and malt liquors consumed in the United States in recent years. It is an instructive exhibit and, in a somewhat abbreviated form, follows:

CONSUMPTION IN GALLONS PER CAPITA.

	Spirits.	Wines.	Malt Liquors.
1840	2.52	0.29	1.36
'850	2.23	0.27	1.58
'860	2.86	0.35	3.22
'870	2.07	0.32	5.30
'880	1.26	0.56	8.26
'881	1.38	0.47	8.65
'882	1.40	0 49	10.03
'883	1.46	0.48	10.27
'884	1.48	0.37	10.74
'885	'.26	0.39	10.62
'886	'.26	0.45	11.20
'887	'.21	0.65	12.23
'888	'.26	0.61	'2.80
'889	'.32	0.56	'2.72
'890	'.40		'3.66

The decline in the consumption of distilled spirits and the remarkable increase in the consumption of beer, ale and other malt liquors will at once be noted. The steady and rapid expansion in the consumption of beer is almost without precedent in the annals of drink statistics. The decline in the quantity of distilled liquors consumed is also marked, but the figures here do not as accurately measure the quantity used for stimulants. Previous to 1860, before the internal tax was imposed, larger quantities of alcohol and spirits were used in the arts than afterward; but it is still to be noted that, in the face of a reduction of the tax, and from a per capita consumption exceeding two gallons maintained as late as 1870, the average annual consumption for the following decade fell to 1.48 gallons per capita, and for the decade just ended to 1.32 gallons. It would seem, therefore, that the hard-liquor drinking habit was less pronounced now than before the war. Wine bibbing, however, has increased, the average yearly consumption from 1870 to 1880 being 0.44 gallons per capita, and from 1880 to 1890, 0.49 gallons, as against only 0.35 for 1860 and 0.29 for 1840. We think of those earlier years as a period of heavy, universal and indiscriminate drinking of intoxicating liquors, but the figures of the census and internal revenue in these later days do not show results commensurate with the efforts put forth since in the cause of temperance. There has been improvement; liquor no longer presides unabashed over the neighborhood barn-raising or at the entertainment of the village preacher, and there seems to be less of the more fiery spirits consumed. But nevertheless the average American to-day seems to be taking quite as much alcohol into his system as then, and as a swiller his father could not for a moment be compared with him. To give a better idea of the life and habits of the people in this respect, the consumption of coffee and tea should be considered. The government import and export tables yield very accurate results:

PER CAPITA CONSUMPTION OF COFFEE AND TEA.

	Coffee (lbs).	Tea (lbs).
1830	3.00	0.53
'840	5.05	0.99
Average annual:—
From 1850 to 1860	5.98	0.79
From '860 to '870	4.47	0.87
From '870 to '880	6.96	1.37
From '880 to '890	8.55	'.33

We drink vastly more coffee and tea than they did in that reputed period of heavy consumption of stimulants fifty and sixty years ago. We swill down ten times as much beer and more wine, and then find room for two or three times as many gallons of coffee and twice as many of tea. The curious thing about it all is that the one does not in some measure crowd out the other. Great Britain consumes per capita about five pounds of tea a year, or much more than we, but the effect of this is to reduce coffee consumption to only about one pound, the reduction having marched steadily along side by side with the increase of tea sipping. With us, on the other hand, it is more coffee with more tea, and more beer with more coffee, and more wine with more beer. And meantime in this hurried gulping down of greater and greater quantities of indigestible stimulants and nerve-racking intoxicants and stimulants, we must be paving the way toward greater physical degeneracy.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE OLD TESTAMENT.

LESSON VIII.—Second Quarter.—May 24.

SUBJECT.—Captivity of Israel.—2 Kings 17 : 6-18.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Because ye have forsaken the Lord, he hath also forsaken you.—2 Chron. 24:20.

|Open the Bible and read the lesson.|

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Ps. 78:55-64. T.—Ps. 90:1-17. W.—Isaiah 5:8-30. Th.—Isaiah 10:1-34. F.—Isaiah 30:27-33. S.—Isaiah 42:10-25. S.—Ezek. 8:1-18.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. Israel's punishment.—vs. 6–12. The name of Shalmaneser, the Assyrian king, has been recently found on the Ninevite monuments, as concerned in an expedition against a king of Samaria—identified by Rawlinson as the Hoshea of our lesson. Thus the truth of Scripture history is being constantly vindicated; and if it is true as an historical account, we have the best possible reason for considering it true in every part. God's threatenings against sin will surely be fulfilled. If he spared not his ancient people can any expect to escape who, with far more light, go on in the same path of disobedience? Israel was carried away captive, not as a result of chance or fate, but "because they had sinned against the Lord their God." These are the plain, direct words of Scripture. They looked to Egypt for help,—the very land of bondage out of which he had so wonderfully brought them. Shall a saved sinner look back to the world by putting his trust in an arm of flesh? Yet how apt are we to do this very thing! Their transgressions had been many and gross. (1) They had walked in the statutes of the heathen; that is, had followed all their idolatrous manners and customs. Instead of appreciating their high privilege as God's peculiar people, they wanted to be like the nations around them, just as so many nominal Christians are afraid to be called "odd" and "singular," and so allow themselves to be governed by the statutes of the world, its fashions and its customs, instead of the law of Christ. (2) "They did secretly the things that were not right against the Lord their God." This refers to the secret religious rites practiced by every nation of antiquity, and from which according to their own authorities the Masonry of our day originated. (3) They did not set up a few pagan altars here and there, but they covered the land with them, "from the tower of the watchman,"—that is, the most outlying and isolated districts of their frontier,—"to the fenced city." How can we read this and not be reminded of the great increase of lodges all over our land to-day. Not only in our large cities, but in the smallest village hamlets, and to our farthest western border, these shrines of a false worship are set up. They wearied of the Sabbath and the holy days, as we saw in our last lesson, but they never seemed to grow weary of serving idols. How zealously men will worship Mammon, sacrificing health, happiness, life itself upon this altar! How many in the pursuit of pleasure work like galley slaves, and yet think it too great an effort to read a chapter in the Bible! But if all the faculties of mind, body and soul are employed in worshiping idols, what is left of the devotee for Christ's service? He demands nothing less than the whole heart; neither does the god of this world demand anything less, but there is this difference: that Jesus demands it from the first, and makes it a condition of discipleship, while Satan always pretends at the outset to be willing to accept a good deal less than this. If he can have the smallest niche in a Christian's heart in which to set up his throne he is satisfied, for he knows that unless cast out by the Spirit of God it will end in his having the whole. Thus it was with ancient Israel. She begun by worshiping God in a way contrary to his commands, and so gave place to the devil. When she made a graven image—the two golden calves—to represent the invisible God, she let in the spirit of heathenism; till now about 150 years after we find her lapsed into the very lowest idolatry and superstition. "They set them up images and groves on every high hill and under every green tree." Let those who think it a small matter to foster the lodge with its heathen origin and semi-heathen practices, remember that the tendency of false worships is always to a lower deep, as Paul shows us in the first chapter of Romans.

2. Israel warned yet unrepentant.—vs. 13–18. A constant line of prophets had been sent to warn Israel and plead with her to repent. Her only answer was indifference or persecution. "They sold themselves to do evil," as does every slave of sin. "The wages of sin is death." Total annihilation as a people, was the miserable reward of their servitude. Instead of devoting their children to God they sacrificed them in the fire to Moloch. Referring to this terrible cruelty, God says in Ezekiel 16:20: "Thou hast taken thy sons and thy daughters whom thou hast borne unto me." God claims the children for his. Even in the Old Testament there are many passages that show his tender care for the young, but it is in the face of Jesus Christ that the full depths of his love to them stands revealed. And so the watchword of Christianity has ever been, "Save the children!" Yet how many infant lives are sacrificed daily to the saloon monster; how many children are growing up stunted in body and soul by the vicious influences which surround them; how many parents are devoting their little ones to the service of the world instead of Christ, thus robbing the divine Fatherhood! "They used divinations and enchantments." Superstition and unbelief often go together. While rejecting the Word of God through his prophets, they accepted every lie of their idol priests; just as many to-day reject the Bible while believing all the absurdities of spiritualism. The end of such a wicked nation must come at last. God "removed them out of his sight." This is the "outer darkness": to be removed out of God's sight;—no mere hiding of his face in anger, but utter and complete removal from his presence.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—A convention of the Episcopal church in the Diocese of Massachusetts elected Rev. Phillips Brooks, of Trinity church, Boston, to the office of bishop, to succeed the late Bishop Paddock.

—At the meeting of the Evangelical Alliance in St. Louis, a most important move toward the establishing of a Law and Order League was taken. The League is to have two objects. First, the enforcement of existing laws on Sunday observance, and second to combat the encroachments of Romanism.

—Mrs. Bayertz, an eminent lady preacher from Australia, preached in revival meetings in several churches of Chicago last week. Mrs. Bayertz, whose converts are numbered by thousands all over Australasia, was born in North Wales and carefully reared in Judaism.

—According to Dr. W. H. Roberts, American statistical secretary of the Presbyterian Alliance, the Presbyterian and Reformed denominations throughout the world have 20,265,500 adherents.

—The General Conference of the Evangelical Alliance, says the Christian Intelligencer, was held early in April in Florence, Italy. and continued in session six days. No reports were sent by cable. Only twenty-five delegates from America, and about one hundred from England, were in attendance. The representation from Germany was not large. The time of meeting was not a convenient one. During the spring in England and America pastors and laymen are fully occupied at home, and the season has not come when men feel that they can with propriety visit the Continent. It was necessary to use French, German, Italian and English in the exercises, and such a necessity is a check upon enthusiasm and the despatch of business. But the sessions were profitable and the influence of such a brotherly gathering of Christians of every denomination upon the soil of Italy was happy and beneficial. The contrast between genuine unity, voluntary and cordial, and the formal, cold, organic unity of Rome, was manifest to the people. The interests of true Christianity were served and strengthened.

—The Howard Crosby Society for the Suppression of Vice and the Prevention of Crime, was organized at the M. E. Calvary Church on Thursday evening, April 30th. Nearly one thousand citizens attended and over five hundred enrolled themselves as members of the society. A Constitution was adopted. The Constitution provides that the pastor of each church north of the Central Park shall be entitled to a place and vote on the Executive Committee.

—Rev. W. T. Moffett has accepted the call of College Springs, Iowa, United Presbyterian church, and has entered upon the work. He thus becomes the successor of Rev. Dr. Wm. Johnston of noble memory, and we trust will be a worthy one.

—The Thirty-second General Assembly of the United Presbyterian church of North America will meet in Princeton, Ind., on Wednesday, May 27, 1891, at 7:30 o'clock, P. M. The opening sermon will be preached by Rev. John A. Wilson, the retiring moderator.

—Dr. Pentecost will spend the hot season in Simla, India, which is a center of fashion, society and godlessness. A wealthy friend in Scotland has purchased a tent for his use in India capable of seating 1,200 people, which will be used in various parts of India owing to the difficulty and expense of procuring suitable halls. Mr. and Mrs. George C. Stebbins, the singing evangelists, have left Dr. Pentecost. This is due to a change of plan. It has been decided to work chiefly among educated natives, who do not appreciate Western music.

—Father Alexander Dzubay, a Hungarian priest of the Greek church of Wilkesbarre, Pa., has purchased the church property of St. John's Lutheran society in that place. It will be the only Hungarian Greek place of worship in Pennsylvania.

—At the Presbyterian Ministerial Association of Cincinnati a few days ago, Rev. Dr. Morris read a very strong paper adversely criticising the views of Dr. Briggs as set forth in the inaugural address. The association voted to publish ten thousand copies.

—On Tuesday, February 17, the largest missionary party that has ever yet landed upon the shores of China reached Shanghai from San Francisco. A band of no fewer than thirty-five men and women, to be followed the succeeding week by ten or fifteen others, constituted the company, which had been sent by the Scandinavian churches of the United States, to labor in connection with the China Inland Mission.

—Among the Telugus in India, fourteen missionary societies are at work. having ninety-two male and twenty-seven female missionaries, not counting wives. There are seventy-two mission stations, 743 native preachers, and 53,000 church members, 40,000 of whom are Baptists. The Telugus are one of the finest races of India.

—According to the computation of Dr. Cust, an English mission writer of note, the Bible, either entirely or in its major parts, has been translated into 331 languages.

To help all our local and traveling agents in working for subscribers, we give to all new yearly subscribers during the present month a copy of Prof. Henry Drummond's latest work, "Love, the Supreme Gift; or The Greatest thing in the World." There is now an immense demand for this work. It has been issued by some publishers at 20 cents per copy; by others at 35 cents, and $1.00 for an illustrated edition. We will send it to every new subscriber that can be obtained before May 1st, whether by agent or directly. Considerable theological controversy has arisen over this work of Prof. Drummond's, and for its size it has attracted as much attention as the same author's famous "Natural Law in the Spiritual World." Dr. A. J. Gordon of Boston, has written a supplementary pamphlet on Faith, "The First thing in the World." Messiah's Herald of Boston, says: "There has been no work of its size issued during the last decade that has been more severely criticised than Drummond's 'Greatest thing in the World.' Many have warmly commended it, and thousands of copies of the work have been sold. The great objection to the work has been that Prof. Drummond paid little attention to the value of faith." Dr. Gordon makes up this deficiency.

We have secured a special rate on this work. Free to new subscribers for a year or more from this time to June 1st.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

Mayor Washburne has informed a committee that the Exposition Building would have to be torn down in compliance with the ordinance. The demolition of this historic building begins Tuesday.

The World's Fair directors appropriated $200,000 for the permanent art building on the Lake Front. Also they declined the laborers' request of a minimum wages clause in contracts.

Miss Jennie Tupper, the 19-year-old niece of Professor Thomas, of the Wells School, met a fearful death Friday evening by an explosion of gasoline.

COUNTRY.

A new amendment to the prohibitory law has gone into effect in Maine. It imposes a heavy fine and imprisonment for sixty days in cases of a single sale.

Attorney General Smith, of Indiana, decided on Monday that, under the new tax law, the property of Masonic and similar organizations is exempt from taxation.

The Supreme Court of Nebraska Tuesday rendered a decision in the Boyd-Thayer quo warranto case, ousting Boyd and declaring Thayer the legal Governor of the State. Boyd (Democrat) is disqualified on the ground of non-citizenship. John M. Thayer resumed the office of Governor Wednesday, and at once reappointed all the Republican office-holders deposed by Boyd.

The Massachusetts Board of Health reports seventeen deaths from hydrophobia the past year, the highest number ever recorded.

The greatest land sale ever made in the Northwest by one individual, says a Huron, S. D., dispatch was consummated May 7. The New York Land and Irrigation Company, bought of William Glasgow, of Hull, England, 85,000 acres of land in the James River Valley. With this purchase the company owns in this locality 100,000 acres, and will irrigate all of it. Arrangements are now being made for sinking over 100 artesian wells for irrigating purposes.

Acting under orders from Secretary Blaine, the United States Marshal at San Diego, Cal., Wednesday seized the steamer Itata which was receiving contraband of war for the use of Chilian insurgents. Deputy Marshal Spaulding who was put in charge on board the Chilian insurgents' vessel was seized, the vessel sailed from San Diego harbor, and the marshal was put off at Ballast Point and returned to that city Wednesday night. He reports the vessel is a well-armed privateer.

A Madison, Wis., dispatch says that a number of the State University students are charged with indulging too freely in intoxicants and an attempt will be made to bring the saloon-keepers to justice, as most of the students in disgrace are under age. The faculty is making a rigid examination.

(Continued on 16th page.)

DONATIONS.

For Current Expense Fund:

N R Carning	$ 25
E McNaughton	100 00

For Southern Ministers' Fund:

E McNaughton	$ 100 00

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from May 4 to May 9, inclusive:

Mrs A M Streeter, W A Ferrenburg, G Keppel, T W Smiley, R Wait, W Cheetham, Dr J N Norris, E B Lewis, E W Hicks, J Smith, S Rowley, Rev C H Kiracofe, N Smith, E D Slayton, W Stewart, Rev W J Buchanon, A Nilsen, J Kinney, J M Frink, B Perrine, S Carson, H Newton, J P Hoffman, J S Smedley, P D Miller, S Gates, L B Skeel, W McClelland, W Swartz, Mrs E Talcott, S Simpson, Rev C H Abbott, J Reid, Dr A J Semmes, T Ruark, G Marcy, W Knight.

Peculiar

Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Hood's Peculiar in its strength and economy, Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, Sarsaparilla and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad Peculiar no other preparation ever attained so rapidly nor held so steadfastly the confidence of all classes of people. Peculiar in the brain-work which it represents, Hood's Sarsaparilla combines all the knowledge which modern research in medical science has To Itself developed, with many years practical experience in preparing medicines. Be sure to get only

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

I took Cold,
I took Sick,
I TOOK

SCOTT'S EMULSION

RESULT:

I take My Meals,
I take My Rest,

AND I AM VIGOROUS ENOUGH TO TAKE ANYTHING I CAN LAY MY HANDS ON; getting fat too, FOR Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda NOT ONLY CURED MY Incipient Consumption BUT BUILT ME UP, AND IS NOW PUTTING

FLESH ON MY BONES

AT THE RATE OF A POUND A DAY. I TAKE IT JUST AS EASILY AS I DO MILK." SUCH TESTIMONY IS NOTHING NEW. SCOTT'S EMULSION IS DOING WONDERS DAILY. TAKE NO OTHER.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer who will send me their Express and P.O. address.
T. A. Slocum, M. C., 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10cts each.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring	95	@ 1	03½
Winter	99½	1	01
Corn—No. 2	63	@	65
Oats—No. 2	49¾	@	54½
Rye—No. 2	86
Bran per ton	13 50	@14	75
Hay—Timothy	10 00	@15	00
Butter, medium to best	12	@	28
Cheese	05	@	12½
Beans	1 75	@ 2	25
Eggs	14
Seeds—Timothy	1 08	@ 1	30
Flax	1 17	@ 1	18
Broom corn	03	@	04½
Potatoes, per bu	75	@ 1	05
Hides—Green to dry flint	04½	@	07½
Lumber—Common	10 00	@13	00
Wool	15	@	34
Cattle—Choice to extra	5 75	@ 6	40
Common to good	1 75	@ 5	70
Hogs	3 75	@ 5	10
Sheep	3 60	@ 7	00

NEW YORK.

Wheat	1 11	@ 1	14½
Corn	79	@	83
Oats	55	@	71
Eggs	16¾
Butter	15	@	35
Wool	14	@	39

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	2 00	@ 5	90
Hogs	3 25	@ 4	80
Sheep	5 50	@ 6	00

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entir Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33d inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated'

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated' comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians

CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots,

WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

Washington.
John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.
James Madison, 4th President of the United States.
Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.
Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.
Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.
John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.
Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.
William Wirt, Attorney-General.
John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.
John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.
Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.
Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.

Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, postpaid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

FOR MINISTERS

THE

"STORIES OF THE GODS"

is especially adapted. They will at once derstand the references to the idolatrous systems of the nations. And the idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus more clearly seen and easily understood. Will you furnish each pastor in your place with one of these pamphlets?

PRICE, ONLY 10 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison Street, Chicago

OLD AND NEW

WANTED FRIENDS

TO GAIN

NEW SUBSCRIBERS

FOR

BUDS & BLOSSOMS.

Acknowledged to be one of the BEST AND CHEAPEST Magazines. Its wealth of illustration, purity yet often thrilling statements of MISSION WORK and ADVENTURE in lower New York, make it wholesome and cheery reading. Edited by

J. F. AVERY,
Pastor Mariners' Temple. 1 Henry St

BUDS AND BLOSSOMS

AND FRIENDLY GREETINGS

WANTS to give Canvassers

$5 & $10 REWARDS.

Send three cents for specimens, etc.

Address Rev. J. F. AVERY,
1 Henry St., New York.

10,000

Another ten thousand edition of the trac

KILLED, AND NO INQUEST.

This is a large 4-page tract at 30 cen per pound, 15 cents for half pound, and 10 cents for a third of a pound. It is an illustrated account of the death of Rev. J. W. Johnston, while being initiated by the officers of Huntington Lodge, W. Va.. in January of this year. Sent postpaic at the above price. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St Chicago

SEE THIS!

The latest, most complete edition
Over 235 choice

Reform Songs for the Times.

Only 30c a copy, or 20c by the 100

—AND—

"THE TOBACCO MANIA."

$1 per 100.

For sale here and by the author,

GEO. W. CLARK,

76 W. Montcalm St., Detroit, Mich.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885

Compiled and Arranged by John C. Underwood, Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association
221 West Madison St. Chicago.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

HOME AND HEALTH.

MORE SLEEP FOR WOMEN.

We see much in the papers now-a-days, says a recent writer, about the fact that insanity is very prevalent among women of farmers' homes. This is accounted for in many ways—"overwork," "monotonous existence," and occasionally some wise men say "too little sleep." If women who have to work for farm hands, if women who carry on heavy housework year in and year out, would deliberately make up their minds to take a mid-day nap, they would find in the long run that they could do more and better work, and come out of hard work with better nerve than if they tried to work every minute of the day. The few minutes of daylight sleep will come back laden with manifold riches of strength.

It is useless for a woman to say she cannot sleep in daytime. If any one will lie down quietly and close the eyes one-half hour per day, at the same time every day for two weeks, there will be no trouble about not being able to sleep in daytime. For many people the half hour per day is sufficient rest to help keep good strength all day. The sleep at night will be all the better for it, because the nerves will not be so worn and tired as to make one restless. No one can make a rule that will apply to every one as to the proper amount of sleep necessary; but one thing is sure—any woman had better err on the side of too much sleep than run any risk as to wearing out her nerves, which working on too little sleep is sure to do.

Children, too, are sometimes abused by those who love them best, by being obliged to get up to breakfast, whether their sleep is "out" or not. They will wake up of their own accord when they have slept enough.

Women do too much work in many directions. They sew too much, scrub too much, and many a one cleans for hard hours at a time when a very few minutes of care taking would have prevented the necessity for the cleaning. If they would take a nap in the midst of the day, and by forethought save the time from unnecessary work, they might live longer.

One frail, delicate woman, who has been able all her life to keep her home pleasant and her five children happy, thinks her success all due to the fact that she sleeps twenty minutes every afternoon; her nerves are rested, her body and mind refreshed, and her strength renewed, so that she does not become over-tired before night. She began the habit when she first began to keep house, and learned to always take the time for it because it was economy in the end.

We hear much about woman's rights, but no woman uses all the rights that are accorded her unless she makes of herself physically the strong woman she has a right to be, then increases her mental strength to what it should and can become. When the majority of women do this there will be no question as to the status she will have in the homes, the neighborhood and the nation.—Selected.

THE BAREFOOT CURE.

In time past we have repeatedly suggested in conversation, and also in print, that since the earth was a vast reservoir of electricity and magnetism, persons who were nervous and sleepless would naturally find relief by walking barefoot on the damp grass, or soil, or even on a cellar bottom; and also by working in the soil, and among the plants with the hands, and thus restoring the electrical balance to the system. We had never heard or read of this remedy, but had tried it, and observed its working; for who ever saw a barefooted person who was nervous? Now a newspaper paragraph says:

"Baron Nathaniel Rothschild has returned home from the Bavarian village where he had to go about barefooted and live on a vegetable diet as a nerve cure, and Edmund Yates reports that he is all right again."

Probably that prescription cost the rich Jew something; but we will give it to our readers for nothing. Get your hands into the soil; it will not hurt you; man was made of the dust of the ground at the beginning. Lie in the lap of mother earth; do not take cold; and see if you do not have steady nerves and a level head.—Common People.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Has Cured Others
Will Cure You.

The Superior Medicine

"MARCH to search, APRIL to try, MAY to tell if you live or die." So runs the old adage. But if you take AYER'S Sarsaparilla during the months of March and April, the result in May will be all you could desire. To overcome the ailments peculiar to Spring, purify and invigorate the blood by the use of AYER'S Sarsaparilla. All who make use of THIS as their Spring medicine need have no fear of That Tired Feeling, Indigestion, Headache, Pains in the Back and Limbs, Feverishness, and other disagreeable symptoms so prevalent at this period of the year. For the young, the old, the middle-aged—for all—AYER'S Sarsaparilla is the SUPERIOR MEDICINE FOR SPRING. Be particular that your druggist gives you AYER'S Sarsaparilla. IT CURES OTHERS AND WILL CURE YOU.

THERE ARE MANY USES FOR SAPOLIO

To clean tombstones.	To renew oil-cloth.	To renovate paint.	To brighten metals.
To polish knives.	To scrub floors.	To wash out sinks.	To scour bath-tubs.
To clean dishes.	To whiten marble.	To remove rust.	To scour kettles.

EVERYBODY USES IT.

Dentists to clean false teeth,	Engineers to clean parts of machines.	Housemaids to scrub marble floors.
Surgeons to polish their instruments.	Ministers to renovate old chapels.	Chemists to remove some stains.
Confectioners to scour their pans.	Sextons to clean the tombstones.	Carvers to sharpen their knives.
Mechanics to brighten their tools.	Hostlers on brasses and white horses.	Shrewd ones to scour old straw hats
Cooks to clean the kitchen sink.	Artists to clean their palattes.	Soldiers to brighten their arms.
Painters to clean off surfaces.	Wheelman to clean bicycles.	Renovators to clean carpets.

EVERY ONE FINDS A NEW USE.

Talk's cheap, but when it's backed up by a pledge of the hard cash of a financially responsible firm, or company, of world-wide reputation for fair and honorable dealing, it means business!

Now, there are scores of sarsaparillas and other blood-purifiers, all cracked up to be the best, purest, most peculiar and wonderful, but bear in mind (for your own sake), there's only one guaranteed blood-purifier and remedy for torpid liver and all diseases that come from bad blood.

That one—standing solitary and alone—sold on trial, is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

If it doesn't do good in skin, scalp and scrofulous diseases—and pulmonary consumption is only lung-scrofula—just let its makers know and get your money back.

Talk's cheap, but to back a poor medicine, or a common one, by selling it on trial, as "Golden Medical Discovery" is sold, would bankrupt the largest fortune.

Talk's cheap, but only "Discovery" is guaranteed.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. 25cts each.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

THE WOMAN'S NEWS

IS THE ONLY
GENERAL WOMAN'S NEWSPAPER IN THE UNITED STATES,
——AND IS THE——
LARGEST WOMAN'S NEWSPAPER
EVER PUBLISHED.

The publishers offer the Largest Cash Commissions and the Best Premiums ever given by any newspaper.

Agents Wanted Everywhere.

Send for Sample Copies and Terms for Agents. Address,
THE HOSTERMAN PUB. CO.,
Springfield, Ohio.

WILL SELL FOR

Regular Price.		Selling Price.
	FIVE CENTS.
$ .15	"A WOMAN'S VICTORY, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp.	$ .05
$ .10	"WASHINGTON SOUVENIR." Portraits of Geo. Washington and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freemasonry. Size 18x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home.	$ .05
	SIX CENTS.
$ .10	"SECRET SOCIETIES." A Lecture delivered at Oberlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Paper, 36 pp.	$ .06
$ .20	"REASONS WHY Secret Societies cannot be Fellowshiped by the United Presbyterian Church." By Rev. J. W. Bain. Pages 149.	$ .06
	TEN CENTS.
$ .15	"MY EXPERIENCE WITH SECRET SOCIETIES." By a Traveler. Paper, 51 pp.	$ .10
$ .25	"SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF JAMES G. BIRNEY." His relation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in history. By General William Birney. Paper, 32 pages.	$ .10
	TWENTY CENTS.
$ .30	"SONGS FOR THE TIMES," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohibition and W. C. T. U. meetings. Boards, 152 pages.	$ .20
	TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.
$ .75	"BEREA COLLEGE," Kentucky. An interesting history of the founding of that College for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 87 pages.	.25
	FIFTY CENTS.
$1.00	"NATIONAL SUICIDE AND ITS PREVENTION." The following will show the drift of the book: Measure or Standard of Value; What is Honest Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lumry. Cloth, 224 pp.	$ .50
$1.50	"HISTORY OF SECRET SOCIETIES IN FRANCE," or "THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS." By Lucien De La Hodde. Translated from the French by Gen'l. J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp.	$ .50

Sent postpaid to anyaddress on receipt of the selling price.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

FIFTY YEARS and BEYOND;

OR,

Old Age and How to Enjoy It.

A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHROP.

Introduction by
REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D.,
(Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of that now is, and to give comfort and help ife that is to come.

"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors one gray head and refuses to consider the oldish man burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"The selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveller to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1

Address, W. I. PHILLIP,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago Il

FARM NOTES.

CABBAGE.

In growing cabbage, whether for early, mid-summer, or winter, there are three requirements necessary to success: Good, healthy plants, a suitable soil, and last but not least, good cultivation. Our early cabbage is sown in hotbeds about the middle of February; the young plants are aired frequently, transplanted when small, and exposed to the cold as they grow older, so as to ensure good, stocky, well hardened plants. The second crop we sow in cold frames the last of March, sparingly, to avoid transplanting; and for winter use about the 20th of April. The varieties we use are early Jersey Wakefield for first crop, Vick's All Seasons for second and third crops. The All Seasons stands number one, in our estimation, notwithstanding the many excellent kinds mentioned in catalogues; it is large, firm, sure to head, and in fact reliable in all respects.

Early cabbages require a very rich soil while late ones will do very well whereever a good crop of corn can be raised; we plow our ground early for late crop, summer fallowing as for wheat. Early crop is set about the 10th of April, second crop the first of May, and third crop 20th of June.

In setting we use a peg to make the hole and insert the plants to the first leaves, pressing the dirt firmly to the bottom of the roots with the peg. When the plants have straightened up commence cultivating the soil deeply, and the more frequently the better, for the first four weeks; never cultivate less than once a week until beginning to head.

The early cabbages which cannot be disposed of in our home market are shipped in crates; the late, shipped in car-load lots.—Davis Brothers in Vick's Magazine.

FARM NOTES.

Give horses daily exercise; if not in harness turn them out to caper in a convenient lot when weather is pleasant.

The New York Experiment Station has demonstrated that manure loses 40 per cent of its value by exposure to the weather.

Bran, oatmeal, and ground barley can always be fed to milch cows with profit this time of the year, especially when fed with pumpkins or roots.

In a speech delivered in the city of Leeds, England, Sir Lyon Playfair said: "If the relative increase of farm products and of manufacturing population continues for the next twenty years in the same ratio as for the last ten, the manufacturing and trading people will consume all that the farmers can raise in America.

Governor Hoard illustrated the profits of condensation by the statement that the farmer pays 21 cents to carry a dollar's worth of grain to the consumer; while the average cost of transportation of a dollar's worth of cheese is 7 cents, and of butter 5 cents.

Cocoanut butter, manufactured in Germany as a substitute for dairy butter, is in the market. It is said to be wholesome and palatable, and if it is sold under an honest label there can be no objection to its sale. Dairymen need only fear the competition of counterfeit butter.

H. D. Sherman, ex-Dairy Commissioner of Iowa, says more milk can be produced from one acre of corn, fodder and all, than from four acres of any other crop, roots excepted.

Ten pounds of ground oats are equal to eleven pounds of wheat bran for milk production. This is the summing up of experiments in the Wisconsin station. Dr. Taylor, the microscopist of the agricultural department at Washington, who, in examining butter to test adulterations, found that butter made from a cow fed on cotton-seed meal, gave under polarized light, through a microscope, the very same reactions as did oleomargarine made of cotton-seed oil; and he said in his report, that if this butter was tested for its purity it would be almost certainly taken as being adulterated with this oil.

Much of the value of a cow depends upon her feed and treatment while she is a heifer bearing her first calf. She must be gently handled, partly to make her gentle, and partly by rubbing her bag and teats, to develop the milk glands and make the teats larger. If this is done much before she calves it may start a milk flow which is not desirable at this time. But two or three months before calving the teats may be put in the way of developing without incurring this risk. The heifer should be liberally fed, in order to supply the extra demand her calf will make, but fattening feed should be avoided. It is fattening feed that causes most cases of milk fever, for if the fat is on the heifer, when she begins to give milk most of it will go into the pail.—American Cultivator.

They poulticed her feet and poulticed her head,
And blistered her back till 'twas smarting and red,
Tried tonics, elixirs, pain-killers and salves,
(Though grandma declared it was nothing but "narves.")
And the poor woman thought she must certainly die,
Till "Favorite Prescription" she happened to try.
No wonder its praises so loudly they speak;
She grew better at once and was well in a week.

The torturing pains and distressing nervousness which accompany, at times, certain forms of "female weakness," yield like magic to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, and adapted to the delicate organization of woman. It allays and subdues the nervous symptoms and relieves the pain accompanying functional and organic troubles.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription contains no alcohol to inebriate, no syrup or sugar to ferment in the stomach and cause distress; is as peculiar in its curative effects, in the diseases that afflict womankind, as in its composition. It's a legitimate medicine—an invigorating, restorative tonic, a soothing and strengthening nervine, and a positive remedy for "female weaknesses" and ailments. All functional disturbances, irregularities, and derangements are cured by it. There's nothing like it in the way it acts—there's nothing like it in the way it's sold. It's guaranteed to give satisfaction in every case, or the money paid for it is promptly refunded.

Read the guarantee on the wrapper. You lose nothing if it doesn't help you—but it will.

The system is invigorated, the blood enriched, digestion improved, melancholy and nervousness dispelled. It's a legitimate medicine, the only one that's guaranteed to give satisfaction in the cure of all "female complaints."

Taken away

—sick headache, bilious headache, dizziness, constipation, indigestion, bilious attacks and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels. It's a large contract, but the smallest things in the world do the business—Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They're the smallest, but the most effective. They go to work in the right way.

They're the cheapest pill you can buy, because they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned.

You only pay for the good you get.

That's the peculiar plan all Dr. Pierce's medicines are sold on, through druggists.

A Wise Thing to Do.

It is a very wise course to take Hood's Sarsaparilla in the Spring, for at this season a thorough cleansing of the blood is necessary in order to expel the impurities which have accumulated during the Winter, or which may be hereditary and cause you much suffering. We confidently recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as

THE VERY BEST

Spring Medicine. By its use the blood is purified, enriched and vitalized, that tired feeling is entirely overcome and the whole body given strength and vigor. The appetite is restored and sharpened, the digestive organs are toned, and the kidneys and liver invigorated.

The American Eagle must be a gay old bird—he is bald. If you don't want to be bald, use Hall's Hair Renewer, and you won't be. Try it.

BEECHAM'S PILLS act like magic on a Weak Stomach.

The St. Louis Sermon

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover.

Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

THE BEST.

EVERITT'S MAN-WEIGHT

HOE, CULTIVATOR PLOW, ETC., SINGLE AND DOUBLE WHEEL.

Will Revolutionize Hand-Power Cultivation—Makes Keeping a Horse an Unnecessary Expense in Many Cases.

This new Invention is a Great Boon to all Cultivators of the Soil, and must be Classed with the Great Inventions of the Age, yet it is so simple that the natural question with every one is, "Why did I not think of that?" And so nicely does it fill a want existing with thousands of gardeners, nurserymen, seedmen, florists, and farmers, that after the first trial they invariably conclude to "never do without it."

All other Garden Tools, Seed Drills, Rollers, etc., can be attached and run with our propeller with many times the power and greater ease than by hand power.

SINGLE WHEEL cultivator, with attachments, price $6.00. W't, 15 lbs.

DOUBLE WHEEL, with attachments, $8.00. W't, 20 lbs.

With every Double Wheel Machine the extra parts are furnished necessary to convert it into the single wheel machine, without extra charge. Thus practically giving the two machines for the price of one.

This best of all hand cultivators to every worker for the Cynosure free as follows:

Two-wheel for 15 new subscribers. ($22.50.) Single-wheel for 12 new subscribers. ($18.00.)

Two-wheel machine, 1 renewal and one new subscriber for $8.50. Same for two new subscribers.

Single wheel and same for $7.00 Express or freight extra.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.
Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

THE COSMOPOLITAN,

The Cheapest Illustrated Monthly in the World.

25 CENTS A NUMBER.
$2.40 PER YEAR.

EDITION FOR DEC. '90, 100,000 COPIES.

THE COSMOPOLITAN is literally what the New York Times calls it, "AT ITS PRICE, THE BRIGHTEST, MOST VARIED AND BEST EDITED OF THE MAGAZINES."

SUBSCRIBE. SUBSCRIBE. SUBSCRIBE.

An Unusual Opportunity

FOR NEW SUBSCRIBERS FOR ONE YEAR ONLY.

THE COSMOPOLITAN, per year	$2.40
The Christian Cynosure	1.50
The price of the two publications	3.90
We will furnish both for only	3.00

This offer is only to new subscribers to both the Cosmopolitan and the Cynosure, and only for one year.

To an old subscriber to the Cynosure who is new to the Cosmopolitan	$3.25
To old subscribers to both	3.50

A Splendidly Illustrated Periodical at a Price hitherto deemed Impossible.

TRY IT FOR A YEAR.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

BUSINESS.

NEW AND OLD.

The Cynosure will continue to supply all ts subscribers, new or old, who send $1.50 for the paper, with the HEALTH CALENDAR and ROPP'S COMMERCIAL CALCULATOR, as follows: The paper and the Calculator, leatherette bound, No. 1, (publisher's price 50 cents) for $1.70. Morocco bound (price $1.00) for $2.00.

The paper and Calendar (publisher's price 30 cents) for $1.65. The Calculator (No. 1.) or a Calendar free to every old subscriber sending $3.00 for renewal and a new subscriber.

The Calculator is a book of great value for every farmer, mechanic or business man.

The Calendar contains a temperance bill of fare for every day, and hundreds of good recipes. It hangs on the wall in constant sight.

NEW OFFERS.

The Cynosure and the Cosmopolitan Magazine (publisher's price $2.40) to new subscribers only $3.00. To others $3.25.

The Cynosure and Pres. C. A. Blanchard's new book "Educational Papers" for $1.70 to all subscribers.

NEWEST AND BEST.

Read the advertisement of the Manweight Cultivator on another page.

We will send the cultivator free to every one who will send us a club of 15 new subscribers at $1.50 each; or the single wheel for a club of 12 new names.

For $8.50 we will send the two-wheel cultivator and the Cynosure two years to new subscribers, or a year each to a new and an old. This gives two subscriptions for 50 cts. The single-wheel machine and the same subscriptions for $7.00. We don't pay transportation.

We would be glad to put 100 of these machines at work killing weeds and raising new subscriptions. It is an investment none will regret.

50,000

SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CYNOSURE would bring our reform to the POINT OF SUCCESS. LET US "KEEP EVERLASTINGLY AT IT."

MRS. HAVILAND'S wonderful book "A Woman's Life Work," should be read in every family. It will be sent to everyone who will send a full year's subscription to the Cynosure and $1.00 in addition. The price of the book is $1.50. We make this special offer for May only.

BLACK BEAUTY is one of the most popular books of the day. It is said that about two million copies have been sold. Every boy and girl should read it, and learn to feel compassion for the dumb beasts that spend their lives in the service of man. We will give a copy free to every one of them who sends us a new subscriber before June 1.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office.
H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St., N. Y.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

A gas explosion at the Ocean Coal Mines, near Clarksburg, W. Va., killed four men. Three others were rescued alive. The mine at once began burning furiously.

In a railway camp twenty miles below Chattanooga, Tenn., last Saturday night, four Negroes gambled and drank in a box car. Fire broke out and the men were burned to death. It is hinted that the car was set on fire for the purpose of robbery.

Dispatches from northern Wisconsin and Michigan report large losses of timber from forest fires. People at Washburn, Wis., were out all day fighting the flames, which threatened the village. Fires near Ashland have endangered the works of the Parish Manufacturing Company and other concerns. All through the northern part of the Michigan peninsula fires raged and buildings were burned.

Six blocks of buildings were burned at Alliston, Ont., May 8. They contained six hotels, forty-five stores, twenty-five residences, the postoffice, market buildings and the fire hall. The loss will run into the hundreds of thousands.

A San Francisco paper says that when the Charleston sailed Saturday morning it was under sealed orders. A cipher dispatch was received by Capt. Remy at midnight Friday. It took over three hours to translate the dispatch and at 4 o'clock in the morning all visitors were ordered ashore and the Charleston hastily put to sea. The vessel is provisioned and coaled for a long cruise, and instead of going outside to try her guns, as was the general supposition at first, it is said she has gone in pursuit of the Chilean steamer Itata, with orders to capture her.

A serious wreck occurred on the Santa Fe road, Trinidad, Col. A freight train of twenty cars loaded with cattle started down the Raton mountain but became unmanageable because the brakes failed to work. The train gained a frightful speed and while turning a sharp curve the engine and tender broke away from the train and sixteen cars went over an embankment twenty feet high, smashing the cars into kindling wood and killing 360 cattle. Four tramps stealing their way over the road are reported buried in the wreck.

FOREIGN.

A St. Petersburg dispatch states that the government has suddenly suspended the expulsion of the Jews from Moscow.

The treaty entered into between Spain and the United States stipulates that coal, petroleum, and machinery shall be admitted free into Cuba and Porto Rico, and that the present duty on flour be reduced one-half in exchange for the free admission into the United States of sugar, coffee and cocoa.

News comes from Florence, Italy, that an American named William Jacques, hailing from Newton, Mass., was assaulted by a mob in the streets of the famous city, and that his daughter was severely injured while interfering in his behalf.

Fifteen craters in the Zunahuana district of Chili for several days have been throwing out masses of mud, and the entire valley which was formerly a beautiful spot is now a desert.

The Italian Government, from motives of economy, has decided not to take part in the Chicago Exposition. The Cabinet also proposes to suppress the Ministers of Posts and Telegraphs.

A Roman newspaper is authority for the statement that the Italian Government is about to address a circular to the European powers submitting the conduct of the United States Government in the New Orleans affair to their judgment.

London hospitals contain on an average 100 cases of influenza, and there are signs of a continued increase of the epidemic.

April 24 the Chilian insurgent war-ship Blanco Encalada was suddenly attacked in Caldera Bay by the torpedo cruisers Lynch and Condell, which launched seven torpedoes against the iron-clad, the last one striking. She was tied to a buoy at the time and was unable to withstand the attack properly. About 180 of the crew were drowned. The commander and nine others were saved.

The village of Mussig, near Schlettstadt, was burned to the ground on Wednesday, one hundred large frame houses, the church and the castle being totally destroyed. A workman named Jutz has been arrested on a charge of having purposely set fire to the village in four places.

Not many physicians make great therapeutic discoveries. For the most part they content themselves with administering judiciously what is prescribed in the books. To Dr. J. C. Ayer, however, is due the credit of discovering that greatest of blood-purifiers—Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

AGENTS WANTED both sexes. $25 to $50 per week EASILY MADE. SAMPLES FREE. Send for terms. W. C. Wilson, Kansas City, Mo.

PENSIONS OLD CLAIMS Settled Under New Law.
Soldiers, Widows, Parents, send for blank applications and information. PATRICK O'FARRELL Pension Agent, Washington, D. C.

TACOMA Lots and Acres from $50 to $50,000. Installment property. The annual increase in TACOMA realty values brings more money than stocks, bonds or mortgages. Non residents realize in 1 to 5 yrs 100 per cent. Test us. TACOMA INVESTMENT CO, Tacoma, Wash.

$8000.00 a year is being made by John R. Goodwin, Troy, N.Y., at work for us. Reader, you may not make as much, but we can teach you quickly how to earn from $5 to $10 a day at the start, and more as you go on. Both sexes, all ages. In any part of America, you can commence at home, giving all your time, or spare moments only to the work. All is new. Great pay SURE for every worker. We start you, furnishing everything. EASILY, SPEEDILY learned. PARTICULARS FREE. Address at once, STINSON & CO., PORTLAND, MAINE.

BEECHAM'S PILLS
ACT LIKE MAGIC ON A WEAK STOMACH.
25 Cents a Box.
OF ALL DRUGGISTS.

WALL PAPER
SAMPLES SENT FREE of spring patterns with borders and ceilings to match. One half million rolls offered at wholesale prices. White blanks 4c to 6c, Gilts 8c to 35c. Embossed Gilts 10c to 50c. I will send you the most popular colorings, and guarantee to save you money. ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant, 63-65 W. Washington-st. Chicago

DR. PRICE'S
Cream Baking Powder.
Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

DONALD KENNEDY
Of Roxbury, Mass., says
Kennedy's Medical Discovery cures Horrid Old Sores, Deep Seated Ulcers of 40 years standing, Inward Tumors, and every disease of the skin, except Thunder Humor, and Cancer that has taken root. Price $1.50. Sold by every Druggist in the U. S. and Canada.

ADVERTISE JUDICIOUSLY
Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.
LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

Have you Seen Evangelis Wolfe's New Paper?
John 3:16. Do you want a bright, lively, and outspoken Gospel paper, published in the Cherokee Indian Nation? Subscribe for "John Three-Sixteen" Only 20 cents per year. Specimen copies free. Address "John Three-Sixteen" Company, Vinita, Cherokee Nation, Ind. Ter.

WHEATON COLLEGE,
WHEATON, ILL.
A School for Men and Women.
COMMENCEMENT THURSDAY, JUNE 25TH, 1891.
Full College Courses, Preparatory School, Business School, Musical Conservatory and Art School. Fifteen Professors and Instructors.
Send for Catalogue.
CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

VASELINE.
FOR A ONE-DOLLAR BILL sent us by mail we will deliver, free of all charges, to any person in the United States, all of the following articles, carefully packed:
One two-ounce bottle of Pure Vaseline.....10 cts.
One two-ounce bottle of Vaseline Pomade.....15 "
One jar of Vaseline Cold Cream.....15 "
One Cake of Vaseline Camphor Ice.....10 "
One Cake of Vaseline Soap, unscented.....10 "
One Cake of Vaseline Soap, exquisitely scented25 "
One two-ounce bottle of White Vaseline.....25 "
$1.10
Or for postage stamps any single article at the price named. On no account be persuaded to accept from your druggist any Vaseline or preparation therefrom unless labelled with our name, because you will certainly receive an imitation which has little or no value. Chesebrough Mfg Co, 24 State St, New York.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 326 pages; cloth, $1.00.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

Physicians Couldn't Cure Him.
SEDAMSVILLE, Hamilton Co., O., June, 1889.
One bottle of Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic cured me entirely, after physicians had tried it unsuccessfully for 8 months to relieve me of nervous debility. W. HUENNEFELD.

Best of All.
CHICAGO, May, 1888.
I consider it my duty to recommend to all sufferers of nervous diseases Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son, now 15 years of age, was suffering for 4 years from epilepsy to such an extent that no remedy seemed to even relieve the attacks, but after using only 5 bottles of Koenig's Nerve Tonic he had but one slight attack. I make this statement out of gratitude and with the desire to make this best of all remedies better known
T. STEIN, 321 22d St.

It is a great pleasure to the undersigned to whom the above circumstances are well known, to certify to the truth of the facts as stated above.
L. KLING,
Pastor of Lutheran Evang. Salem Church,

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.
This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Kœnig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the
KOENIG MEDICINE CO.,
50 Wes. Madison, cor. Clinton St., CHICAGO, ILL.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.
Price $1 per Bottle. 6 Bottles for $5.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIII., No. 36. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MAY 21, 1891. WHOLE No. 1,099.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Send all business letters relating to the paper to THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.... 1
Personal Statement and Resignation..... 8
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Religion and the Secret Societies..... 1
Ends and Methods..... 2
SELECTED:
A Stronghold of Secret Societies..... 3
N. C. A. ANNUAL MEETING:
Report of Proceedings.. 3
Report of Board of Directors..... 4
Publisher's Report..... 5
THE CONFERENCE:
Report of Proceedings.. 5
LITERATURE..... 6
CORRESPONDENCE:
Gaelic in Boston; Political Anti-secrecy; Another word for Politics; Pith and Point..... 6
THE N. C. A..... 7
AGENTS AND LECTURERS.... 7
SecretSocietiesCondemned 7
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 9
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 9
THE HOME.....10
TEMPERANCE.....11
BIBLE LESSON.....11
RELIGIOUS NEWS.....12
NEWS OF THE WEEK.....13
MARKETS.....13
HOME AND HEALTH.....14
FARM NOTES.....15
BUSINESS.....16

See pages 7 and 16 for premium offers.

In order to give our readers a view of the Conference and annual meeting at the first moment, reports of the proceedings of both days have the space this week. Next week will appear the remainder of the annual reports and some of the Conference addresses.

The British Parliament has another case of expulsion. A Captain Verney conspired against the virtue of a young governess, and when the government representative moved that the fellow could no longer be member of the House of Commons, the opposition seconded it, and it was agreed to in "absolute silence." Following the cases of Parnell and Sir Charles Dilke, it would appear that the social purity reform is reaching into the ranks of the gentry where it is most needed. The good people of England should make it impossible that there should ever again be such a rake as the Prince of Wales.

A sectarian rupture is threatened between the societies formed for young Christian workers. The Christian Endeavor societies began without any denominational peculiarity. But the Epworth League took off the young Methodists and has 300,000 members, and the Baptists have their Young People's Union. Last week the League met in St. Louis and voted down a sectarian resolution, after a sharp debate, that would have cut off the Christian Endeavor Society. Many pastors think these societies helpful to the churches, but if they become mere sect-machines our dear young people would do better to come back into the churches and be satisfied to work in the old lines.

The Chicago and Northwestern railway company has always been liberal in its dealing with the secret labor societies among its employes. It has never permitted a strike to continue more than an hour or two, but has yielded to the demand of the men. The switchmen's lodge finally got to be greater than the company and had its own way most provokingly. The trainmen were involved in the quarrel and the company took advantage of the general disturbance to discharge all the switchmen on its main lines. The men held meetings with their lodge bosses and gave up the fight. The Catholic News must be supported by these switchmen. It strikes out for them hotly. "What do the bloated stockholders of this grinding and oppressive corporation," it says, "care what suffering and affliction is imposed upon the families of those poor, hardworking men by the cruel act of the company?" In taking up the switchmen's quarrel the News shows itself capable of espousing a most unjust cause.

A remarkable convention meets in Cincinnati this week, called by the Farmers' Alliance and other labor agitators. Will it evolve a second "third party" is the question. It need not be feared in any general issue by the old parties. It is made up of too diverse elements to hold long together. Like Nebuchadnezzar's image, the brittle mixture of iron and clay is here found in the primitive, the bottom elements of society—the "mudsills" of our fathers. The alliances, "Knights," greenbackers, grangers, Bellamyites, Henry Georgeites, etc., etc., are not likely to combine in any dangerous way for our politicians. These men urge some measures that are important, but they neglect others of infinitely greater moment.

The Scotch-Irish Congress, which closed at Louisville, Ky., Sabbath evening with an old-fashioned Covenanters' meeting, was a unique gathering. Dr. John Hall of New York preached the sermon, and Psalms 100, 23, 46 and 68 were lined out, explained and sung, and no organ with its "kist o' whistles" marred the effect of the grand congregational chorus. Dr. Hall, whc last year bore the greetings of the congress to their brethren in Ireland, said during the meeting that he had frequently returned to Ireland in his twenty-four years' residence in America, and he never saw Ulster present such a look of prosperity as last year. He thought Ireland did not so much need home rule as to educate her people and inspire them with the thoughts, purposes and convictions which have made the United States blessed.

The German section of our new Chicago mayor was on the under side during the election. It has now swung around into the light and it is not a pleasant spectacle. We believe, indeed, that multitudes of our excellent German-American citizens will deny that Hempstead Washburne at all represents the Germans in respect to the saloons. A notorious rowdy wanted to open a saloon in one of the South Side residence streets last year. Even Cregier hesitated and put off his friend before the vigorous protests of the citizens. But our nice new mayor makes no scruples, but gave a license to that very saloon in the name of a West Side brewer last week. He says, moreover, that it don't make any difference about the man or the place; every application for a saloon in proper form he will grant. Our Republican citizens begin to realize that they should not put their trust in princes.

The Cynosure has made little mention of Dr. Lorimer, the Grand Orator and champion of the lodge, since his return from Europe. He remained in this city but two or three weeks, long enough to preach a funeral sermon, lauding the Masonry of Norman T. Gassette, when he left us for Tremont Temple, Boston. He will find in that city, thank God, a less kindly atmosphere, in respect to his Masonic denial of Christ, than here. The evidence of the letter, signed by several of the most eminent Baptist pastors of that city, to the Conference last week is enough. An eminent evangelist who is familiar with Dr. Lorimer's church here, declares that it is stranded on false doctrines and false ideas of Christianity; and that God has given the man who has been preaching them into this condition several warnings, that he must cease trying to serve God and mammon and preach Christ only. The last British-American Citizen of Boston indicates that these warnings have not been heeded. It charges Dr. Lorimer with bearing "maliciously false" testimony against Queen Victoria.

Mr. F. W. Gooch, Y. M. C. A. secretary in Quebec, Canada, writes earnestly to the Young Men's Era, the Y. M. C. A. paper of this city, protesting against the Association attempting to rival the world as a promoter of amusements for young people. He says: "Far be it from me, or any association workers to want to represent the Christian life as something gloomy, but if the Young Men's Christian Association wants to be known throughout the length and breadth of this country as an institution seeking by all means to lead men into union with Jesus Christ, first and foremost, it must have done with all this tomfoolery that our associations are wasting so much energy upon, ostensibly 'to provide innocent and harmless amusement for young men' and teach, both by example and precept, that the Christian has done with these things and is united with Christ to seek to stop the thoughtless, headlong rush to eternity in which such masses of our young men are joining. As God's own people know, there is far greater and more lasting pleasure for all young men in the exclusive Christian life and work than in the mixed or semi-Christian life, and only those call it 'gloomy' who know nothing about it because they are still in the position of 1 Cor. 2: 14."

RELIGION AND THE SECRET SOCIETIES.

TRANSLATED FOR THE CYNOSURE FROM DIE BAUHUETTE. (VOL. 34, NO. 12.)

Mr. George Fritschel, cand. theol., sent me the work of Prof. Gottfr. Fritschel, "Die Religion der Geheimen Gesellschaften," Waverly, Iowa, 1890, for review, accompanied by the following letter:

LEIPZIG, Feb. 21, 1891.

DEAR SIR:—I take the liberty of handing you a work for review. Of course you will not agree with the position taken by the author and editor. What induces me to hand you this work is the conviction that you are one of those Freemasons who openly and honestly draw the consequences of what they believe. At least that is the impression I had after hearing your recent discourse before the Deutsch-Katholische (free-thinker) congregation. I had the intention to hand you this personally and to speak to you concerning this matter, but was hindered by the preparation for my journey back to America. I am convinced the same as you that it is dishonest and immoral to belong to the church (I mean the church as it is), without believing what it requires as necessary condition for membership. The clearer this is stated, the better. For this reason I would like to propose the following questions to you:

1. Is the description given here of the real essence of the secret societies, especially Freemasonry, according to your judgment adequate, correct and just?

2. Can it be defended by a moral man, if a Christian remains in communion with the lodge? I mean a Lutheran Christian who believes that Jesus Christ is true God, born of the Father in eternity, and also true man, born from the Virgin Mary, who has atoned for our sins by his death?

3. Is it so, that a true and genuine Mason must reject this?

4. Can a true genuine Mason belong to the Evangelical Lutheran church, which requires this as condition for church membership, without getting into the greatest conflict?

5. What is your judgment in regard to the challenge that such a man must accept either the Lutheran church or the lodge, but impossibly both?

6. What is the relation of Deutsch-Katholicism (free-thinkerism) and Freemasonry to character and history?

I should be glad if you would discuss these questions in reviewing this work. Respectfully,

GEORGE FRITSCHEL, cand. theol.

This work compares favorably with all Anti-masonic writings that have come to my knowledge so far, because it proceeds altogether objectively and is free from all spiteful excursions and invectives. In this respect it is really without equal. The author quotes Masonic documents and draws his conclusions entirely without passion. In case his suppositions were everywhere correct, very little could be said against his conclusions; but this is the case only in a very small degree.

The Masonic writers used by the author, as an American, are adherents to a view of the real character of Masonry which is in most cases "on a side-track," because it is tinged strongly by the subjective view of the authors.

The author finds in the Masonic order a specifically religious institution, which is a rival to the church and tends to take its place. And he was forced to reach this view if he followed the quotations from the American [Masonic] authors, who fancied to do a great service to Masonry by taking a decidedly churchly position and denying as much as possible the official, true aspect, viz., neutrality in matters of belief. Perhaps unconsciously and in good faith they have no doubt the tendency to adapt themselves respecting Masonry, to the ruling (believing) public spirit. Where this tendency occurs intentionally, it is of course immoral, and to be condemned throughout.

In short, the American Masonic writers are no reliable authority in respect to Masonry, and the author should have looked for other documents. As such, Anderson's Book of Constitutions (Old Landmarks) takes the first place; besides this the better Masonic codes come in question, whilst the views of individuals have little weight. . . . . .

Almost the only good document used is the "Hand-book of Freemasonry." Among the writings quoted are also Anti-masonic writings of Nielsen and Hengstenberg. But Nielsen fights the Swedish system (four Grand Lodges), which indeed intends to be a kind of church, and takes, in fact, a position as pseudo-Christian as it is pseudo-Masonic. It is neither church nor Freemasonry, but humbug and fraud. And who quotes Hengstenberg concerning Masonry and Christianity, should have read reasonably also the "answer of four ministers at Magdeburg," with their vindication.

The writer of the above letter (probably the editor of his father's work) has great confidence in me, doing me great honor thereby, after hearing a single sermon from me; and has, therefore, proposed a few questions to me. He presupposes my honesty and reliability in answering them. This fact shows that he presupposes a spiritual bond and moral relation between both of us, although he is perfectly aware of the different views we have in religious matters. Well, the writer is a Mason without his knowledge; he is such in fact without having the name of one. By that he concedes a fruitful discussion of important questions is possible between us, and that it is not impossible that he, the orthodox Lutheran, can learn something from me, the free-thinker. This concession justifies the existence of the Masonic order, which tends to unite all good men striving for a higher aim, irrespective of social standing, calling, nationality or creed, on a neutral basis, which disregards and never touches the peculiarities in order to cultivate purely humane interests.

The writer unconsciously acknowledges the real essence of Freemasonry also in other cases of human intercourse. If he trusts a merchant that he sells goods at reasonable rates, he deals with him without inquiring for his creed or his theoretic convictions of any kind. He will join a company for the cultivation of singing, or for social intercourse, without hesitation, if he feels the inclination, even if he knows that men of different social standing and vocation, of different political or religious views, are to be found in the same. Most naturally! The cultivation of singing and of noble sociality is connected as little with the creed of the individual as cultivation of Masonry, or as general human art of living. There exists here as well as there a justified human inclination which produces common cultivation of singing, sociality and Freemasonry. The special religious position of the individual is not damaged, if one for a time disregards it, if no one is forced in matters of conscience, but freedom of conscience and toleration is practiced. Jesus has lost nothing of his sublimity and nobility, and has given up none of his convictions by his intercourse with publicans and sinners; what damage can it do to an orthodox Lutheran, if he cultivates humane ideals in common with morally good men of various nations and churches? A centre of union is not only advisable against the division of public life, (nationality, political and religious conviction, etc.,) in order to bridge these and to put into practice the idea of general brotherhood of men on the basis of the moral law as medium for education, but it is absolutely necessary and no one can deny that it has a right of existence.

If, in spite of the neutral position of the Masonic body, one or another member mixes some of his special subjective views into his discourse and thus leaves the neutral line, then this is just as intelligible as human. By this we do not intend to justify but simply to explain the American mal-practice of mixing the Masonic position with the churchly. There is an ideal Masonry, which coincides as little with real as this is the case with Christianity and the church.

Considering the liberal bond of union by which Masonry comprehends its initiated, and the absolute toleration it practices towards their views and convictions, one can easily see, that utterances will be found in Masonic writings which will appear offensive or objectionable to the one or other, irrespective of connection, and when put upon a different line. No one can jump over his own shadow.

The author also quotes the higher degrees. All higher degrees, however, are not Masonry, but an aberration. Everywhere only such have themselves initiated in the same, as do understand Masonry, and as consider the form to be the essence, the means to the end. The craze for higher degrees is a form of insanity (quoedam in saniae forma) and all utterances of the higher degrees do not influence the pure Ancient Masonry, which consists simply of the three blue degrees. He who looks at a procession of modern Knight Templars in America, at once can see that he has not men before himself, who take and treat an earnest thing in an earnest manner, but clowns. Knight Templarism and all higher degrees do not belong into the lodge, but to the fairs and masquerades. In the best case they are a toy for grown-up children.

The title of the book is not appropriate as far as it concerns Masonry; for the lodge is no secret society, but merely a closed society. Laws, principles, history and members of the lodge are no secret.

In answer to the questions proposed in the letter:

1. The description of the real substance of Masonry given in the letter, is not correct; for the lodge being a union of minds sympathizing in common (Lessing) is neutral in regard to political and religious convictions, and it is not their object to rival the churches. The lodge is a union of common intentions, not of creed.

2. If a Christian, who sees in Jesus a supernatural being (God), remains in communion with the lodge, this is exactly as justifiable morally as if he belongs to a singing society; or if he, as Mr. G. F., makes use of a ship for passage to America, in which also Mohammedans, Jews and Turks are passengers. However, this question is hard to be answered for others, as the decision is a matter of conscience. By itself there is certainly no moral objection; but it seems to be the case subjectively, as orthodox clergymen (at least in German lodges), do not apply for admission, and occasionally attack the order in the very same way as the Ultramontane.

3. Since the lodge, as such, defends only what is common to all men, and leaves the doctrinal views of the individuals untrammelled, a genuine and true Mason is not obliged to reject the doctrines of the church. He permits each one to be saved according to his own fashion; for in intellectual matters any one may err.

4. A conflict between the dogma of the church and Freemasonry is simply impossible (cf No. 1) because the territory pertaining to Masonry only —the moral—is also that of the church.

Hereby also the alternative (5) is answered: either the Lutheran church or lodge, although, by the way, theologians of calling, as Prof. Bornemann (cf: Bittere Wahrheiten) and others, deny that the belief in the divinity of Christ or any other formulated dogma, is a requirement of the Lutheran church.

6. Deutsch Katholicism (Free-thinkers) and Masonry are separate branches. Among the founders of free-thinker congregations there were indeed Freemasons (as Rob. Blum, Wigard and others) who were not without influence upon those, but there is no direct connection of the two. Both have in common: that they permit freedom of conscience and inquiry; that they choose their own officers; that they require simply moral disposition and moral life, but no creed. The essence of free-thinkerdom is older than the organization of the Masonic order (1717), as it was already extant in the congregations of the Waldensese, or the Bohemian Brothers, in those of the Socinians, and in the original Christian congregations before the conquering of now ruling party (the Catholic) crushed the minority.

In the preface of the above work, it is said: "The opposition against the secret societies must be seen more and more clearly as necessary and insurpassible by the Lutheran church of America and be taken up more earnestly." The Freemasons have an easy victory in this fight against windmills. In what the Catholic church since 1737 (first bull against Masonry) has not succeeded, the Lutheran will never accomplish. This opposition starts from a wrong supposition, namely, that the church in first line must defend its own special creed. It disregards two things: 1, That the moral foundation is common to both institutions; 2, that the church in the state of things at our time is obliged to spare every nursery of ideal endeavors and to muster its whole strength against the common enemy of all ideal factors, absolutely irreligious materialism which has turned from all higher things in thought and actions; an enemy which the Lutheran church must attack in the same manner as Masonry. If Jesus says: "He, who is not against, is for me," it does not suit the church ill to do likewise; and if he desires his disciples to be known by their fruits rather than by saying, "Lord, Lord," then the Lutheran church may leave the Masonic lodges undisturbed and may rather sweep before its own door. Even in regard to orthodoxy things stand bad in the same, so that it might do well not to forget the parable of the mote and beam.

J. G. FINDEL,
Honorary Member of the Grand Lodge of Iowa.

ENDS AND METHODS.

BY REV. W. H. ROSS.

Why should a reformer turn away from secret societies, organized to promote the reform he seeks?

Because he desires success.

But may he not reasonably hope for success through these organizations?

No.

Why?

Because in the nature of things it is impossible.

Let us look at this subject a little.

There are few readers of the Cynosure who will deny that God and Satan are both interested in the affairs of this world, and that very little can be accomplished in any direction without the aid of one or the other. Assuming this to be true, we may state our proposition thus: God favors all good objects and opposes all bad ones; Satan favors all bad objects and opposes all good ones. But God is as much opposed to bad methods as bad objects. When Satan offered Christ the kingdoms of the world if he would fall down and worship him, the end was a good one, just what he, Christ, left his throne in heaven to secure, but the method was bad and he spurned it.

God has chosen as his method, openness and sincerity; Satan as his, secrecy and duplicity. These two methods are as far apart as light and darkness, hence are characterized by those names in the Bible; and God will no more endorse Satan's methods than he will his objects.

In further statement of our proposition we have: God favors all good methods and opposes all bad ones. Satan favors all bad methods and opposes all good ones.

Let us now illustrate our proposition by applying it to the temperance reform as advocated by the Good Templars and other secret temperance orders.

God favors the reform but cannot sanction the method without doing homage to Satan, its author, which he will never do; so they can have no help from God. Satan is well pleased with the method and with the homage paid to him as its author in its adoption; but being greatly opposed to the object he can be expected to give his aid only so far as he can secure glory to himself by the popularizing of his method, and at the same time accomplish the defeat of the object by the division of the forces in its favor.

Does not the history of the temperance orders amply demonstrate the correctness of the above reasoning, when the returns in the last forty years have not proved to be a fair income upon the purely human investment that has been made?

Briefly stated, neither God or the devil will help a good cause that adopts a bad method.

If, then, our object is one that has the favor of God, we do well to adopt his method, and then with his banner waving o'er us and his arm smiting the foes before us, the victory will be glorious in his own good time.

On the other hand, if our object be a bad one it would reasonably be expected we would choose a method to match and so secure the hearty co-operation of him who is the author and defender of all that is bad and the enemy of all that is good.

Rives Junction, Mich.

A STRONGHOLD OF SECRET SOCIETIES.

[From the Christian Instructor.]

We believe that this stronghold is in the Christian churches. If the ministers and people of every church would stand aloof from all secret oath-bound societies and protest against their anti-Christian character they would rapidly decline. They would lose a vast amount of moral support now drawn from the church. It would check the increase of membership in the lodge now drawn from the same source. Secrecy would also lose one of its favorite arguments of defence. "Why," says one, "Masonry cannot be a bad institution; for Rev. Dr. Famosus is a member of the lodge, and is away above the Royal Arch degree, and if there were anything inconsistent with morals and religion he surely would not remain in the lodge." That is the way apologists and lodgemen talk, and the simple believe, and many are ensnared. A friend told me a few days ago, this: "The presiding elder of the M. E. church, Rev. Richard Blank, riding with our young pastor, said, 'We are not allowed to ask men to join the Masons, but you would find it a great advantage to join them.'" Surely a bishop would not encourage a young minister to enter such fellowship if there were anything wrong in it! Those not acquainted with the cabalism and intrigues of the world believe the plausible statement. But such reasoning is very fallacious and inconclusive. By that kind of argument you can prove the worst institutions respectable and justifiable; for nearly all corrupt institutions like to draw in a few of a better class of men to give character to their juntos.

Not that any lodge wants ministers and other Christians as members, because they are Christians, but to give the lodge a fair character in the opinion of the uninitiated. It has a great influence with some to say that the Rev. Dr. Augustus Blattergoul is a member of the lodge, and many of his church members are acquainted with its sublime mysteries. Of course, what the august prelate may do, everybody may do. Hence a favorable opinion is formed; but an opinion based, not on any knowledge of the true character of the lodge, but merely on the fact that a certain man belonged to it, is a very unreliable evidence of its goodness and Christian character. There may be a good man in the Church of Rome, but that does not prove that she is not anti-Christian. There may be a bad man in the church, but that does not prove that Christianity is a bad institution. However deceptive that kind of reasoning may be, it shows that the church is a prop to the lodge.

We do not say that a man cannot be a Christian and belong to the lodge, for a real Christian may do some things damaging both to himself and the church. But we think that a professor who can join the lodge and join in deistical worship with skeptics, unbelievers of every grade, the profane, the Jew, the Brahmin and Mormon, does not manifest a high standard of piety and spiritual life. Such a man can scarcely distinguish between Christ and Belial. It seems very strange that a minister of Christ should join the lodge to get support from the world and draw around him an influence that is only earthly and carnal; but there is no doubt of the fact. Some denominations are largely controlled by the lodge.

Our whole country is covered as with a network of secret societies, and they are quenching the spiritual life of the churches. When a young man joins the lodge before he joins the church, he is not very likely to join the church. The lodge becomes his church. If he joins the lodge after he joins the church, he is likely to be of little account to the church afterwards. Observation confirms this. The influence of the lodge may account, in part, for the fact that so many of our young men have no church connection. There is no doubt that the church to-day is one of the strongholds of secrecy. The church is using the lodge to gain its ends, and the lodge is using the church to give it a name and moral support. If the real character and spirit of the lodge were generally known, few ministers would have the boldness to join them. The fruit of this alliance between the church and the lodge is infidel in its tendency. "He that is not for me is against me." Whatever the avowed or real design of the various clubs and associations, the result is irreligious. Any attempt at a compromise between Christ and Belial ends in infidelity and atheism.

One of the boldest advocates of socialism said, "Man is the religion of the coming age." The tendency of the age is to secularism, and religion is a sort of anthropology rather than theology. Even in the hymns of the church there are evidences of this, for many hymns are mere doggerel, and tend more to the vanity of the creature than the praise and glory of God. They remind us of the man who said, "I thank thee that I am not as other men," etc. But it is not the design of this brief paper to discuss the question of secrecy in general, but to call attention to the one point, viz., that the church is one of the strongholds of the lodge. This is a sad fact, and the church suffers in spiritual life and power. The church is a mighty power when she lives and works within God's covenant, for then all the power of an omnipotent God is pledged for her triumph. "O that my people had hearkened unto me, and Israel had walked in my ways! I should soon have subdued their enemies and turned my hand against their adversaries." Ps. 81: 14.

The greatest enemies of the church are within her, and not without her. No enemy can do her serious injury so long as she lives, believes and walks within the covenant. But when she departs from truth and faithfulness the Philistine and Assyrian are at her gates. But this unnatural alliance cannot always last. The church must and will shake herself loose from all unhallowed associations. "Every tree which my heavenly Father hath not planted shall be rooted up." The time will come when Christians will be ashamed to confess that they are in sworn fellowship with skeptics and worshipers of Baal.

Christ put his disciples on their guard against improper oaths. Swearing by the temple and by the altar and by one's head, etc., seem to have been very common then, as in our day. "Swear not at all," said he, "neither by heaven; for it is God's throne; nor by the earth; for it is his footstool; nor by Jerusalem; for it is the city of the great King; neither shalt thou swear by thy head, because thou canst not make one hair white or black." Jesus of course referred to the common profane use of oaths. The authorized, solemn oath for confirmation as an end of all strife, by God's appointment was not declared unlawful, but the unhallowed appeal by oath. It is found generally true that the more free men are in the use of the oath on all occasions, the less reliable their word becomes. Those who fear not to profane the oath will not fear to violate the truth. The profane swearer and the liar are in the same list. They belong to the same class.

The training many get in secret orders prepares them for treating the oath as a light matter. The oaths they take to conceal the doings of the lodge are profane in their nature, not being administered by lawful authority, nor for a lawful purpose. They are ensnaring, as they require concealment before the nature of a thing can be known. He who is willing to take such an oath manifestly does not have any proper fear of an oath to start with, and the oftener he repeats it the less he will think of its sanctity.—Christian Instructor.

N. C. A. ANNUAL MEETING.

REPORT OF PROCEEDINGS.

The annual business meeting of the National Christian Association was called to order promptly at the appointed hour, and Elder J. L. Barlow of Richmond, Ill., called to the chair. Rev. E. L. Harris of Delavan, Wis., offered prayer. On announcement by the Secretary that the Directors had been unable to conclude their annual report because of sickness among their number, but that if a short recess could be taken by the Association, the Board could complete its work, a recess was ordered.

Business being resumed, Elder Barlow asked to be excused from occupying the chair as the noise of the street prevented his hearing readily. Rev. Alexander Thomson was therefore elected temporary chairman.

The report of the Board of Directors was read by the Secretary, Rev. E. R. Worrell, and was approved. W. B. Stoddard, Washington agent, being present, made some explanation of his report, which showed a good condition of the Washington property.

The report of the Treasurer, W. I. Phillips, was then presented and briefly discussed and adopted. The report of the auditors was also adopted with their recommendations. The Association voted that J. H. Zearing, Jerome Howe and Ezra A. Cook be the committee to report on the re-valuation of N. C. A. property in this city and elsewhere and report before adjournment.

The report of the Corresponding Secretary being read, was received and approved. Committees on nominations and resolutions were appointed: Prof. H. A. Fischer, Rev. B. F. Worrell and Rev. E. R. Worrell on the first, and Pres. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. W. W. Ames, Geo. W. Clark on the other.

The report of the publisher of the Cynosure was read and adopted. The correspondence of the anniversary was read by the Corresponding Secretary. Letters full of enthusiasm, zeal and good counsel were read from J. A. Conant of Connecticut, Rev. C. H. Abbott of Tennessee, Rev. M. A. Gault of Iowa, J. W. Wood of Wisconsin, Rev. Edward Hildreth of California, Hon. S. C. Pomeroy of Washington City, Mrs. A. E. Stoddard of Boston, Mrs. L. C. Capwell of New York, Rev. Henry Cogswell of Washington, Rev. Jas. Travis of Illinois, Mrs. S. B. Allis of New York, Rev. H. H. Hinman, Rev. S. C. Kimball of New Hampshire, S. A. Pratt of Worcester, Mass., Rev. A. J. Chittenden of Kentucky. These letters with others which had been received be referred to the editors of the Cynosure for publication with the names of all who had written.

The nominating committee brought in a majority and minority report. The latter was received and the clerk instructed to cast the ballot of the body for the officers nominated, who were elected as follows:

President, Rev. Alexander Thomson.
Vice-president, Elder J. L. Barlow.
Recording Secretary, Mrs. E. A. Cook.
Corresponding Secretary and Treasurer, W. I. Phillips.
Auditors: E. Whipple, J. L. Reber, H. A. Fischer.
Directors: T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, Jerome Howe, J. P. Richards, Alex. Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell, Edgar Wylie.

Recess was then voted, but before a closing prayer by Prof. E. Whipple, George W. Clark of Detroit, said a word of ringing good cheer and sang an old-time song.

In the afternoon, after prayer by Elder J. L. Barlow, Rev. C. Bender of Mendota, Ill., and Rev. William Beers of Van Orin, Ill., were invited to sit as corresponding members.

Attention was then given to reports from the district agents. Those from Rev. J. P. Stoddard of Boston, and W. B. Stoddard of Washington City, and C. F. Hawley of the central district, were read or given in person. The Association voted to approve these reports heard and the work of the agents, including that of Rev. S. F. Porter of the College work, and gave them hearty thanks for their self-denial and success. Their reports were referred for publication.

The following new members were then elected: Rev. C. Bender of Mendota, Ill.; C. G. F. Miller, Clay, Pa.; Rev. D. W. Wise, Wheaton, Ill.; Wm. Haverstock, Zanesville, Ind.; Rev. James Brewer, Wheaton, Ill.; J. H. Zearing, Chicago.

The report of committee on re-valuation of property was read, accepted and referred to Board of Directors. The report did not change the old valuation of the Carpenter and Washington buildings. A resolution to modify it in this respect, by an increase of these valuations, was lost after some discussion. The report reads:

Your committee on re-valuation of property recommend that the Chicago and Washington property remain as now valued; that the Dakota and Kansas farms be valued at what the Association has offered to sell them for; that the actual value of book and tract plates, as well as the actual value of the items in the Suspense account reported by the Treasurer, be carefully estimated and the amount of their deterioration in each case be entered on the Treasurer's books. This committee are unanimously of the opinion that it is wiser to underestimate than overestimate the value of the property of the Association.

The committee on resolutions reported as follows:

1. We have been greatly gratified by the reports made respecting the progress of the past year and think that the thanks of all friends of our cause are due the editors of our paper and the officers of our Association for their faithful and successful labors.

2. That we believe the triumph of our cause to be as sure as the victory of truth; that the atheism, infidelity, favoritism, and lawlessness promoted by secret organizations must finally cease and the civil liberty and the Christian faith which are antagonized by them must prevail.

3. That we mutually pledge to each other and to God such labors as we may be able to perform for the establishing of the church of Jesus Christ and overthrow of Freemasonry, Odd-fellowship, and all similar anti-Christian institutions.

4. That we favor the continuance of the committee on an international conference of Christians respecting the secret lodge system.

5. In removing from the roll of our active members and friends of our cause the names of brethren M. R. Britten, Wm. Johnston, J. P. Lytle, A. C. Hand, R. J. Williams, Daniel Brown, and C. C. Foote, recently deceased, we desire to testify to their lovable Christian character, their unswerving faithfulness to the truth, and to convey to their surviving relatives the assurance of our sympathy in this our mutual affliction.

Responding to the resolutions, George W. Clark spoke with strong feeling on the life of Rev. C. C. Foote. He said that he first met Bro. Foote on the battlefield almost fifty years ago. This was at an Abolition conference in Rochester, New York. Our hearts beat together, and hand joined hand. Bro. Foote was a fighter. He was no time-server; never dodged; never flinched. He was always ready,—a master of debate. I never knew him vanquished in a discussion on the Abolition question. From his earnestness, his devotion, his unsparing criticism, he sometimes made enemies. But in soul he was lovely, kind-hearted as a woman. On all questions of religious reform we were one in heart. In that early time Dr. James C. Jackson, Col. Chaplin, C. C. Torrey, Bro. Foote and myself formed a band of Abolition agitators. We visited together various parts of the country. Together we visited Plattsburg, N. Y., and the pulpits were refused to some of the company, but Bro. Foote was accepted because he was a minister. He went into the pulpit and took the text, "Remember those that are bound as bound with them." It was a most powerful sermon, and those who hoped to escape Abolitionism, thought they had chosen its most powerful advocate. The speaker told of his visit to Bro. Foote on the last Sabbath of his life, and spoke of the pathetic communion of soul between them. He sang the song they sang together that day, and a few days after at the funeral of the brother of his soul.

After the resolutions Prof. H. A. Fischer read the following letter from ex-Pres. J. Blanchard, who was detained at home from the annual meeting:

WHEATON, Ill., May 12, 1891.

To the National Christian Association,

DEAR BRETHREN IN CHRIST:—My name has stood as editor of the Christian Cynosure for twenty-three years; and the public press has admonished me that I am fourscore years old. Thanking the Association and its Board of Directors for their uniform kindness, and not wishing to obstruct their endavors for the enlarged usefulness of the paper, I respectfully decline re-election to the editorship; and without wishing unduly to influence your action, I respectfully recommend to your favorable consideration Mr. H. L. Kellogg for the office of editor. And as Mr. Kellogg's family and his own health and vigor require a vacation, I suggest that he be allowed six months or more absence from his post.

Very respectfully yours in Christ,

J. BLANCHARD.

The assistant editor also presented a communication of similar import, regretting that the prolonged ill-health of his wife made it necessary to remove with her to another climate, and he desired either to be released for a time, or definitely to close his work on the Cynosure, whichever the Association might elect. After a full discussion of the situation, which was generally unexpected in respect to the senior editor, and after many expressions of gratification for the excellent work of the latter, both editors were re-elected with practical unanimity, and details of necessary absence referred to the Board of Directors.

The reappointment of the district and field agents was unanimously made and the Board instructed to arrange for the salaries of each.

Rev. W. W. Ames remarked that he brought to the Association the Christian greetings of Capt. Wm. Wilson of Menomonie, Wis., who sent by his hand $40 for the fund to supply the Cynosure to colored preachers. Bro. Wilson is now in his 85th year. He has always paid liberally for this cause and rejoices in every evidence of its success. The increase of lodgery he believes to be a good indication, showing that a revolution in this enormous and unholy system approaches. Mr. Ames asked the prayers of the Association for this aged friend, that he might be cheered and comforted by the presence of the Spirit in his extreme age. It was voted that the chairman communicate to Capt. Wilson the thanks of the body for his liberality and for his kind remembrances.

After prayer by George W. Clark, the meeting adjourned.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Your Board of Directors has held seven meetings during the past year and on the following dates: June 23, July 24, Sept. 20, Dec. 22, Dec. 29, in 1890, and Apr. 4, and May 9, 1891. . . . At the second meeting the resignation of Mr. Jno. Gardner was presented and accepted. Subsequently, on recommendation of the Corresponding Secretary, Mr. W. W. Wait was elected to fill the vacancy made by Mr. Gardner's resigning, but the gentleman never met with the Board. . .

The financial condition of the Association was such when the present Directorate was appointed that a change of methods, at least so far as concerned the payment of the salaries of those employed by the Association, was found necessary. No definite sum was pledged to any. The Treasurer was authorized to pay the salaries of editors and treasurer out of the net income of the Association pro rata, the salaries being nominally the same as heretofore.

As another prudential measure the Treasurer was directed to select and set aside the best of the Publishing House notes, the aggregate of the principal of which would equal the amount of trust funds held by the N. C. A. Further, marketable property of the Association, as the house and lot in St. Louis, Mich., farms in Dakota and Kansas, and one negotiable note have been offered for sale, though no sale has as yet been effected. Pres. C. A. Blanchard, though hard pressed with many duties, consented to act as our Financial Secretary, and the columns of the Christian Cynosure were placed at his disposal so far as he might see fit to use them in an effort to increase the income of the Association. The outcome of the efforts made in this direction presents a cause for thanksgiving to God. The expenses of the Association have been met and the salaries paid in full to April 1, 1891.

Your Board has followed the same general plan with field agents as that above indicated. No definite salary was pledged to any. Rev. J. P. Stoddard was appointed N. C. A. agent for New England, and has been working during the year with the auxiliary association located in that section. Help was offered in the way of Cynosure subscriptions to the extent of $50.00 per month, if taken on the field. . . .

The faithful and able agent of this Association, W. B. Stoddard, made a proposition to your Board concerning the control of the Washington building and N. C. A. work in the region of that city, which was accepted and our work thus continued there. Rev. C. F. Hawley was assigned to Ohio and westward to Iowa, as a field, with the usual aid to agents in Cynosure subscriptions and $400.00 and traveling expenses, if collected on his field, the contributions from Iowa being pledged to him until his salary should be paid. Mr. Hawley was also asked to work out New York State annuity funds. Rev. S. F. Porter was requested to work as heretofore among the schools of the South. At the Board meeting held in Sept., 1890, the contract made by Corresponding Secretary Phillips with M. H. Nichols as N. C. A. agent on the Pacific Coast was approved.

The Board has made efforts to secure full and regular reports from all agents working in the interests of the Association, and with partial success. The Finance Committee was appointed to examine these reports. The need of more continuous and systematic lecture work by some of our agents has been evident, and the Board has urged that lectures be pre-arranged by correspondence with friends of our cause.

By action of your Board the Treasurer has been organized to open on his books the following funds: the "Permanent Fund," the interest only of which is to be used in the work of the Association; the "Current Expense Fund," the "Southern Ministers' Fund," the "Reading Room Fund" and the "Free Tract Fund."

The report of the Committee on Buildings made to the Board shows an income of $1,114.11 from Carpenter Building, or $65.98 less than for the same period last year. Taxes $327.22 or $35.35 more than last year with a special assessment of $47.95 for paving alley in rear of building. Insurance $7,500.00 for three years at cost of $1,12.50. No repairs to speak of. Concerning the Washington Building no itemized report has yet been received by the Board. At our last meeting a letter was read from W. B. Stoddard, the agent in charge, in which it was stated that all the rooms of the building, except those occupied by the agent, had been rented during the year. The general plan of W. B. Stoddard has been to use income of the building to pay the amount $200.00 pledged by him to this Association; further, to keep his salary at the same figure it was last year, and to use whatever balance there might be in repairs on the building. He states that some painting has been done and that the building is in a good condition.

The Cynosure will no doubt have its own report to present to you. The Board has, however, advised with the publisher, H. L. Kellogg, as to ways and means of increasing the subscription list. Miss E. E. Flagg has been retained as contributor to its columns at her former salary, paid on the pro rata basis.

The fourth Annual Christian Conference on the Secret Lodge System appointed, has taken some time and attention of your Directors, but more especially has the care of it come upon the Corresponding Secretary, W. I. Phillips.

But two new publications have been issued during the year, viz., a tract entitled, "A Vast Difference," and a sermon in pamphlet form, Rev. B. A. Carradine of the M. E. church of St. Louis, entitled, "Secret Societies—Are They a Blessing or a Curse?"

Two special committees appointed by the Board, one on Revision of By-Laws, and one on International Conference to be held at the Columbian Exposition in 1893, have made no final report.

With gratitude for the good hand of God upon us; with sorrow that his work cannot be carried on in a larger and more generous scale, we close this report and our year's work. It has been one of trial and care, and in some respects, one in which the faithfulness of those who believe in our reform has been put to test. Yet there have been many things of encouragement. We are sure that if our cause cannot be now put on the lists of benevolent causes of the churches, individuals must and can be found among poor men who will contribute annually to the current expenses of this Association. The connection with the churches in such form, that financial support can be obtained from them with little or no effort to us, cannot now be effected. Individuals must be appealed to, and not the wealthy ones alone. Here, as in all the Lord's work, the financial burden must be borne by the poor.

We recommend that especial attention be given by you in your deliberations to the future financial management of the Association.

—The eighth annual convention of the Women's General Missionary Society of the United Presbyterian Church of North America was called to order Wednesday morning at Pittsburgh, Pa., by the president, Mrs. J. P. Cowan, of Indianapolis.

CYNOSURE PUBLISHER'S REPORT.

JUNE 1, 1890, TO MAY 1, 1891.

It is a matter of sincere gratitude to God that another year of good work by this important agency of our reform may be reported. At the request of the Board of Directors, I was requested to add to my editorial duties those of publisher, in the redivision of the work at headquarters made necessary last year. The change was made July 1st, 1890. My report will cover, however, so far as possible, the business from June 1st.

The receipts have been during these eleven months from:

Subscriptions by cash	$2,462.14
" " agents	1,035.69
		$3,497.83
Advertisements, Lord and Thomas contract	324.75
Special	71 74
		396.49
Receipts from funds		822.14
" from N. C. A. book advertisements		615.38
		$5,332.84
Expenses for same time:
Composition	$1,919.62
Paper	978.35
Printing and mailing	645.30
		3,543.27
Postage	167.80	167.80
Electrotype plates and cuts		27.00
Special printing		55.70
Salaries of editors and contributors		1,516.43
Salary of clerk		213.00
		$5,503.20

The amount of subscriptions taken by the different agents respectively are as follows: C. F. Hawley, $204.20; M. H. Nichols, $51; J. P. Stoddard, $114.49; W. B. Stoddard, $666.

The different funds from which the Cynosure has been sent gratuitously are the Reading Room, the Southern Ministers' and the Cynosure Extension funds. The first column represents the amount on hand and paid into each fund during the year, the second the amount drawn out for subscriptions, and the third the amount remaining on hand:

R. R. fund	$ 323.90	$154.13	$169.87
S. M. fund	730.72	601.25	129.47
C. X. fund	597.02	66.76	530.26
	$1,651.64	$822.14	$829.60

The whole number of papers issued during this time is 170,800. We are now printing 4,000 copies weekly, an increase of 500 since last July, with means at hand for a yet further increase from the Southern fund. The Board established the Reading Room fund last July, and from this about 140 copies have been sent to college and Y. M. C. A. reading rooms since the middle of September last. Generous gifts to the Southern Ministers' fund have enabled us to send the paper to 465 pastors of colored churches and teachers of colored schools. The legacy of Philo Carpenter by his daughters, Mrs. Cheney and Mrs. Hildreth, sent three hundred copies at one time. Another donation of $100 from a large-hearted friend in Wisconsin, E. McNaughton, was this week reported in the record of donations.

Our advertising contract with Lord & Thomas was renewed last January for two years at the same rate, $400 per year. The Cynosure has been advertised widely in some of our smaller exchanges, without expense, except for a few electrotypes. We have also secured a number of exchange advertisements. The value of this advertising at usual rates would have been from $80 to $100.

Respecting the future increase of our list, the friends of our reform need to be continually reminded that there is no single agency so important and absolutely essential to the reform. This has been the uniform testimony of those workers who have been most intimate with the whole field. A large increase in the circulation should be the continual desire and labor of all who sincerely wish the promotion of the reform; for this is at once prophecy as well as register of success. The enthusiasm of the earlier years of the reform for this result, has been in many instances manifested during the past year. Let it grow; and let us by every honorable means increase it. The paper should not only be esteemed a record of the reform, from week to week, but it should become a source of income, supplying funds to send agents into new fields and to otherwise promote our cause. It is so indirectly now; it should be so manifestly and immediately.

The excellent external appearance of the Cynosure has been maintained fairly through the year. During the winter an inferior quality of paper was furnished us for a few weeks. This was because the destruction of their mills by fire compelled the paper company, of whom we purchase, to supply us from the market.

Of the editorial work on the paper I may speak an unofficial word. The senior editor has during the past year, in my opinion, given us some of the best work of his life. Its uniform excellence, since his recovery a year ago, has been a source of deep gratification, to myself at least; and as I have contrasted the Cynosure with many other papers, I have been truly thankful to God for giving him strength of body and mental vigor in his extreme age to continue a work to which so much of his life has been devoted.

HENRY L. KELLOGG.

THE CONFERENCE.

THE PROCEEDINGS.

The Conference, for which much preparation has been made during the past months, met promptly at the time appointed, in Apollo Hall, the smaller hall of the Central Music Hall building, where the day sessions were held. The hall was convenient, comfortable, retired and ample for ordinary meetings.

The devotional meeting which opened the Conference was conducted by Rev. J. A. Collins, the editorial representative in Chicago of the Christian Instructor. The meeting was continued earnestly to the full limit of time allotted. At its close the Conference was organized by the election of W. L. Enlow of Iowa to the chair, and of W. B. Stoddard of Washington City as secretary. Committees were also selected, as follows: On enrollment, F. G. Wilson, A. G. Carr. On resolutions, Revs. W. W. Ames, C. Bender, W. C. Mullinix. On plan of work, Revs. Alex. Thomson, J. A. Collins, — De Young, N. Nelson, C. B. Whittaker.

The first prepared address of the Conference was then presented by Rev. Alexander Thomson of Bartlett, Ill., on "The Temperance Orders," which was well received, and was followed by the most interesting discussion of the day, in which Mary Allen West, editor of the Union Signal; W. I. Phillips, N. C. A. Secretary; Rev. S. H. Swartz, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church, Chicago; Elder J. L. Barlow, Rev. W. W. Ames, Rev. J. A. Matlack, of Ravenswood, Ill.; and Rev. E. R. Worrell of Washington Heights.

Rev. F. D. Christie of this city and Rev. J. D. Galloway of Vernon, Wis., were not present to take the part assigned them in the program.

It was a great disappointment to the committee of arrangements for the Conference that Rev. Dr. Carradine of St. Louis, could not be present. But in securing Prof. D. A. Straw of Wheaton to read a portion of the famous sermon that has made Dr. Carradine's name familiar in thousands of homes, the committee added an excellent part of the program. Prof. Straw interpreted the address excellently, and the author himself would have enjoyed hearing his discourse again. The benediction by Rev. A. Ethridge closed the exercises of the morning.

The afternoon session began before the formal opening with a hundred cordial handshakings, which even the dinner hour had barely intermitted. Our dear old singer, Clark, like a perennial fountain, overflowed with song again and again. Nearly eighty rough winters have reached his hearing and even his voice, but his enthusiasm is untouched by frost of January or fire of July. Rev. J. B. Whittaker of Michigan was selected as chairman for the afternoon, and Elder Rufus Smith, the cosmopolitan missionary, offered prayer.

The address of Rev. C. F. Hawley, N. C. A. district agent, on "The Industrial Orders," was a considerate and carefully written paper, which was well received by the Conference. He was to have been followed by Rev. Wm. Dillon of Dayton, Ohio, editor of the Christian Conservator, and there was unfeigned disappointment at his unexpected absence, which, it was afterward learned, was unavoidable. The gap in the exercises was closed up and Rev. C. D. Trumbull of Morning Sun, Iowa, was introduced. His topic was, "What should be the attitude of Christian Ministers toward Secret Societies?"

Before beginning his address, Bro. Trumbull referred to brief remarks made by ex-Pres. J. Blanchard in the morning prayer meeting, in which he referred to the Covenanters in terms of commendation. He had the honor of representing that Christian body, and wished that a larger number from their church were present. He felt constrained to answer the remark that Covenanters held some points of conscience that were not points of conscience. It is true that while they hold some points which are not matters of conscience to most men, yet they are so to them. Their motto is for Christ's Crown and Covenant, and they believed in recognizing Christ everywhere, and could not therefore be found in the secret lodge where Christ was shut out.

Dr. Trumbull's address was heartily applauded, and was followed by "We will speak out, we will be heard," a song by George W. Clark.

At this point a dispatch was read from Bishop Milton Wright in behalf of the United Brethren Mission Board, in session at Elida, Ohio.

The secretary was instructed to send a suitable reply. He reported afterward that, learning that the Mission Board was probably no longer in session, he would respond by letter.

The topics already presented in the afternoon were then discussed by Prof. W. G. Moorehead, D.D., of Xenia, Ohio, Theological Seminary, now lecturing before the Bible Institute connected with Mr. Moody's work; by Calvin Pritchard, editor of the Christian Worker, representing the Society of Friends; and by our "American Queen," Mother Laura S. Haviland, who spoke with such vigor, earnestness and ability that everyone forgot that she is 82 years of age, and applauded her most heartily.

The chairman, Rev. Mr. Whittaker, added a few remarks, giving his testimony against the lodges.

The report of the enrollment committee was then heard, and the committee were recommended to continue their efforts, as they had secured but eighty-five names.

Rev. W. W. Ames, from the committee on resolutions, reported, and the report was adopted as follows:

Resolved, That the importance of the reform in which we are engaged is not less than in the past, but increasingly apparent.

2. Resolved, That in the great multiplication of secret orders, while it should alarm us for the welfare of those uniting with them, we have reason to take courage; from the fact that God reigns, and that every system of evil has within it the elements of its own destruction. As the system of slavery did, so we believe the secret lodge system will destroy itself.

3. Resolved, That we cannot consistently or innocently cease our prayers and efforts, both private and public, for the triumph of this reform.

4. Resolved, That we recognize the hand of God in bringing to the front such men as Joseph Cook and Dr. Carradine, and

5. Resolved, That an earnest effort be made to place their addresses in the hands of ministers throughout the country, that through them the conscience of the professed followers of Christ may be thoroughly aroused upon this subject.

6. Resolved, That as some of the more prominent workers in this reform have recently gone to their reward, and others are doubtless soon to pass away, that we make it a matter of earnest prayer to God for the raising up of efficient leaders to take their places, and inspire the whole band of reformers with fresh zeal in the good work.

WHEREAS, This Conference learns with much satisfaction that Joseph Cook's address on Secret Disloyal Oaths is sent to 1,400 home missionaries by the Baptist Home Mission Union, the American Missionary Association, the Illinois Home Missionary Society, and the New West Commission. And

WHEREAS, The silent non-committalism of mission boards is of evil example to the missionaries, and a virtual protection of the secret lodges; therefore,

Resolved, That we will furnish Mr. Cook's address without charge to the secretaries of other boards who will send it to the missionaries in their employ. And we instruct our secretary, W. B. Stoddard, to correspond with secretaries on this subject, and report results to the public through the Cynosure.

The report of the committee on plan of work was also read and adopted. Its recommendations were:

(Continued on 12th page.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

GAELIC IN BOSTON.

BOSTON, Mass., May 11, 1891.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—I have been reading Stanley's account of his travels in Africa: his first trip to find Livingstone; the second, tracing the Congo river from its source to the Atlantic—3,000 miles—a river one and one-half times larger than the Mississippi, seven miles wide at its mouth, 900 feet deep, four miles from the sea, and thirty-five miles up the Great Eastern could moor directly to the shore; the third, establishing trade stations up the Congo on behalf of the African International Association, and the fourth, to relieve Emin Bey. The hardships, perils, privations, the courage, the faith, the enthusiasm, are the wonder and pride of our time.

When the Roman general was asked: "Would you rather be Achilles or Homer?" he replied: "Would you rather be victor in the Olympic games, or the herald who proclaims him?" It is our privilege to proclaim the victory of Christ and to call on this nation to bow to him and crown him as King of kings.

Last Tuesday evening I preached in the Scotch Presbyterian church, Rev. S. C. Gunn, pastor. He began here a little more than three years ago and has a congregation of 300. They use the Scotch version of the Psalms. The members are largely from the Provinces. They use the Gaelic tongue at part of the services. They have an audience of 500 on Sabbath. Last Sabbath evening 300 were turned away unable to get in. The pastor invited me to return and give them more reform.

On Friday evening I preached in the Charles St. A. M. E. church, Rev. R. F. Hurley, D.D., pastor. This was a very enthusiastic service. Our principles met with a hearty response.

On Sabbath evening I preached in the United Presbyterian church, Rev. John Hood, pastor. This church was built by Dr. Blakie. It is a two-story brick. I never saw a church built on that plan before. The pastor's home is on the first floor.

On Monday morning I attended the Methodist preachers' meeting in their Book-rooms. They have a beautiful hall. The paper was read by Rev. W. C. Winslow, Vice-president of the Egyptian Exploration Society, on the subject of "Moses and the Monuments of Old Egypt." He brought out many striking facts. The records on monuments discovered by the spade correspond minutely to the statements made by Moses and the prophets respecting Egypt.

On Monday afternoon I addressed the Boston W. C. T. U. This arrangement was made by one of the members, the wife of your New England secretary. Mrs. Gordon, the honored president, is one of the best women in Boston. They have a large union and are pushing the work all along the line. Bro. Stoddard is preparing to organize New England more thoroughly. He expects to begin a series of weekly public meetings next week. He has the work well in hand and startling news may be expected as the result.

J. M. FOSTER.

"POLITICAL ANTI-SECRECY."

AVALON, Mo.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—In your issue of April 30 is an article under the above caption. Permit a few words of explanation. We are not endeavoring to organize a new party. Neither Mr. Enlow nor myself were present and had no hand whatever in originating or forming the American party. Others had already adopted its platform and voted its ticket. When its candidates withdrew it was side-tracked. All efforts to move it from its tracks of '84 have proven unsatisfactory.

But political anti-secrecy is not dead, nor is it standing still. It has simply moved away from the other planks of the platform. And the Alliance and secret lodges are fast severing this question from prohibition. The Voice, not satisfied with giving a column each week to "secret political organizations," must needs devote a page to their aggrandizement, laudation and benefit. See the 8th page of April 30th. However, the strangest part is that a reformer, a non-voter, a praying anti-secretist, should ask anti-secretists to contribute their means and give their influence to lodge-ridden prohibition—endorse the movement, pay and pray for its support, but knife its candidates at the ballot-box. All this in the face of the fact that secret political partisans are scuttling the Prohibition party ship in broad daylight, not even patting it on its back to quiet its fears. Political anti-secrecy cannot now go back and drum up the various planks of the '84 platform or look up those who are giving it a secondary place. The Prohibition party leaders are now repeating the mistake of the American party men. The lodge will rule or ruin the Prohibition movement. The last campaign and the facts do not indicate that prohibition is first on the calendar. Organized labor, which is lodge in politics, has the numbers and public attention. It has more papers, more mention, and many times the political following of the Prohibitionists.

Then as to being in advance of our fellow reformers is certainly a bad mistake. Thousands are up with the events of the hour. Volunteers are coming in paltoons and brigades, ready to meet the lodge in politics, in religion, and everywhere. The American people will handle the lodge without gloves. Not only will they preach and pray as heretofore, but they must meet organized political lodgery at the polls in the Prohibition party as well as in the Republican and Democratic. There are church people enough in America to down the saloon and wipe out the liquor curse. Why don't they do it? There are reform churches enough and professed anti-secretists enough to outlaw the pagan, un-American lodge, but they don't do it. They could if they would all make it a business. The National Christian Association is doing more to call the attention of Christendom to the false worship of the Christless lodge than all the churches in the land. Half the anti-churches have no regular department in their papers against this curse of the nation, and are conducting no systematic agitation against what they are pleased to style the very ape of the Bride of Christ.

Some in every denomination and a considerable number in several are active and aggressive. They look upon this great lodge question as the all-pervading, overshadowing evil of the age. They believe that the safety of our republican government and the preservation of our holy Christian religion depends on the destruction of these dark, heathen conspiracies that are continually plotting treason against church and state. They believe that the lodge and saloon are Siamese twins, and that lodge-ridden prohibition, however conducted, must prove a poor investment and a dismal failure in the end. The very policy outlined by Mr. Gault shows that he has no faith in lodge-ridden prohibition. Instead of putting our time and money into a handicapped movement, simply to knife its candidates at the polls, let us rather turn our guns on the lodge. It is meeting nightly in the school-houses of Missouri, Iowa, and elsewhere, pushing its political interests early and late. It is idolatry, treason and despotism. Let us counsel together, and redouble our efforts, and rally to the old flag. A good letter from every out-and-out anti-secretist would be read with interest at our headquarters.

M. N. BUTLER.

ANOTHER WORD FOR POLITICS.

EL PASO, Ill.

DEAR EDITOR:—In the Christian Cynosure of April 30th, I notice an article from Rev. M. A. Gault on political anti-secrecy which takes ground against the organization of a political anti-secret party, as being premature. How much longer has the anti-secret cause to languish for the want of strength or courage to stand alone! I am an old-time anti-liquor man of more than fifty years; and what have the different branches of the temperance organization accomplished? They have merely played the part of cat's-paw for other political parties. If the two parties would wish to succeed in short order,—that is, the Prohibition and anti-secret organizations,—then by all means let them continue. We are willing to go in and work with the Prohibitionists for the common cause, but it is a poor rule that won't work both ways. Left to ourselves, I think we will come out a long way ahead of the Prohibition party, judging from the past. The Prohibition party have not only the two old parties to contend with, but a vast amount of capital in the hands of unprincipled men, which they wield with telling effect. I rejoice in the spirit of brothers Enlow and Butler, and may God prosper their righteous endeavors. We may have to wait awhile longer for victory, but the right is bound to prevail. Then having done all that we can let us stand with our loins girt about. I am standing almost entirely alone here and secretism leads the crowd.

The Christian Cynosure gives me great satisfaction and pleasure in my retirement, and I am under lasting obligations for the same. Truly yours,

J. W. THOMPSON.

PITH AND POINT.

A WORTHY PAIR.

I have not found anywhere two more devoted anti-secret reform workers than Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Park, of Alexandria, Thayer Co., Neb. Last summer in the Prohibition campaign, they arranged a series of meetings for me in their county, and I enjoyed most delightful entertainment at their home. They take the Cynosure, and send for anti-secret literature, which they wisely and industriously distribute where it will do the most good. There are very few in their town and surrounding country who have not heard the testimony on this question of these faithful witnesses for Christ. Sister Park is a child of the Guthries of Scotch Covenanter fame. She believes and practices the doctrine of the perseverence of the saints, and belongs to that class of reformers who never beat on their drum-heads the hollow sound of retreat.—M. A. GAULT.

HOW SHALL I VOTE?

Shall we vote for men that belong to secret societies when they are nominated by the Prohibition party, or vote for the old party in our county? I want to take the paper as long as I live. I have been a Anti-mason ever since I was a boy, and give away your papers all around. I distributed Cook's speech also.—A. RAYMOND, Sandstone, Mich.

A GEORGIA PASTOR UNHORSES THE KNIGHTS.

I have been able to show the people here that one does not have to join the lodge to find out its secrets. They have been saying that I could not get a ritual unless I was a member of the order, but they say now that the whole thing is a fraud. I have three male members in my church who say they are forever done with the Knights of P. It cost them about $30, when they could have gotten the same thing for 25 cents. I am sure this order is dead in Macon, though there are five branches of it in the city.—J. R. MCLEAN, Macon, Ga.

THE TESTIMONY THAT CONQUERS.

I am holding forth the Word of Life in this wicked town where the churches are honey-combed with lodgery. The people of God are under the potent spell and power of the "Secret Empire," and it is hard to preach so as to accomplish good under the present surroundings. But I have been enabled to declare the whole counsel of God, and some of the "brethren" are under conviction, and I trust will soon abandon the lodge. Pray to that end. God bless you.—J. G. WOLFE, Vinita, Ind. Ter.

LITERATURE.

The New York Pioneer has changed its name, size and general make-up. It will hereafter be known as the Farmer Pioneer, and will contain eight pages, the size of Sabbath Reading, four of which will be devoted to farm interests and four to prohibition. The object of its publication is to make friends with the men of the rural districts and do its best to convince them of the necessity of stamping out the saloons by the votes of the citizens. Its price is fifty cents a year. Address Farmer Pioneer, 150 Nassau St., N. Y.

The American Garden beautifully reproduces a New Orleans scene for its frontispiece—a lily pond in that city. The fifth paper upon the economic plants of Japan is as finely illustrated as all the others have been. The attributes, culture, varieties, and possibilities of the pecan nut is the kernel of a toothsome article. Other articles on native plants, water lillies, points of merit in vegetables, irrigation of home grounds, etc., make up an entertaining number.

May, according to Vick's Magazine, is the month for spraying, and this is the horticultural era of the introduction of this method of combatting the pests of garden, orchard and vineyard. The leading article discusses this important question. A few native plants, the hepaticas and trilliums, have a passing notice as they come and go the earliest flowers of spring.

In Lyons, France, a prayer book in silk has been published. The book is not printed on silk, but the letters, Gothic letters with colored initials, is woven into the silk. The manufacture of the work took two years, and an edition of five hundred copies was made. Naturally it is very expensive, but it sells well, especially for wedding presents.

For centuries the old theological library of the University of Wuerzburg has been lost and no trace of it could be found. In recent months the bulk of the collection, some five hundred volumes and more, have been discovered in the University library of Upsala, having been taken there as booty in the Thirty Years' War.

SECRET SOCIETIES Condemned

BY THE PRESS.

United Presbyterian, Pittsburg:—Secret societies are not suited to American society, nor indeed to any society.

The Armory:—Surely the presence of a multitude of secret combinations bodes little good to the church of Christ.

Wesleyan Methodist:—Never say again that Freemasonry has no secrets. It has secrets, dark as ever reveled in the midnight caves of professional banditti, or stalked the deck of a pirate craft.

The Watchman, Boston:—Garrison fought the battle of free speech in behalf of Abolition; Pierpont waged it on the question of temperance; Colver fought it against secret societies.

Christian Standard, Cincinnati:—We know of no good work for God or humanity to the success of which secrecy is essential; and we see dangers in secret associations which every Christian should avoid.

Catholic Review, New York:—It is becoming apparent that secret, oath-bound societies are, in principle, un-American; are contrary to the whole spirit and meaning of our institutions, and are therefore dangerous to the Republic.

Baptist Weekly, New York:—There is no union which men can form, making an inner circle of self-interest and tyrannically dictating to those without it, which is not the grossest violation of every true principle of human brotherhood.

Evangelical Repository:—We charge against these organizations: first, that they contain a system of religion; and, secondly, they are devised and built up after the traditions of men, after the rudiments of this world, and not after Christ.

The New York Witness:—Any society which demands from its members a loyalty superior to their loyalty to the general interests and well-being of the community in which they live, such as the church of Rome, the Nihilists, the Mormons and the Freemasons, is dangerous to the well being of the state and should be shunned by all good men.

Journal, Indianapolis, 1880:—The Democrats are attempting to carry this State by secret societies. They hope to overcome a popular uprising by midnight meetings and by grips and passwords. ....The loyal men of Indiana will spurn their midnight methods. A State which numbers two millions of people cannot be governed by grips and passwords.

Times, Chicago, Aug. 22, 1880:—Secret societies are dangerous because young men, and others who are not for the moment fully mindful of their public duties, may be led by persuasion, under the peculiar solemnity and impressiveness of an initiation which unseats their judgment, to take oaths which are inconsistent with their duties toward the state and society, and which they may regret, in moments of reflection, that they have taken.

Public Ledger, Philadelphia:—Notwithstanding the presence of thousands of otherwise innocent men in the Masonic lodge, it is well understood that a ring within a ring runs the order, and the order in turn runs such innocent societies as the Good Templars, Red Men and nearly or quite all the so-called secret beneficiary societies.....The danger arising from such conspiracies is not imaginary but real. If the truth were known we are suffering from nothing so much as from this evil. And the worst of all is that good men who have gone into the various secret lodges are being used for ends of which they little dream.

The Advance, Chicago:—A Masonic writer in the New York Herald is quoted as saying that Masonry is "an effort to bring all mankind to a common religion; to harmonize the mysteries of Christianity, Judaism and paganism; for the most scholarly Masons hold that there is only one religion, and that religion is the worship of deity under the image of the sun." If the above is a correct enunciation of Masonic doctrine, the less Christians have to do with it the better. Indeed, it would seem to be equally inconsistent for the honest Jew to be identified with these sun-worshipers.....The inference is fair that Masonry and Christianity do not harmonize.

PREMIUMS

FOR CYNOSURE SUBSCRIBERS.

Stanley's Adventures in the Wilds of Africa.

By Hon. J. T. Headley. A graphic account of the several expeditions of Henry M. Stanley into the heart of the Dark Continent. It covers Stanley's expedition to find Livingstone, his crossing the continent and exploration of the Congo from its headwaters to the ocean, his establishment of the Congo Free State, and his last great achievement—the discovery and deliverance of Emin Pasha, in 1889. Twenty-five illustrations, 539 pages, 8vo., bound in cloth. A book of extraordinary interest to all classes of readers.

Price postpaid $1.00.

We send it free to every old subscriber who sends a new name with his renewal and $3.00. To anybody for two new subscribers for one year each. This offer is good only till June 1st, 1891.

Africa and its Explorers.

Livingstone, Stanley, and other celebrated travels and adventures in Africa. The interesting story of all the celebrated travellers in Africa, including Barth, Du Chaillu, Burton, Speke, Grant, Sir Samuel Baker, Schweinfurth, Moffat, Thomson, Livingstone, and Stanley. Naturally, it conveys more general information, and is of greater popular interest, than could be given in the narrative of any one traveller. This is a much larger book than "Stanley's Adventures." Numerous illustrations. A book every one needs to be up to the times.

We make an extraordinary offer of this book till June 1st, for three new subscribers, or for a renewal and two new names. All for one year each.

The "Uncle Tom's Cabin" of the Horse.

BLACK BEAUTY,

His Grooms and Companions.

This is the most popular book ever written on animal life. Over 100,000 sold in England and a greater number in America. Prof. Blaisdell of Beloit College has prepared a topical index.

This book is as entertaining as "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and is written with a great moral purpose,—to inculcate the principle of mercy to dumb animals. EVERY BOY SHOULD READ IT!

We will send it to every boy or girl who reads the Cynosure, if they will send us a new subscriber and $1.50 on or before June 1st, next.

BEULAH SEMINARY,

Clarksville, Mich.

A Christian School, one of the best and cheapest to be found. Methodistic in doctrine, unsectarian in spirit. Students of all classes and grades made welcome, so long as they prove themselves worthy. The course of study is practical and complete. If you wish to prepare for college or university, come to Clarksville. Vocal and Instrumental music taught by a thoroughly competent teacher. Many other special inducements. Good board at the Seminary Hall, only $2.00 per week, including room rent. Any who wish can work one hour per day, and pay $1.50 per week.

Business Department.

The Business department in this new school is no mere pretension. It is under the instruction of Prof. J. J. Sadler, a teacher who has with great success for years made a specialty of preparing young and old for Book-keeping, and Commercial calculations in every department of business; in the most thorough manner; in the least possible time; at the least possible expense.

Prof. Sadler graduated at Bryant & Stratton's Business College, many years ago, and is one of the best Commercial teachers of the State.—Over one hundred students in attendance. Circulars sent free on application. Address,

MRS. ETTA SHAW, Principal,
or PROF. J. J. SADLER, Secretary,
CLARKSVILLE, MICH.

General Washington Opposed to Secret Societies. This is a re-publication of Governor Joseph Ritner's "Vindication of General Washington from the Stigma of Adherence to Secret Societies," communicated to the House of Representatives of Pennsylvania. March 8, 1837. at their special request. To this is added the fact that three high Masons were the only persons who opposed a vote of thanks to Washington on his retirement to private life—undoubtedly because they considered him a seceding Freemason. 10cts each.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

1. Historical Sketch—National Christian Association.
3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
5. President C. G. Finney on the duty of Christians towards the Lodge.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
18. Despotic Character of Freemasonry.
19. Freemasonry, a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Nathaniel Colver, D.D., on Masonry.
33. Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
44. D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.

Chapters in American Politics.
Masonry vs. Prohibition.
Decline of the G. A. R.
Christianity and Odd-fellowship. Part 1, 4 pages; part 2, 4 pages.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. M. H. Nichols, 520 Kearney St., San Francisco, Cal.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimbal New Market.
Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.
Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Berea, Ky
Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Annawan, Ill.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)
AND OFFICE OF
The Christian Cynosure,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Bishop Milton Wright Dayton, O.

VICE PRESIDENT—Rev. Geo. R. Milton, Elgin, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. J Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Rev. E. R. Worrell, Washington Heights, Ill.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, J. M. Hitchcock, Jerome Howe, G. R. Milton, Wm. Pinkney, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, W. W. Wait, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell.

The object of this Association is:
"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves Harris, Mass.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., S. A. Gilley, Marengo; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Lecompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas. Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Rowe, Guilford; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Isaac Hyatt Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant York; Treas., J.C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN—Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover 50 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

The Christian Cynosure.

J. BLANCHARD, EDITOR.
HENRY L. KELLOGG, ASSOCIATE EDITOR AND PUBLISHER.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MAY 21, 1891.

TO THE READERS OF THE CYNOSURE.

I am no longer your editor. My note to the annual N. C. A. meeting, declining the editorship, was peremptory in fact, though drawn carefully to prevent any thought of dissatisfaction that might injure the cause which I love. I am grateful for the confidence expressed in my re-election, which I must decline. The Board of Directors, with the associate editor, Mr. Kellogg, will henceforth control and manage the Cynosure.

In declining the editorship I have a few words to say. And first, I wish to thank the Association and its Board; and to thank God for them, with whom I have toiled twenty-three years in the cause which will yet be acknowledged to be fundamental to the life of our country and the salvation of its inhabitants; and I know no better men on earth. And considering the nature of the reform and the "principalities and powers" against whom we have wrestled, the unity and harmony of our movement has been marvellous. Most of our great church organizations have been rent since first we met with the beloved Philo Carpenter in Aurora, Ill., in October, 1867, twenty-four years ago. In 1872 we nominated Charles Francis Adams and afterward Hon. S. C. Pomeroy to represent our relation to civil government; and THE AMERICAN PARTY produced for the time, a powerful impression on the country. The Prohibition party, based on one plank of our platform, arose; and as the crime and curse of liquor, and as the woes and sufferings inflicted by the saloon, are something which the popular mind sees and feels at once, while the lodge, like the knife of the assassin, is concealed; the Prohibition party ran into and over the American party; as in 1832, the slavery question ran down Anti-masonry and put it out of politics.

This was foreseen but could not be prevented. The National Christian Association tried to unite our paper with the Union Signal, whose supporters almost all abhorred the lodge. But our advances were not accepted; and the leaders of the woman's movement joined affinity with Powderly, hoping to gain the votes of papists and Knights of Labor, and the secret temperance lodges. This was their great mistake. A political party, part secret and part open, has the seeds of dissolution and destruction in itself. After Mr. Powderly openly knelt to the priests of Rome, and Miss Willard advised Prohibitionists to join the Knights of Labor under him, the Prohibition party became in so far an annex to popery, pledged to obey the Pope, as those American priests obey him. No person of ordinary understanding can fail to see this. The doctrine of the secret labor lodges, as all who read the papers know, is this: "If you employ men in the places we have left in our strikes, we will kill them unless they join and obey our secret unions." This is the doctrine of the "mother" of the harlot religions of this earth,—that "none may buy or sell who will not receive her mark in his forehead or his hand." This transfers the rights of employers and the powers of government to secret lodges ruled by Powderly, who is ruled by priests, who are ruled by Rome! Thus the devil succeeded in quelling the American party and chained the Prohibition party to the chariot of the Pope of Rome. Archbishop Feehan, here in Chicago, had a banquet of 400 guests, and furnished them all kinds of liquors; and of the saloon-keepers in our average cities, nine in ten are Romanists. If Rome wished to suppress those saloons she could do it.

We saw all this but could not prevent it, any more than the destruction of the Anti-masonic party in 1832, by the rise of the Anti-slavery party, could have been prevented then by Seward, Stevens, Ritner and John Q. Adams. So, knowing that St. John and Fisk were opposed to the lodge, we voted for them. But the Prohibition party, wedded to Rome, is a doomed party if mystical Babylon is to fall and Christ is to reign.

The anti-secret people now are shut up to simple faith in Christ. Their bush is burning but is not consumed, AND WILL NOT BE! I "bate no jot of heart or hope." The National Christian Association last week elected me editor of the Cynosure, against my request, and I thank them for it. I now decline peremptorily. If they had elected me Editor superfluous, without pay, I might have accepted, and have written over my own name, with no control of the paper but the space I might fill. And so with full faith in the success of Christ's cause, and more love and gratitude to those who have stood by it with me than I can put in words, I am respectfully your brother in Christ,

J. BLANCHARD.

"POINTS OF CONSCIENCE which are not points of conscience." Dr. Trumbull of Morning Sun, Iowa, in his remarks in our Conference, seems to think I considered the Covenanter's testimony against the omission of the name of God by the United States Constitution one such "point". He misapprehends me. I aided Dr. Stevenson of Philadelphia in getting up a meeting to push that point in Boston years ago; and since advocated the same "point" before the National Reform Association meeting in Monmouth, Ill., when Drs. McAllister and Wallace seized my speech to print it. I consider the omission of Christianity from the United States Constitution a sinful omission.

J. B.

MAY.—During this month some hundreds of our friends, are asked to renew their subscriptions. Some of them will thank us for reminding them that the year has come round again. We trust that they are not only well satisfied that $1.50 sent for the Cynosure is good investment, but also rejoice that they may in this way promote a good cause. Every name added to the list increases the ability of the N. C. A. to carry on the work more widely and successfully. If our list was doubled we could sustain one or two agents in the South. If we had 50,000, we could give ten or twelve workers enough to do. Please do the best possible work for our list. Take advantage of our premiums this month. They are worth sending for.

—Special attention is called to articles in this number on the 3d and 10th pages on the responsibility of the churches of Jesus Christ for continuance of organized iniquities. The principles laid down and facts quoted to establish them demand our serious study.

—Bro. H. Curtis of Olathe, Kan., writes that Frank Woodruff, the man who, it is believed, drove the white horse in the celebrated Cronin tragedy, was sentenced to the penitentiary for five years in Kansas for stealing a horse. Thus justice has overtaken another of the conspirators in this notorious lodge crime.

—The Masonic press reports that the so-called "Home" of that order in Missouri ran behind last year on account of "extraordinary" expenses, $4,500. The Grand Lodge will take the case in hand next October. We hear nothing of the great Masonic Home dedicated with much ado by the Grand Lodge in this city a few years ago. But for a ball every year, said to be in its behalf, its existence would be forgotten.

—Rev. G. M. Elliott, who has labored long in Selma and Brierfield, Alabama, in promoting the work of the Reformed Presbyterian church among the freedmen, writes to Our Banner of Philadelphia that he has not accepted the appointment of the Industrial Missionary Association as soliciting agent. Bro. Elliott has long stood for our reform in Alabama, and is a man of intelligence, education and influence among both colored and white races.

—Bro. W. B. Stoddard, after attending annual meeting and Conference, remained over the Sabbath with friends, and spoke in the Free Mission Swedish church of Roseland, near Pullman, this city, Rev. C. W. Holm, pastor on Monday evening. He first met pastor Holm in Philadelphia, and renewed a pleasant acquaintance at the Conference. If his Eastern work would permit, Bro. Stoddard could doubtless fill up a month with good work in Chicago.

—Rev. T. B. Arnold, of the N. C. A. Board, finds the supplies for his Industrial Home for poor children sometimes running very low. The other day he went out to the Home at Woodstock to see what could be done to replenish the larder. There seemed to be no help but in God, and that was sure. Almost while they were asking for it one dray-load followed another with supplies of groceries and cloth; and beside a letter from a Bible-reading Roman Catholic promising further aid when needed.

—The Oberlin alumni in Illinois gave a banquet last week in the Palmer House, this city. President Ballantine was the guest of the evening and there was nothing unusual in the ceremonies but the absence of liquor and the speech of Mr. W. T. Mills, who was for a time a student at Oberlin until he began pistoling a crowd who visited him at night with doubtful intentions. After this episode the faculty invited him to study elsewhere. Both parties seem to have forgiven and forgotten the past, however, and can work together for a good cause and a good college.

—Rev. Joseph Travis, former editor of the Free Methodist, and member of the N. C. A. Board, of which he was for two years chairman, died last Saturday and was buried Monday forenoon at his home in Evanston, Ill. He has been in poor health for some time, but his death was unexpected to many. A letter from him was read to the N. C. A. annual meeting, and revived memories of past years when he sat with us in council for our reform. At one time he was the unanimous choice of the Board for the Washington agency, but duties in this city prevented his undertaking the work. He was among the earliest to take a stand against the lodge, and was able to give a powerful testimony, having taken, we believe, seventeen degrees in Masonry.

—The New York Witness has written powerfully and convincingly against the lodge of late. In a late number the latest words of Joseph Cook and D. L. Moody were reprinted from our columns,—with the error, however, of attributing both to Mr. Moody. The Witness comments as below, except that we use the correct name, Cook, instead of Moody:

"Mr. Cook is right. This secrecy business is wrong in principle and mischievous in practice. It is true that most of these secret societies set before their members good and worthy objects of pursuit, but even right objects cannot properly be pursued by false methods. A certain amount of good may be accomplished, but the amount of harm that will result will much outweigh the good.

"Mr. Cook draws a line of distinction between 'gilt-edge' and 'guilty-edge' secret societies, and that line is in fact a very broad one. It would be absurd, for instance, to place the Farmers' Alliance or the Freemasons in the same category with the Clan-na-Gael or the Mafia. But the element of secrecy is, in our judgment, so contrary to correct principles that we are compelled to dissent from Mr. Cook's classification and to maintain that there can be no such thing as a 'gilt-edge' secret society, taking that characterization in its ordinary significance.

"We, therefore, very earnestly endorse Mr. Cook's appeal: 'Come out of these societies, young man, if you have been unwisely persuaded to join.'"

LONG WAITING.—A comparatively small number of our subscribers have postponed payment of their subscriptions, until the regular $2.00 rate for delayed subscriptions is due from them. They may yet take advantage of the "advance" rate by paying for two or three years at once, as the case may be, so as to bring their date well on into '92. We cannot promise to continue this favorable offer longer than June 1st, and we urge its acceptance by every consideration that the value of the Cynosure to a family and the promotion of the work of the N. C. A. can suggest.

The Sabbath reform and Sabbath-school meetings of Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts during the months at hand will be as follows: May 21, Congregational State Association, Galesburg, Ill.; May 26, Cresco, Iowa; May 31, Winona, Minn.; June 7, probably Mankato, Minn.; June 14, Duluth, Minn.; June 16, probably Mason City, Iowa; June 21, Atchison, Kan.; June 24, Fremont (Neb.) Chautauqua; June 27, 28, Lisbon, N. Dak., State Sabbath-school Convention; July 2, 3, Waseca (Minn.) Chautauqua; July 9, National Meeting of Christian Endeavor Societies, Minneapolis; July 11, Chester (Ill.) Chautauqua; July 28, 29, Madison (Wis.) Chautauqua; Aug. 1, 2, Lakeside (Ohio) Chautauqua; Aug. 4, Clarion (Pa.) Chautauqua; Aug. 9, Mansfield, Ohio; Sept. 13–16, Kansas City, Mo.; Oct. 20, Canajohane (N. Y.) Sabbath-school Convention. Mrs. Crafts has just completed a tour of Sabbath-school conventions in the Southern States and is to be at the Illinois Convention at Danville this week; also at the Minnesota Convention June 23–25; at North Dakota Convention June 26–28, and at the Kentucky Convention in August. She will be at the Monona Chautauqua, Madison, Wis., July 21–31. She will also aid Mr. Crafts in Sabbath reform meetings by speaking on "How to Make the Sabbath a Delight in the Home." Mr. Crafts gives as his address, "Thanksgiving St., No Continuing City," but a more convenient one for mailing is Care of Kerr & Barr, 189 La Salle St., Chicago.

MRS. HAVILAND'S book will be sent during May only with one yearly subscription to the Cynosure for $2.50. The regular price of the book is $1.50. See 16th page.

THE WEEKLY MEETING IN BOSTON.

Pursuant to a recommendation signed by A. J. Gordon, James M. Gray, O. P. Gifford, Wm. Graham, E. Edmonds, R. D. Grant and Wm. F. Davis, that a weekly meeting be held in Boston to consider the relation of secret societies to the church of Christ and civil liberty, a meeting will be held, D. V., on Thursday evening, May 21st, at 8 o'clock, in the vestry of the First Reformed Presbyterian church, corner of Ferdinand and Isabella streets, to be addressed by Rev. J. M. Foster, D. D., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Friends in and near Boston are especially urged to make a note of this meeting and so far as practicable to attend and extend the notice to their friends. Let us unite our efforts and our prayers with the thousands who are laboring and praying for the "coming of His kingdom," in sustaining a weekly meeting to discuss the numerous secret societies in the land.

J. P. STODDARD,
318 Columbus Ave.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Smoking and forest fires—The caterpillar plague—A relic of early days—The military spirit and lodge parades—The effect of the Barber bill in New Hampshire.

It would be an interesting question—provided it could ever be satisfactorily answered—how many of these disastrous forest fires that yearly cause so much damage to property, and often loss of life, have their origin in tobacco;—the half-consumed stump of a cigar thrown carelessly down, or a spark from some workman's pipe. An inveterate smoker is seldom a very careful man.

Everybody who has an orchard, or even one or two apple-trees in his dooryard, finds plenty of opportunity this year to fight the caterpillar plague; though after spending hours of patient labor in exterminating their nests on his own trees, it is discouraging to see his work almost neutralized by the laziness or indifference of his neighbor, who allows the disgusting white webs to accumulate without any attempt at their removal. Perhaps the time will come when the destruction of these winged and crawling pests will become a subject for legislative action, and men with some scientific knowledge regarding them will be appointed to the work, as in the case of the gipsy moth, whose unwelcome presence has already cost Massachusetts such a neat little sum. Gov. Russel did a good thing when he put the job into the hands of practical scientists, the first men appointed on the commission knowing about as much of natural history as a certain peddler who called at my door the other day, and in his anxiety to sell a new insecticide he was trying to introduce, assured me that while it was sure death on vermin of every description, including the much dreaded buffalo bug, it was perfectly harmless to cats, dogs or poultry,—in short, anything that had a lung. The most amusing part of it, however, was not so much in his denying to all the insect world any breathing apparatus, as his perfect unconsciousness that in dropping this startling bit of scientific information he had said anything at all funny.

In making improvements in the old Granary burying-ground in Boston, a stone has just been dug up bearing the date of 1666. How magical the changes since that Puritan settler was laid away to his last long sleep over two centuries ago! But I think we err in attributing to those early times a Rip Van Winkle dullness. On the contrary, they must have been very active and stirring days. They did not lack for exciting public questions. The present heated discussion over woman's right to a seat in the Methodist Conference is a tempest in a teaspoon beside the disturbance that must have been created when Mrs. Ann Hutchinson was imprisoned and banished for daring to hold meetings of her own sex for the free discussion of religious subjects, thus ignoring the Pauline command to "ask their husbands at home." And how big the world must have looked then with three-quarters of its surface unexplored. On ancient maps of New France the little Charles is called the Rio Grande (the great river). Everything looked large as it loomed through the golden mists of that morning of the New World. It is really oppressive when one comes to think of it—the way science and travel are continually reducing the size of our little globe; and if they draw the belt much tighter we shall almost begin to feel the need of more breathing room.

But to come back to more modern subjects. I notice that five hundred Knight Templars from Albany, New York, who are going on a tour through Europe, have applied to Minister Lincoln for permission from the British government to wear their side arms and regalia while in England; but the Home Secretary has intimated that it is impossible to make an exception in their favor, and so these poor carpet knights will have no chance to show their fine feathers on English soil. How much these military lodge parades have to do with fostering a spirit of war, especially among the young, who are always so easily dazzled by "the pride, pomp and circumstance" attending such displays, is a question for the Peace and Arbitration Society to ponder. By the way, is it any sign of approaching union between Masonry and Catholicism that the former are so piously observing some of the most noted days in the Romish calendar, like Easter and Ascension?

Worcester's Republican board of aldermen have granted eighty-four licenses to sell liquor, and the result of their handiwork was a rum murder on the first day the licenses were issued!

In consequence of the war against indecent showbills, no theatrical or other show licenses are to be issued in future in Boston which are considered objectionable by the committee having this matter in charge. It has grown to be a crying evil; and in the interest of public morals this movement should be followed in all our large towns, where throng the classes on which such representations of vice would be likely to have the most effect.

The Iron Hall has abandoned New Hampshire as a field of operation on account of the passing of the "Barber bill," which places with the Insurance Commissioner the power of deciding whether any of these orders shall continue to do business. The Iron Hall considers the new law as a blow at its own particular organization. A leading lawyer of the State has given his opinion that the order in question, being an Indiana corporation, has no right to exercise its franchise in New Hampshire. Other orders are contemplating a similar step, while others still propose to stay and fight it out. One company, it is reported, intends to carry the case before the courts, and thus test the constitutionality of the law. The closing suggestion of the "Supreme Justice" (of the lodge) in his circular of withdrawal, that "every member had now a work to do,—to interest himself in a vigorous effort to elect only such men to the Legislature as will be favorable to the order," is one that will be acted upon without doubt. The lodge question is fast becoming a political one. Congress two years ago, at the demand of the Knights of Labor, abolished the steam presses in the bureau of printing and engraving, causing an additional outlay of half a million annually. Then here is ex-rebel Polk of the Farmers' Alliance, recommending that an army of 35,000 lecturers be appointed to keep the Alliance members posted on their lodge duties; and of course the support of this army of lecturers is to come out of the pockets of the farmers. The lodge is a dear institution, both for the nation and the individual. ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 13, 1891.

"What is the latest teaching of science as to alcohol being a food or a substitute for food in health, in richness?" was the question which Dr. Nathan N. Davis, of Chicago, who has been called "the apostle of medical temperance," answered to the edification of a very large audience Sabbath morning in one of our churches. The doctor first spoke of the large sum of money absolutely wasted every year in the purchase of intoxicating drinks, which side of the question he said had been fully discussed by the political economist, while its deleterious moral effect upon society at large was continually being shown by the wide-awake clergymen. "But," said the speaker, "the great barrier in the way of the abandonment of the use of alcoholic stimulants is found in the erroneous education of the people as to the effects of alcohol upon the system in sickness and in health."

He then proceeded to show from a series of careful, direct, scientific experiments which had been conducted by the most eminent medical authorities in this country and Europe, the exact detriment that alcohol, no matter how taken, is to the human system, making it liable to such dreaded afflictions, as paralysis, apoplexy, structural diseases of the kidney and liver and Bright's disease, which every year kills thousands of the moderate drinkers, not to mention the habitual drunkards.

He then took up statistics prepared by life insurance companies and others, and demonstrated that the man who habitually interfered with the intricate processes of nutrition of his system by drinking any alcoholic preparation was more liable to attacks of sickness of all kinds than those who do not take the poison, and that they suffer a consequent loss of time from their work to the detriment of themselves and their families. He then presented some labor statistics, the result of examination of a large number of laborers in particular occupations, which proved that in the cases of men working side by side, some total abstainers and some taking their regular rations of moderate alcoholic liquors—usually beer—that the ability for work was greater in the abstainer and the ratio of mortality much less.

Dr. Davis also showed the absurdity of the belief entertained by some people that alcohol in some cases proves beneficial to the nervous system. He said that instead of stimulating, strengthening, or supporting, the use of alcohol simply diminishes the consciousness of the patient concerning his or her condition, just as chloroform or any other anesthetic would do. Instead of warming the patient it simply diminishes his consciousness of cold. In conclusion the doctor said: "Alcohol can act neither as a tonic nor a supporting agent in disease. It certainly and surely lessens all nervous force and vigor."

Dr. Davis has earned a warm place in the hearts of Washington temperance people, for it was he that originated what promises to be one of the most far reaching and effective movements for total abstinence of the age—the American Medical Temperance Association, which was organized here last week by physicians who were in attendance upon the annual meeting of the American Medical Association, the objects of which are to advance the practice of total abstinence in and through the medical profession, and to promote investigation as to the action of alcohol in health and disease. The significance of an organized fight for total abstinence by physicians must be apparent to even the most casual observer; and although this association has less than one hundred charter members it covers nearly all the States, and I predict that it will in the near future be a power in the land.

The local law of the District of Columbia provides no penalty whatever for drunkenness upon the street unless it be accompanied by disorderly conduct, and the police reports show that 5,000 men and women were found drunk on our streets last year. Speaking of this, one of the Commissioners said: "I think it an outrage that there is no law in the District of Columbia to punish people for getting drunk. There would be less drinking if a man knew he would be fined or imprisoned for getting intoxicated. To my knowledge there is not another city on the continent without such a law, and its absence undoubtedly encourages drinking in Washington." *

THE HOME.

THE GREAT DELIVERANCE.

Exodus 11: 12; Luke 12: 35; Hebrews 11: 28.

Calm Egypt slept. The veil of heavy night
Hung darkly t'wixt the desert and the sky.
Above the sleeping land that dreamed no harm,
The sullen clouds bent low and threateningly;
And through the darkness and the silence deep,
No voice of solemn warning breathed aloud:
"Prepare to meet thy God." The soft night wind
That crept from house to house with noiseless tread,
Repeated not: "Thy first-born all must die!"
The bird that moved upon the midnight bough
Said not, "The hour is come,"—nor yet the stars
That stood above the land. The night wore on,
And Egypt slept.

The night wore slowly on;
And Israel by the dimly burning light,
Did watch with anxious heart. The lamb was slain,
And on the lintel had the blood been struck.
The cloth was spread, the hurried meal was passed.
With girded loins and ready sandaled feet
The eager bondsmen waited, longed, and hoped,—
They knew not what.

And now the hour was come:
The murky veil of night was torn by wings
Of God's destroying angel swooping down
To smite the land, and Egypt slept no more.
The angel passed, death hovered in his wake,
But Israel's blood-stained door was left uncrossed.
A sudden cry broke on the air. 'Twas not
The anguish of a single stricken heart;
It rang from house to house and swelling rose,
A mournful chorus, a funeral wail,
The voice of Egypt mourning her first-born.
Night wore away. The stars above the land
Went dimly out; and lo! the rising sun,
Whose latest dying ray had looked on slaves,
Saw Israel out of bondage,—free at last!

Years, ages have rolled by. A deeper night
Enfolds the land in darkness and in gloom.
Above a careless world that dreams no harm,
The clouds of sin stoop low and threateningly,
And Justice whets her keen avenging sword.
Still Egypt sleeps. God's awful warning words,
"The day thou eatest thereof, thou'lt surely die,"
Forgotten are. The scornful idler laughs,
Unheedful that the hour is drawing nigh.
O men, O brothers, are you faithful, true?
Your candles, are they burning? Do you watch
With girded loins, and with anxious, hopeful hearts?
The Lamb is slain; and if His saving blood
Be on your lives, the angel will pass by,
And with the rising of the sun you'll quit
Your bondage for the precious Promise Land.

—Young Men's Era.

RELIGION AS A FACTOR IN CIVIC AFFAIRS.

[Henry Randall Waite, Ph. D., Pres. of the American Institute of Civics, in the Chicago News.]

Opportunity and power wait upon youth. Sovereignty is the birthright of the young men of America. At the threshold of their high estate, when they are inspired by highest hopes, they should also be impelled by highest aims. Assuming that in this confessedly Christian nation the highest aims find their inspiration in the principles of religion, "young citizens" may profitably consider the part which religion plays, or ought to play, as a factor in civic affairs.

Patriotism is the passion which displays itself in the service of country, and the citizen who makes a profession of patriotism assumes an obligation to the State which calls for the best service of which he is capable.

Religion as distinguished from theology, is "real piety in practice," and consists in the performance of all known duties to God and man.

While it is evident that religion and citizenship may represent only altars at which service is due, but which are fireless and neglected, piety and patriotism must represent not only altars, but ever-burning fires of devotion; and while patriotism may be supposed to exist without piety, in the manward scope of its obligations piety is inconceivable apart from patriotism.

DECALOGUE AND GOLDEN RULE.

The citizen who is not a Christian may ignore or deny the fact of his obligations to a supreme being, and in doing so will not prove recreant to acknowledged duties which he has solemnly pledged himself to fulfill. With a standard fixed by no universally recognized rules he may with apparent consistency adopt and defend any theory of duty which inclination or self-interest may suggest, provided only that it does not bring him into conflict with the civil law. The Christian, whatever his practice, has no justification for a latitude like this. The obligations of religion, in their broad application, are clearly defined and within the comprehension of all its professors. The Decalogue and Golden Rule, interpreted and supplemented by the whole body of Christian truth, enforce a doctrine of duty which is binding upon those who accept it; which admits of no interpretation suggested by mere inclination or policy; which is mandatory in its application, and which covers the whole range of human activities, including those of citizenship.

CITIZEN CHRISTIANS NEGLECTFUL OF DUTY.

Nothing can be clearer to candid minds than the fact that the principles of religion put in practice are calculated to carry into citizenship the loftiest ideas of duty, and that they must do this unless those who claim to be actuated by them are false to their profession. Nevertheless multitudes of citizen-Christians are as habitually neglectful of their duties to the State as though it had no claim upon them which a profession of piety compels them to recognize. Some of these seem to assume that they owe no duties to the State beyond those of citizens, not Christians, and carry this assumption to the extreme of governing their action in political affairs by the sordid rules of convenience and expediency. Others justify their neglect of civic duties on the ground that because the relations between religion and the State may be vicious they should have no relations—a proposition as logical as the statement that since men in the activities of life are prone to evil they may cultivate virtue by sloth.

There is ground for the suspicion that these assumptions or claims are in reality only apologies for the neglect, cowardice or selfishness which permits professedly religious men, in their lives as citizens, to "go with the multitude to do evil" or to stand supine while evil is done. To fight political vice, for example, takes time from business and pleasure, involves disagreeable work, brings no results pecuniarily which are thought to be equivalent for the time demanded and no honors which are desired or none desired which are within reach. There is no injustice in the world's belief that religion thus exemplified is little more than a sham.

THE CHURCH AND THE SCOFFERS.

Units in the caucus represent the State, as units in the sanctuary represent the church, and in the caucus, if not in the sanctuary, these units can, and should, meet on the common ground, where the best are called to battle with the worst forces in society. If the units on the one side are truly representative of the virtues set forth in the doctrines of the church, and the other units are too largely made up of those who represent the vices which endanger the welfare of the State, there is grievous wrong in the conditions which separate the men of the sanctuary from the men of the caucus, thus depriving the commonwealth of uplifting and purifying influences.

Under all the circumstances it is a matter of doubtful wisdom for any in the church to cry down those who scoff at the sincerity of religious professions, and it is worse than folly for any one to pursue this course who by their equivocal attitude invite the scoffing.

DUTIES OF CHRISTIANS TO THE STATE.

There is surely need for sober thought as to the remissness of Christians in their duties toward the State, and if such thought shall bring shame to multitudes of church members it may also send them into the political arena to reinforce the supporters of that which is highest and best and thus make them a means of more usefulness to the State and more honor to the church. Let the truth be emphasized that responsibility for the curse of bad government more often than otherwise rests upon recreant Christians, for there are enough church people in almost every community to secure the maintenance of righteous government if they will take their religion into politics and justify its definition by making it in very truth "the real piety in action." The actual strength of the elements which are professedly representative of the highest principles which can be applied to human affairs is clearly shown by comparative statistics.

STATISTICS OF CHURCH MEMBERS.

In 1890 there were in the United States not less than 13,480,000 members of the Christian churches, exclusive of Roman Catholics, who enumerate in their fellowship all baptized persons, including infants. There was at the same time a total population of 62,622,000 with about 45,876,000 over the age of 10 years, with 15,975,000 of voting age, of whom about 11,392,000 in the year 1888 exercised the right of suffrage. It is estimated that of the 13,480,000 church communicants not more than 5 per cent, or 1,760,000, were under the age of 21, and that of the remaining 12,374,000, 65 per cent, or 8,043,000, were women, leaving in round numbers 4,331,000 church members who were of voting age.

These statistics afford the following significant deductions: Number of church members in total population, not including Roman Catholics, more than 20 per cent; church members over 21 years of age, in total population of same age, more than 26 per cent; number of male church members as compared with persons of voting age who exercised the right of suffrage in 1888, more than 28 per cent.

The number of Roman Catholics over the age of 21 (estimated at one-fourth of the total Roman Catholic population of 8,277,000) was 2,069,750. Supposing 65 per cent of this number to be women, the Roman Catholic voters numbered 724,413. These, added to other male church members of voting age, would make a total of more than 5,000,000, or a number equal to more than 44 per cent of the total number of voters at the Presidential election in 1888.

MILLIONS UNDER CHURCH INFLUENCE.

The number of regular attendants upon church services, not communicants, but whose lives are confessedly subjected to religious influence, will add not less than 50 per cent to all of these figures, making a total of 32,239,500 (including Roman Catholics) under church influence, of whom 18,561,000 were over the age of 21 and of whom 6,446,500 were males of voting age. In other words, in the year 1890 the number of those who may be supposed to have been in full sympathy with the doctrines of duty in society as set forth in the teachings of the church was in the whole population considerably more than 51 per cent; in the male population over the age of 21 nearly 32 per cent, and in the male population which exercised the right of suffrage in 1888 not less than 75 per cent.

POSSIBLE POWER OF CHRISTIANS IN POLITICS.

It is plainly evident that if Christian citizens were united and persistently devoted to the work of exemplifying in citizenship the principles of their faith—without the intrusion of ecclesiasticism in affairs of state, but by individual devotion to duty—they could at once exercise a power for the purification of politics which would be simply irresistible. In the light of these facts religious men are not to be omitted in taking the census of political sinners, and the "reformation of the citizen as a Christian" becomes a pertinent question.

Present conditions, regard them as we may, are calculated to put to shame the teachers and professors of a faith which demands obedience in all things to the highest precepts of truth and duty. There can be no other inference when more than 6,000,000 of adult citizens so regularly listen to the teachings of religion, and so miserably fail in that united and faithful application of these teachings which is alone needed to make them potent in the councils of the nation.

"GO AWAY, SATAN! GO AWAY!"

A little girl sat upon the large stone door-step of her father's house, and beside her was a boy of about the same age. He had been eating a fresh, rosy apple, and had thrown the core in the gutter beyond the walk, and watched it as the muddy water carried it from his sight; then, turning back to his playmate, who seemed absorbed in the pictures of a new book, he said:

"Give me your apple, Katie; mine is all gone."

"Not now; wait a little," was the reply.

But the greedy little fellow, not willing to wait, took the apple up, turned it round and round, smelled it, and then tossed it up lightly in his hands, each time catching it again. I expected his teeth would go into it, but he was too honest for that.

His cry brought the eyes of the little girl up on him. The blood mounted to her brow; she was at once upon her feet with one hand raised, apparently to strike the shrinking form beside her. But the hand did not fall; and as she stood, her face and form showing the struggle within, I prayed that she might not be too strongly tempted. A moment more, and her voice fell on my ear—

"Go away, Satan! go away!"

The mother within the door heard the words too, and, coming out, asked what they meant. A blush was upon the brow of the child, but it was humility and shame that caused it, while with drooping head she answered, "Satan wanted me to strike Freddie, but I didn't."

The mother drew her within her arms and kissed her, saying, "That is right, my child; resist him and he will flee from you."

Would that all might learn in childhood to resist the power of temptation by the help of the Holy Spirit! Truly, the world would be better for it.—Words of Love.

THE PURROW SOCIETY.

The boys who read the Cynosure are interested in Africa, of course. In that great continent they have secret societies as here in America, and almost as evil ones as ours. A few weeks ago we printed an article from the April Century which told how these secret societies sieze boys and carry them away for weeks and months into the forest. A letter from Fanny Clark, who writes from the Shaingay Mission, West Africa, to the Missionary Visitor, tells of this same society. Our boys will all read with dread of such societies and learn to avoid them in this country, where they are trying to catch all our young men, and some of them try to get the boys and girls. Read this story:

"This is a country society for men and for boys, and has been carried on many years. They hold their meetings in a thick bush, near some town. They call it the 'devil's bush,' because the headman of the society is called a 'purrow devil;' and he stays in the bush. They make a fence of palms before the place. Some of their members are sent out to catch persons who do not belong to the society. These captives are then brought into the 'bush,' and it is reported the devil has eaten them. They are marked by making fine cuts on their breasts and on their backs. After two or three months they are allowed to come out of the 'bush' and go to their homes. They then say they are born of the devil, and receive another name. The 'devil' sent his messengers to Shaingay. They hide in the bushes close by the road, and make a loud and strange noise. They caught several persons in Shaingay and in the villages near by. A great many people stay close about the mission to keep from being caught. One boy remained at the home of the mission school-teacher so that he would not be caught. A messenger came and told him there was something for him at Debia, and he must go and get it. He went, was caught, and is now in the 'devil's bush.' Aunt Betty, one of our members, and a woman who works very hard, had some boys at work repairing her house. They were caught by these people, and were carried away into the 'bush;' and now the poor woman has no one to repair her house. Uncle said, 'Never mind; God reigns.' They who do this work must be very wicked people.

"Mr. Humphrey, the farmer, who was at Koolong Station, fifteen miles from here, died; and as uncle was not at home I asked Mrs. Remmie Caulker, who was at the mission, to go down there with me. We got fourteen of the mission boys to go with us. It was a bright moonlight night. Our road was the sea beach. In some places there was a little water, and the boys carried us across. There were a number of towns along the road. At some of these there are purrow bushes, though the societies were not in session at the time. When we reached Bendo, quite a number of men and boys on the road were going to catch us; but the boys frightened them away. One of the men, when he saw us coming, ran into the 'bush' after the 'devil;' but when we had passed we could hear the devil crying for his prey. It is always the custom that when a woman passes a purrow bush in the daytime she stops in the road and sings a song; and at night, when passing, she must clap her hands. This is done for fear she should meet the 'devil.' No woman is allowed to see that personage.

"I have just now returned from Shaingay, where I went to make a few calls. The scenes I witnessed there I cannot describe. I was sitting on the chief's piazza, talking with him. I heard the purrow yell in the town. Suddenly about twenty persons, young men and boys, rushed into view. Two of them, who seemed to be the leaders, came and in a most humble manner saluted the chief. The others rushed about among the huts, catching fowl. The upper part of their bodies was quite nude, save a good coat of palm oil, which made them glisten in the sun."

TEMPERANCE.

WILL FIGHT THE RUM POWER.

The attorneys for the Iowa State Temperance Alliance in their petition for mandamus to compel the Secretary of State to deliver to them a certified copy of the constitution of the State, with all the amendments thereto, in the hope of reopening the question of the validity of the prohibitory liquor amendment voted on in 1882, has again been heard from in the shape of an amendment to the substituted petition recently filed by them.

In this paper just filed it is charged that in the XVIIIth general assembly, on motion of Senator Woolson, the words "or to be used for such purposes" were stricken out. This is contrary to the journal of the senate. It says that only the words "for such purposes" were stricken out. The Temperance Alliance proposes to prove that the journal was wrong. As the words "to be used" were the cause of the amendment's being declared void, this is the very gist of the case.

In the former trial the Supreme Court declared that evidence to show that the journal was wrong in its statement of the fact was inadmissable, and that the journal was the best evidence of the action of the body and that evidence could not be introduced to disprove it. It is believed by many that the attorney-general will instruct the Secretary of State to make out the certified copy of the constitution, with the amendments, as it appears in his office, because as a matter of law he is compelled to do so. The records have been handed down to him by his predecessors, and he will merely certify as to what they contain.

"DRINKING ITSELF RICH."

A budget was submitted to the House of Commons lately by Goschen, chancellor of the exchequer, who said that there was an excess of £1,760,000 over the surplus which he suggested in 1890. Mr. Goschen said that no less than £900,000 of the surplus arose from the internal revenue duty on alcoholic spirits. There had been an increase in consumption during the year of 18,000,000 gallons of home-made spirits. Tobacco, said Mr. Goschen, had given an increase of £456,000, and beer had given an increase of £375,000. Alluding to the increase in the duties on alcohol, Mr. Goschen repudiated the idea that the government was pledged to carry out the scheme of the purchase of public-house licenses. If it raised the duties instead of buying licenses the money would be assigned to an excellent purpose—that of technical education. Mr. Goschen invested the dry statistics of the budget with playful humor. In speaking of the increased revenue from alcohol, he said that the country was "drinking itself into affluence," whereupon Sir Wilfrid Lawson shook his head gravely. Mr. Goschen added that the increase from alcohol indicated that the masses were earning better wages. He calculated that the increased revenue from tobacco represented 560,000,000 extra pipes. Signs were apparent, he said, that the prosperity of the country was approaching the zenith, but he was not apprehensive of a rapid decline.

A very interesting story is told of Professor Drummond—a story which conveys a much-needed lesson for young men. He was staying with a lady whose coachman had signed the pledge, but afterward had given away to drink again. This lady said to the professor: "Now, this man will drive to the station; say a word to him if you can. He is a good sort of fellow, and really wants to reform, but he is weak." While they were driving down, the professor tried to think how he could introduce the subject. Presently the horses bolted. The driver held on to the reins and manipulated them well. The carriage swayed about, and the professor expected every moment to be upset, but presently the man drew the horses up, and streaming with perspiration, said: "I say, that was a close shave. Our trap might have been smashed into matchwood, and you wouldn't have given any more addresses." "Well," said Professor Drummond, "how was it that it did not happen?" "Why," was the reply, "because I knew how to manage the horses." "Now," said the professor, "look here, my friend; I will give you a bit of advice. Here's my train coming. I hear you have been signing the pledge, and breaking out again. Now I want to give you a bit of advice: Throw the reins of your life to Jesus Christ;" and then he jumped down and got into the train. The driver said afterward that it came upon him like a flash of lightning. He saw where he had made a mistake, and from that day he has ceased to try to manipulate his own life, but gave the reins to Jesus Christ. The story bears its own moral. One need not add a word; only let us learn its lesson, and carry out the professor's advice.

The Russian minister of war has issued an order by which common soldiers are prohibited from smoking in the streets, and officers enjoying the weed in public thoroughfares are made subject to the regulations of the civil force (the police) in such matters. Their military station does not exempt them from any fine which the police may impose for smoking in any given place.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE OLD TESTAMENT.

LESSON IX.—Second Quarter.—May 31.

SUBJECT.—The Temple Repaired.—2 Chron. 24: 4-14.

GOLDEN TEXT.—God loveth a cheerful giver.—2 Cor. 9: 7.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—Exod. 35: 20-29. T.—Exod. 36: 2-7. W.—2 Kings 12: 4-16. T.—Mal. 3: 7-12. F.—1 Cor. 9: 1-14. S.—1 Cor. 16: 1-11. S.—2 Cor. 9: 1-15.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The summons to a good work. Vs. 4, 5. The reign of Joash, though it ended like Solomon's in the darkest gloom of apostasy, began with the fairest promise. In the general massacre of all the royal family by his wicked grandmother, Athaliah, he had been saved by his aunt, the wife of Jehoiada, who kept him hidden in the temple until a bloodless revolution placed him on the throne. As the temple had proved such a safe asylum for the baby king, it was very natural and fitting that when he reached mature years he should conceive the plan of restoring it. This could not be done without money any more than any good work at the present day can be done without the necessary funds, but it never seemed to occur to him to try to raise it other ways than by the free contributions of the people. The modern system of raising money by church fairs and entertainments finds no warrant in the Bible. "See that ye hasten the matter." It was the king's business and required haste, yet the Levites who were intrusted with the matter, and who would naturally be supposed to take the warmest interest in it, "hastened it not." The surest sign of an apostate age is a degenerate, ease-loving ministry.

2. The free-will offering. Vs. 6–11. Instead of being discouraged the king tries a new plan. A good work has often failed because its promoters stubbornly refused to leave the old ruts and try other methods. In the parallel chapter in 2 Kings, we read that the priests "repaired not the breaches of the house of the Lord." They were like too many Christians to-day who feel no burden on their souls to repair the breaches in the walls of Zion, although so broken down that they neither keep the wolf out nor the sheep in. Another sign that the priests were tainted with the general corruption, lies in the fact that they had evidently received more or less money for this purpose and had diverted it to their own use. The business was at once taken out of their hands by the energetic young king; a chest was made—probably at the suggestion of Jehoiada—and set in a convenient place for every one entering the temple to make their contribution. We learn from verse 7 that the temple had been robbed as well as shamefully neglected, and the things dedicated so solemnly to the service of the true God had been taken to lend new gorgeousness to the worship of Baal. But was this worse than robbing the Christian church of membership and money, and bestowing it on the lodge? The decay of our country churches is largely due to this cause; and now the same story begins to come from the cities where the increasing tide of lodge worship is beginning to show its legitimate fruits in disregard of God's house. But his is a spiritual temple. He dwells in the Church universal, more wonderful and glorious than the grandest cathedral ever reared by human hands, in which every member is a vessel made to honor. But how many allow the god of this world to steal them away from Jehovah's service, to which they have been so solemnly dedicated! to fill them with water from the broken cisterns of earth of which he that drinketh shall thirst again, instead of the pure water of life of which they were meant to be ministers to the sin-sick perishing souls around them. A spontaneous wave of enthusiasm seemed to go over the land in response to the king's proclamation, and they became, rulers and people together, a nation of cheerful givers. How much better is the Lord's way of filling an empty church treasury than any of the ways devised by man! A strict account was now kept, and the king himself became treasurer of the temple fund, so that every penny given to the work went to its destined object. This was one reason why the people gave so freely. A general feeling that there is too much cumbersome machinery and red tape about our missionary boards may have something to do with the decline in missionary interest. The more nearly the church comes back to the Bible way of giving, the more freely will the money flow in, and the less need will there be of using the objectionable methods now so sadly common.

3. The work finished. Vs. 12–14. When the money had all been paid in, and not before, the work of repairing the temple was begun. It is too much the fashion to build costly churches and then struggle on for years under the burden of a heavy debt. So did not the wise king Joash. "Provide things honest in the sight of all men," should be as much the rule in building a house for God as in building one for ourselves. Among other practical suggestions we note: (1) That every man was given his special work. Some were carpenters, some masons; some wrought in iron, others in brass, but each one wrought for God. So in Christian service each one has his appointed task, and the most important question of our lives next to our soul's salvation, is to know what that work is and then to do it. (2) "So the work was perfected by them," or, as the margin reads, "the healing went up upon the work." To heal the wounds of the church, whether caused by sins within or foes without, and not to heal her hurt slightly by daubing with untempered mortar, or to tear them open by indulging a spirit of censoriousness and fault-finding, is a very important part of every Christian's work. (3) All the days of Jehoiada the temple worship was kept up, but with his death king and people lapsed into idolatry. A reformation that is not grounded on true principles, but depends for its life on the personal influence of one man, has no root in itself and therefore no abiding results.

THE CONFERENCE.

(Continued from 5th page).

1. We recommend that the General Convention of the National Christian Association be held at Pittsburgh at such time as they may appoint.

2. We urge the friends of the anti-secrecy reform to co-operate and correspond with the N. C. A. for lecturers to lecture and hold conventions in the interests of this reform.

3. We recommend that the N. C. A. issue a cheap monthly publication in the interest of the cause, provided they see their way to do so.

4. We also recommend that the members of this Convention contribute in a liberal manner towards defraying the expenses of this meeting; and that the friends of reform generally render financial aid to the Board.

The Conference then joined in singing, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," and adjourned after the benediction by Rev. T. B. Arnold until evening.

The evening session was held in Central Music Hall proper, one of the finest audience rooms in the city and with a capacity of 2,000 or more. Rev. Albert Ethridge of Marsailles, Ill., presided, and called on Rev. J. D. McCord, assistant pastor of the First Congregational church, to offer prayer.

The addresses of the evening were: "What Hinders the Millennium?" by Rev. J. Blanchard; "Christ's Teachings Antagonistic to Secret Societies," by Rev. C. A. Bjork, of the Swedish Evangelical Mission Church, Chicago. This address was in the Swedish language. Last was the address of Rev. F. O. Cunningham, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Somerville, Boston. These addresses were interspersed with music by the Arion Quartette of Swedish male voices, whose songs were received with hearty favor. Before the last address the following letter of hearty good cheer from eminent clergymen in Boston was read with applause:

BOSTON, Mass.

To the Conference of Christians assembled in Central Music Hall, Chicago, Illinois, May 14th, 1891. Greeting,

DEAR BRETHREN:—We approve the object of your gathering as set forth in a "Call for a Christian Conference on the Secret Society System," signed by many men of distinguished ability, deep piety, and eminent in good works; and we implore the presence and guidance of the Holy Spirit on your efforts to bring to light the "hidden things of dishonesty." Unable to attend and personally participate in your deliberations, we commend to you our beloved brother and fellow-laborer in the Gospel ministry, F. O. Cunningham, whose views upon the subject are the result of prayerful investigation and observation as a successful pastor.

A. G. GORDON,
ROLAND D. GRANT,
JAMES M. GRAY,
O. P. GIFFORD.

The audience was discouragingly small in proportion to the promises made by many sympathizers with the reform in the city, but its courage and spirit was good, and enthusiastic responses were made to the addresses of the evening.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—Rev. Dr. L. N. Wheeler, well known as a missionary of the Methodist church in China, has taken the agency of the American Bible Society in that empire, and has also become the editor of the Chinese Recorder. These positions were left vacant by the departure of the Rev. Dr. L. H. Gulick, who has rendered such excellent service not only in China but in many other lands, and who is now an invalid, living with a son at Springfield, Mass.

—In 1723 Robert Millar, M. A., a Presbyterian minister in Paisley, published the first edition of the "History of the Propagation of Christianity, and the Overthrow of Paganism," in which he powerfully urged prayers as the first of nine means for the conversion of the heathen world. In 1742 great revivals lighted up the West country. "In these revivals," says George Smith, "and the prayers to which they gave birth, are found the faint beginnings of the modern missionary enterprise."

—A despatch signed J. N. Murdock, Corresponding Secretary, sent out from the rooms of the American Baptist Missionary Union, Boston, says: "The Lord has given another Telugu revival. The joyful intelligence has been received from Ongole that 2,023 were baptized in the last three months of 1890, of whom 1,671 were baptized on Sunday, December 28th; 2,000 more were waiting for baptism. Let all the people praise the Lord. The mission calls for twenty-five new men. Will not the Lord's people arise and send them?"

—The Free Thought establishment on Fleet street, London, has been closed. It has been for years the propagator of atheistic literature, and has long been identified with the name of Mr. Chas. Bradlaugh. The reason for closing it is that there is now so little demand for the kind of publications in which it dealt that it did not pay. The rage for its issues, which at one time was so extensive, has ceased. This is good news, and shows that people sooner or later tire of infidelity. The food which it furnishes does not nourish mind or heart. Neither are its friends willing to support a losing financial concern. They know nothing of sustaining an institution from benevolent considerations.

—A mission building has been secured at 142 West Twenty-first street, for the work of evangelization of the Roman Catholics, which Rev. James A. O'Connor, formerly a Roman Catholic priest, has been conducting in New York for the last twelve years. The building is well adapted for lectures and conferences on the various subjects connected with Romanism, besides the regular Sabbath services and prayer meetings for the congregation of converted Catholics that Mr. O'Connor has gathered around him. As is well known, his work is wholly evangelical, and has the sympathy of the various evangelical churches, while not formally united with or sustained by any of them. The cost of the building is $27,000. A first payment of $10,000 has been made. Another payment of $5,000 must be made in October. To meet this there is a legacy of $3,000, bequeathed by a member of Dr. John Hall's church, which will be available the first of November. Mr. O'Connor hopes that Christians of all denominations who are interested in this work will help to make up the balance of $2,000 before next November. The remainder of the purchase money can remain on mortgage at 4½ per cent. A board of trustees for this work has been organized and incorporated under the title of "Christ's Mission."

—The American Bible society celebrated its seventy-fifth anniversary in New York, May 13th. Gen. Joshua L. Chamberlain, ex-Governor of Maine, presided. Of the forty delegates who were present at the organization of the society seventy-five years ago, but two were living on Monday. They were Rev. J. D. Wickham of Vermont, and Rev. Dr. Vermilye of New York.

—One of the most remarkable religious revivals in the history of Cleveland, O., has been in progress for the past three weeks under the direction of the Rev. Mr. Mills, the evangelist, and supported by a union of the principal evangelistic churches. Upwards of 7,000 people have signed cards signifying their intention to become Christians. The meetings closed last Sunday.

—Already the International Missionary Union is making arrangements for its eighth annual meeting, to be held at Clifton Springs, N. Y., June 10 to 17 inclusive. Those who are now, or have been, foreign missionaries in connection with any Evangelical society will be welcomed and entertained without cost, through the kindness of Dr. Henry Foster. Notice of purpose to attend should be sent to Rev. Dr. J. T. Gracey, Rochester, N. Y.

—Since 1868, the year in which freedom of worship was guaranteed to Protestants, 12,000 citizens of Spain have left Rome for the Gospel. The Spanish Protestants have 120 houses of worship, 100 schools with 160 teachers and 6,000 pupils, 60 pastors and 40 evangelists, 6 church papers, three orphanages and two hospitals. A large number of Protestant periodicals printed in Spain, are sent regularly to Mexico, Chili and Argentine.

—While the Congregationalists are planning for a great International council in London, with 300 delegates, Methodists are looking forward to a similar gathering of 500 representatives of their denomination in Washington next October. This is to be the second Methodist ecumenical conference, the first one having been held in London ten years ago. The eastern hemisphere is to send 200 delegates, and the other 300 will represent North and South America. The conference is to continue twelve days. There is a committee on public worship, who will arrange for the ministers from abroad to preach in prominent pulpits at points distant from Washington as well as in that city. The coming season is to be memorable for notable gatherings of various denominations of the Christian church.

—Rev. C. H. Yatman, the noted evangelist, having finished his labors in Cleveland in the Young Men's Christian Association, has, for a month, been holding meetings in Findlay, Ohio, with marked success. No church or edifice can hold the crowds and several overflow meetings are held to accommodate the people. Such an awakening has not been known there for several years and the non-church going class flock nightly to hear him and prominent citizens are giving up godless lives and accepting Christ. Mrs. Kress of New York, sings in these meetings. These two co-workers will be for a month at Pueblo, Colorado.

—A French Bible colporteur with the name of Pointed, has during the last year disposed of nearly 7,000 Bibles and New Testaments in the western provinces as also 100,000 copies of the Gospels. He is laboring under the auspices of the English Society. Since the beginning of his work in 1871, he has sold in all 125,000 copies of the New Testament and the Bible, and given away 1,027,000 copies of the Gospels.

To help all our local and traveling agents in working for subscribers, we give to all new yearly subscribers during the present month a copy of Prof. Henry Drummond's latest work, "Love, the Supreme Gift; or The Greatest thing in the World." There is now an immense demand for this work. It has been issued by some publishers at 20 cents per copy; by others at 35 cents, and $1.00 for an illustrated edition. We will send it to every new subscriber that can be obtained before June 1st, whether by agent or directly. Considerable theological controversy has arisen over this work of Prof. Drummond's, and for its size it has attracted as much attention as the same author's famous "Natural Law in the Spiritual World." Dr. A. J. Gordon of Boston, has written a supplementary pamphlet on Faith, "The First thing in the World." Messiah's Herald of Boston, says: "There has been no work of its size issued during the last decade that has been more severely criticised than Drummond's 'Greatest thing in the World.' Many have warmly commended it, and thousands of copies of the work have been sold. The great objection to the work has been that Prof. Drummond paid little attention to the value of faith." Dr. Gordon makes up this deficiency.

We have secured a special rate on this work. Free to new subscribers for a year or more to June 1st.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, causing distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet efficiently. It tones the stomach, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, banishes headache, and refreshes the mind.

Distress After Eating

Sick Headache

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. After eating I would have a faint or tire all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble was aggravated by my business, painting. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." George A. Page, Watertown, Mass.

Heartburn

Sour Stomach

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

Reports of the Statistician of the Department of Agriculture show an increase since April of last year of more than 100 per cent in the price of corn and oats; 30 per cent and more in wheat in primitive markets; 32 per cent in Chicago for choice beeves.

The Chief of the Government Bureau of Statistics reports that the total value of the exports of domestic mineral oils from the United States during the month of April was $3,898,259. The value of beef and hog exports for April was $9,289,781.

Ex-Senator Blair's name is being mentioned in connection with the position of superintendent of immigration. Attorney-General Miller has decided that the President may appoint the superintendent of immigration. It is likely that the appointment will be made soon.

On Friday Justice Brewer, of the United States Supreme Court, granted a writ of error in the Boyd-Thayer Nebraska Governor case, and efforts will be made to have the case advanced on the docket of the United States Supreme Court.

President Harrison returned from his 10,000-mile journey on Friday without accident, but naturally fatigued from the long strain. It was a remarkable railroad accomplishment, and does great credit to George W. Boyd, assistant general passenger agent of the Pennsylvania railroad, who largely planned and executed it.

CHICAGO.

Prof. John P. Barrett, chief of the World's Fair department of electricity and electrical appliances, has a plan by which 11,000,000 can be saved in the expenses of the World's Fair. This is in the single matter of lighting the grounds and buildings.

Dr. Wickersham, late health commissioner, has submitted his report for the year 1890. In January was the greatest mortality, there being 2,501 deaths. Mortality for the year, 21,856. The death rate per thousand was 18.22. Not a single case of small-pox was reported.

The Chicago & Northwestern railroad company, to prevent a repetition of provoking strikes, discharged every switchman and yardmaster in the employ of the company at 7 o'clock Thursday morning and their places filled by men kept in readiness for the occasion. At every station along the main line of the Northwestern road the same wholesale discharges took place. These men were all members of a labor union.

COUNTRY.

At Springfield, Ill., Thursday, after his speech at the Lincoln monument, President Harrison was presented by Governor Fifer, on behalf of the citizens of Petersburg, with a gold-headed cane, made from the Lincoln store building at New Salem.

The Illinois Senate Thursday passed the bill providing for the punishment of "false materialization" of the spirits of any deceased person.

The Democrats of the Illinois House of Representatives applauded long and loud when the vote was taken on the compulsory-education bill with English not in it. They had enough votes to carry it after protracted delay.

Six hundred colored laborers from St. Louis passed through St. Paul Tuesday night and Wednesday en route to the State of Washington for the purpose of breaking a strike now on there among white laborers.

Over 100 square miles of virgin forests in Wisconsin are reported to have been destroyed by fires which are yet beyond control. St. Paul was enveloped in heavy smoke all day Wednesday from forest fires 100 miles distant.

At Stanton, Ill., three men took drinks from a bottle which they supposed contained whisky, but which was filled with aconite. In a short time one was dead and at this time it is believed that the other two will die.

(Continued on 16th page.)

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from May 11 to May 16, inclusive:

R P Downing, J W Leeds, A F Brockman, J N Lloyd, Mrs M B Park, Rev I D Davis, Mrs C H Chase, J Todd, J. Clair, A R Elliott, D Reynolds, G A Paddock, L W Johnston, J McClung, Mrs E M Livesay, R C Wylie, Rev W M Beers, T Mills, Sr, H Curtis Rev J J Smith, J Manville, L Rutty, C H Watson, I P Bennett, J M Clark, Rev W W Ames, G W Clark.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring	98	@ 1	03
Winter	1 03	@ 1	07½
Corn—No. 2	62½	@	64
Oats—No. 2	51	@	53½
Rye—No. 2	91½
Bran per ton	13 50	@14	00
Hay—Timothy	10 00	@15	00
Butter, medium to best	12	@	22
Cheese	05	@	12½
Beans	1 75	@ 2	25
Eggs	15
Seeds—Timothy	1 08	@ 1	30
Flax	1 17	@ 1	18
Broom corn	03	@	04½
Potatoes, per bu	75	@ 1	05
Hides—Green to dry flint	04½	@	07½
Lumber—Common	10 00	@13	00
Wool	15	@	34
Cattle—Choice to extra	5 70	@ 6	40
Common to good	1 75	@ 5	60
Hogs	3 40	@ 4	85
Sheep	3 25	@ 6	50

NEW YORK.

Wheat	1 11	@ 1	14½
Corn	79	@	83
Oats	55	@	71
Eggs	16¾
Butter	15	@	35
Wool	14	@	39

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	2 60	@ 5	95
Hogs	3 00	@ 4	65
Sheep	5 50	@ 6	00

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer who will send me their Express and P.O. address.
T. A. Slocum, M. C., 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. 25cts each.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Behind the times

—the woman who doesn't use Pearline; behind in her work, too, both in quantity and quality. With Pearline, work is easier and better. Clothes can be washed without being worn out; cleaning can be done without scouring and scrubbing. All that it does is done without danger; the only danger is in getting something else.

Beware of imitations which are being peddled from door to door. First quality goods do not require such desperate methods to sell them. PEARLINE sells on its merits, and is manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, New York.
202

THE COSMOPOLITAN,

The Cheapest Illustrated Monthly in the World.

25 CENTS A NUMBER.
$2.40 PER YEAR.

EDITION FOR DEC. '90, 100,000 COPIES.

THE COSMOPOLITAN is literally what the New York Times calls it, "AT ITS PRICE, THE BRIGHTEST, MOST VARIED AND BEST EDITED OF THE MAGAZINES."

SUBSCRIBE. SUBSCRIBE. SUBSCRIBE.

An Unusual Opportunity

FOR NEW SUBSCRIBERS FOR ONE YEAR ONLY.

THE COSMOPOLITAN, per year	$2.40
The Christian Cynosure	1.50
The price of the two publications	3.90
We will furnish both for only	3.00

This offer is only to new subscribers to both the Cosmopolitan and the Cynosure, and only for one year.

To an old subscriber to the Cynosure who is new to the Cosmopolitan $3.25
To old subscribers to both 3.50

A Splendidly Illustrated Periodical at a Price hitherto deemed Impossible.

TRY IT FOR A YEAR.

OLD AND NEW

WANTED FRIENDS

TO GAIN

NEW SUBSCRIBERS

FOR

BUDS & BLOSSOMS.

Acknowledged to be one of the BEST AND CHEAPEST Magazines. Its wealth of illustration, purity yet often thrilling statements of MISSION WORK and ADVENTURE in lower New York, make it wholesome and cheery reading. Edited by

J. F. AVERY,
Pastor Mariners' Temple. 1 Henry St

BUDS AND BLOSSOMS

AND FRIENDLY GREETINGS

WANTS to give Canvassers

$5 & $10 REWARDS.

Send three cents for specimens, etc.

Address Rev. J. F. AVERY,
1 Henry St., New York.

"THE WHOLE IS BETTER THAN A PART," AND YOU HAVE IT HERE IN A "NUT-SHELL."

SECRET SOCIETIES ILLUSTRATED.

Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite). Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts 99 pages, paper cover. Price, 25 cents; $2.00 per dozen. For sale by the National Christian Association, at Head-quarters for Anti-Secrecy Literature, 221 W. Madison St. Chicago.

WILL SELL FOR

Regular Price.		Selling Price.
	FIVE CENTS.
$ .15	"A WOMAN'S VICTORY, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp.	$ .05
$ .10	"WASHINGTON SOUVENIR." Portraits of Geo. Washington and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freemasonry. Size 18x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home.	$ .05
	SIX CENTS.
$ .10	"SECRET SOCIETIES." A Lecture delivered at Oberlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Paper, 36 pp.	$ .06
$ .20	"REASONS WHY Secret Societies cannot be Fellowshiped by the United Presbyterian Church." By Rev. J. W. Bain. Pages 149.	$ .06
	TEN CENTS.
$ .15	"MY EXPERIENCE WITH SECRET SOCIETIES." By a Traveler. Paper, 51 pp.	$ .10
$ .25	"SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF JAMES G. BIRNEY." His relation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in history. By General William Birney. Paper, 32 pages.	$ .10
	TWENTY CENTS.
$ .30	"SONGS FOR THE TIMES," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohibition and W. C. T. U. meetings. Boards, 152 pages.	$ .20
	TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.
$ .75	"BEREA COLLEGE," Kentucky. An interesting history of the founding of that College for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 87 pages.	.25
	FIFTY CENTS.
$1.00	"NATIONAL SUICIDE AND ITS PREVENTION." The following will show the drift of the book: Measure or Standard of Value; What is Honest Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lumry. Cloth, 224 pp.	$ .50
$1.50	"HISTORY OF SECRET SOCIETIES IN FRANCE," or "THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS." By Lucien De La Hodde. Translated from the French by Gen'l. J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp.	$ .50

Sent postpaid to anyaddress on receipt of the selling price.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

FIFTY YEARS and BEYOND;

OR,

Old Age and How to Enjoy It.

A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHROP.

Introduction by
REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D.,
(Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of that now is, and to give comfort and help life that is to come.

"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors the gray head and refuses to consider the oldish man burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"The selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveller to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1

Address, W. I. PHILLIP,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago Il

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Green, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. 25cts each.

HOME AND HEALTH.

WASHING GLASS.

Marion Harland is authority for the statement that if a tablespoonful of kerosene be put into four quarts of tepid water, and this be used in washing windows and mirrors, instead of pure water, there will remain upon the cleaned surface a polish no amount of mere friction can give.

We also find it stated that lamp chimneys should never be washed in soap-suds or clear water. If a cloth wet with alcohol was used for this purpose, or what is much cheaper and always at hand, kerosene oil, there will be a perceptible falling off in the manufacture and sale of lamp chimneys. It is really surprising how seldom chimneys will break and what a fine polish will be given by cleaning in kerosene or alcohol.

THE WELL AND THE CESSPOOL.

The question is asked how far these should be apart, and is replied to in this wise by an authority: In some soils they ought to be miles apart, with a hill of rock between. In sandy soils, with a dry subsoil, a well will drain almost any amount of territory if it is lower than the land around it. The water will leach through the sand and then make a drive for the first opening below it. The better way is to have no cess-pools, but to absorb and deodorize all slops and excreta by the use of dry earth and plaster, mixed with which they become excellent fertilizers. In this way a nuisance is avoided and waste is prevented.

HOUSE-DRAINS.

House-drains as a source of ground contamination, are even more dangerous than the common sewers, since they are so frequently located immediately under the house, where the results of any defect are more directly manifested. By unskillful construction, or by subsequent careless usage or want of repair, the filth is effused into the basement or cellar, and impregnates the soil under the house. In country districts isolated outbreaks of diphtheria, traceable to cess-pool effluvia, are not at all uncommon. In these cases it is generally found that there is a water-closet in the house, where there is little or no provision for any change of air; that the soil pipe is never ventilated, and that the closet drain discharges into a cess-pool which is completely covered up, and only cleaned at rare intervals. The consequence is that any gases generated in the cesspool have no outlet, except through the water-closet into the house, and hence result attacks of diphtheria, ulcerated sore throat, and other ailments. From an inquiry instituted by the State Board of Health of Massachusetts, respecting the predisposing causes of diphtheria, its prevalence, etc., it is shown that this disease has been most severe in the rural districts where there are no sewers and where the drainage is bad.—John McMullen, A. M.

BIRD BONNETS.

A French harlot a few years ago, led by Satan, and wishing to create a sensation, fastened a bird on her bonnet. The the thing took; others followed the strumpet's example, and are following it today. The birds, God's beautiful birds, that make the air vocal with his praise, are slaughtered by millions, that tender-hearted women may wear their skins to the house of prayer, displaying them as Indians display the scalps which they have torn from the heads of helpless women and little children, or as the French Infidels in the Reign of Terror wore the scalps and skins of persons whom they had guillotined. Vessels are said to be imperiled, because the birds, whose cries warned the mariner of dangers on the coast, are slain. Fields are ravaged and crops devoured by worms because the birds which God made to protect them are slaughtered for trimmings for hats.

Let women who wear these things say no more about Indians scalping their enemies, or cannibals decorating their villages and temples with human skulls, until they have ceased to display their own folly and thoughtlessness and barbarism by wearing birds and wings upon their hats.—Common People.

The poet sings, in dainty rhymes.
Of summer days and sunny climes,
Of beauteous maidens, passing fair,
With witching eyes and waving hair,
Till, near the end, you're apt to see—
'Tis but an "ad" for P. F. P.;

that is, Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the infallible and guaranteed remedy for all kinds of female weakness, which cures the ailments of feeble, "run-down" and debilitated women, and restores them to youthfulness and beauty once more. The price of this royal remedy, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, is but $1.00 a bottle, and money refunded in every case if it doesn't give satisfaction. See guarantee on bottle-wrapper

---

Take good care of your beard and keep it clear of gray hairs so as to retain your young looks by using Buckingham's Dye for the Whiskers.

FOR A DISORDERED LIVER try BEECHAM'S PILLS.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Odd-fellowship: ITS HISTORY AND ITS WORK. By President J. Blanchard. A neat pamphlet with cover. Postpaid, 5 cts.

Permanent Results,

And not a mere temporary exhilaration, are produced by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine, being an alterative, and working constitutionally, through the blood, its effects may not be immediately apparent in all cases, but the gain in health and strength, through its persistent use, is real and lasting. It reaches every drop of blood in the body.

"I have none but good words to speak regarding Ayer's Sarsaparilla. All during the winter I was languid, tired, and without any appetite, until I commenced the use of this remedy. I took three bottles. Its effects have been revivifying, and I feel as if I had entered a new life. I did not think it was in the power of medicine to produce such a wonderful change, as has Ayer's Sarsaparilla in my case."—Mrs. C. Johnson, 310 Hicks st., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and also other preparations of a like nature, for the purposes of a blood-purifier, and, while receiving no good, but often positive harm, from others, I have always derived benefit from Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and have no hesitation in recommending it to any one in want of a reliable blood-purifier."—Mrs. M. C. Hopkinson, 110 Merrimack Corporation, Lowell, Mass.

☞ The safest and most reliable tonic, alterative, and diuretic is

Ayer's Sarsaparilla —FOR— Debility.

"I was a great sufferer from a low condition of the blood and general debility, becoming, finally, so reduced that I was unfit for work. Nothing that I did for the complaint helped me so much as Ayer's Sarsaparilla, a few bottles of which restored me to health and strength. I take every opportunity to recommend this medicine in similar cases."—C. Evick, 14 E. Main st., Chillicothe, Ohio.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla is one of the very few proprietary medicines that I can honestly recommend. I have seen it used in this place, in a number of cases, with very satisfactory results, and I have used it in my own family, for salt-rheum, with abundant success. I consider it to be the leading blood-purifier of the day."—Charles C. Davis, Nashua, N. H.

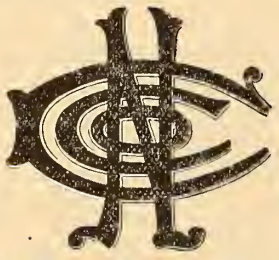
"I suffered from general debility for fifteen years. A few bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla completely cured me, and I now enjoy good health."—Mrs. J. F. McElhinney, Truro, N. S.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists.

Price $1. Six bottles, $5. Worth $5 a bottle.

EVERY WATERPROOF COLLAR OR CUFF



BE UP TO THE MARK

THAT CAN BE RELIED ON

Not to Split!

Not to Discolor!

BEARS THIS MARK.

TRADE CELLULOID MARK.

NEEDS NO LAUNDERING. CAN BE WIPED CLEAN IN A MOMENT.

THE ONLY LINEN-LINED WATERPROOF COLLAR IN THE MARKET.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.
Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.
Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.
A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

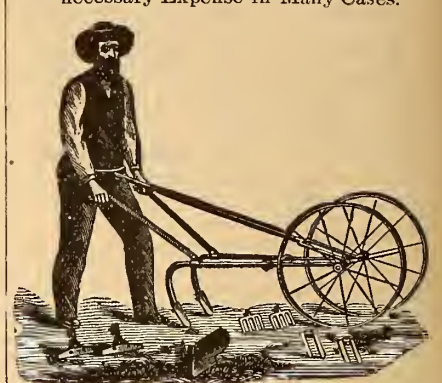
C. A. SNOW & CO.
Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

10,000

Another ten thousand edition of the tract

KILLED, AND NO INQUEST.

This is a large 4-page tract at 30 cents per pound, 15 cents for half pound, and 10 cents for a third of a pound. It is an illustrated account of the death of Rev. J. W. Johnston, while being initiated by the officers of Huntington Lodge, W. Va., in January of this year. Sent postpaid at the above price. Address,



NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St Chicago

THE BEST.

EVERITT'S MAN-WEIGHT

HOE, CULTIVATOR PLOW, ETC., SINGLE AND DOUBLE WHEEL.

Will Revolutionize Hand-Power Cultivation—Makes Keeping a Horse an Unnecessary Expense in Many Cases.

This new Invention is a Great Boon to all Cultivators of the Soil, and must be Classed with the Great Inventions of the Age, yet it is so simple that the natural question with every one is, "Why did I not think of that?" And so nicely does it fill a want existing with thousands of gardeners, nurserymen, seedmen, florists, and farmers, that after the first trial they invariably conclude to "never do without it."

All other Garden Tools, Seed Drills, Rollers, etc., can be attached and run with our propeller with many times the power and greater ease than by hand power.

SINGLE WHEEL cultivator, with attachments, price $6.00. W't, 15 lbs.

DOUBLE WHEEL, with attachments, $8.00. W't, 20 lbs.

With every Double Wheel Machine the extra parts are furnished necessary to convert it into the single wheel machine, without extra charge. Thus practically giving the two machines for the price of one.

This best of all hand cultivators to every worker for the Cynosure free as follows:

Two-wheel for 15 new subscribers. ($22.50.) Single-wheel for 12 new subscribers. ($18.00.)

Two-wheel machine, 1 renewal and one new subscriber for $8.50. Same for two new subscribers.

Single wheel and same for $7.00

Express or freight extra.

SEE THIS!

The latest, most complete edition

Over 235 choice

Reform Songs for the Times.

Only 30c a copy, or 20c by the 100

—AND—

"THE TOBACCO MANIA."

$1 per 100.

For sale here and by the author,

GEO. W. CLARK,
76 W. Montcalm St., Detroit, Mich.

THE WOMAN'S NEWS

IS THE ONLY

GENERAL WOMAN'S NEWSPAPER IN THE UNITED STATES,

—AND IS THE—

LARGEST WOMAN'S NEWSPAPER EVER PUBLISHED.

The publishers offer the Largest Cash Commissions and the Best Premiums ever given by any newspaper.

Agents Wanted Everywhere.

Send for Sample Copies and Terms for Agents. Address,

THE HOSTERMAN PUB. CO.,
Springfield, Ohio.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office

FARM NOTES.

TROUBLE WITH COWS.

The Western Rural publishes a column of suggestions on the treatment of diseases in cows from which we condense the following:

Bloat is simply carbonic acid gas in the first stomach. The cause is too rapid eating, and usually happens when the cow is first turned out to rich pasture. Two ounces of liquid ammonia in a quart of distilled water will sometimes neutralize the gas. The common remedy and surest is to puncture the paunch. Prevention, however, is better than cure; therefore don't let her overeat.

When cattle have foul in the foot, remove the loose matter with a knife and wash with a ten per cent solution of carbolic acid. If fungus appears, apply equal parts of blood root and pulverized alum.

Feed oatmeal and boiled potatoes in cases of dysentery. Oil meal is also good. For the looseness give powdered charcoal, or if that does not check it give the following, in warm gruel: powdered oak bark, one ounce; prepared chalk, two ounces; powdered catechu, two drams; powdered ginger, four drams, and powdered opium one dram.

Mange is contagious, and the cows having it should be separated. Someone has said that mange comes from three causes: filth, debility and contagion. As it usually appears in the spring it points to bad winter care. Sulphur ointment and good nourishing food and a tonic comprise the proper treatment. This treatment is good, too, for lice. If the lice do not succumb to the sulphuric ointment, rub beeswax, lard and tallow in equal quantities well into the hide.

"Loss of cud" simply means indigestion. Give a purgative and then a tonic.

TREATMENT OF CALVES.

The following practical advice on the treatment of calves is also from the Western Rural: Let the calf have the milk of the cow for a few days under all circumstances. The milk is fit for nothing else and besides contains medicinal elements which the calf needs. If the calf bleeds at the navel tie a string around the end. If the calf purges give rhubarb and magnesia in ounce doses with milk. That is good to administer, too, in scours. The purpose is to correct acidity. Give two ounces of castor oil for scours, and then follow with powdered opium, ten grains; magnesia, one ounce; powdered catechu, half dram; tincture of capsicum, two drams; essence of peppermint, five drops. Mix and give twice a day in milk. Constipation may occur when calves are fed on milk from different cows or from a cow whose milk is too old. Give two ounces of Epsom salts. It should be taken hold of at its first appearance, for many calves die from neglecting to keep watch for costiveness. Calves when turned out to pasture sometimes have hoove. Physic at once. The mouth of the calf should be examined from time to time, especially when teething. If the mouth is sore, give Epsom salts, and apply to the mouth borax dissolved in water.

FOR THE SEASON.

Parsnips sown early make an excellent food for stock.

Did you ever sow beans in drills? Try it

Calves should be watered regularly, says a farm authority. They often suffer greatly from thirst—the milk not being all the drink they need.

Begin early on the weeds.

By planting sweet corn every week for a few weeks, a supply of green fodder may be had the whole season through.

Don't plant corn until the ground is thoroughly warm. By gaining a week in planting you often lose two weeks in harvesting and a large share of the crop.

A crop of buckwheat will rid land of the wireworm, says Prof. J. A. Luillie, New York State Entomologist.

Says the American Agriculturist: "If a lamb dies in a flock where there are twins of the same age, take the dead out of sight of the mother, strip off its skin and sew it upon one of the twins. Put the latter with the bereaved ewe, and she will quickly adopt it."

A MAD POET

rushed into a newspaper office recently, and threatened to clean out the establishment, because they printed his verses wrong. Said he: "I wrote. 'To dwell forever in a grot of peace,' and you idiots put it 'a pot of grease.'" The mortified editor presented him with a vial of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, a year's subscription and an apology.

The little "Pellets" positively cure sick and nervous headache, biliousness, costiveness, and all derangements of the stomach, bowels and liver. It's a large contract, but the smallest things in the world do the business—Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They're the smallest, but the most effective. They go to work in the right way. They cleanse and renovate the liver, stomach and bowels thoroughly—but they do it mildly and gently. You feel the good they do—but you don't feel them doing it.

As a Liver Pill, the "Pellets" are unequaled. Sugar-coated, easy to take, and put up in vials, and hermetically sealed, and thus always fresh and reliable. A perfect vest-pocket remedy, in small vials, and only one necessary for a laxative or three for a cathartic.

They're the cheapest pill you can buy, because they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned.

You only pay for the good you get.

That's the peculiar plan all Dr. Pierce's medicines are sold on, through druggists.

Always open

—the offer made by the proprietors of Doctor Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It's a reward of $500 cash for an incurable case of catarrh, no matter how bad, or of how long standing. They'll carry it out, too. It's one thing to make the offer. It's a very different thing to make it good. It couldn't be done, except with an extraordinary medicine. But that's what they have. By its mild, soothing and healing properties, Dr. Sage's Remedy cures the worst cases. It doesn't simply palliate for a time, or drive the disease to the lungs. It produces a perfect and permanent cure. Try it and see. If you can't be cured, you'll be paid.

"Life, Liberty,

And the pursuit of happiness" are the birthrights of all American citizens. But life is misery, liberty is slavery, and happiness impossible, if foul humors and germs of disease are lurking in the blood, if you are worn out with

THAT TIRED FEELING,

or if you suffer from indigestion, sick headache, biliousness or other similar troubles. The remarkable blood-purifying, building-up properties of Hood's Sarsaparilla entitle it to your confidence as the GREAT HEALTH-GIVER.

We point to its record of wonderful cures, request you to hear the words of praise it is continually receiving, and ask if you feel the need of a good medicine, to try Hood's Sarsaparilla now. Its popularity is this year greater than ever, and far beyond any other article of the kind in the market. It is an unequaled blood purifier, an unapproached tonic and appetizer, and beyond all comparison as a general Spring Medicine.

The St. Louis Sermon

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover.

Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Between Two Opinions: OR THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR. By Miss E. E. Flagg, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages, cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid, 25 cts.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entir Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33d inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated'

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated' comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots,

WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

It contains the portraits of

Washington.
John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.
James Madison, 4th President of the United States.
Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.
Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.
Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.
John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.
Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.
William Wirt, Attorney-General.
John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.
John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.
Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.
Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.

Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, postpaid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians

CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

FOR MINISTERS

THE

"STORIES OF THE GODS"

is especially adapted. They will at once derstand the references to the idolatrous systems of the nations. And the idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus more clearly seen and easily understood. Will you furnish each pastor in your place with one of these pamphlets?

PRICE, ONLY 10 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
221 W. Madison Street, Chicago

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

BUSINESS.

NEW AND OLD.

The Cynosure will continue to supply all ts subscribers, new or old, who send $1.50 for the paper, with the HEALTH CALENDAR and ROPP'S COMMERCIAL CALCULATOR, as follows: The paper and the Calculator, leatherette bound, No. 1, (publisher's price 50 cents) for $1.70. Morocco bound (price $1.00) for $2.00.

The paper and Calendar (publisher's price 30 cents) for $1.65. The Calculator (No. 1.) or a Calendar free to every old subscriber sending $3.00 for renewal and a new subscriber.

The Calculator is a book of great value for every farmer, mechanic or business man.

The Calendar contains a temperance bill of fare for every day, and hundreds of good recipes. It hangs on the wall in constant sight.

NEW OFFERS.

The Cynosure and the Cosmopolitan Magazine (publisher's price $2.40) to new subscribers only $3.00. To others $3.25.

The Cynosure and Pres. C. A. Blanchard's new book "Educational Papers" for $1.70 to all subscribers.

NEWEST AND BEST.

Read the advertisement of the Manweight Cultivator on another page.

We will send the cultivator free to every one who will send us a club of 15 new subscribers at $1.50 each; or the single wheel for a club of 12 new names.

For $8.50 we will send the two-wheel cultivator and the Cynosure two years to new subscribers, or a year each to a new and an old. This gives two subscriptions for 50 cts. The single-wheel machine and the same subscriptions for $7.00. We don't pay transportation.

We would be glad to put 100 of these machines at work killing weeds and raising new subscriptions. It is an investment none will regret.

50,000

SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CYNOSURE would bring our reform to the POINT OF SUCCESS. LET US "KEEP EVERLASTINGLY AT IT."

MRS. HAVILAND'S wonderful book "A Woman's Life Work," should be read in every family. It will be sent to everyone who will send a full year's subscription to the Cynosure and $1.00 in addition. The price of the book is $1.50. We make this special offer for May only.

BLACK BEAUTY is one of the most popular books of the day. It is said that about two million copies have been sold. Every boy and girl should read it, and learn to feel compassion for the dumb beasts that spend their lives in the service of man. We will give a copy free to every one of them who sends us a new subscriber before June 1.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office.
H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St., N. Y.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

Losses by forest fires in five counties of Michigan are estimated at $2,000,000. Hundreds of families in the State are destitute and many persons are suffering from severe burns.

Robert Bonner called the National Scotch-Irish Congress to order at Louisville, Ky., Thursday. Many men of national reputation were present. Among the prominent ones were Governor Buckner, of Kentucky; Dr. John Hall, the renowned Presbyterian divine; Dr. McCosh, of Princeton College. Over a thousand delegates are in attendance. The organization was formed at Columbia, Tenn,, in 1889.

The steamer Australia, which arrived May 12th from Honolulu, brings advices that the yacht Halcyon, loaded with $1,000,000 worth of contraband opium, is on her way to the Pacific coast.

Fire destroyed twenty blocks of Muskegon (Mich.) business houses and residences Saturday afternoon, with an estimated loss of $500,000. The flames started in the rear of the Langwell Hotel. Every business house on Pine street was burned. The flames were checked only at Isabella street, a distance of ten blocks from the starting point. The residences burned numbered 350. A child sleeping in the Langwell Hotel barn is thought to have perished.

FOREIGN.

In the Italian Chamber of Deputies yesterday Premier Rudina said that the New Orleans affair was simply a legal question, and that the departure of Fava from Washington had been ordered as a protest against the action of the United States.

Two more Jews have been murdered at Corfu, and the bodies of several Jews who died at that place from starvation lie unburied.

Mr. Gladstone, Lord Salisbury and Lord George Hamilton, and seventy members of Parliament were suffering from the grip. Orders have been given to have every room in both houses fumigated with sulphur during the holidays.

A dispatch received from Tokio, the capital of Japan, announces that an attempt has been made upon the life of the Czarewitch, but that the imperial traveler, though seriously wounded, is considered to be in no danger of dying.

A dynamite bomb was exploded in the Portuguese ministry of the interior. The bomb is supposed to have been placed there by the Republicans.

Pope Leo is trying to induce the European powers to bring pressure to bear on the Italian government to force it to report the damages to the Vatican caused by the Pazzo Pantalio explosion.

Since it is now a well-established fact that catarrh is a blood disease, medical men are quite generally prescribing Ayer's Sarsaparilla for that most loathsome complaint, and the result, in nearly every instance, proves the wisdom of their advice.

Puget Sound catechism and its chief city SEATTLE, WASHINGTON
Send stamp to Eshelman, Llewellyn & Co., Seattle, Wash.

AGENTS WANTED both sexes. $25 to $50 per week EASILY MADE. SAMPLES FREE. Send for terms. W. C. Wilson, Kansas City, Mo.

Only $20

ODELL DOUBLE CASE TYPE WRITER
It has 78 Characters, and is the only Type Writer with Check Perforator attachment. Is fast taking the lead of all Type Writers. Special terms to Ministers & S.S. Teachers. Send for circulars. Odell Type Writer Co, 35 Fifth Av. Chicago.

PENSIONS OLD CLAIMS Settled Under New Law.
Soldiers, Widows, Parents, send for blank applications and information. PATRICK O'FARRELL Pension Agent, Washington, D. C.

WALL PAPER
SAMPLES SENT FREE of spring patterns with borders and ceilings to match. One half million rolls offered at wholesale prices.
White blanks 4c to 6c, Gilts 8c to 35c. Embossed Gilts 10c to 50c. I will send you the most popular colorings, and guarantee to save you money. ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant, 63-65 W. Washington-st. Chicago

DR. PRICE'S
Cream Baking Powder.
Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

DONALD KENNEDY
Of Roxbury, Mass., says
Kennedy's Medical Discovery cures Horrid Old Sores, Deep Seated Ulcers of 40 years standing, Inward Tumors, and every disease of the skin, except Thunder Humor, and Cancer that has taken root. Price $1.50. Sold by every Druggist in the U. S. and Canada.

Bermuda Bottled.
"You must go to Bermuda. If you do not I will not be responsible for the consequences." "But, doctor, I can afford neither the time nor the money." "Well, if that is impossible, try
SCOTT'S EMULSION
OF PURE NORWEGIAN COD LIVER OIL.
I sometimes call it Bermuda Bottled, and many cases of
CONSUMPTION,
Bronchitis, Cough or Severe Cold
I have CURED with it; and the advantage is that the most sensitive stomach can take it. Another thing which commends it is the stimulating properties of the Hypophosphites which it contains. You will find it for sale at your Druggist's but see you get the original SCOTT'S EMULSION."

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.
LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

MONEY can be earned at our NEW line of work, rapidly and honorably, by those of either sex, young or old, and in their own localities, wherever they live. Any one can do the work. Easy to learn. We furnish everything. We start you. No risk. You can devote your spare moments, or all your time to the work. This is an entirely new lead, and brings wonderful success to every worker. Beginners are earning from $25 to $50 per week and upwards, and more after a little experience. We can furnish you the employment and teach you FREE. No space to explain here. Full information FREE. TRUE & CO., AUGUSTA, MAINE.

WHEATON COLLEGE,
WHEATON, ILL.
A School for Men and Women.
COMMENCEMENT THURSDAY, JUNE 25TH, 1891.
Full College Courses, Preparatory School, Business School, Musical Conservatory and Art School. Fifteen Professors and Instructors.
Send for Catalogue.
CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Oddfellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templars Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange," and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in cloth for $1.00.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.
EPPS'S COCOA
BREAKFAST.
"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle malaoies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—"Civil Service Gazette."
Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins, by Grocers, labelled thus:
JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London, England.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED
THE COMPLETE RITUAL
With Eighteen Military Diagrams
As Adopted and Promulgated by the
SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE OF THE
INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS
At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885.
Compiled and Arranged by John C. Underwood, Lieutenant General.
WITH THE
UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED,
ALSO AN
Historical Sketch and Introduction
By Pres't. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.
25 cents each.
For Sale by the National Christian Association
221 West Madison St., Chicago.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the REPUBLIC, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." 25cts each.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC
TRADE MARK
Physicians Couldn't Cure Him.
SEDAMSVILLE, Hamilton Co., O., June, 1889.
One bottle of Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic cured me entirely, after physicians had tried it unsuccessfully for 8 months to relieve me of nervous debility. W. HUENNEFELD.
Best of All.
CHICAGO, May, 1888.
I consider it my duty to recommend to all sufferers of nervous diseases Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son, now 15 years of age, was suffering for 4 years from epilepsy to such an extent that no remedy seemed to even relieve the attacks, but after using only 5 bottles of Koenig's Nerve Tonic he had but one slight attack. I make this statement out of gratitude and with the desire to make this best of all remedies better known
T. STEIN, 321 22d St.
It is a great pleasure to the undersigned to whom the above circumstances are well known, to certify to the truth of the facts as stated above.
L. KLING,
Pastor of Lutheran Evang. Salem Church,
Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.
This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the
KOENIG MEDICINE CO.,
50 West Madison, cor. Clinton St., CHICAGO, ILL.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.
Price $1 per Bottle. 6 Bottles for $5.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIII., No. 37. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MAY 28, 1891. WHOLE No. 1,100.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Send all business letters relating to the paper to THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.... 1
The People's Party..... 8
Can it be True?..... 8
N. C. A. Board Meeting. 8
Personal Notes..... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Open Letter to Mr. Findel... 1
SELECTED:
The Song of the Reformers..... 2
The Oath of the Southern Alliance..... 2
THE CONFERENCE:
Address of Rev. J. Blanchard..... 3
Address of Rev. C. F. Hawley..... 3
CORRESPONDENCE:
Annual Meeting Correspondence; Pith and Point..... 6
LITERATURE..... 6
REFORM NEWS:
Parlor Meetings in Rhode Island; The Washington Agent in Chicago.. 5
N. C. A. Treasurer's Report..... 5
THE N. C. A..... 7
AGENTS AND LECTURERS.... 7
N. C. A. Members..... 7
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 9
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 9
THE HOME.....10
TEMPERANCE.....11
BIBLE LESSON.....11
RELIGIOUS NEWS.....12
The Church and its Foes..12
From the Greek Missionaries.....12
DONATIONS.....13
NEWS OF THE WEEK.....13
LODGE NOTES.....14
FARM NOTES.....15
BUSINESS.....16
MARKETS.....13

See pages 7 and 16 for premium offers.

Let such enthusiasm for the Sabbath as the Illinois State Sunday School Association manifested at Danville last week, sweep over the land! A resolution calling for the closing of the World's Fair Exposition, and for the prohibition of the sale of intoxicants on the grounds was the most popular of any before the convention. The Inter-Ocean report says: "Men arose in chairs and gave cheer after cheer, while ladies waved handkerchiefs and fans. There was not a dissenting voice." Why may not our churches have a zeal like this for God?

The chase of the U. S. steamer Charleston after the Itata, the Chilian insurgent vessel, has mightily the appearance of being ordered to satisfy our American Jingoes. When she was seized at San Diego, her captain may well have imagined his detention under the control of a single deputy marshal a needless joke. The whole affair has served merely as an occasion for our bellicose citizens to renew their periodical bluster about the warlike prowess of the country. We have no need of war, any more than we need a begum or a czar.

The Chicago Evening Journal has always been regarded as the most conservative of the Republican papers of this city. It is the more amazing, therefore, that we read in its columns of what is called "an interesting incident" in President Harrison's recent trip to California. The incident is thus told: "When the President accepted the banquet tendered by the Bohemian Club of San Francisco, he was asked what kinds of wine he desired. He replied that in the matter of drinking he had determined to confine himself to champagne exclusively. In reply to further inquiry the President said, 'I prefer G. H. Mumm & Co.'s Extra Dry.' The President's preference was that of the entire committee, and G. H. Mumm & Co.'s Extra Dry of the vintage of 1884 was the wine served at the banquet, which, perhaps, was the finest ever given on the Pacific Coast." This is a shameful story,—too much so to be true. It reads more like a villainous liquor seller's lying advertisement. Out of mere respect to the President of this country, though not agreeing with his political sentiments, we say the Journal should be made to verify this story or be condemned and outlawed by its party and all good citizens.

The daily press has given wide publication of the Masonic pageant at Utica, N. Y., Thursday over the corner-stone of a lodge asylum. Masonic charity has been at such a discount that extraordinary efforts were made to draw a crowd of Masons and their jacks and other friends from all parts of the State. Some of the papers report 30,000 in the procession. Business houses, schools and factories were closed, so great was the influence of the lodge. But

"Alas for the rarity
Of [Masonic] charity,"

the sight made the heavens weep. The rain came down in torrents, and the long procession with its twenty bands broke up in confusion, only 2,000 visiting the asylum site, and but 3,000 coming out to hear the great Chauncey M. Depew and various lodge dignitaries in the evening.

The Chicago press is not ready to accept the terms of the new mayor of the city. Even the German Staats Zeitung, proverbally standing for the liquor interest, repudiates him as a representative of the German idea of the saloon. The News and the Inter Ocean, from which we quote elsewhere, firmly resist and refute his dangerous principles of municipal government. The Evening Journal quotes him as saying: "'As long as I am mayor of Chicago the saloons of the city will be open on Sunday. I shall make no attempt to put dead-letter blue laws in force. The ordinances requiring front doors to be closed and blinds drawn on Sunday, thus securing an orderly observance of the day, will be enforced, but that is all.'" He moreover will grant a license whenever endorsed by the police, no matter what may be the objections of property owners in the vicinity. Under this rule he set up a saloon on Vernon Ave., where Cregier dared not because of the residents. But Major McClaughry, the new chief of police, has an eye on this business and will not give the police endorsement for the mayor's benefit in every case.

The quiet hours of a recent Sabbath day witnessed a singular meeting in St. Louis,—a secret meeting of railway employes organized in the secret orders of Conductors, Firemen, Trainmen, and the Switchmen's Mutual Aid Association. The four organizations formed a federation with a membership of 65,000, and took steps to induce the two orders remaining outside, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, to join in the movement. Resolutions were passed pledging the organization to work against the re-election of Chief Arthur of the Brotherhood of Engineers. The reputed object of the federation will be to prevent strikes and to settle all matters of difference by arbitration. All difficulties will be referred to a "supreme council," and in case the council fails to have arbitration settle all disputes, then the council has the power to order a strike, and not before. If any reader should imagine that this will be a check to the strike business, let him first answer the question why a secret "supreme council" of several lodges is any better than that of one, to prevent such difficulties. The business of the country is being gradually put under bonds to do the pleasure of combination after combination, lodge upon lodge, until something like an earthquake shock is needed to set it free again.

AN OPEN LETTER TO MR. FINDEL.

RESPONSE TO THE REVIEW BY THE MASONIC HISTORIAN OF LAST WEEK.

MR. FINDEL:—The number of your paper containing the review of "Gottfr. Fritschel, Die Religion der Geheimen Gesellschaften" (Bauhuette, Vol. 34, No. 12, March 21, 1891), has come to my hands. The answer has been as I expected from you, candid and frank. You express the opinion that a discussion of the question is possible between us. Now I do not expect to convince you of the correctness of my position and of your false standpoint. But perhaps a little more light might be brought into the question by the discussion, and for this reason I address this open letter to you.

I might take up your article and express my opinion at each point. But as it is not my intention to discuss your article but the question under consideration, I prefer another way. I shall be satisfied if we know clearly and exactly where each of us stands; then we can see whether and how we can convince each other or where we can meet. I will therefore (using a figurative expression) show my colors to you. It is not my intention to hurt your feelings in any way, but I wish to proceed quite objectively.

The question under consideration is: Can a good Christian be a member of a so-called secret society or not? Is membership not practically and virtually a denial of Christianity?

Let me show what I understand by Christianity and Christian.

What makes a man a Christian?

Our Lord and Saviour, when he was received up into heaven, gave this command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned," Mark 16: 15, 16. And on another occasion he declares, "I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life" (John 8: 12); and also, "he that heareth my word and believeth on Him that sent me hath everlasting life and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life" (John 5: 24); or, "he that believeth on me hath everlasting life," John 6: 47. Again, in that wonderful discourse in the night in which he was betrayed, he says, "This is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent," John 17: 3.

Therefore, the evangelist makes this statement: "As many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name," John 1: 12.

We see that here one thing is emphasized again and again—and we might adduce numbers and numbers of like passages—namely, belief in God who has sent and Jesus who was sent.

This was from that time on the one and great demand of the church and every true Christian: Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. Such we find in the first Christian preaching on pentecost. The answer to the anxious question of those who were moved by Spirit of God to accept the glad tidings, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" was this one thing: "Repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins," Acts 2: 38. This same is the demand of Philip: "If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest (viz., be baptized)." And the answer was: "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God," Acts 8: 37. Is this not also the one and only demand of Paul the apostle to the Gentile? His answer to the trembling jailor inquiring, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" is this one and only condition: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved," Acts 16: 31.

From the great mass of similar utterings in his epistles, I will simply mention the following:

"The Gospel of Christ is a power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth," Rom. 1: 16. "Therefore, we conclude that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of law," Rom. 3: 28. "I determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified," 1 Cor. 2: 2.

From these and all similar passages we see that according to the teachings of our Lord and Saviour and his holy apostles, the one thing that makes a man a Christian is faith, is belief. This faith or belief is indeed not what is improperly styled by some belief, namely, intellectual conviction. Such a belief makes no one a Christian. Such is to be found also with the devils: Thou "believest" that there is one God; thou doest well: the devils also believe and tremble (James 2: 19). No; it is that belief which St. John demands as the one mark and sign of a child of God: "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God; and every one that loveth him that begat, loveth him also that is begotten of him," 1 John 5: 1.

It is the one thing described as faith or belief, as love, as trusting, as hearing the voice of the Good Shepherd and following him, as accepting him, as having the sins taken away and being made heirs of heaven; I say it is the one and same thing that makes a man a Christian.

How can I make it plain to you (not a Christian in this sense) so that you can at least have a faint idea of what we Christians call faith? Have you ever thought of the difference of our relation to persons dead and living? However fond I may have been of a person, as soon as the cold hand of death lays him or her low, I have no longer a personal relation or intercourse with them. Even if the dear form of the departed is before me, the relation of person to person has been broken forever in this life. To have personal relation it is not necessary that the other party be present to my eye, but it must be living. The bridegroom has personal relations to the one that is dear to his heart even if he has not seen her face for months or years; yes, even if oceans and continents divide them. Well, there is some similarity in this and the faith of Christians. Faith we call the personal relation of a Christian to God and to his Son Jesus Christ. There were no possibility of having such a personal relation if Christ were a mere man, however great and excellent, who died leaving us an example of truth and virtue. Were he not the risen "Son of God, begotten of his Father before all worlds, God of God, Light of Light, very God of very God, begotten, not made, being of one substance with the Father," such a personal relation were not possible. Call it faith, or love, or trust, or reliance, it is all one thing.

But how can men of sound reasoning power get this quaint idea into their heads, that there is a personal relation to Christ who lived eighteen centuries ago, even if he rose from the dead? Ah! here is the dividing point. I will not try to convince you that such a personal relation is possible. I know I cannot convince you. Only the Spirit of God can convince you by leading you the way he has led me and hundreds and thousands of men in all stages of life in as many centuries as the world is in existence. Which is that way of experience which leads to this wonderful conviction?

In one man you can see it clearly; in another it has come about so gradually that he is not at all conscious of the different steps; in another it has perhaps come about by the gracious hand of God when he could not as yet observe it. In such examples as Paul, Augustine or Luther, we can trace it quite distinctly. The time, circumstances, degree and the like may differ, but in substance and essence all Christians will testify that such was also God's hand with them.

There is one part in the experience of the Christian, and that is the experience of sin and sinfulness. The Christian knows that by the influence of God he has been delivered from the power of sin. He sees not only actual sin in himself, but finds the root lying deeper in being sinful and unclean by nature. I have heard you pronouncing this an immoral conception. But it simply shows how little you have penetrated into the nature of a human being and that you have not made this experience which all Christians have made. Christians know by experience that they have been delivered from the rule of sin under which they were bound. Not as though we had no sin any longer; but we are no longer servants and slaves to sin, and Christ who has freed us from it cleanses us from all our sins. We combat against sin, and we know there shall be a time when sin shall be known no more,—when we shall be with Christ.

The Christians know that they have been delivered from sin and its guilt not by their own merit or doing. They know that the wrath of the holy God has been stilled by Christ the Saviour, and that by faith they have been made partakers of his justice. Faith is not a matter of intellect simply, but of all the faculties of man. It sounds very wise if a man proudly declares: I do not believe anything unless I see it to be reasonable or necessary. A Christian gives himself up unreservedly to Christ whether he sees through that which he accepts or not. "Blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed."

But is not all this unsound imagination? The cloud of witnesses from the first times answers: no, it is not. The testimony of the Holy Spirit that we are God's children, cleansed by the blood of his own dear Son, is one that has its authority with itself. Willingly the martyrs have suffered intolerable pain for this reason. But there is no surer thing than this divine surety. He who has possession of this truth, knows that this is THE TRUTH; he knows that everything contradictory is untrue.

You may deride this conviction; you may scoff at it. It has been unto the Jews a stumbling-block, and unto the Greeks, foolishness. Why should things have changed in our time!

(To be continued.)

THE SONG OF THE REFORMERS.

We have garnered the gleaning of harvest,
From the fields of the far shadowed past,
We have seen where our noontide has haloed
Its brightest, its darkest, its last,
We have dreamed a fair dream of the silence
That stretches afar from man's ken—
Of a new morrow joyous with glories,
And its heirs were our own brother men.

And who but the dreamers of day dreams
And the seers of joys that might be
Have riven the darkness that narrowed men's souls,
And the bondage that fettered the free,
And triumphed as hero, revealer, redeemer
'Mid the slavery and sorrow of old
Till our old world's pulses are throbbing
To the words of the dreamer so bold?

And we who are heirs of the morning
That lightens our souls from afar,
Though the present be bowed with its sorrow
And gloomy with hunger and war;
Undaunted we plead for the truthful,
Unshrinking we strive for the right,
And beyond all the gloom and the sorrow
We can look on the beauty and light.

And still through the tears of our striving
Our courage shall trample down doubt
That at last all the foes of our fellows
Shall quail like an army in rout;
That the wrong shall give place to the rightful,
The old shall give place to the new,
And the false to the pure, and the right and the might
Shall be swayed by the just and the true.

—W. Canning.

THE OATH OF THE SOUTHERN FARMERS' ALLIANCE.

[From the New York Witness, April 15, 1891.]

Quite a number of letters from members of the Farmers' Alliance have been received at this office protesting against the idea that the Alliance is oath-bound, or that it desires to do anything in secret. Extracts from some of these letters will be found in another column. We are glad to receive these letters, because they prove that the members of the Alliance have no intention of swearing away their manhood or of uniting in any secret conspiracy, even for the promotion of a good cause.

We are not sorry for having called attention to this matter, because we feel that the farmers, and indeed all classes of the community, need to be warned against the twin evils of political servitude and secret methods of conducting political campaigns in the most pointed possible manner. The very earnest and positive repudiation by our Farmers' Alliance subscribers of the idea that it is essentially a secret society, or that its members are bound by any pledge which affects their freedom of individual action, is extremely gratifying as evidence of their consciousness that these things would be wrong; it will also help to strengthen the conviction both in the minds of those who have written and in the minds of the readers that it is absolutely necessary to resist any attempt which may be made to induce them to adopt either of these false principles of action.

That such an attempt is altogether likely to be made, and in fact has already been determined upon, is evident from the contents of a little book which one Alliance man has sent us. This book is called the "Ritual" of the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union, and claims to have been printed in 1890 by order of the executive board of that organization. In it we find the following:

President: Mr. ———, you will give your name when I use mine, and repeat after me as follows:

OBLIGATION.

I, ———, in the presence of Almighty God and these witnesses, do solemnly promise and affirm that I will never reveal any of the secrets of the order, to anyone not entitled to receive the same. I will never, under any circumstances, write, engrave, indite or print, or in any way make any impression, picture or design, that would convey any idea of the secret work, signs or passwords of this order. I will faithfully support the constitution and laws of the order. I will never wrong or defraud or deceive a member, nor will I permit it to be done, if in my power to prevent it. In my intercourse with a member I will always speak the truth. I will not oppose the admission of anyone to membership solely on account of a personal matter, nor will I propose anyone whom I have reason to believe is an improper person, or who would be an unworthy member. I further solemnly affirm, that, should I be expelled or dismissed from the order, I will faithfully keep this obligation as sacred out of the order as when a member. So help me God.

It is difficult to understand how honest men could be asked to take a stronger oath or pledge of secrecy than that. And in one of the manuals sent us the pledge, which is not in the form of an oath, is, nevertheless, made binding until death. These pledges would seem to sustain all that has been said about the secrecy and oath-bound condition of the Alliance in so far as this national organization is concerned.

The secret organization known as the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union was formed in October 1, 1889, out of a heterogenous, mass of alliances, unions and wheels, many of which began their existence as non-secret bodies as long ago as 1873, and some of these have evidently been independent enough to reject the order of things sought to be imposed upon them by the national organization. We hope they will persevere in well-doing and maintain their independence and personal freedom to the end.

We sympathize most heartily with the feelings which have prepared so large number of farmers to enter into this movement, and for that very reason we are anxious that the movement should take on such a form that it will be possible for all good men to take part in it. The farmers have long enough allowed the political bosses to count upon their votes as a matter of course, and it is high time that they should assert themselves. Moreover, no one doubts the perfect honesty or the desire to do right of the great body of members of the Alliance. What we are anxious about is that, having begun to think for themselves, our farmer friends should not jump to the conclusion that they have thought it all out at one effort, but that they should keep on studying the great economic questions which they are trying to settle, and hold themselves free to change their minds whenever they receive new light.

"Alliance Independent" assumes as a matter of course, that we would justify the Prohibition party in having a secret plan of campaign against the saloons. In that he is entirely mistaken. We want no secrecy "in ours" even if it be only in the matter of grips, signs, and passwords. If the Prohibition party should require of its members a pledge even such as the most innocent of the Alliance pledges that has been sent us, we would at once repudiate that party and declare it to be utterly unfit to undertake the government of a great nation. We would condemn secrecy or a membership pledge very much more severely in the Prohibition party than in any other party, for the very reason that we believe that party to contain the germ of the great reform movement which we hope to see sweep over the nation before many years and therefore needs to be kept true to right principles of action in order that the reforms for which it is preparing the way may be inaugurated on a lasting basis.

THE CONFERENCE.

WHAT HINDERS THE MILLENNIUM?

ADDRESS BY EX-PRES. J. BLANCHARD.

That there is to be a millennium no believer of the Bible can doubt. That its coming is hindered can be doubted as little. Let us seek what hinders it.

The two articles which pay most to support the Government of the United States, are liquor and tobacco. Yet the thousands and tens of thousands who use neither of these articles, testify that they suffer no injury or inconvenience by their disuse. While eminent medical authorities give a catalogue of eighty diseases produced by tobacco, including cancers and insanity; and liquor notoriously fills the whole calendar of suffering and crime.

But the fact that the United States gets its living expenses from these two useless evils makes their terrible statistics tame, like the numbers of dead and wounded given after great battles. Napoleon, while riding unmoved, fetlock deep, over bodies of dead soldiers, is said to have wept at the sight of a little dog guarding the corpse of his dead master. Let us glance at one small fact on our battlefield of life.

Not far from Chicago, there is an average precinct of 400 voters, in a town of the usual number and variety of churches. Of those voters only forty-three belong to churches, to 357 who nearly all belong to secret lodges; practice their rites and pay their dues. In that town wives, in the proportion of nine to one, if they go to worship Christ, must go without their husbands; and if they pay a shilling to support the Christian religion, it must be after lodge dues are paid. And, as a rule, secret lodges reek with liquor and tobacco. Surely, surely, these lodges are hindering the coming of Christ.

The two leading Boards of Missions in this country, to "prepare the way for Christ's coming" by preaching his Word, were started within the memory of some now living. They were as "a handful of corn upon the top of the mountains," but the fruit thereof now "shakes like Lebanon." The cause of missions now overflows the banks of mission-boards. Individuals, self-prompted, now start alone for distant mission-fields, as Philip went to Samaria, Paul to Macedonia, and others left home without purse or scrip. Colleges indicate public sentiment; and six thousand college students, of various denominations, have declared their wish to go on missions for Christ. And money is now raised by millions, to disperse moral darkness and save men.

But what hinders missions hinders the millennium. What, then, are the hindrances of missions?

We give a few from a vast number of similar facts which we take from that careful authority, the Friends' Review, from which we read as follows:

"One firm in Boston in 1882, contracted to send rum to Africa at the rate of 300 gallons a day!"

Mary Dillon from Jamaica, says: "The rum-shops are scattered all along the road. There is one within a stone's throw of the mission. Women smoke, and drink porter, ale and beer, while men drink rum, brandy and other strong drinks."

"If a ship takes one missionary in the cabin and a lot of whisky in the hold, it takes years to undo what that one lot of whisky will do."

In Egypt, Mohammedans say, when a man drinks, "he has left Allah and become a Jesusman."

In India, England licenses liquor, and derives an immense revenue. Old missionaries say, "There is increased consumption and drunkenness."

In Australia, Philip Moses says: "The drink bill in the whole of Australia is alarmingly increasing, social evils, insanity and suicide keeping steady and ghastly pace with it."

In our own Alaska, Elwood Weesner says, "The natives are very treacherous while intoxicated." He said he could relate many instances of depredations committed by drunken men and women.

Canon Farrar writes: "The old rapacity of the slave-trade is succeeded by the worse and more ruinous greed of the drink-seller."

Gladstone, in a full House of Commons, said of the drink business: "It is more deadly, because more continuous, than the three great historic scourges of war, famine and pestilence combined."

We might add without limit to this store of facts and arguments illustrating this one point, that missions, which Christ commanded to prepare men for his coming, are hindered and throttled by liquor and narcotics; and if so, they are surely hindering the millennium.

But Johnstown was destroyed because the steady force of gravitation pushed down the water. If there had been no gravitation, there would have been no deluge; and behind this mighty deluge of drink and narcotics which obstructs missions and hinders the millennium in every clime and corner of our globe, there is a greater, mightier evil which casts its secret screen over every other, and which makes reform, and so the millennium itself, impossible, by unhitching our globe from its God.

This one cardinal, fundamental, universal mischief is the parent and protectress of all the other evils which afflict our race. It is omitting the Mediator,—the link which connects them with God. For "he that hath not the Son, hath not the Father." If our earth were broken loose from its sun and drifting amid other orbs, its destruction would only be a question of distance and time. But this would be a trifling disaster compared with its inhabitants losing God by losing the Mediator and inventing or adopting substitutes for his worship. Inventing such a religion caused the first murder in Eden. Inventing such a false road to heaven dispersed our race at Babel and produced the national wars since by destroying human brotherhood, and dividing men into clans. It has sunk humanity from the type of the brave and gentlemanly Abraham, who worshiped Christ, to the low level of the pigmies and dwarfs which Stanley found in African forests, who worship worms and beasts. It has sunk the land of the Cæsars under the trickery of priests and the poverty of Lazzaroni. And Italy is now sending the Mafia here, to teach us that murder is not crime, if only men swear to do it, and conceal their oaths,—a lesson we were slowly learning from our own Chicago lodges.

INVENTING RELIGIONS,

The millennium is to come by the Bible. "The Lord alone" is to be "exalted in that day." But the devious swarms of lodges, as shifting as the mirage and as false, with each its sacred altar, solemn ritual, and obligation or oath; if these bring us their promised millennium, it must be a millennium without Christ, leading to a heaven without holiness.

The book of Revelation, amid stupendous mysteries, contains some things so plain that he who runs may read them. Such are:

1. That "that old serpent, the devil and Satan," now deceives the nations, but will be overcome, cast down and confined, till a long prophetic period ends.

2. That symbolic beasts represent Rome, pagan and papal; and "the Image of the Beast," a sham, shadowy, secret despotism, like our secret lodge system, exerting the same power as the Beasts; and destined to the same dreadful end.

3. That "the mother of harlots" is the mother and model of the false religions of the earth; and that she is to be cast down like a millstone into the sea, and "found no more at all."

This is sufficient. The "Lamb shall overcome" and God and goodness prevail.

But it concerns us to understand the enemies of the millennium and how to oppose them.

The sorrows, sufferings and woes inflicted by liquor and narcotics are not the chief harms they inflict; nor are the deception, fraud and despotisms of the lodge power the things most to be dreaded in that; though both are beyond human speech to describe. The thing which saves men is being led by the Spirit of God to Christ; and the use of liquor, opium and tobacco, is to craze and confuse the minds of men, so that they will not be led to Christ. This is the use Satan has for these drugs. And this explains the spread of these instruments of Satan in these last days. They are bewilderments, used by Satan to prevent the salvation of men, and secure them for himself as "fishes that are caught in an evil net."

So the secret lodges are helped rather than harmed by dwelling only on the injury they do to society; though it is true that the system includes in itself the spirit of robbery, fraud and despotism, and murder, when necessary to their ends. But as false worships, they antagonize God, and seek the wholesale destruction of men. By this they take human welfare by the throat, and would strangle it but for Christ. The language of the labor lodge is: "I will kill you if you take the place left by one of our members, unless you join and obey us;" and an armed mob stands ready to enforce the threat; "that none may buy or sell but those who have received the mark of the beast in the forehead or in the hand." This makes a clean sweep of all liberty and all rights, but in members of secret orders. And to join such orders, the least of them, one must by oath, or promise of secrecy, or grip, or token of recognition, bind ourselves to antagonize God by aiding in that worship which the devil asked of Christ, viz., the worship of the god of this world.

But the effort to "enlarge the area of slavery" hastened the overthrow of that dark power. And a similar fate now awaits the lodge. Those devils who implored Christ not to send them to the pit of torment "before the time," showed that they knew their time was coming. And the very violence of the efforts now making to spread these false worships, shows the unrest of their leaders, and that their doom is approaching. May God in mercy hasten it for Christ's sake.

SECRET INDUSTRIAL ORDERS.

ADDRESS OF REV. C. F. HAWLEY, N. C. A. AGENT FOR THE INTERIOR STATES.

Ever since sin entered into the world, and separated man from God, who is love, selfishness has filled the hearts and controlled the lives of the masses of men. In all ages the strong have oppressed the weak. The poor and weak have been the slaves and vassals of the rich and powerful.

When the morning star of Bethlehem was followed by the rising Sun of Righteousness, the icy selfishness of human hearts began to melt and the condition of labor to improve. The laborer, from being a slave, liable to be beaten and killed at the caprice of his master, became, first, the vassal of some feudal lord and then a freeman.

Following the emancipation of the Aryan race came the emancipation of the African race and the triumph of the doctrine of our fathers, that all men are created free and equal, and are endowed by their Creator with an inalienable right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. Now, the right of the laborer is unchallenged: either to work as an employe, or to set up business for himself; to accept the wages offered, or reject the offer and look for a better job; to work for a capitalist, or to combine in a co-operative business association and thus throw off the yoke of capital.

The divine endowment of liberty, as stated above, does not include the right to compel employers to pay the wages demanded, nor the right to forcibly prevent other workmen from accepting positions that have been abandoned. The employer must be as free to hire those who are willing to work for the wages he offers, as the employe is to reject his proposals.

The combination of capital in corporations led to the combination of wage-workers in trades unions. The modern system of trades unions is only about sixty-five years old. The right of the industrial classes to organize can not be intelligently questioned. Various important results may be secured by organization, that otherwise might not be realized. Mutual instruction in the industrial arts, in political economy, and the science of government are among the objects to be sought by association. The more skilled in their arts laborers become, the better will be the results realized from labor; whether it is performed for wages, or as members of co-operative industrial associations. It is highly proper for the industrial classes to combine to study the management of corporations; for, if laborers would be free from the oppression of selfish capitalists, they must study political economy, until they are competent to form and manage corporations for manufacturing and other industrial purposes. This would in time lead to an entire re-organization of our industrial system. Deserted by their employes, capitalists would be compelled to re-organize their business and combine with working men on the equitable plan of mutual profit-sharing.

If it be objected to this plan that wage workers have not the capital to form corporate companies for manufacturing, and other industrial purposes, we would call attention to the fact that more money is wasted on tobacco, beer and distilled liquors than would be necessary, if wisely used, to establish co-operative industries in such numbers as to revolutionize the industrial system of our country, and to a large extent abolish the wage system that has grown to such gigantic proportions. Mr. Powderly has shown that wage workers, in the single city of New York, spend annually, for fermented and distilled liquors, the sum of $15,600,000. In one county of the State of Pennsylvania the workingmen, according to Mr. Powderly, spend annually, for beer and distilled liquors, the sum of $11,000,000. The capital that might be accumulated by the wage workers of the city of New York and one county in Pennsylvania, by saving what they spend for beer and whisky, would amount in one year to $26,000,000; in five years to $133,000,000; in twenty-five years to $665,000,000; in fifty years it would amount to the enormous sum of $1,333,000,000. So much for the combined efforts of the city of New York and one county of Pennsylvania.

Should the wage workers of our entire country combine in this sensible manner, to free themselves from the tyranny of capital, many of the younger class might live to see the whole business of the country in the hands of the industrial classes, the wage system practically abolished, and men of wealth seeking to incorporate with skilled workmen on an equitable plan of mutual profit-sharing.

By studying the science of government the workingmen would become competent to manage the affairs of state, and could peacefully, through the ballot-box, take possession of the ship of state, and navigate it so as to bring business thrift and prosperity to all sober and industrious workers. The government mail service could be made to include the operation of telegraph and telephone lines, and the business now done by express companies; and government could establish a bureau of finance and regulate the volume of currency, so as to avoid the evils of inflation on the one hand, and of contraction on the other. By a graduated land tax, the holding of homesteads could be encouraged, and the monopolizing of land by corporations or individuals prevented. By a graduated income tax, the burden of the toiling millions might be lightened and the expense of government made to rest more heavily upon the shoulders of the millionaire. This may seem unjust to some, but we should remember that he who has only his person to defend is required to bear arms for public defense to the same extent as he who has immense wealth to protect.

In short, by organization for mutual instruction, and for co-operation in industrial enterprises, and for political action, the toiling millions may improve their condition in THIS world; and by opening their hearts, to receive the grace of God that comes through our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, they may become children of God, and share jointly, with the only begotten Son of God, in the eternal glories of the world to come. If both capitalists and laborers would receive the Carpenter of Nazareth as their leader and commander, he would relieve them of the burden of sin, which is heavier than the burden of debt, under which the farmers groan, and would write his own law of love in each heart, and bring peace and contentment to each soul; and the golden rule of doing "unto others as ye would that they should do unto you," being acted out from the heart, capitalists and laborers would be ready to arbitrate each honest difference, and we should not have to wait the slow development of co-operative industries to solve the labor problem, but the rich, and the poor, loving each other as Christ has loved all, would mutually combine to promote each other's welfare under the benign influence of his love, who gave himself for us, and, while we were his enemies, died to reconcile us to God and to unite us to each other in an universal brotherhood of love.

Having glanced at some of the possible achievements of organized labor, let us turn our attention to the "Secret Industial Orders" and examine their nature and workings. You will notice that it is the Industrial Orders that we now propose to examine.

SECRET

The right of labor to organize has been cheerfully conceded; and some of the advantages of organization briefly portrayed. But, allow me to ask, Is it expedient or wise for the toiling millions to adopt secret society methods of organization and work? Allow me to go farther ask, and is it patriotic, is it right, for the honest sons of toil thus to organize?

We lay it down as an axiom that, while temporary privacy may be expedient and right, organized perpetual secrecy always breeds corruption, and therefore must be wrong. Take the order of Jesuits for example. They organized to defend and propogate the faith of the Roman Catholic church. But, being a secret order, they became so corrupt that the goverments of Roman Catholic countries, and the Roman pontiff himself, was constrained to proscribe and suppress them.

The Bald Knobbers of Missouri started under the lead of reputable and Christian men, with the avowed purpose of correcting certain wrongs in society that seemed beyond the power of the civil authorities to remedy; but being a secret order they sank to the plane of midnight murder, and the leaders, like the leaders of the Mollie Maguires in Pennsylvania, were publicly tried by the civil authorities and hung.

The "ancient and honorable order of Freemasons" was organized with an oath binding to perpetual secrecy, in the Apple Tree Tavern, in London, in 1717. To prompt to fidelity, each member is required to take the oath of secrecy, under no less penalty than to have his throat cut across, and his tongue torn out by the roots, if he should ever violate his covenant. In an open organization, men would never think of extorting from each new member an agreement to be murdered in case he did not fulfill his covenant with them. For more than a hundred years, after speculative Freemasonry was organized, every one who betrayed the secrets of the order, suddenly and mysteriously died. And so infatuated had these secretists become, that, when in 1826 Captain Wm. Morgan revealed Masonry, they entered into a widespread consiracy to abduct him from his home; the sequel of which was—a midnight murder. Bad men are liable to commit murder; but it takes the sorcery of organized secrecy to lead good men to consent to such foul deeds.

An aged clergyman, a Freemason, living at Muscatine, Iowa, was asked, "Do you believe that the Masons killed Morgan?"

He replied, "I know we killed him. He was a very base man; he deserved to be killed."

Again, I ask, what but the

SORCERY OF ORGANIZED SECRECY

could have brought this good man into sympathy with a foul midnight murder.

But, do you say, the secret orders referred to are not industrial orders. True, but the "United Sons of Industry" is a secret industrial order of three degrees: called Apprentice, Journeyman and Master Mechanic.

This order, as well as Freemasonry, the Clanna-Gael and the Mafia, is a training school in murder. After the Apprentice has taken the obligation, the hoodwink is removed from his eyes, and he beholds the first tableau: A person seated unconcerned in a chair, surrounded by members armed with pikes and axes, to represent "Protection."

The vice-president, addressing the candidate, says:

"My brother, the tableau before you represents the exact position you now occupy in this order. He whom you see, is surrounded by a cordon of friends, who will stand by him in every emergency: will shield him, and his, from all evil, as far as in their power lieth; will minister to him in sickness, and, if he proves faithful, will generously provide for his necessary wants, in case of destitution. That you may prove worthy of this position, is the earnest desire of all these brothers."

After taking the obligation of the Journeyman's degree, the hoodwink is again removed and he beholds the second tableau—representing a traitor, lying on the floor resting on his side, his face masked, and surrounded by other members, two armed with axes, the rest with pikes. Just as the vice-president repeats the words, "and now receives his just deserts," they strike and thrust at the victim, who raises his hand as if to guard off the attack, and falls back on the floor.

The vice-president, addressing the candidate, says:

"My brother, behold the second tableau. He who was surrounded by that noble band of brothers, has proved unfaithful to his trust, and now receives his just deserts. Let this lesson admonish you, that should foes assail you and you fall, never to betray those secrets which you have solemnly obligated yourself never to reveal."

After taking the Master Mechanic's obligation, the hoodwink is removed, and the candidate beholds a coffin containing a skeleton. At the head and foot of the coffin stand masked men, in long, black robes; and on the right side of the coffin stands the chaplain, in a long, white robe, also masked. As the hoodwink is removed, they each point with forefinger to the skeleton, when the chaplain exclaims:

"BEHOLD! THE SECRET DOOM."

The vice-president, addressing the candidate, says:

"My brother, behold the traitor's doom. He whom you first saw surrounded by friends who would have shielded him from every danger, who would have been his support in every trial, proved recreant to the trust confided in him.

"Those brothers, for self-protection, and in strict compliance with their obligation, were forced to turn against him the sword of justice as a brother. He fell from the high position to which they had exalted him: his shafts of enmity were turned: his babbling tongue was forever silenced: he met a traitor's doom.

"Behold! Beware! Hold sacred your obligation. Let his fate be an example forever before you. Let the impression sink deep in your heart.

"That you may ever be guided aright, is the prayer of all these brothers who now surround you."

What obligation had this Son of Industry taken for the violation of which he is taught to expect a traitor's doom? In the first degree he had covenanted never to reveal any of the secrets of the order. In the second degree he covenants never to reveal any of the secret workings of his lodge, or of the order. In the third degree he covenants never to reveal the secrets that may be committed to him, now or at any other time, and when he sees or hears the grand hailing sign of distress given, by day or by night, he will go to the assistance of the brother giving the sign and aid or relieve him if in his power.

It is evident that this order proposes, under certain circumstances, to commit murder; and, as the members are bound never to reveal any of the secret work of the local lodge or of the order; and to go to the assistance of any brother giving the grand hailing sign of distress, and aid or relieve him if possible, we are driven to the conclusion that its covenants bind to the concealment of crime and to the protection of criminals.

And yet this order has an authorized form of prayer—a Christless, deistical form of prayer, like the ritual of the Blue lodge and chapter degrees of Freemasonry, and like the ritual of Oddfellowship.

In the address of the vice-president to the candidate (while taking the Master Mechanic's degree), after teaching him to expect that his lodge brothers, for self-protection, will murder him if he violates his covenant; and, that it will be in strict compliance with their obligations to do so, the functionary piously adds, "that you may ever be guided aright is the prayer of all these brothers who now surround you."

We cannot, in the time allotted, undertake to examine in detail the "Secret Industial Orders." Others may be better or worse than the "United Sons of Industry," behind whose curtains we have looked.

The Mafia in Sicily has terrorized the people and debauched their consciences until it seems impossible under existing circumstances to administer justice in the civil courts. Secret society rule has been carried so far in Italy as to usurp the authority of government by levying and collecting an income tax of ten per cent. To refuse payment means death by the stiletto. By the suppression of evidence and by perjury, the Italian secret orders defeat justice in the courts and render them powerless to protect the well-disposed; and so they are driven like cattle into the Mafia for the protection that the civil government fails to afford.

Once within the mystic circle of the brotherhood and they must obey orders to commit crime and shelter criminals, or meet a traitor's doom. As faithful members of the Mafia every dagger would be drawn in their defense. The axe and the pike in the hands of the secret brothers of the United Sons of Industry means protection to faithful brothers, but death to traitors. The stiletto in the hands of the secret brothers of the Mafia means also protection to faithful brothers, but death to traitors.

The secret industrial orders of America are arranging for a general "round up," to use the language of the Western herdsmen. They mean to impose their yoke of secrecy and obedience upon the whole industrial population of our broad land. By their strikes and boycotts, with the weapon of sarcasm and by brute force as well, they have sought to compel those who desire to maintain the dignity and rights of freemen (and who do not wish to partake of other men's sins) to come under their despotic yoke of perpetual secrecy and obedience.

So far our civil government has failed to protect our conscientious and honest wage workers against this wide-spread conspiracy to rob them of their constitutional and divine right to liberty. Ours is a government by the people; and we the people of these United States have seen the secret industrial orders attempt to force railroad and other corporations to discharge honest and capable employes, for no other reason than that they were not members of certain secret orders; and to compel said corporations to employ none but those who have taken the yoke of secrecy and obedience upon them. . . . .

They have turned upon their fellow-workmen who were not willing to come under the rule of irresponsible lodge despots, and with bitter sarcasm stigmatized them as "scabs," thus seeking to weaken their self respect and drag them down from the lofty plane of independent manhood to the servile condition of vassals to the lords of the lodge. By acts of intimidation and violence they have sought to enforce idleness upon honest men who were working for daily bread for themselves and their dependent families. Thus freemen, who have no mystic brothers to support them in idleness, have been driven from employment, and want and suffering has come to the homes where smiling plenty reigned before.

What a spectacle! American citizens compelled to come under the yoke of a secret despotic empire that has been set up in our midst. Driven with whips of sarcasm that sting like scorpions, and by intimidation and violence, from their daily labor (on which depends their daily bread), they are forced into secret labor unions just as the subjects of the king of Italy are forced into the Mafia.

Shall we stand idly by while the fetters of lodge despotism are being riveted upon our entire industrial population? Will not the sons of the Pilgrim Fathers and of the Huguenots, the North men of Scandinavia and the liberty-loving Scots and Germans, and all who prize the glorious birthright of American citizenship, unite to defend our wage workers against this barbarous effort to force them into the lodge?

This war of the secret labor unions against capital is selfishness run mad. The strikes, as they have been carried on, are but a feeble and momentary makeshift of no lasting benefit to those engaged in them. When, by the diffusion of intelligence and Christian love, the strike has been abolished, it will come to be regarded as a barbarism of the past.

Labor is interested in the increase of capital and in its profitable investment and proper protection. The increase of capital creates an increased demand for labor. Wages will never go higher than the point where profit to capital ceases. The capitalist will quit business ultimately if profits cease. Fair profits, then give maximum wages. There should be no fight between employing capital and labor—between wage earners and business men who give employment to labor. Such fights, when they occur, originate in the ignorance and selfishness of the laboring classes, and the selfish greed of capital.

Enlightened labor properly organized will always accomplish happy results by peaceful, lawful and civilized methods, while the blind, violent methods of savagery can only end in anarchy and chaos, out of which would arise individual and class usurpations of power, and the more grievous oppression of the masses.

—Rev. Dr. Trumbull of Morning Sun, Iowa, in a note of explanation respecting the Covenanter points of conscience referred to in the Conference, says: "When I took issue with the remark of the respected father, ex-President Blanchard, that 'Covenanters hold points which are not points of conscience,' I said I supposed that he referred to our position of political dissent. I was aware that he co-operates with the National Reform Association, and that he has advocated, and very ably, too, the duty of the government to acknowledge God and his Christ; but he has taken issue with the Covenanters' position that Christians ought not to identify themselves with a government which refuses to acknowledge God and Christ, and which also tramples on his law. I supposed that he referred to this position as 'a point which is not a point of conscience.' I affirmed that while this is not a point of conscience with many, that it is with Covenanters, and that as we refuse to enter secret lodges because they shut out Christ, so, for the same reason, we neither vote nor hold office under the government of the United States."

Reform News.

PARLOR MEETINGS IN RHODE ISLAND.

A meeting of neighbors and friends in a private house in response to an issued invitation is a grand means to a good end. Free from the chilling restraint often felt in meetings in churches, the speakers rejoice in their liberty and shun not to declare all the counsel of God, gladly witnessing for the truth without fear or favor, thus accomplishing much more for the Master, Jesus, than otherwise would be possible.

Such meetings recently held in Riverside, R. I., were successful, as regards audiences, beyond all expectations. All care and anxiety was left with God, who worked wonderfully for us (Praise to his name!) in overcoming all difficulties and overruling all opposition. He brought up to our first meeting twenty souls; to the second, twenty; to the last, thirty-three; and a notable fact is this: the audience at the second meeting was composed of entirely different people from the first, and many new faces were noticed also in the last meeting.

The meetings were held in the cottage of A. M. Paull, and were conducted by Rev. J. P. Stoddard, beside which, in the providence of God, through the kindness of Rev. J. D. Smiley, pastor of the Congregational church, he preached a Gospel sermon in the church Sabbath morning, spoke briefly from the desk in the evening, and led the Tuesday evening prayer meeting. Mrs. Stoddard, who also was with him, gave a parlor Bible reading on secrecy to ladies, beside speaking to the Sunday-school and before the Sabbath evening meeting of the church.

The extent of the influence of these meetings none can tell, but God knows the end, and his blessing is manifestly upon the work done by his humble and chosen instruments.

A suggestion—Would it not be well for others to open their homes to brother and sister Stoddard to conduct similar meetings, even all over New England? Brethren and sisters in a common cause, let us trust more fully in the Lord God of Hosts to fight for us and to gain a victory for his great name over the battalions of error and wickedness encamped against us.

Albert M. Paull.

THE WASHINGTON AGENT IN CHICAGO.

Pullman, Ill., May 19, 1891.

Dear Cynosure:—Perhaps nowhere is one reminded that "the world moves" more forcefully than on the occasion of a visit to the old home. It would be impossible for me here to speak of the thousand memories which have come during my visit in Wheaton and Chicago. Wheaton College has made substantial progress. The new wing, with its corner-stone bearing the inscription, "For Christ and his kingdom," will help strengthen this fortification of righteousness, and Christ's kingdom will be advanced by the thousands of young men and women who shall go forth carrying the blessed light to the dark places of the earth. I can heartily recommend any parents desiring to give their children a Christian education to send to Wheaton.

The annual meeting, as usual, has been a source of inspiration to me. While not as largely attended as some, owing, doubtless, somewhat to the season, there was manifest "the unity of spirit and bond of peace." God takes the weak things of earth to confound the mighty. What need the reformer care if heaven smiles though earth may frown! God is our refuge and strength and we shall go on to victory.

At the invitation of Rev. Holm, pastor of the Swedish Congregational church here, I came to address his people. My first acquaintance with this brother was in Philadelphia, where I had the pleasure of addressing his people several times. I have ever found him an earnest, fearless man, standing on the rock, and proclaiming against the false religions of this world. He desired me to speak especially of the little false altars, as his people were most endangered by them. Owing to his earnest invitation I had the pleasure of addressing about 200 young men, whose every action indicated their intense interest. A collection of over six dollars, many warm hand-shakes, and subscriptions to the Cynosure, give evidence of no small degree of sympathy. I go to Ohio.

W. B. Stoddard.

N. C. A. TREASURER'S REPORT.

JUNE 1, 1890, TO MAY 1, 1891.

STATEMENT OF RESOURCES.

Real Estate—Carpenter b'd'g..	$20,000.00
Washington b'd'g	10,000.00
Kansas farm	2,400.00
Dakota farm ..	600.00	$33,000.00
Bills receivable—Pub. H. notes	3,076.22
Bonds	500.00	3,576.22
Fixtures—In Chicago	392.19
In Washington	66.69	458.88
Publishing material.....		1,769.74
Wrapping and writing paper, envelopes, etc.....		11.00
Tracts in stock.....		695.51
Books in stock.....		640.28
The Christian Cynosure.....		5,859.50
Cynosure subscriptions due from subscribers.....		286.50
Reference Library		275.35
Suspense accounts)		1,565.38
S. A. Kean & Co.)		372.63
Personal accounts due and good		299.26
Cash on hand May 1, 1891....		301.18
		$49,111.43

STATEMENT OF LIABILITIES.

Capital	$41,996.74
Cynosure subscrip'ns due subs.	2,575.50
Personal accounts owed.....	201.20
New York fund, annuity	500.00
Ohio fund, annuity.....	1,000.00
Capwell fund, annuity.....	960.00
Sally Gilkey fund, annuity....	800.00
Wilbur estate fund, annuity...	150.00
Foreign fund	98.39
Library fund	169.87
Southern ministers' fund.....	129.47
Cynosure extension fund.....	536.26
	$49,111.43

LOSSES.

Sal'ry of ag'ts—J. P. Stoddard.	$ 83.33
W. B. Stoddard	987.14
H. H. Hinman.	25.00
C. F. Hawley..	810.36
E. E. Flagg...	15.00
W. I. Phillips..	903.32
M. H. Nichols.	53.90	2,878.05
Agents expenses for June, '90—
J. P. Stoddard.	10.92
W. B. Stoddard	46.05
C. F. Hawley..	12.11	69.08
Postage.....		377.74
Cynosure		1,080.13
Special appropriations of literature to different persons		57.29
Annuities on various funds....		217.00
Appropriation to N. E. work, paid J. P. Stoddard, agent..		114.49
Taxes on Dakota farm.....		17.47
Fixtures in Carpenter building		46.23
Fixtures in Wash'gt'n building		7.40
Publishing material.....		27.92
Expenses for coal, stationery, rent, insurance, etc.....		733.35
Tracts.....		22.49
		$ 5,688.64

GAINS.

Carpenter building.....		$ 1,026.14
Washington building.....		26.64
Donations to the general work of the Association.....		2,280.89
Interest from Pub. house notes		46.40
Interest from loans		250.00
Income—Appropriated to work in New York State—
From Capwell fund..	$ 100.00
From New York fund	30.00	130.00
Personal account.....		75
Balance to capital account....		1,927.82
		$ 5,688.64

Wm. I. Phillips, Treasurer.

CORRESPONDENCE.

ANNUAL MEETING CORRESPONDENCE.

J. A. Conant, President of New England Christian Association, Willimantic, Conn:

While it is my prayer that the Association may be largely represented at the annual meeting, yet it will all be in vain, unless honored and blessed with the presence of the Holy Ghost, who alone can impart that zeal and wisdom so much needed in this and all other Christian work. While a thick cloud of darkness seems to be settling down upon church organizations, because of spiritual adultery, we may receive great encouragement in the fact that God is calling out his faithful ones all over the land from all Christian denominations, to "Cry aloud and spare not," concerning the popular evils of the present day.

May we not hope that the prayer of Christ that his people may all be one, will soon be answered, and instead of their great effort being to build up "our church," it will be for the advancement of Christ's kingdom in the salvation of souls from all sin. That all who gather at the annual meeting of the N. C. A. and at Music Hall may be enthused by the Holy Spirit, to go out and labor more earnestly for the salvation of men, out of love for the Master, is the prayer of your brother in Christ.

Rev. Milton Wright, Bishop of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ, and late President of the N. C. A.:

As our church anniversaries occur this week, it will not be practicable for me to attend the annual meeting of the National Christian Association and the Christian Conference on the Secret Lodge system. This is to my great regret. May the God of truth and of every righteous reform, be with you abundantly. The cause cannot fail unless the reign of Christ shall fail. He shall put all enemies under his feet. May each of us perform his part in this great conflict. We need grace for the conflict and preparation for the final triumph. Darkness shall hide its face from the light of God.

Hon. S. C. Pomeroy, Washington, D. C.:

I find the weight of seventy-six years pressing upon me. This last year has been the first one in all my life that I have yielded to sickness. Still I am not yet dead,—not fully alive. I have commenced to die. One faculty after another is failing me; and my step is unsteady. But my interest in the N. C. Association is firm and unabated. The late heathenish display, over the poor body of Albert Pike, more than disgusted me. They had what they called a "service of sorrow" in our church at midnight. But it was all darkness,—no resurrection or life! no hope,—no Christ! The ceremonies were inexplicably heathenish! God bless you all, and give you strength according to your day, to prosecute the good work.

Mrs. L. C. Capwell, Dale, N. Y.:

I have watched with interest the work, and think the progress in the reform means that God is with us. I am not enabled to do much, but am becoming more and more attached to our herald, "The Cynosure."

R. N. Countee, Pastor Tabernacle Baptist Church, Memphis, Tenn.:

I am earnestly contending for the faith that separates the children of light from the children of darkness, and day by day the principles of the N. C. A. grow deeper in my convictions. "Ye are not of the world," says the blessed Master, and the N. C. A., with its friends, are spreading the leaven of this impregnable truth.

I am endeavoring by grace to keep the ball rolling in my vicinity. I have just returned from Ripley, Tenn. I spoke on Sunday four times to an audience of not less than 300, many of whom are "Wheelers." God helped me to speak against that secret brotherhood of lies, and a few were there and then converted.

The banner of anti-secrecy floats grandly in our school. My own church is standing firm. No secretist, no affiliation with the works of darkness, is our motto. And on this ground God is blessing us. Trusting the Spirit of the Lord may be with you, and bless you all in this meeting; and cause the light of his countenance to smile upon you in the prosecution of the glorious principles of Truth and Righteousness, I am yours for the cause of the Master.

Rev. Henry Cogswell, Puyallup, Washington:

To the N. C. Association I am greatly indebted, feeling that through it I was extricated from the debasing thralldom of Freemasonry. And to me everything associated with the Cynosure, its officers and its work, is very precious; and, though the contest is great and the odds much against the society, "yet," like all great reforms, it requires a constant and persevering continuance in well doing.

Rev. C. W. Hiatt, District Secretary American Missionary Association, Cleveland, O.:

It is a pleasure, however, to re-affirm my old conviction and testimony that the paramount evil of the lodge, is its antagonism to Jesus, the Lord and Saviour. This very fact suggests the remedy; which, indeed, is Christ himself. We shall never cast out the gigantic foe alone.

Rev. Joseph Travis, Evanston, Ill., (since deceased):

It is now fourteen months since I have been permitted to partake in public exercises of any kind; which time I have been confined to my home. Most of the time since the last days of February, to my bed.

My well wishes are yours in the work you are engaged in. I do not know that I have learned the uses of pain and poverty, but most certainly my opportunities have been ample.

Rev. A. J. Chittenden, Woodbine, Ky.:

Two years in this country convinces me that the warfare you are engaged in cannot be overestimated. The lodge is everywhere the foe of the church, spiritually, and many of her votaries will gladly hail the day of their emancipation. The difficulty here is that the people do not know the past history of the lodge; do not know the men who have come out; do not know their own standard authors; hence there is almost no place of beginning to make an ex-cathedra argument.

The common-sense view of the question is the only one effective. In a discourse on the words, "Who then was neighbor unto him that fell among thieves," I took occasion to say that the good Samaritan did not first turn the man over to find a lodge pin on his clothing, before he gave him relief, but helped him because he was a man needing relief. This drove away my congregation in a body. They report that I said, "All Masons are going to hell." But I find, as the discussion is taken up, that all the leading men are not in the lodge, and that a little encouragement will carry the discussion and the reform all through the South.

Philip Bacon, Weatogue, Conn.:

I feel very thankful to my Heavenly Father that one so unworthy should be so honored as to be associated with those who are so nobly for the truth as God has given it in his Word. Truly we may be co-workers with him. Allow me to say that it is clear in my mind that the great evil of secret societies exists because of the want of faithful teaching of the Word. When the power of divine truth exists in the individual or a community the darkness of Masonry and kindred evils cannot thrive. The remedy for all sin is Christ. If secret societies exist in any community it is sure evidence that more light from heaven is needed. Brethren, I beseech you, as those who must give an account of their stewardship, be faithful and preach the truth "whether men will hear or forbear."

May Christ rule richly in the hearts of all who may meet you, and guide in all that may be done.

Rev. A. W. Parry, Spring Valley, Ill.:

The question has often come to me since I have been here, "What doest thou here, Elijah?" To this I reply: "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" and with Samuel, "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth."

I have three purposes in view:

1. Never to join any secret organization, and thus to keep myself free to follow the will of the Lord in all things.
2. To use every means which God puts in my hand to discourage my fellow-men from joining them.
3. To shed light upon these unfruitful and shameful works of darkness, by reproving them as the opportunity and circumstances require.

These resolves are based upon the following convictions, which are to me self-evident truths:

1. Sworn secrecy is anti-Christian.
2. Anti-American.
3. It is selfish in its benevolence, disloyal and extra-judicial in its oaths, and criminal in its penalties. These are the pillars on which my faith rests.

I am with you, dear brethren, in your noble Christian work, and will be glad to co-operate with you on those lines which will promote Christ's kingdom in the earth.

PITH AND POINT.

FROM KANSAS TO NEW YORK.

Our drought and hard times in western Kansas is the cause of my change of address. I still value the Cynosure, and am heart and hand with you in the reform work; would be glad to have either of your agents come and see me if they are this way; would try and arrange for meetings at Richburg and Boliver; am not much acquainted here yet, but know there is plenty of need of reform work. The Baal altars are set up in every town. —Wm. Knight, Richburg, N. Y.

GOD BLESS SUCH WOMEN.

The "St. Louis tracts" came to hand. Many thanks for your kindness in sending so many. I gave away five before I left town. Last week's Cynosure is a grand number. I mailed ours to our W. C. T. U. president. The Corresponding Secretary of the Alexandria Union is a strong anti-secrecy woman. The extra copy of last week's Cynosure which you so kindly sent, my husband gave to the M. E. minister of Strang. He said he was not acquainted with the paper. I enclosed a "Moody and Pentecost" tract. He seems to be a very earnest worker. I cannot think he is a lodge man. I hope he may get interested in this great reform. Mr. J. C. Harvey works zealously for the anti-secrecy reform. I was sorry that his name did not appear among the signers to the "Call," for he signed it, and I sent it to you. Mr. Harvey has always been opposed to the lodge. He was raised in Bellfontaine, Ohio, and knew "Amos Inskip" well. May God richly bless the dear N. C. A. in every department of its work. The Cynosure is getting better and better. We would not be without it for ten times its cost.—Mrs. M. B. Park.

AN EYE-WITNESS.

I have been a reader of the paper for many years and cannot do without it. I prize it next to my Bible. I have always been anti-secret; have been opposed to secret societies and testified against them. I know what is said about the lodge is true. I once saw in the Freemason lodge when they initiated a candidate. I know what the paper publishes about this is true.—Mary McDowell.

LITERATURE.

Alden's Cyclopedia of Universal Literature. Vol. XIV. Pp. 475. Price 40c. John B. Alden, New York.

This volume opens with a sketch of the historian, B. J. Lossing of New York, whom the Anti-masonic Prohibitionists of that State wished to nominate for governor in 1888, but an unworthy Freemason was preferred before him. Mr. Lossing's works are full of patriotism and are among the most popular volumes of American history. The closing topic is John Stuart Mill, and between the two is an entertaining volume of literature and brief biography.

Origin, Purpose and Destiny of Man, or the Philosophy of the three Ethers. By Wm. Thornton. Pp 100. Published by the author, Boston.

The title of this volume suggests the Shorter Catechism, but its contents differ exceedingly from that venerable and venerated compendium of morals and religion. The author has a theory of the human structure which has already filled one volume and promises a third. This second of the series seems to be written in a reverent spirit, and to those who have to do with the technicalities of medicine and of disease, will doubtless be suggestive and profitable. Ordinary readers will find it difficult to master its philosophy.

"The Sunday Newspaper" is the opening paper in Our Day. Rev. Dr. Chadbourne, the author, prepared it for the convention held in Park St. Congregational church, Boston, last February, to consider methods for a better observation of the Lord's day. It is a strong document, though lacking the originality of Mr. Crafts' papers. "Popular Reforms in India," is a paper by Sir W. W. Hunter in the Contemporary Review. The Indian question is ably discussed in this number: first by Mr. Cook's Monday lecture prelude, and then by Mr. T. H. Tibbles of Nebraska, a gentleman whose long and intimate intercourse with the Sioux enables him to speak clearly and positively of the reforms our government should immediately adopt, in order to secure "A New Government for Indians." Dr. Sheldon Jackson, whose name is well known in connection with the evangelization of Alaska, writes of the introduction of the reindeer into that remotest region of the United States. The editorial notes of the numbor are strong and excellent.

The eighteenth of the series on the Miracles of Missions in the Missionary Review for June is by Dr. Pierson, on the work of the Huguenot Seminary at Wellington, Cape Colony. Mary Lyons' famous saying, "If you want most to serve your race, go where no one else will go, and do what no one else will do," furnishes a text. "The Divine and Supernatural in Foreign Missions," by Rev. Edward Storrow of Brighton, England, is a paper of great interest. No less so is "The Pentecost on the Congo," by Dr. Miller of Philadelphia, recounting the labors and patience of Mr. Richards at Banza Manteke. Frederic Perry Noble of the Newberry Library of this city, writes again on the African slave trade, "An African Devil's Business and its Arab Agents." The article is accompanied by an African slave-trade map, showing at a glance the chief slave routes in the African interior and toward the north and east. Other articles on African languages and peoples are followed by editorial notes and general missionary intelligence.

Learner and Teacher for the month publishes the address of George William Curtis on "The Public School and Civil Service Reform" before the National Education Association Department of Superintendence, Philadelphia, February 25, 1891. This is a new monthly, which promises to be of much value to educators.

Patent medicines differ—One has reasonableness, another has not. One has reputation—another has not. One has confidence, born of success—another has only "hopes."

Don't take it for granted that all patent medicines are alike. They are not. Let the years of uninterrupted success and the tens of thousands of cured and happy men and women place Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription on the side of the comparison to which they belong. And there isn't a state or territory, no—nor hardly a country in the world, whether its people realize it or not, but have men and women in them that're happier because of their discovery and their effects.

Think of this in health. Think of it in sickness. And then think whether you can afford to make the trial if the makers can afford to take the risk to give your money back, as they do, if they do not benefit or cure you.

Dyspepsia has driven to an early and even suicidal grave many a man who, if he had tried the virtues of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, would be alive to-day and in the enjoyment of health and competence. Sufierer, be warned in season, and don't allow the system to run down.

Beecham's Pills cure Bilious and Nervous Ills.

BIRNEY.

The sketch of JAMES G. BIRNEY candidate of the Liberty Party for President, in pamphlet for 25 cents. A limited number of copies of this handsome pamphlet for sale at the N. C. A. office

MEMBERS OF THE CORPORATE N. C. A.,

WHO HAVE ACKNOWLEDGED THE NOTICE SENT THEM OF THE ANNUAL MEETING.

C. W. Hiatt, Cleveland, Ohio.
E. Whipple, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. Wm. Pinckney, Princeton, Ill.
Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma, Ala.
Miss Sarah E. Morrow, Leanna, Kan.
D. P. Baker, Lovejoy, Tenn.
M. A. Gault, Blanchard, Iowa.
H. H. George, Beaver Falls, Pa.
J. W. Barnlund, East Jordan.
J. G. Terrill, Rome, N. Y.
Milton Wright, Dayton, Ohio.
John Dorcas, Tipton, Iowa.
Mrs. S. E. Day, Brighton, Mich.
Richard Platt, Lockport, Ill.
Benj. F. Worrell, Glenwood, Ill.
R. N. Countee, Memphis, Tenn.
Thomas Hodge, Rogers Park, Ill.
C. B. Knight, Worcester, Mass.
W. Wishart, Monmouth, Ill.
Edgar Wylie, Chicago, Ill.
T. B. Arnold, Humboldt Park, Ill.
Nathan Callender, Montdale, Pa.
Woodruff Post, Olean, N. Y.
J. A. Richards, Fort Scott, Kan.
Jerome Howe, Wenona, Ill.
Timothy Hudson, Kalamazoo, Mich.
John Gardner, Aurora, Ill.
J. M. Hitchcock, Chicago, Ill.
Isaac Bancroft, Everly, Iowa.
Geo. R. Milton, Elgin, Ill.
I. R. B. Arnold.
J. W. Wood, Baraboo, Wis.
W. T. Ellis, Portland, Oregon.
C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Ill.
Edward Hildreth, Los Angeles, Cal.
P. Bacon, Weatogue, Conn.
H. Curtis, Olathe, Kan.
J. A. Conant, Willimantic, Conn.
Chas. H. Abbott, Grand View, Tenn.
Anna E. Stoddard, Boston, Mass.
S. C. Kimball, New Market, N. H.
Mrs. Sarah E. Allis, Holly, N. Y.
H. H. Hinman, Berea, Ky.
Samuel A. Pratt, Worcester, Mass.
A. J. Chittenden, Woodbine, Ky.
A. W. Parry, Spring Valley, Ill.
Mrs. L. C. Capwell, Dale, N. Y.
Joseph Travis, Evanston, Ill.
Henry Cogswell, Puyallup, Wash.
S. C. Pomeroy, Washington, D. C.
E. B. Kephart, Denver, Col.

PREMIUMS

FOR CYNOSURE SUBSCRIBERS.

Stanley's Adventures in the Wilds of Africa.

By Hon. J. T. Headley. A graphic account of the several expeditions of Henry M. Stanley into the heart of the Dark Continent. It covers Stanley's expedition to find Livingstone, his crossing the continent and exploration of the Congo from its headwaters to the ocean, his establishment of the Congo Free State, and his last great achievement—the discovery and deliverance of Emin Pasha, in 1889. Twenty-five illustrations, 539 pages, 8vo., bound in cloth. A book of extraordinary interest to all classes of readers.

Price postpaid $1.00.

We send it free to every old subscriber who sends a new name with his renewal and $3.00. To anybody for two new subscribers for one year each. This offer is good only till June 1st, 1891.

Africa and its Explorers.

Livingstone, Stanley, and other celebrated travels and adventures in Africa. The interesting story of all the celebrated travellers in Africa, including Barth, Du Chaillu, Burton, Speke, Grant, Sir Samuel Baker, Schweinfurth, Moffat, Thomson, Livingstone, and Stanley. Naturally, it conveys more general information, and is of greater popular interest, than could be given in the narrative of any one traveller. This is a much larger book than "Stanley's Adventures." Numerous illustrations. A book every one needs to be up to the times.

We make an extraordinary offer of this book till June 1st, for three new subscribers, or for a renewal and two new names. All for one year each.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

1. Historical Sketch—National Christian Association.
3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
5. President C. G. Finney on the duty of Christians towards the Lodge.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
18. Despotic Character of Freemasonry.
19. Freemasonry, a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Nathaniel Colver, D.D., on Masonry.
33. Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
44. D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.

Chapters in American Politics.
Masonry vs. Prohibition.
Decline of the G. A. R.
Christianity and Odd-fellowship. Part 1, 4 pages; part 2, 4 pages.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

National Christian Association,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

New England Department.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

Washington Department.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washngton, D. C.

Western Department.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

Pacific Department.—Rev. M. H. Nichols, 520 Kearney St., San Francisco, Cal.

College Agent, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

State Agents.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimbal New Market.
Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.
Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

Other Lecturers.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Berea, Ky
Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Annawan, Ill.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)
AND OFFICE OF
The Christian Cynosure,
221 West Madison Street, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

President—Bishop Milton Wright Dayton, O.

Vice President—Rev. Geo. R. Milton, Elgin, Ill.

Cor. Sec'y and Treasurer—W. J Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Rec. Secretary—Rev. E. R. Worrell, Washington Heights, Ill.

Directors—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, J. M. Hitchcock, Jerome Howe, G. R. Milton, Wm. Pinkney, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, W. W. Wait, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell.

The object of this Association is:
"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

New England.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves Harris, Mass.

Connecticut.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

Illinois.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

Iowa.—Pres., S. A. Gilley, Marengo; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

Kansas.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Lecompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

Maine.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

Massachusetts.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

Michigan.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas. Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

Minnesota.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

Missouri.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

New Hampshire.—Pres., Simon Rowe, Guilford; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Isaac Hyatt Gilford Village.

New York.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

Ohio.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

Pennsylvania.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

Wisconsin.—Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover 50 cents; per dozen $4.00.
All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison street, Chicago.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, MAY 28, 1891.

"THE PEOPLE'S PARTY."

The Cincinnati convention last week launched its boat for the race of '92, with this name on the stern. It was in some degree a representative meeting and in so far has a right to the name, for its delegates were from the National Farmers' Alliance of the Northwest, the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union of the South, the F. M. B. A., the Knights of Labor, the Grange, the Citizen's Alliance, the People's party, the Industrial Alliance, the Anti-monopoly party, the single tax men,—and if there be any other organization protesting against banks, tariff, monopoly and capital it probably had a voter in the meeting. "Every one that was in distress, and every one that was in debt, and every one that was discontented gathered themselves" to this cave of Adullam,—but where was David? They certainly appealed to the God of David. They sang "My Country 'tis of Thee." They were led in prayer and joined the leader in the Lord's Prayer,—but where was David?

Senator Peffer of Kansas was permanent chairman, and Ignatius Donnelly, who knows as much about Shakespere as he does about practical statesmanship, was chairman of the committee on resolutions.

Different States were very unequally represented, Ohio and Kansas furnishing the large proportion of the one thousand five hundred delegates. The speeches of Peffer and Powderly reflected the spirit of the meeting. Said the new Kansas Sentor as he warmed to his work:

"What shall we do with the money power? Let it alone. We'll raise up a power among the people and make our own money and use it. [Tremendous applause.] Take their railroads? No. We'll build our own railroads. [Renewed applause.] Are we to destroy? No. To fight? Yes, with ballots and prayer, for the alliance is in a great measure taking the place of the churches. . . . Does this mean a new party? [Cries of 'Yes.'] What else are we here for? [Applause.] The prophecy of the hour is that a new party is to be born here and its name is to be the 'national party.'" [Applause.]

Powderly, more cautious and secretive, said:

"For twenty years men who have followed that banner [pointing to a Knights of Labor flag in the rear of the stage], have taught, believed and held these truths. It has been charged that I am here to head off the third-party movement. Why, if your movement is so weak that one small man can head it off it is not worth the name of a movement. [Cheers.] I have been charged with failing to lead this movement. My friends, this movement is too large to be led by any one man. [Cheers.] No one man can lead it or stop it." [Wild applause.]

The crowd dispersed cheering for Peffer and Powderly.

Next day, Wednesday, the decisive step was taken. After numerous speeches, generally for or against immediate organization, the committee on resolutions brought in its report. Among these speakers was the fearless Mrs. Gougar of Indiana, who with St. John and other Prohibitionists, were urging their great reform upon the conference. Mrs. Gougar denounced the banquet with which the convention was to close as a brewer's scheme to stop the mouths and fuddle the brains of men who should be clear-headed and true to the supreme interests of their nation and of their homes in such a critical hour. But her warning was not heeded. The platform announces the People's party; endorses the Ocala, St. Louis and Omaha demands for unlimited coinage of silver, government sub-treasuries and 2 per cent loans to the people, no alien ownership of lands, economy in government expense, income tax, government ownership of railways and telegraphs, and a direct vote for President. Additional resolutions favored universal suffrage, an eight-hour day, etc.

The platform was adopted after a scene of enthusiasm and disorder. Then a California delegate introduced a subject as unwelcome to this body as it was to the Republicans in the Auditorium of this city.

"RESOLVED, that we favor the abolition of the liquor traffic" was his motion. It was almost howled down and overwhelmingly defeated. And so vanished in thin air the hopes of St. John, Miss. Willard, and the Voice. The editors of the latter must take now a new tack and approach the farmers with common sense and not by way of the secret Alliance. That way is full of snares and pit-falls.

This great meeting is not without its significance. Its protests against monopolies, trusts, unequal taxation, and ruinous government expense must be heard. But to open our mints to the silver of the world, to invite everybody to get into debt by their sub-treasury system, and to demand government ownership instead of control of railways, will not help us. More than all this, to endorse the saloon curse was a most fatal mistake.

1. The party is, therefore, misnamed, for only a small portion of the people can get on its platform.

2. It has embraced the saloon and must sink with it in the sea of politics; as the witless Greek embraced the anchor and jumped overboard from the wreck.

3. Above all, this party is largely made up of different secret societies, separated from one another by false oaths, though worshiping in the lodge before the same god of this world. It is like the feet of the image of Nebuchadnezzar's dream,—iron and clay. Such a party should not stand in America. It cannot. Secrecy in politics means the Clan-na-Gael and the Mafia—ruin.

4. This movement, however, will be an Attila to the old parties—a scourge of God. It will give their leaders the headache,—and the heart-ache. It may never elect a President, but will probably defeat several. It will be like the Assyrian, the rod of God's anger, to chastise men who have long had it in their power to deliver our nation from her worst enemies, but have refused.

CAN IT BE TRUE?

Professor Wilcox of the Chicago Theological Seminary is, we hope, misrepresented by the reporters, in the late discussion of High License in the Congregational ministers' Monday morning meeting at the Grand Pacific hotel, as saying: "The Bible is full of endorsements of sins which cannot be at once suppressed." And he instanced slave-holding, polygamy and divorce as such sinful practices tolerated and endorsed for a time.

The venerable and apostolic John Rankin of Ohio, and Theodore D. Weld, (whom Dr. Leonard Bacon endorsed as the author of a "Tremendous Book" on slavery) in their Bible argument, took the ground that there was no slave-holding in the Hebrew servitude, but only a modified bond service. The whole Mosaic code was consistent with Ex. 21: 16: "He that stealeth a man and selleth him" (that is, kidnapping) "or, if he be found in his hand," (that is, slave-holding) "shall be put to death."

The learned Prof. Jahn says, the purchased bondmen were to be circumcised, and when circumcised, the rights of a Hebrew attached to them; and they were entitled to exemption from labor and instruction during the three annual Hebrew festivals, both which made chattel slavery impossible.

The venerable Dr. Lyman Beecher, in the hearing of the writer, scouted, with his peculiar burning eloquence, that Hebrew servitude was slavery. "Do you think," said that blazing orator, "D'ye think they had to get ropes on the persons of those heathen bondmen, when they bought them, and drag them over the lines into the liberty of the sons of God! No! No! 'Twan't slavery: it's a mockery to call it so." And the crowded Presbyterian audience almost shouted their assent to his "logic set on fire." We hope Prof. Wilcox is misreported; and that no such false views of the Bible are given at this late day. The case of polygamy and divorce we will endeavor to give next week.

N. C. A. BOARD MEETING.

The new Board met in the Cynosure office Saturday morning and organized by the election of Rev. G. R. Milton, chairman, and Rev. E. R. Worrell, secretary. Prayer was offered by Rev. T. B. Arnold. There were present brethren Arnold, Cook, Hitchcock, Milton, Whipple, Worrell, and Wylie. Standing committees were elected as follows: Finance, G. R. Milton, H. A. Fischer and E. Whipple. Buildings: Alexander Thomson, W. I. Phillips, W. B. Stoddard. Publications: C. A. Blanchard, J. M. Hitchcock, Edgar Wylie.

Voted that J. M. Hitchcock and E. A. Cook be a committee to consider the declination of ex-President J. Blanchard to be re-elected editor of the Cynosure.

The field agents' contracts were considered, and were voted to be renewed by the Corresponding Secretary on the same terms as last year. The salary of M. H. Nichols, the California agent, was increased by an appropriation of $10 per month in publications.

Leave of absence till next annual meeting was granted to Henry L. Kellogg from editorial work; and the engaging of a substitute for the place was referred to the Publication committee.

Mr. H. M. Hugunin of the city being present, he was introduced to the Board.

A statement of the former committee on an International Congress reported verbally their efforts to secure recognition by the World's Congress Auxiliary of the World's Columbian Exposition.

The committee on editorial resignation reported as follows:

Your committee on the resignation of ex-President J. Blanchard as editor of the Christian Cynosure after a continuous service of twenty-three years, recommend, that, as said resignation is declared by him to be peremptory, it be accepted.

We cannot, however, refrain from expressing the earnest hope that his connection with the Cynosure as contributor may be continued so long as God may give him the strength of mind and body for such service, realizing that he has forged some of the strongest arguments against organized secretism that we now possess, and that from his vast knowledge and memory of the history of reform for the past half century he can and will give the readers of the Cynosure reminiscences of the past that will be of great value and helpfulness.

Nor would we forego the expression of our wish that the pages of the Cynosure may still be enlivened with his keen, logical arguments against the Secret Empire, as well as his prophetical assurances of the ultimate success of reform work, drawn from his own experience and more especially from the sure Word of God.

The report was adopted, and the Board voted to request Pres. Blanchard to permit his name to remain in the Cynosure as Corresponding Editor.

For the International Conference work the committee of last year was continued and two others added, the committee standing thus: T. B. Arnold, E. R. Worrell, H. L. Kellogg, W. I. Phillips and Edgar Wylie.

W. I. Phillips was elected publisher of the Cynosure for the year. Pres. C. A. Blanchard was appointed general manager of the affairs of the Association, to act for the Board when not in session. The salaries of the editor, publisher, etc., were continued as last year. The resignation of Jerome Howe as member of the Board, because of distance from Chicago and business engagements, was accepted. A letter from Pres. J. A. Booker of Little Rock, Arkansas, was referred to the general manager.

—Pres. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. F. Crafts addressed the State Congregational Association last week at Galesburg, Ill., on the Sabbath Reform.

—Writing last Friday Bro. Stoddard of the New England work says: "We were never more hopeful of success in our New England field than to-day. Last evening's meeting was a success in every respect, and the resolution printed in the Herald was passed unanimously."

—Rev. Mr. Filling, pastor of Emmau's Evangelical Lutheran church in this city, West Side, gave notice on the Sabbath after the Conference, which he attended, that he would speak on secret societies on the next Lord's day. During last week he prepared for this occasion, and we hope to hear of a good work done for Christ by the address.

—The bill for the first of the weekly meetings for which the Boston pastors have subscribed their names, is one of the most remarkable ever issued in that or any other city. It begins and ends with a testimony against the lodge from two of Boston's greatest sons,—statesman and orator, Sumner and Phillips. Better than that, it has the names of such representative men as Gordon, Gray, Gifford, Grant, Graham, Davis, and others, endorsing and supporting these weekly meetings, such as Rev. Mr. Foster of Cincinnati, District National Reform Secretary, addressed.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Rev. S. F. Porter, the N. C. A. College agent, will spend the summer in Marietta, Minnesota, where he will labor in the Gospel ministry.

—Bro. W. B. Stoddard writes us from Columbus, Ohio, where he revisited friends and scenes of former labors. He had an appointment at Utica on Monday.

—Prof. Olson, who addressed the N. C. A. National Convention held in Galesburg in 1881, in the Swedish language, has been chosen successor of the beloved Dr. Hasselquist as president of Augustana College, Rock Island, Ill.

—Rev. A. A. Hoyt of Cambridgeport is chairman of the committee arranging for a three-days' convention of the Christian Workers, to be held in Dr. Gordon's church, Clarenden and Montgomery streets, Boston, beginning next week Tuesday.

—The presence of Rev. Geo. A. Milton of Elgin, at the N. C. A. Board meeting Saturday, was cheering. He has been confined for months with a broken thigh, and yet walks with a staff and a careful motion suggestive of the pain he has endured from the accident.

—Memorial services in respect to Rev. Joseph Travis will be held in the Free Methodist church, No. 16 North May street, this city, on Wednesday evening of this week. Bro. Travis was 69 years old, and had been thirty-nine years in the ministry at the time of his death.

—Rev. M. A. Gault of Iowa, District Secretary of the National Reform Association, spent the Sabbath in this city, preaching in the United Presbyterian church of Englewood. He was made most welcome at this office Monday. He was on his way to the meeting of the Reformed Presbyterian Synod meeting in Pittsburg.

—George W. Clark, the bard of reform, attended the temperance meeting in the Moody church in this city, which ex-Gov. St. John addressed Sabbath afternoon. He was called on, of course, and aroused great enthusiasm, which was tempered with amazement and veneration for his age, that seems unlikely ever to lay hand upon his spirit.

—Pres. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. Alexander Thomson have seldom failed to attend N. C. A. Board meetings. The former was in Peoria over Sabbath, going from the State Congregational Association at Galesburg, which he addressed on the Sabbath question on the last evening. Bro. Thomson went Friday night to Washburn in northern Wisconsin, at the urgent request of the church in that place, who seem anxious to call him away from the vicinity of Chicago where he has so long been known and esteemed for his activity in every good work.

—An item in the proceedings of the late meeting of the Illinois Congregational Association will be read with double interest by the Cynosure readers, who remember the lodge assault on Wheaton College of 1877–8, and the effect of it upon the standing of our editor among the churches with which he had long and successfully labored. The following paper was adopted by the Association with unanimity and marked manifestation of approval:

To the Moderator of the State Association of Illinois: In 1878 the Association referred ex-President J. Blanchard to the clerk of Elgin Association for information concerning his standing as affected by difficulties then existing between the two Congregational churches of Wheaton. As registrar of Elgin Association, I am asked for information on that subject. I therefore take this method of answering the question referred to us by the State Association, and giving the information for which I am asked, to-wit: Having carefully examined our records, it gives me pleasure to say that they never have contained and do not now contain any imputation of any blame or moral wrong to ex-President Blanchard, nor has he ever been called to answer any such imputation. But so far as our records are concerned, he appears always to have been a devoted man and minister of Christ. The difficulties and complications at Wheaton, which disturbed our relations for a time, have long passed away. The two churches at Wheaton are both members of our State Association; both are in the Congregational year book; both have esteemed and beloved pastors, and the standing of President J. Blanchard in Elgin Association is regular, and nothing is left of the trouble of the past to diminish our esteem for his person and our respect for his services during his long and successful life in the church of Christ. ISAAC N. ADRIAN, Registrar of Elgin Association.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Religious matters.—English robins in Salem.—Mrs. M. E. A. Gleason scores a triumph at Alton, N. H.—A curious sensitiveness in the I. O. G. T.—The Endowment orders must go in the Granite State.

It is nearing Anniversary week, when every orthodox New Englander, in the language of the Old Farmers' Almanac, "looks out for rain." It is not, however, the important institution that it used to be before religious meetings had become so varied and so multiplied. People may take their choice now of almost every week in the year, and find some gathering to attend of Christian workers and thinkers—and the last not least. Never before was there greater interest in the discussion of religious problems. Any writer or speaker who can shed new light on old truths, is sure of a hearing, even though the light in question be somewhat broken and confused. The cardinal doctrines on which the church has rested for ages cannot change; the only change must be in our relation to them. This is true progress, the difference between a fossil and a living soul. But how anomalous it sounds in this nineteenth century to read such words as this in the last Catholic Review: "The doctrine that we have greater light in our age; that we better understand the truths of revelation than the ages before us. . . . . is not simply an empty boast; it is a serious error. . . . . This doctrine of progress applied to matters of faith, has been distinctly condemned by the Holy See." But the spirit of free inquiry is abroad, and it is the new wine that is going to rend the old bottles of Romish bigotry and superstition.

A paper on "Superfluous Churches, or what Denominationalism costs," was read at the last Methodist Preachers' meeting, by Dr. Barrows of Reading. He states that sixty-one per cent of the denominational churches in this State are superfluous, and considers that the remedy for this evil of multiplied and divided churches, lies in adopting God's own basis of membership—not theology, but religion, as shown in repentance and faith. This is sound doctrine; but his statement that it was the early New England basis, namely, religious experience and not theology, I seriously question. The old-fashioned New England phrase, that such an one has "experienced religion," shows how much our forefathers made of the personal work of the Holy Spirit; but at the same time I am afraid if a candidate had expressed his belief in a second probation, or any other of the various forms of heresy now so common, he would have been kept outside a good while.

Misled by a newspaper paragraph, I stated in one of my recent letters, that among the delegates to the late Theosophical convention in Boston, was a high-caste Brahmin, Mr. Narayan Sheshadri. On the contrary, this gentleman, who is a Presbyterian missionary, neither attended the conference, nor endorsed their works, but emphatically pronounces, "Theosophy or Buddhism to be atheism, and moreover, a humbug." In this he agrees with Max Muller, who says, "Esoteric Buddhism has no sweet odor in the nostrils of Sanskrit and Pali scholars. They try to keep aloof from it and avoid all controversy with its prophets and prophetesses."

A pair of English robins—perhaps descended from the very ones so dear to our childish hearts, who covered the "Babes in the Woods" with leaves—have been imported and were let loose in Salem the other day. It would have been better had a more southern locality been chosen for the experiment, as they have had little opportunity to develop the migratory instinct, and will find a great difference between an Old England and a New England winter. But famous as is the English robin in song and story, he will never supplant in the popular affection our native bird of that name, who hops over our lawns with an eye to the cherry trees, and such an indescribable free and saucy air, as if he had just signed a private declaration of independence on his own account, setting forth his natural and inalienable right to as many of said cherries as he can conveniently make off with. But if the English robin will only prove some offset to that unmitigated nuisance, the English sparrow, here's long life and a numerous progeny to him. America is a big country, and if he is not shot by gunners or seized by prowling cats, he may soon become one of our regular habitats.

Whoever has heard Mrs. M. E. A. Gleason speak at our conventions, will be glad to hear of her triumphs on the platform. She is steadily winning her way to a foremost place in the ranks of women lecturers. She spoke at Alton, N. H., a few days ago, on the subject, "Who is Responsible?" holding her audience for an hour and a half, and making a convert of one life-long Democrat, who said he will never vote for license again.

The Weekly Times in a recent issue stated that the Maine Grand Lodge of Good Templars, had passed resolutions strongly censuring the government for its efforts to push the sale of American beer, and deploring its failure to ratify the Brussels treaty for keeping rum out of Africa; and added the comment, that "the Prohibitionists had about the same as captured the Grand Lodge." Whereat one of the Grand Lodge members took great exception, and affirms that the Times is utterly wrong; that the Grand Lodge was not captured by anybody, but stands where it has always stood, independent of political parties." But why this sensitiveness to the accusation? It certainly shows what we have always more than suspected, that the I. O. O. G. T., as well as the whole secret wing of the temperance army, has no desire to be seen marching under the Prohibition banner.

Insurance Commissioner Lineham of New Hampshire has decided that the endowment orders must go. His call for statements of their financial condition has been responded to by twenty-eight of the two hundred or more operating in that State, and the figures are more instructive than reassuring to the holders of their certificates, whose face value, in the aggregate, amounts to $16,254,450. To meet this enormous liability they have only the meagre sum on hand of $328,041. The money collected from certificate holders amounts to $785,966. From this they have paid out in benefits and endowments $107,047, while for salaries and expenses they have paid out $350,878, or more than three times as much. One of the questions which these companies had to answer, or evade as best they could, required them to tell how many holding the low numbered and early maturing certificates were officers or agents. It was found, as in the tickets of the Louisiana Lottery, that these were largely held by the officers, and that one man often held an official position in several companies. These twenty-eight orders have all been given their ticket of leave, and the remaining ones will soon follow. They are of course raging with indignation against Commissioner Lineham, but are powerless against his order. They are now making Massachusetts, where, to quote a speech at a monster mass meeting of the members held in Manchester, "the citizens do not labor under the ban of so benighted a Legislature as that which prevails in New Hampshire," their headquarters and general rallying place. An alliance of all the endowment orders has been formed, looking towards political action, and a strong effort to get the New Hampshire law repealed. Whether our Legislature will continue to extend its protection to such barefaced swindles on the people, remains to be seen. ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 20, 1891.

A very interesting ceremony is going on at Glen Echo, the site of what its projectors claim will be the handsomest Chautauqua grounds in the world, as I write. It is the laying of the corner-stone of the magnificent arch over the main entrance to the grand stone amphitheatre. A large crowd is in attendance, and among the speakers are Commissioner of Education Harris, Superintendent of Public Schools Powell, and the following clergymen: Dr. Corey, Dr. Newman, Dr. Power, Dr. Hershey, Dr. Sunderland and Dr. Chester. Much surprise is expressed at the wonderful progress made, since this project was inaugurated only a few weeks ago, and it is now certain that everything will be in readiness for the first session of the Glen Echo Chautauqua, which opens on the 16th of next month.

Man has no more God-like trait than love for little children, and it always raises a man in my estimation, to know that he is not ashamed to display that love in public. When the Presidential party returned from its long tour, I happened

(Continued on 12th page.)

THE HOME.

THE FINISHED COURSE.

I saw an aged man upon his bier:
His hair was thin and white, and on his brow
A record of the cares of many a year;
Cares that were ended and forgotten now,
And there was sadness round, and faces bowed,
And women's tears fell fast and children wailed aloud.

Then arose another aged man and said,
In faltering accents to that weeping train:
"Why mourn ye that our aged friend is dead!
Ye are not sad to see the gathered grain,
Nor when the mellow fruit the orchards cast,
Nor when the yellow wood shake down in ripened mast.

"Ye sigh not when the sun, his course fulfilled,
His glorious course, rejoicing earth and sky
In the soft evening, when the winds are stilled
Sinks where the islands of refreshment lie,
And leaves the smile of his departure, spread
Over the warm colored heaven and ruddy mountain head.

"Why weep ye then for him, who having run
The bound of man's appointed years, at last,
Life's blessing all enjoyed, life's labors done,
Serenely to his final rest has passed?
While the soft memory of his virtues yet
Lingers, like twilight hues, when the bright sun is set.

"His youth was innocent; his riper age
Marked with some act of goodness every day;
And watched by eyes that loved him calm and sage,
Faded his late declining years away.
Cheerful he gave his being up, and went
To share the holy rest that waits a life well spent.

"That life was happy; every day he gave
Thanks for the fair existence that was his;
For a sick fancy made him not her slave,
To mock him with her phantom miseries,
No chronic tortures racked his aged limb,
For luxury and sloth had nourished none for him.

"And I am glad that he has lived thus long;
And glad that he has gone to his reward;
Nor deem that kindly nature did him wrong;
Softly to disengage the vital cord.
When his weak hand grew palsied, and his eye
Dark with the mists of age, it was his time to die."

—William Cullen Bryant.

DYING AND LIVING.

There is much solemnity in the conviction that one is growing old—but there should be no sadness. The thought often comes to such an one: "There is my life. That is what I am very soon to answer for. I must answer for very much more than if I had died young. What will God say to me about it?" The aging person has ample notice of the close of his probation—to those who die young there is next to no notice. He has ample time to set his house in order, and he will have to answer for that privilege too. What should the effect of this situation be upon his mind? Ought it not be to make him independent and fearless? Is he not already emancipated from the bondage of man, and freed from the fear of man? As the world narrows and shrinks, why should not the freedom and the moral heroism of heaven expand as his already received heritage? It would seem that this ought to be so, and that it ought to bring a sense of great happiness. A great many old people do enter very largely upon the higher life before they have done with this. There is no pull upon them but love and duty, and these pull both ways, toward God and toward man—and strongly toward righteousness in its relations to both worlds. Let the old man stand like a marble pillar under the good and true. He ought to realize that the breeze which fans his cheek is the breeze of the morning. The finest fire we have seen was the sparkle of old eyes, lit up by the courage and hope of the rising sun. Die? The old man is not going to die. He has no thought of dying. He is only getting ready to live. "I have not begun to fight yet," said Paul Jones, as he stepped from the decks of the scuttled and sinking "Bon Homme Richard."
—Interior.

THE TWO SIDES OF DEATH.

There is this difference between John's view of death and ours. He saw what souls go to. We are so apt to see only what souls go from. When our friend dies, we think of all the warm delights of life, all the sweet friendships, all the interesting occupations, all the splendor of the sunlight which he leaves behind. If we could only know, somewhat as John must have known after his vision, the presence of God into which our friend enters on the other side, the higher standards, the larger fellowship with all his race, and the new assurance of personal immortality in God; if we could know all this, how our poor comfortless efforts of comfort when our friends depart, our feeble raking over the ashes of memory, our desperate struggles to think that the inevitable must be all right; how this would all give way to something almost like a burst of triumph, as the soul which we loved went forth to such vast enlargement, to such glorious consummation of its life! We should be able to forget our own sorrow, or at least to bear it gladly, in our thankfulness for him, as the generous farmer-boy might see his brother taken from his side to be made a king, and toil on himself all the more cheerfully at his humble and solitary labor, thinking of the glory to which his brother's life had come. It is well, then, with those to whom John's vision is fulfilled. Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord, and stand immortal before him!—Phillips Brooks.

THE RESURRECTION OF THE SAINTS.

A BIBLE READING BY REV. E. P. MARVIN.

1. It will occur at the coming of the Lord: 1 Cor. 15:23; 1 Thess. 4:16–18.

2. This is distinguished in Greek as a resurrection from among the wicked dead: Mark 12:25; Luke 20:35.

3. Disciples and priests who believed in a universal resurrection were puzzled by the teaching of this eclectic resurrection: Mark 9:9; Acts 4:1, 2.

4. Paul even coins a new word, nowhere else found in the New Testament, to express this "out-resurrection" from the dead: Phil. 3:11.

5. It is called a "better resurrection," and "the first resurrection": Heb. 11:35; Rev. 20:5.

6. It is the time of recompense and crowning for the just who love his appearing: Luke 14:14; 2 Tim. 4:8.

7. Heaven's benediction rests on all who have a part in this first resurrection: Rev. 20:6; 1 Cor. 15:53–57.—Messiah's Herald.

THE GALLEY-SLAVES.

"I love the Lord because he hath heard my voice and my supplications," read Susie out of her little Bible.

"That is the one hundred and sixteenth Psalm, isn't it?" asked uncle, as he turned around from the fire.

"Yes," said Susie. "When grandma gave me this Bible she made me promise to read a Psalm every day, and I've done it. I'm almost through now, though; and besides, I've learned the first three Psalms so that I can say them straight through without making any mistakes. Grandma don't know that, though. I'm going to surprise her next time she comes here by repeating them."

"That's right," said uncle. "I remember when I was a boy, grandma, who was my mother, you know, used to have me learn verses out of the Bible, too, and one day I learned that one hundred and sixteenth Psalm that you read today, and then grandma told me a story about how that Psalm was once sung."

"Tell it to me, won't you?" said Susie. "Who sang it?"

"Some people that you would have thought would not have felt very much like singing," said uncle. "They were a lot of folks covered with mud."

"Why, how did they get mud on them?" said Susie.

"It had been thrown on them," said uncle; "for this was in the days when the Protestants of France were being persecuted by wicked kings, and were obliged to flee from home for their lives."

"And these folks had not got away quickly enough, had they?" said Susie.

"No," said uncle; "they had been caught, and, by the king's order, were to be galley-slaves."

"What were they?" asked Susie.

"Well," said uncle, "the galleys were French ships about one hundred and fifty feet long, and forty wide, and along each side of the ship there ran a sort of a bench for the rowers. On this bench sat the galley-slaves, or men, who were made to row the vessel with such heavy oars that they could hardly pull them. These slaves were fastened with an iron chain around one leg, and this chain was long enough so that they could lie down to sleep on the deck, sometimes. The poor slaves had very little to eat, and night and day, in the cold winters and hot summers, they were kept pulling at the oars, while streams of perpiration ran down their bodies. And if ever they stopped pulling they were whipped most unmercifully by an officer who watched them."

"But where were they rowing to all the time?" asked Susie.

"Up and down the coast. The galleys were vessels that were employed to watch the French Coast and guard it," said uncle, "and sometimes they attacked English ships that happened to sail near them."

"Well," said Susie, "I should think that those folks would have felt more like crying than like singing a Psalm, if they knew they were going to the galleys."

"Yes," said uncle, "but they were being 'persecuted for righteousness' sake,' you know. One of them, whose name was John Huber, wrote in his journal about the way they were treated. He says that one night he, his wife and children, and fourteen galley-slaves, arrived at a little town in France. They were all chained, and the priests of the place came and offered to set them free if they would give up their Christian religion. But of course Huber and others could not do such a thing as that. Then the women and children of the town came out and threw mud on them."

"Seems to me that town must have had a lot of wicked people in it," said Susie.

"Well," said uncle, "perhaps Huber thought so, too, but he did not answer back again angrily. Would you like to know what he did do?"

"Yes," said Susie. So uncle took down a book from one of the library shelves and found what John Huber wrote about this trying experience. Then uncle read this to Susie:

"'The women and children of the place covered us with mud. I made my little party fall on their knees, and we put up this prayer, in which all the fugitives joined: "Gracious God, who seest the wrongs to which we are hourly exposed, give us strength to support them, and to forgive in charity those who wrong us. Strengthen us from good even unto better."

"'They had expected to hear complaints and outcries; our words astonished them. We finished our little act of worship by singing the one hundred and sixteenth Psalm. At this the women began to weep. They washed off the mud with which our children's faces had been covered, and they sought permission to have us lodged in a barn, separate from the other galley-slaves, which was done.'"

"Well, I'm glad those women did something to make up for the way they treated those poor folks," said Susie. "But, what do you suppose made Huber choose the one hundred and sixteenth Psalm? I should have thought he would have chosen some more sorrowful one, like the one hundred and second, 'a prayer for the afflicted when he is overwhelmed.' I read that the other day, and it would have been just right for Huber."

"Well," said uncle, "I cannot tell, of course, just why Huber picked out the Psalm he did, but I think he, perhaps, thought the fifteenth verse was appropriate. 'Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.' I am sure when Huber thought of poor, old, white-headed men and good ministers and young boys being killed by hundreds in the torture of life in the galleys, that he must have been sure that the time would come some day when the poor Christians would be freed and could say with David, in the eighth verse, 'Thou hast delivered my soul from death and mine eyes from tears.'"

"Why, uncle," said Susie, "did they really make slaves out of ministers?"

"Yes," said uncle, "ministers and officers and magistrates, and all classes of people. They even sent a little boy twelve years old to the galleys 'for having accompanied his father and mother to the preaching.' One boy, sixteen years old, was kept in the galleys for twenty-six years, and two others were only fifteen when they were sent to be slaves."

"Well," said Susie, "did such dreadful times last always?"

"No," said uncle, "but they lasted for many years; so many that often the galley-slaves died before the time of freedom came. Every little while these Christians were offered freedom if they would only give up their religion, and when they refused, they were whipped and treated worse than before."

"How many of them were there?" asked Susie.

"Well," said uncle, "there were known to be at least a thousand of them, but it is feared that there were many more, for those were dark days in France, and evil deeds did not always come to light."

"How did they all get free at last?" asked Susie.

"It was through Queen Anne, of England," said uncle. "She begged that the Christians might be set free; and so, at last, in 1713, word came to the poor galley-slaves that the day of deliverance had come. I think they must have felt like the children of Israel when they escaped from the Egyptians that had 'made their lives bitter with hard bondage.'"

"But, what could they do?" asked Susie. "They had no homes to go to."

"They went to the city of Geneva," said uncle. "It was a sad procession of maimed, halting, feeble people, their bodies bearing the marks of whip and chain. But the city of Geneva received them with great joy, for this city had become noted as a refuge for Protestants. The magistrates and ministers with a great throng of people came out of the gates as the galley-slaves approached the walls, and received them with great honors; and, one writer says, 'every citizen took to his arms some one of the band of martyrs, and bore him proudly and fondly to the comfort and luxury of his Protestant home.'"

"I'm glad that they had such a good time at last," said Susie. "There never were any more galley-slaves after that, were there?"

"Yes," said uncle, "there were some even during the reign of the next king, Louis the XV., or the 'well-beloved,' as he was called. But in 1769, fifty-six years after the city of Geneva received the procession, the very last galley-slave in France was set free. He was an old man named Alexander Chambon, and he had been a galley-slave twenty-seven years, and all because he attended a religious meeting. He was eighty years old when he was released."

"He must have been glad," said Susie.

"Yes," said uncle; "but the day came, Susie, when the galley-slaves rejoiced more than they did on that day when they were released, for they received the inheritance that Christ spoke of when he said, 'Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.'"—Selected.

SWEDEN'S CRADLE SONG.

[The following beautiful hymn is a translation from the "Home Songs" of Sweden. It is crooned by the mother as she is putting her little one to sleep.]

O little child, lie still and sleep;
Jesus is near, thou needst not fear;
No one need fear whom God doth keep
By day or night.
Then lay thee down in slumber deep
Till morning light.

O little child, be still and rest;
He sweetly sleeps whom Jesus keeps;
And in the morning wake so blest
His child to be.
Love every one, but love Him best—
He first loved thee.

O little child, when thou must die,
Fear nothing then, but say "Amen"
To God's demand, and quiet lie
In his kind hand.
Until he say: "Dear child, come fly
To heaven's bright land."

Then when thy work on earth is done
Thou shalt ascend to meet thy friend;
Jesus the little child will own,
Safe at his side;
And thou shalt dwell before the throne,
For he hath died.

—American Messenger.

A clergyman in Bath, Me., was urging the prosecution of a notorious saloon. He applied to to an attorney, who said to him, "Are you not a Mason?" The minister replied that he was. "Well," answered the attorney, "that saloon-keeper is a Mason and you had better let him alone." The case was dropped. The clergyman was too good a lodgeman to violate his "obligation."—National Home Guard.

TEMPERANCE.

THE MAYOR ON LICENSES.

[From the Inter Ocean, May 16.]

Everybody who knew Hempstead Washburne before he was elected Mayor knew that he was not an extreme temperance man, but none of them believed that he would ally himself with the saloon interest and against the homes of Chicago. Judging, however, from the published interviews with the Mayor on the famous Appleton license case that is what he appears to have done. The lowest saloon man in the city could not ask him to go farther in sustaining the saloon against all opponents, good or bad.

It seems hardly possible to believe that the Mayor understood to what extent he was committing himself. Mayor Harrison never dared to go so far, yet every one will admit that he was a champion of the saloon men. Mr. Washburne claims that as Mayor he has no right to exercise his judgment as to whether a man is fitted to have a saloon license, or whether the place at which he desires to start his saloon is a proper one or not, nor has he any right to consider the wishes of the neighboring residents or property holders in the premises. If the application comes to him in proper form indorsed by the police the license must issue.

Mayor Cregier refused a license to Jim Appleton on account of the protest of the property owners in the vicinity of the place where he desired to open his saloon. He had the matter before him and under consideration for some time. If he was criticised for his action at all it was because he hesitated so long. Appleton appealed from the decision of the Mayor, and, going before Judge McConnell, asked for a mandamus upon the Mayor compelling him to grant the license. The citizens followed him there and he lost his case. Now in another name it is said that Appleton gets the license from the man whom the people elected because Mayor Cregier was in too close an alliance with the gamblers and the disreputable classes. If Jim Appleton is not a "disreputable" where is the Mayor going to find one? Appleton came before Cregier with his application properly indorsed, but Cregier denied him because all the reputable people in the neighborhood protested. Mr. Washburne says under similar conditions he will grant Mr. Appleton a license.

It seems almost impossible that the Mayor can understand the extent to which he has committed himself. He has gone further than the respectable men in the liquor business ever wanted him or any other Mayor to go. Further than any Mayor of Chicago, unless it should have been Colvin, has ever gone. It advertises to the disreputables in the business that they can secure licenses for any location in the city provided they can secure sufficient ground on which to carry on the business. Nothing that the Mayor could have said will alarm respectable people more, for it is well known that there are men who secure property in residence neighborhoods for undesirable uses, only to compel the respectable people in the neighborhood to buy them off. The Mayor never intended to encourage such people, but that will be the undoubted effect of his utterances unless he takes early opportunity to modify them.

The matter of which we complain is not so much the issuance of this Hoffman license, though that is bad, but the declaration that his Honor makes as to what his course will be in all such cases as that of Appleton's. We assure him that if he had made such a declaration before the election, to say the least, he would never have been inaugurated as Mayor.

BREWERS PREPARING FOR THE WORLD'S FAIR.

The board of trustees of the United States Brewers' Association have appointed a committee of five leading brewers, three of Chicago and two of Milwaukee, with power to add to their numbers, to arrange with the World's Fair Commissioners at Chicago for "suitable space for the purpose of making an exhibit that shall properly represent the brewing and kindred trades at the World's Fair to be held in that city in 1893." If beer and other intoxicating liquors are to be allowed a place in the Columbian Exhibition, there should also be arranged as a part or adjunct of the liquor exhibit, an exhibition of prisoners, paupers, lunatics and cripples from the prisons, poor-houses, and hospitals, and a personation of the slums, as showing the social results of the manufacture, sale and use of intoxicants. The one would be incomplete without the other.—National Temperance Advocate.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE OLD TESTAMENT.

LESSON X.—Second Quarter.—June 7.

SUBJECT.—Hezekiah, the Good King.—2 Chron. 29: 1-11.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Them that honor me I will honor.—1 Sam. 2: 30.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—2 Kings 18: 1-12. T.—2 Kings 19: 8-37. W.—2 Kings 20: 1-11. T.—2 Kings 20: 12-21. F.—2 Chron. 29: 16-36. S.—2 Chron. 30: 1-27. S.—Matt. 21: 12, 13, 23-27.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. A kingly reformer.—vs 1, 2. Hezekiah had a wicked father; he himself had a wicked son. We are told that the Christian is born "not of blood;" that is, not according to the natural law of heredity, but a higher spiritual law by which every man, no matter whether his father be the best or the vilest of the human race, must be born again and formed after another than the human fleshly type which he inherits from his parents. It is not told us when or how the Spirit of God moved upon the young king's heart, but it must have been in early years, and perhaps through the teachings of a pious mother. The second verse shows us that his was no mere outward morality, for "he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord," without being anxious to know whether it was right in the sight of men. This means that his was that living faith which takes hold on God, and without which it is impossible to please him. Instead of shaping his conduct by the opinions and customs of the times, he took for a model his great father, David. This suggests two lessons. (1) The need to go back to the old-fashioned religion of earlier days to get spiritual backbone. (2) Studying the lives of holy men and women who have gone before us, will aid us to emulate their example.

2. The opening of the temple.—vs 3-5. The first act of Hezekiah's reign was to open the house of God, which had been shut up under Ahaz so that the people could not worship there if they would. How many costly sanctuaries need to be opened to-day, that are literally closed to the masses on week-days, and practically closed even on the seventh. How many hearts which should be temples to the living God are closed up. No offering of praise; no sacrifice of thanksgiving; no daily seeking for heavenly guidance; but instead, as in the old temple at Jerusalem, they have become the receptacle, not only of rubbish, but of all that is vile and unclean. It is important to notice—for these lessons are of no use unless we make individual application—that Hezekiah, in his talk to the priests and Levites, puts the duty of sanctifying themselves before that of cleansing the temple. Before we can sincerely utter even the first petition of the Lord's prayer, "Hallowed be thy name," we must ourselves have hallowed, that is, consecrated, hearts. They are commanded to be holy who bear the vessels of the Lord, and no acceptable service can be done for him until we have recognized the necessity as well as the duty of personal holiness.

3. Confession of sin.—vs 6, 7. Confession is the first step to sanctification. "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and cleanse us from all unrighteousness." It is interesting to note how well these saints of old understood the primary conditions of acceptance with God, showing that before the Gospels were written, these conditions were in full force, and distinctly comprehended. There are also several points about his confession to be remarked: (1) Although he does not mention his father by name, it is a confession of the great wickedness of the previous reign. He evidently felt that he was responsible for his father's apostasy with all its deplorable results, unless he publicly repudiated his sins by this open testimony. It is not enough that we keep ourselves clear from the prevailing wickedness around us. We are to testify against it, or we have not done our whole duty. Nor are we to shrink from doing this because it involves some one near and dear to us. How often we hear it said, as an excuse for not taking any open stand against the lodge, "My father, or my brother, or some other near relative, was a Mason." As well might Hezekiah have pleaded the idolatry of his father as an excuse for not saying anything against it. (2) His confession was specific and not merely general. They had not only forsaken God, but turned their backs on his house. In Ez. 8: 16, we see how this was done. Even the religious leaders of the people turned their backs on the temple where God was visibly manifested, and worshiped the sun towards the east. So men turn their backs on his church to-day to worship in secret lodges. They shut up the doors, just as now by systems of false worship, by unbelief, and materialism, men shut the doors of the kingdom on themselves and others. They put out the lamps, just as so many are now trying to put out the light of God's Word. They ceased to offer incense or sacrifice. In short, they had become a nation of fools, saying in their hearts, "There is no God," and receiving their just punishment in being abandoned by him to the swords of their enemies, who invaded them on every side.

4. Hezekiah's charge.—vs. 10, 11. Is it in our hearts as in Hezekiah's to make a covenant with God? Then we may be sure that he is yearning to make such a covenant with us. "Be not now negligent." Now, when so great a duty was imposed upon them; now, when they had been chosen for this very work. We too have a great work to do, and we too have been chosen for it. The negligent Christian may have more to answer for than even the gross sinner.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—The City Bible Society of Washington, D. C., has just received a legacy of $2,000 willed by Miss Mary Moore, who died in that city last month.

—Maj. Whittle recently closed a series of very interesting and successful Gospel meetings in Beaver Falls, Pa. Many were induced by his faithful preaching to accept of Christ as a personal Saviour. From Beaver Falls he went to New Brighton, just across the Big Beaver river, to begin a series of meetings there.

—Dr. Munhall's evangelistic work in Haverhill, Mass., has closed very successfully. It was continued through five weeks, and as a result nearly seven hundred persons have professed faith in Christ.

—The great national Baptist meetings are being held this year in Cincinnati. The Publication Society held its 67th anniversary Friday. The 59th anniversary of the Home Mission Society opened Tuesday.

—Rev. J. H. Hamilton, of Homestead, Pa., a delegate to the Baptist convention at Cincinnati, was killed by a stone which fell from a new building which he was passing Wednesday.

—The standing committee of the Episcopal diocese of Iowa, Wednesday, refused its consent to the consecration of the Rev. Phillips Brooks as Bishop of Massachusetts.

—The Eastern Maine Methodists, in conference at Damariscotta, May 5, adopted the following: "Whereas, The State Department has recently issued a fifty-page pamphlet for the express purpose of enlarging the American trade in malt liquor with various South American countries, Resolved, That we earnestly and emphatically protest against the prostitution of any department of the United States government to such an unholy purpose, and should this country be placed in the shameful attitude of the brewery of South America, the present Administration should be severely rebuked by an outraged people."

—The Presbytery of South Florida adopted the following resolution at their recent session in Eustis: "Resolved, That since it has become well known that our government has lent itself to the brewers of this nation in securing information designed to promote their nefarious traffic in Central and South America, we, the citizens and members of this Presbytery, in harmony with other religious bodies, enter our solemn protest against this marked governmental aid to brewers in the United States. We look on this action of the Secretary of State with grief and shame, and all the more beccause he comes from a State which was the first to prohibit, and which continues to prohibit, this unholy beer business."

—An interesting and suggestive bit of news is reported from France, to the effect that the inhabitants of a town near Greenoble have abandoned Catholicism and have publicly announced that they have become Protestants. As soon as the Bishop of the diocese heard of it, he sent a new priest to take charge of things, but the people would not have him to rule over them. Under the guidance of their former priest, they are holding service in the public school-house, and are preparing to build a new church. This may be the beginning of a much larger movement, as the conditions seem favorable for it in many parts of France. At any rate, it marks a decline of Catholic influence in what has been one of its strongholds. The powerful order of the Carthusian monks originated near Greenoble, and here is their chief monastery. They were once all-powerful in that province, and this revolt is significant.—Christian Standard.

—Sabbath, May 10, the Eighth Street Covenanter congregation, Pittsburgh, Pa., began the celebration of the past twenty-five years of their history. The congregation was organized Oct. 31, 1865, and the first pastor, Rev. Dr. A. M. Milligan, was installed May 14, 1866. Dr. D. McAllister, assisted by Dr. R. J. George and others, conducted the eight days services.

—The Swedish Augustana Lutheran Synod has fifteen congregations in Chicago. Three new congregations were organized in 1890, and three new churches are to be consecrated in 1891.

—Gov. Peck of Wisconsin has notified the Salvation Army officers that they must look for protection to the local authorities. The Chief of Police of Milwaukee is being criticised on all sides for his refusal to protect the Salvationists in holding their meetings. The Evening Wisconsin declares it to be a censorship unheard of even in Russia for the Chief of Police to pass judgment upon the methods of a religious organization and refuse to protect the organization from abuse because he isn't pleased with the methods. The Daily News, the workingmen's paper, also denounced the action, and says if the army is not protected in its rights the chief must be held directly responsible.

—Last summer Dr. Sheldon Jackson planted three new stations on the Alaskan frontier—one at Port Prince of Wales, at an extreme western point, the support of which had been assumed by the Congregational church. Here, on the Fourth of July, within sight of the snow-capped mountains of Asia, when the midnight sun was shining, he made preparations for occupying this point, rejoicing in the thought that the poor people of Siberia might have the Gospel through converts there brought to Christ. Another station farther north, at Point Hope, has been gladly assumed by the Episcopal church. And at Point Barrow, at the extreme north—within the arctic circle, where the winter's night is three and a half months long—the Presbyterians have sent Prof. Stevenson of Ohio, who can receive his mail and supplies but once a year.

WASHINGTON LETTER (Continued from 9th page).

to be at the station when the special train, upon which it had travelled more than nine thousand miles, steamed slowly under the long shed. Standing on the front platform of the slowly moving train, next to the engine tender, was the familiar figure of President Harrison; on the floor of the station was a nurse with two children, one of them in the cutest little knickerbockers imaginable; the other a neatly-attired little girl. "Grandpapa," shouted the little boy, breaking away from the nurse and making for the train as fast as his little legs would carry him. It was the President's little grandson, and as soon as Mr. Harrison saw him coming, he stepped from the still moving train, and raising the child in his arms, gave him half a dozen hugs and kisses before carrying him, still in his arms, to see his grandmother, who was still on the train. Some people—I feel sorry for all such—appear to think that such an exhibition of affection was not in keeping with the dignity which should always surround the President of the United States. I differ with them, and commend to them the Master's words—"Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Every year, while in session at Mount Vernon, the lady regents of the Mount Vernon Association attend divine service at old Pohick church, which was built upon plans sketched by George Washington, and in which he always worshiped when at Mount Vernon. The building is a substantial one, of brick and stone, and was begun in 1768 and completed in 1772, although the Pohick congregation dates its organization as far back as 1720. It is about seven miles from Mount Vernon, where the regents of the Association stay during their annual sessions, and the pilgrimage is made in carriages.

"The Christian view of the significance of human life," was the theme upon which Rev. Dr. McKim talked to the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon, and he made it particularly interesting; not forgetting to devote a little attention to the pessimists who are continually asking, "Is life worth living?" The doctor made it plain that human life is divine in its origin and in its possibilities, and that only in the light of the love of God can human life have any coherence or consistency; apart from this love, and faith in the redemption of Christ, life is like a broken arch, full of aspirations never realized, and hopes destined to disappointment. The peculiar beauty of this talk was the simplicity of the language, which was easily comprehended by the young and the uneducated.

*

THE CHURCH AND ITS FOES FROM A BOSTON STANDPOINT.

BOSTON, Mass., May 18, 1891.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—On Thursday afternoon the City of Boston memorial services in honor of Admiral David D. Porter were held at Tremont Temple. The eulogy was pronounced by Hon. Jas. Russell Soley. A fine audience listened to his eloquent review of Porter's life and public services. The invocation was pronounced by Dr. Brooks. This was the first I had seen of the Bishop-elect. He is a man of commanding presence. It is no wonder the people like to hear such thoughts expressed in such a manner by such a man. It is sad to think that he has prostituted his gifts and influence in the advocacy of license as the best remedy for the drink system, and the rights of the Roman hierarchy to the fullest privileges in making an unholy war upon our American institutions. But such is man. The press of Boston is all but universally under the power of Rome. Father Chiniquy and others in their anti-Catholic movement here get severely let alone. But the daily papers are not fighting for principles, but for money. They do whatever gets the most readers.

Sabbath I preached morning and afternoon in the Second Reformed Presbyterian church. The view given of the situation was this: Secretism with its serried columns is in the front, Romanism with its Jesuitical organizations in the rear, the liquor traffic on the right, and socialism and anarchism on the left. In the midst are the churches. We would expect to find them in a united solid square to resist these foes. But they are not. They are divived into endless factions. Instead of uniting against their common enemies they spend their time and strength in opposing and checkmating and thwarting one another. O for shame, that Christ's soldiers should thus court defeat and disaster! How long shall this be? On Sabbath night I preached in the Grace First M. E. church on Temple street, Rev. W. I. Haven, D.D., pastor.

J. M. FOSTER.

FROM THE GREEK MISSIONARIES.

22 DEBEVOISE PLACE,
BROOKLYN, N. Y., May 15, 1891.

DEAR FRIENDS OF THE CYNOSURE:—We have begun our journey eastward, as you will see.

We arrived here in Brooklyn safely after spending a week in Philadelphia gathering up the surgical and dental instruments which had been donated to Dr. Zaraphonithes by different firms and individuals since last fall, when he was there. We also visited a dear doctor and long-time friend of Dr. Z., and we also visited the very large and interesting Sabbath-school of Mr. Wanamaker, who comes from Washington every Saturday night to superintend it and teach the adult class of 500. Dr. Z. had the privilege of speaking a few words to them about our work, and the children and I sang for them in Greek, and they contributed something for our school. We were very sorry not to see Mr. Wanamaker himself, for he was in California. We were told that when Mr. W. first started that school many years ago, he was pelted with rotten eggs; but now his school numbers 3,000. We visited the U. S. Mint and other places of interest, and enjoyed our stay in Philadelphia very much.

The children and I are keeping house on a small scale here in Brooklyn, and Dr. Z. is lecturing this week in different places near Philadelphia. Our two older children are attending school here, where the books and other things are free, which makes it very nice for us. We trust that God may bless our efforts, and if it is his will we want to start for Greece in two months at least.

We thank our dear friends in Wheaton, or wherever they may be, for what they have done for us and for the Greek work. Pray for our work, Christian friends, and that God may send us soon to our field of labor if it is consistent with his holy will.

Yours with Christian love,
MRS. FRANCES W. ZARAPHONITHES.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

CHICAGO.

The jury in the case of John Culver against the Herald for $25,000 damages, which he claims to have suffered by reason of matter printed regarding him as a juror in the Cronin case, brought in a verdict for defendant yesterday after being out about half an hour.

Immanuel Baptist church took fire near the roof Sunday morning before service and was badly damaged in the interior before the flames were subdued.

The World's Fair grounds and buildings committee let the contracts for the immediate construction of the first of the eleven principal Columbian palaces.

Guatemala will send its national band to the exposition. This band is the third largest in the world, that of Austria being first, and the Mexican national band second.

The statue of Linnæus was unveiled at Lincoln Park Saturday. It is erected by Swedish residents.

Seventy-three car-loads of strawberries reached Chicago Saturday, and the city feasted at the expense of country friends.

COUNTRY.

The Bureau of Statistics reports the total arrivals of immigrants at the ports of the United States for the month of April was 85,001 against 64,212 last year.

The Illinois House Wednesday passed unanimously the bill authorizing the Chicago Public Library to erect a public library building and soldiers' memorial hall on Dearborn Park, Chicago.

Eleven Italians were buried by the caving of a sewer at Providence, R. I., Tuesday. Four were killed.

The bill entitling women to vote at school elections was on Tuesday recommended for passage by the Illinois House Committee on Education.

(Continued on 16th page.)

DONATIONS.

For Current Expense Fund:

R. Smith	$ 5.00
H. L. Kellogg	1.00
S. F. Porter	5.00
M. D. Worcester	5.00
C. A. Blanchard	5.00
Mrs. S. F. M. Hand	10.00
Samuel A. Pratt	10.00
W. I. Phillips	5.00
S. K. J. Chesbro	5.00
Rev. Wierson	1.50
E. A. Cook	5.00
T. B. Arnold	5.50
I. R. B. Arnold	1.00
Collections	12.75
George B. Hopkins	25.00
Mrs. E. Talcott	1.50
John M. Clark	1.00
John Stahl	2.00
J. C. Young	1.00
E. Whipple	3.00
H. D. Whitcomb	3.75
Wm. Pinkney	3.00
Collection	50
M. Stubbs	1.50
Russell Park	15.00
Mrs. Abbiah Coe	3.50
	$137.50

For Free Tract Fund:

B. Perrine	$ 50

For Southern Ministers' Fund:

Capt. Wm. Wilson	$ 40.00
R. Park	7.08
T. A. Armstrong	1.00
J. T. Cullor	50

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from May 18 to May 23, inclusive:

G M Smith, Mrs E C Andrews, Mrs M Barney, H Cope, Mrs A B Altman, R Day, Rev W O Dinius, R Dickinson, J M Stanton, J Markle, M Caldwell, M Stubbs, R Park, Mrs S S Hamilton, A Stalker, J T Cullor, A Backus, Mrs S L Carpenter, E H Candee, A M Lundstrom, A Rose, H Bosch, E A Acruman, H Maricle.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be indueed to take any other. A Boston lady, whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experienee below:

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I had taken Hood's Sarsaparilla, knew what it was, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other. When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

To Get

Hood's

Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer who will send me their Express and P.O. address.
T. A. Slocum, M. C., 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

SEE THIS!

The latest, most complete edition
Over 235 choice

Reform Songs for the Times.

Only 30c a copy, or 20c by the 100

—AND—

"THE TOBACCO MANIA."

$1 per 100.

For sale here and by the author,

GEO. W. CLARK,

76 W. Montcalm St., Detroit, Mich.

FOR MINISTERS

THE

"STORIES OF THE GODS"

is especially adapted. They will at once derstand the references to the idolatrous systems of the nations. And the idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus more clearly seen and easily understood. Will you furnish each pastor in your place with one of these pamphlets?

PRICE, ONLY 10 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison Street, Chicago

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.

Wheat—Spring	96	@	1 03
Winter	99	@	1 02
Corn—No. 2	55	@	56½
Oats—No. 2	44¼	@	48
Rye—No. 2	84
Bran per ton	12 00	@	12 50
Hay—Timothy	10 00	@	13 00
Butter, medium to best	12	@	18
Cheese	05	@	12½
Beans	1 75	@	2 25
Eggs	16
Seeds—Timothy	1 08	@	1 30
Flax	1 17	@	1 18
Broom corn	03	@	04½
Potatoes, per bu	75	@	1 05
Hides—Green to dry flint	04½	@	07½
Lumber—Common	10 00	@	13 00
Wool	16	@	34
Cattle—Choice to extra	5 50	@	6 40
Common to good	1 75	@	5 40
Hogs	4 15	@	4 70
Sheep	4 25	@	5 60

NEW YORK.

Wheat	1 05	@	1 16¾
Corn	64	@	69
Oats	47	@	65
Eggs	16¾
Butter	10	@	19
Wool	14	@	39

KANSAS CITY.

Cattle	2 60	@	5 85
Hogs	3 00	@	4 47
Sheep	4 00	@	4 85

THE BEST.

EVERITT'S MAN-WEIGHT

HOE, CULTIVATOR PLOW, ETC., SINGLE AND DOUBLE WHEEL.

Will Revolutionize Hand-Power Cultivation—Makes Keeping a Horse an Unnecessary Expense in Many Cases.

This new Invention is a Great Boon to all Cultivators of the Soil, and must be Classed with the Great Inventions of the Age, yet it is so simple that the natural question with every one is, "Why did I not think of that?" And so nicely does it fill a want existing with thousands of gardeners, nurserymen, seedmen, florists, and farmers, that after the first trial they invariably conclude to "never do without it."

All other Garden Tools, Seed Drills, Rollers, etc., can be attached and run with our propeller with many times the power and greater ease than by hand power.

SINGLE WHEEL cultivator, with attachments, price $6.00. W't, 15 lbs.

DOUBLE WHEEL, with attachments, $8.00. W't, 20 lbs.

With every Double Wheel Machine the extra parts are furnished necessary to convert it into the single wheel machine, without extra charge. Thus practically giving the two machines for the price of one.

This best of all hand cultivators to every worker for the Cynosure free as follows:

Two-wheel for 15 new subscribers. ($22.50.) Single-wheel for 12 new subscribers. ($18.00.)

Two-wheel machine, 1 renewal and one new subscriber for $8.50. Same for two new subscribers.

Single wheel and same for $7.00 Express or freight extra.

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots,

WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

—o—

It contains the portraits of

Washington.
John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.
James Madison, 4th President of the United States.
Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.
Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.
Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.
John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.
Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.
William Wirt, Attorney-General.
John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.
John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.
Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.
Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.

Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, postpaid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. 25cts each.

THE COSMOPOLITAN,

The Cheapest Illustrated Monthly in the World.

25 CENTS A NUMBER.
$2.40 PER YEAR.

EDITION FOR DEC. '90, 100,000 COPIES.

THE COSMOPOLITAN is literally what the New York Times calls it, "AT ITS PRICE, THE BRIGHTEST, MOST VARIED AND BEST EDITED OF THE MAGAZINES."

SUBSCRIBE. SUBSCRIBE. SUBSCRIBE.

An Unusual Opportunity

FOR NEW SUBSCRIBERS FOR ONE YEAR ONLY.

THE COSMOPOLITAN, per year	$2.40
The Christian Cynosure	1.50
The price of the two publications	3.90
We will furnish both for only	3.00

This offer is only to new subscribers to both the Cosmopolitan and the Cynosure, and only for one year.

To an old subscriber to the Cynosure who is new to the Cosmopolitan	$3.25
To old subscribers to both	3.50

A Splendidly Illustrated Periodical at a Price hitherto deemed Impossible.

TRY IT FOR A YEAR.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians

CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Odd-fellowship: ITS HISTORY AND ITS WORK. By President J. Blanchard. A neat pamphlet with cover. Postpaid, 5 cts.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Green, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. 25cts each.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 326 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the lodge, temple and coucil. 25cts each.

LODGE NOTES.

Mrs. Ida M. Weaver is Supreme Chief of the Order of the Pythian Sisters. She lives in Perry, Iowa.

The colored pugilist, Peter Jackson, was made a Mason in New South Wales, by Gen. Gordon Lodge.

A new secret political organization was formed a few weeks since in Lansing, Mich., and christened the Citizens' Alliance and Industrial Brotherhood. The "Ocala" platform was adopted, with the addition of the eight-hour labor day and the per diem pension law.

The Royal Adelphia, meeting at Detroit in March, decapitated its officers and was reorganized, with H. M. Stark of Milwaukee as Supreme Secretary, and O. A. Law of Detroit as Supreme Commander. Headquarters will hereafter be at Milwaukee. Sick claims were reduced from $5, $10 and $15 per week to $3, $6 and $9 per week. No benefits will be paid for more than twelve weeks in one year. The three Detroit conclaves which have withdrawn from the order will not rejoin. They will form an independent order.

The second biennial session of the Supreme Association Patrons of Industry was held in Lansing, Mich., in March, with thirty-four delegates. The basis of representation is one delegate to each 3,000 members. The report of the Supreme Secretary shows a total of 70,059 in Michigan, 2,700 in New York, 1,823 in Pennsylvania, 5,152 in Ohio, 7,011 in Indiana, 410 in Illinois, 6,212 in Wisconsin, 19,046 in the Province of Ontario, or a total of 113,000. The order is far from being harmonious. It is charged that there has been too much politics in the Michigan order.

The Hebrew Standard, New York City, says: Some years ago Anti-masonry blew its blast, and purified Masonry by blowing out the chaff. A little blowing in the same direction would be a great benefit to the Masonry of to-day; there seems to be a great deal of chaff mixed in with the good wheat of the craft, and a little cloud of unpopularity would blow out a large number of Masonic dudes, who have become members because—because—h'm, it's fashionable, you know. Masonry to-day is very popular, very fashionable, and, consequently, suffers much from superfluous and superficial Masonic butterflies.

The Royal Adelphia is reported gone to pieces. The supreme officers at Detroit were lately notified that the Iowa, Minnesota, and Wisconsin conclaves had withdrawn. This action practically throws the order out of existence. The Royal Adelphia was the creation of the brain of Detroit's fire marshal, W. H. Baxter, and was launched in Detroit in the fall of 1883. It was the idea of the originator to organize a small society among his friends for the purpose of giving assistance in cases of sickness or accident, but the benefits were placed at altogether too high a figure for the welfare of the order, and attracted members like flies to a sugar barrel. When the originator undertook to remedy the evil his position was rendered so unpleasant by the large number of new members that he was compelled to resign, as did nearly every one of the original members. The order was incorporated Jan. 2, 1884, and the membership increased until at the end of seven years it numbered over 5,000. The $15 per week sick benefit fund was the seductive bait which allured individuals who were not earning over $10 or $12 per week in health, thus virtually putting a premium on sickness. All efforts to reduce this benefit proved futile, and the order went to certain wreck.

END OF THE WAH-NAH-TON.—The expulsion of the Harrison bolters leaves the would-be Tammany body in the hands of city employes who will not be city employes in a few days. The Harrison men say that when the bread-and-butter men lose their jobs they will have have no further use for the secret order with the hyphenated name and monthly dues. One year ago the society claimed a membership of over twelve hundred.

The Liver

When out of order, involves every organ of the body. Remedies for some other derangement are frequently taken without the least effect, because it is the liver which is the real source of the trouble, and until that is set right there can be no health, strength, or comfort in any part of the system. Mercury, in some form, is a common specific for a sluggish liver; but a far safer and more effective medicine is

Ayer's Pills.

For loss of appetite, bilious troubles, constipation, indigestion, and sick headache, these Pills are unsurpassed.

"For a long time I was a sufferer from stomach, liver, and kidney troubles, experiencing much difficulty in digestion, with severe pains in the lumbar region and other parts of the body. Having tried a variety of remedies, including warm baths, with only temporary relief, about three months ago I began the use of Ayer's Pills, and my health is so much improved that I gladly testify to the superior merits of this medicine."—Manoel Jorge Pereira, Porto, Portugal.

"For the cure of headache, Ayer's Cathartic Pills are the most effective medicine I ever used."—R. K. James, Dorchester, Mass.

"When I feel the need of a cathartic, I take Ayer's Pills, and find them to be more effective than any other pill I ever took."—Mrs. B. C. Grubb, Burwellville, Va.

"I have found in Ayer's Pills, an invaluable remedy for constipation, biliousness, and kindred disorders, peculiar to miasmatic localities. Taken in small and frequent doses, these Pills on the liver, restoring its natural powers, and aiding it in throwing off malarial poisons."—C. F. Alston, Quitman, Texas.

Act Well

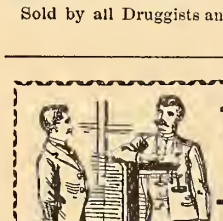
"Whenever I am troubled with constipation, or suffer from loss of appetite, Ayer's Pills set me right again."—A. J. Kiser, Jr., Rock House, Va.



"In 1858, by the advice of a friend, I began the use of Ayer's Pills as a remedy for biliousness, constipation, high fevers, and colds. They served me better than anything I had previously tried, and I have used them in attacks of that sort ever since."—H. W. Hersh, Judsonia, Ark.

Ayer's Pills,

PREPARED BY

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine.

TEN POUNDS IN TWO WEEKS THINK OF IT!

As a Flesh Producer there can be no question but that

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Of Pure Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites Of Lime and Soda

is without a rival. Many have gained a pound a day by the use of it. It cures

CONSUMPTION,

SCROFULA, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS AND COLDS, AND ALL FORMS OF WASTING DISEASES. AS PALATABLE AS MILK.

Be sure you get the genuine as there are poor imitations.

On account of the Harrison defection and other causes this number has been reduced to about six or seven hundred working members. The fact that only a few of the bolters heeded the circular letter sent out shows that the oath-bound organization is neither feared nor respected. Those who appeared did not seek any reconciliation. "This so-called investigation, under the auspices of Mike McDonald, is the last vicious kick of the dying Wah-Nah-Ton," said one of them. —Chicago News.

Baldness is catching, says a scientist. It's catching flies in summer time. Use Hall's Hair Renewer and cover the bald place with healthy hair and flies won't trouble.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. ☞A liberal discount to dealers

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty-three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

Masonic Salvation, as taught by its standard authors. This pamphlet is a compilation from standard Masonic works, in proof of the following proposition: Freemasonry claims to be a religion that saves men from all sin, and purifies them for heaven. 111 pages, price, postpaid, 20 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

FARM NOTES.

SUCCESSFUL STRAWBERRY CULTURE.

From 1868 to 1876 I cultivated small fruits extensively and was successful. I cultivated strawberries in hills and rows, entirely; and believe it to be the most profitable way. It requires attention in detail, and labor; but what enterprise does not, if we expect success and profit?

Most persons who set out strawberries, pay but little attention to them after the first year. The plants send out runners in every direction between rows, and set young plants; they grow and bear, and these send out runners, set more plants, and the consequence is, they increase rapidly, and take entire possession of the ground so that their supply of proper food is exhausted, and the poor, half-starved plants, if they do not die outright, bear little, dwarfed berries, or none at all, and the ground has to be changed to other crops.

Generally after strawberries bring a good price, an extra number of persons go into the business of growing them; the consequence is, for a season or two, the market is over-stocked and the fruit so cheap, that growers get disgusted and plow up their beds for other crops. Then follows a season or two of a dearth of berries and away up the price goes again.

My plan of cultivation enables me to have a stock of strong, healthy plants bearing regularly every year and having a moderate space only, set apart for them, and when berries are scarce I will sell all, and get a good price because my plants being strong and healthy bear fine, large berries; when berries are cheap my loss is only nominal; first my crop is not large and the berries are so fine that they sell when the lesser ones go begging for buyers.

Place your plants eighteen inches in the row and three feet between rows. When the runners have been formed and the little plants set, wrap the runner (especially if a long one) around the mother plant so as to bring the little plant near to the old one and fasten with a little forked twig to hold it until it roots. In this way you can set from two to four young plants for your next year's hill. Allow no young plants to set away from the old one; cultivate the ground thoroughly, keeping down all weeds and the ground loose till fall.

When the ground is first frozen, cover evenly the whole space, moderately thick, with horse stable litter, and leave for the winter.

As soon as all frost is out in the spring and some rains have fallen and leached out the manure from the litter, go over the patch and open the litter just over the crown of the hill only, to allow the plants to leave out.

As the hot weather advances the plants will grow and spread their leaves over the litter (now cleaned by spring rains) which will keep all weeds down and the ground cool.

The plants will bear heavily; the berries be clean and free from dirt and rot, protected by the straw. The manure leached from the litter will keep the ground sufficiently enriched from year to year. As soon as all fruit is removed, go over the patch and remove carefully and thoroughly all litter, clean and loosen the ground thoroughly and evenly and you are ready for the new runners of this year. The old bearing plants usually die out this year and the young plants of last year will grow into bearing, so if you have two or more you must curtail the young runners and plants; calculate to have only about four good strong plants from year to year; if you increase above that you will not succeed for they will not thrive; they must have room and cultivation, as outlined above.

If the above plan is followed I am not afraid to guarantee that one can occupy the same space a series of years indefinitely, and have perfectly satisfactory success in strawberry culture.—Dr. Wm. B. Carpenter in Farm, Field and Stockman.

TRIAL OF STRAWBERRIES.

The Wisconsin Experiment Station made a trial of several of the newer varieties of strawberries, by setting twelve to twenty-four plants of a variety in the spring of 1889, on enriched light clay loam, the plants two feet apart, in rows three and one-half feet apart; runners were permitted but blossoms were picked off the same year. The following varieties were found the best for the market nearly in the order in which they are named, and the list will be interesting to compare with the results in other localities. Those marked with a star have imperfect stamens and require a fertilizer: Warfield No. 2, Haverland*, Jesse*, Wilson, Sharpless, Burt, Eureka*, Gipsy*, Gandy, Welch, Downing, Cumberland, Bubach 5*, Cloud*, Carmichael*. Gipsy was the earliest, and Gandy, Welch and Carmichael were the latest.

GRAPES SOUTH.

A. W. Smith writes to the Rural New-Yorker from Georgia that he has given the different grapes sent there in five and ten-pound baskets a thorough trial, and that he and his family all agree in placing the Brighton first, the Diana second and Delaware third. After these come in the order of their quality as named, Martha, Catawba, Isabella and Salem. For distant shipment he would place Diana first, as it carries so well. Its keeping qualities are well known.

Like Household Words.

No medicine ever placed before the public has won such popularity or been so much talked about and praised as Hood's Sarsaparilla. All over the country, Hood's Sarsaparilla, Peculiar to Itself, 100 Doses One Dollar, are like household words. Hood's Sarsaparilla has won unlimited praise by its power in making scrofulous and impure blood by the relief it gives from the itching and burning of salt rheum, in the satisfaction at meals experienced by the former dyspeptic, in the happiness of those it has cured of malaria and catarrh, in buoyancy of spirits and the good appetite it has imparted to those recently weak, tired and run down. Why don't you try it this spring?

RICH AND PURE,

BEECHAM'S PILLS

PAINLESS. EFFECTUAL.

WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.

For BILIOUS & NERVOUS DISORDERS

Such as Wind and Pain in the Stomach, Fullness and Swelling after Meals, Dizziness, and Drowsiness, Cold Chills, Flushings of Heat, Loss of Appetite, Shortness of Breath, Costiveness, Scurvy, Blotches on the Skin, Disturbed Sleep, Frightful Dreams, and all Nervous and Trembling Sensations, &c.

THE FIRST DOSE WILL GIVE RELIEF IN TWENTY MINUTES.

BEECHAM'S PILLS TAKEN AS DIRECTED RESTORE FEMALES TO COMPLETE HEALTH.

For Sick Headache, Weak Stomach, Impaired Digestion, Constipation, Disordered Liver, etc.,

they ACT LIKE MAGIC, Strengthening the muscular System, restoring long-lost Complexion, bringing back the keen edge of appetite, and arousing with the ROSEBUD OF HEALTH the whole physical energy of the human frame. One of the best guarantees to the Nervous and Debilitated is that BEECHAM'S PILLS HAVE THE LARGEST SALE OF ANY PROPRIETARY MEDICINE IN THE WORLD.

Prepared only by THOS. BEECHAM, St. Helens, Lancashire, England. Sold by Druggists generally. B. F. ALLEN CO., 365 and 367 Canal St., New York, Sole Agents for the United States, who (if your druggist does not keep them) WILL MAIL BEECHAM'S PILLS on RECEIPT of PRICE, 25cts. A BOX. (MENTION THIS PAPER.)

THERE ARE MANY USES FOR SAPOLIO.

To clean tombstones. To renew oil-cloth. To renovate paint. To brighten metals.
To polish knives. To scrub floors. To wash out sinks. To scour bath-tubs.
To clean dishes. To whiten marble. To remove rust. To scour kettles.

EVERYBODY USES IT.

Dentists to clean false teeth, Engineers to clean parts of machines. Housemaids to scrub marble floors.
Surgeons to polish their instruments. Ministers to renovate old chapels. Chemists to remove some stains.
Confectioners to scour their pans. Sextons to clean the tombstones. Carvers to sharpen their knives.
Mechanics to brighten their tools. Hostlers on brasses and white horses. Shrewd ones to scour old straw hats
Cooks to clean the kitchen sink. Artists to clean their palettes. Soldiers to brighten their arms.
Painters to clean off surfaces. Wheelman to clean bicyclee. Renovators to clean carpets.

EVERY ONE FINDS A NEW USE.

JOHN THREE-SIXTEEN,

A New 8-page Gospel Monthly,

Devoted to the evangelization and the material prosperity of the Indians, as well as the general spread of the Gospel and the building up of believers in "the faith once for all delivered to the saints." No patent medicine advertisements allowed in its columns. It is a red-hot Anti-Romanist, Anti-Rum, Anti-World-Compromising, Anti-Fraud, and thoroughly Non-Sectarian paper.

Only Twenty-five Cents a Year.

Address: JOHN THREE-SIXTEEN CO., Vinita, Indian Territory.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

10,000

Another ten thousand edition of the trac

KILLED, AND NO INQUEST.

This is a large 4-page tract at 30 cen per pound, 15 cents for half pound, and 10 cents for a third of a pound. It is an illustrated account of the death of Rev. J. W. Johnston, while being initiated by the officers of Huntington Lodge, W. Va.. in January of this year. Sent postpaid at the above price. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION. 221 W. Madison St Chicago

The St. Louis Sermon.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover.

Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

WILL SELL FOR

Regular Price.		Sellin Price.
	FIVE CENTS.
$ .15	"A WOMAN'S VICTORY, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp.	$ .05
$ .10	"WASHINGTON SOUVENIR." Portraits of Geo. Washington and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freemasonry. Size 18x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home.	$ .05
	SIX CENTS.
$ .10	"SECRET SOCIETIES." A Lecture delivered at Oberlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Paper, 36 pp.	$ .06
$ .20	"REASONS WHY Secret Societies cannot be Fellowshiped by the United Presbyterian Church." By Rev. J. W. Bain. Pages 149.	$ .06
	TEN CENTS.
$ .15	"MY EXPERIENCE WITH SECRET SOCIETIES." By a Traveler. Paper, 51 pp.	$ .10
$ .25	"SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF JAMES G. BIRNEY." His relation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in history. By General William Birney. Paper, 32 pages.	$ .10
	TWENTY CENTS.
$ .30	"SONGS FOR THE TIMES," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohibition and W. C. T. U. meetings. Boards, 152 pages.	$ .20
	TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.
$ .75	"BEREA COLLEGE," Kentucky. An interesting history of the founding of that College for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 87 pages.	.25
	FIFTY CENTS.
$1.00	"NATIONAL SUICIDE AND ITS PREVENTION." The following will show the drift of the book: Measure or Standard of Value; What is Honest Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lumry. Cloth, 224 pp.	$ .50
$1.50	"HISTORY OF SECRET SOCIETIES IN FRANCE," or "THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS." By Lucien De La Hodde. Translated from the French by Gen'l. J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp.	$ .50

Sent postpaid to anyaddress on receipt of the selling price.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885.

Compiled and Arranged by John C. Underwa Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED,

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introductio

By Pres't. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton Colleg

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association
321 West Madison St., Chicago.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

BUSINESS.

NEW AND OLD.

The Cynosure will continue to supply all ts subscribers, new or old, who send $1.50 for the paper, with the HEALTH CALENDAR and ROPP'S COMMERCIAL CALCULATOR, as follows: The paper and the Calculator, leathercttc bound, No. 1, (publisher's price 50 cents) for $1.70. Morocco bound (price $1.00) for $2.00.

The paper and Calendar (publisher's price 30 cents) for $1.65. The Calculator (No. 1.) or a Calendar free to every old subscriber sending $3.00 for renewal and a new subscriber.

The Calculator is a book of great value for every farmer, mechanic or business man.

The Calendar contains a temperance bill of fare for every day, and hundreds of good recipes. It hangs on the wall in constant sight.

NEW OFFERS.

The Cynosure and the Cosmopolitan Magazine (publisher's price $2.40) to new subscribers only $3.00. To others $3.25.

The Cynosure and Pres. C. A. Blanchard's new book "Educational Papers" for $1.70 to all subscribers.

NEWEST AND BEST.

Read the advertisement of the Manweight Cultivator on another page.

We will send the cultivator free to every one who will send us a club of 15 new subscribers at $1.50 each; or the single wheel for a club of 12 new names.

For $8.50 we will send the two-wheel cultivator and the Cynosure two years to new subscribers, or a year each to a new and an old. This gives two subscriptions for 50 cts. The single-wheel machine and the same subscriptions for $7.00. We don't pay transportation.

We would be glad to put 100 of these machines at work killing weeds and raising new subscriptions. It is an investment none will regret.

50,000

SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CYNOSURE would bring our reform to the POINT OF SUCCESS. LET US "KEEP EVERLASTINGLY AT IT."

BLACK BEAUTY is one of the most popular books of the day. It is said that about two million copies have been sold. Every boy and girl should read it, and learn to feel compassion for the dumb beasts that spend their lives in the service of man. We will give a copy free to every one of them who sends us a new subscriber.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

West of Salina, Kan., all crops on an area two miles wide and ten miles long were destroyed by a cloudburst and hailstorm Saturday.

At the Pratt mines in Alabama an explosion of gas in a shaft where convicts are worked killed ten Negro convicts and one free miner named Tom Moore.

A colored girl aged 16, was driven on the railroad track at Shreveport, La., at the point of a pistol by John and William Anderson (colored) and held there until a train was so near that it was impossible for the girl to escape. A posse is in pursuit of the murderers.

Sparks from the locomotive caused the explosion of 1,200 pounds of dynamite on a flat car on which were also about forty Italians, near Tarrytown, N. J., Tuesday. About eighteen were killed and as many more were wounded.

It is reported at San Francisco that the Congressional party of Chili, otherwise known as the insurgents, has entered into an agreement with the United States government to surrender to the United States the steamer Itata and her cargo, and that the Charleston will not pursue the Itata any further, but will proceed to Callao, and there the Itata will quietly be handed over to the American authorities.

In the Pennsylvania coke region the Frick and McClure companies have started the Redstone, Youngstown, Hawkeye Valley and Oliphant plants with a few new men, and say they will start five other plants this week. Men are coming into the region in carloads and it is doubtful if the strikers can stand the pressure much longer. They are suffering for the necessities of life and hundreds have no roof to call their own.

A terrific tornado passed three miles northeast of Mexico, Mo., at 3 o'clock May 20, in the vicinity of Bean Creek. So far as heard from, fifteen houses in the vicinity of that place were destroyed, about ten or twelve persons killed, an equal number fatally injured and large numbers badly hurt. The storm did great damage at other points in Missouri and Kansas with reported loss of life.

FOREIGN.

Students prevented on Monday the expulsion of ex-Queen Natalie from Belgrade. Troops fired on the Queen's supporters, killing two and wounding many others.

Paris was visited with a cyclone Friday in the midst of which a huge waterspout burst in the Jardin des Tulleries, causing considerable damage to trees, lawns, and flower beds.

Five thousand prisoners in Russia are said to be waiting suitable weather for their transportation to Siberia.

A terrible accident took place to-day at Pont-Y-Pridd colliery, near Lantwit, in Wales. The accident was caused by a bungle in firing a shot in the mine, which brought down a portion of the roof, crushing ten men fatally and injuring a number of others.

Mr. Gladstone has recovered from the attack of influenza from which he has been suffering for some time past, and Friday left London for his residence at Hawarden. A large number of admirers gathered at the railway station here to witness his departure, and when he appeared he was warmly cheered.

The troops stationed at the Portuguese military post on the river Pungwe attacked the British South Africa Company's expedition, commanded by Commissioner H. H. Johnston. Seven Portuguese were killed, but the British loss is unknown.

The health of the Prince of Wales causes grave anxiety to his relatives and intimate friends. The malady from which the Prince suffered so severely in 1890 has reappeared in a different quarter, and this fact is looked upon as one of great significance.

AGENTS WANTED both sexes. $25 to $50 per week EASILY MADE. SAMPLES FREE. Send for terms. W. C. Wilson, Kansas City, Mo.

PENSIONS OLD CLAIMS Settled Under New Law. Soldiers, Widows, Parents, send for blank applications and information. PATRICK O'FARRELL Pension Agent, Washington, D. C.

I CURE FITS! When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St., N. Y.

DR. PRICE'S Cream Baking Powder.

Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

DONALD KENNEDY Of Roxbury, Mass., says

Kennedy's Medical Discovery cures Horrid Old Sores, Deep Seated Ulcers of 40 years standing, Inward Tumors, and every disease of the skin, except Thunder Humor, and Cancer that has taken root. Price $1.50. Sold by every Druggist in the U. S. and Canada.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.
LORD & THOMAS, NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET, CHICAGO.

Snug little fortunes have been made at work for us, by Anna Page, Austin, Texas, and Jno. Bonn, Toledo, Ohio. See cut. Others are doing as well. Why not you? Some earn over $500.00 a month. You can do the work and live at home, wherever you are. Even beginners are easily earning from $5 to $10 a day. All ages. We show you how and start you. Can work in spare time or all the time. Big money for workers. Failure unknown among them. NEW and wonderful. Particulars free.
H. Hallett & Co., Box 880 Portland, Maine

WALL PAPER SAMPLES SENT FREE of spring patterns with borders and ceilings to match. One half million rolls offered at wholesale prices. White blanks 4c to 6c, Gilts 8c to 35c. Embossed Gilts 10c to 50c. I will send you the most popular colorings, and guarantee to save you money. ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant, 63-65 W. Washington-st. Chicago

WHEATON COLLEGE,
WHEATON, ILL.
A School for Men and Women.
COMMENCEMENT THURSDAY, JUNE 25TH, 1891.
Full College Courses, Preparatory School, Business School, Musical Conservatory and Art School. Fifteen Professors and Instructors.
Send for Catalogue.
CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

FIFTY YEARS and BEYOND;
OR,
Old Age and How to Enjoy It.
A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."
Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHROP.
Introduction by
REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D.,
(Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)
The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hastening toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of that now is, and to give comfort and help life that is to come.
"It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors the gray head and refuses to consider the oldish man burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.
"The selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveller to the great beyond."—Witness.
Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1
Address, W. I. PHILLIP, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago Il

OLD AND NEW
WANTED FRIENDS
TO GAIN
NEW SUBSCRIBERS
FOR
BUDS & BLOSSOMS.
Acknowledged to be one of the BEST AND CHEAPEST Magazines. Its wealth of illustration, purity yet often thrilling statements of MISSION WORK and ADVENTURE in lower New York, make it wholesome and cheery reading. Edited by
Pastor Mariners' Temple. J. F. AVERY, 1 Henry St
BUDS AND BLOSSOMS
AND FRIENDLY GREETINGS
WANTS to give Canvassers
$5 & $10 REWARDS.
Send three cents for specimens, etc.
Address Rev. J. F. AVERY, 1 Henry St., New York.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.
The complete illustrated ritual of the entir Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33d inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in
"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"
as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of
"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated"
Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Physicians Couldn't Cure Him.
SEDAMSVILLE, Hamilton Co., O., June, 1889.
One bottle of Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic cured me entirely, after physicians had tried it unsuccessfully for 8 months to relieve me of nervous debility. W. HUENNEFELD.

Best of All.
CHICAGO, May, 1888.
I consider it my duty to recommend to all sufferers of nervous diseases Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, because my son, now 15 years of age, was suffering for 4 years from epilepsy to such an extent that no remedy seemed to even relieve the attacks, but after using only 5 bottles of Koenig's Nerve Tonic he had but one slight attack. I make this statement out of gratitude and with the desire to make this best of all remedies better known
T. STEIN, 321 22d St.

It is a great pleasure to the undersigned to whom the above circumstances are well known, to certify to the truth of the facts as stated above.
L. KLING,
Pastor of Lutheran Evang. Salem Church.

seases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.
This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the
KOENIG MEDICINE CO.,
60 West Madison, cor. Clinton St., CHICAGO, ILL.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.
Price $1 per Bottle. 6 Bottles for $5.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIII., No. 38 | CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 4, 1891. | WHOLE No. 1,101.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Send all business letters relating to the paper to THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by express money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.... 1
Charles H. Spurgeon.... 8
Chicago Seminary..... 8
The Conference Reports. 8
The Scripture and Divorce..... 8
Mormon Changes. 8
CONTRIBUTIONS:
Sabbath-Keeping Underestimated..... 1
Open Letter to Mr. Findel..... 2
On the Way to Africa... 2
SELECTED:
How Masonry Began (Poem)..... 3
THE CONFERENCE:
Discussion of the Temperance Lodges..... 3
The Christian's Duty Toward the Lodge..... 4
The Boston Weekly Meetings..... 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
Annual Meeting Correspondence 5
LITERATURE 6
Chicago Theological Seminary..... 7
THE N. C. A 7
AGENTS AND LECTURERS.... 7
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 5
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 9
REFORM NEWS:
Pacific Agent Again at Work; A Minnesota Lutheran Welcome; Once More in Ohio; Notes About Boston... 9
THE HOME.....10
TEMPERANCE.....11
BIBLE LESSON.....11
RELIGIOUS NEWS.....12
NEWS OF THE WEEK.....13
IN BRIEF.....14
FARM NOTES.....15
BUSINESS.....16

See pages 7 and 16 for premium offers.

There are three distinct memorials now preparing for Emma C. Willard, the popular educator and author of school histories which told the truth about the Morgan murder, who died twenty years ago. One of them will be a marble statue; another will be the Gurley Memorial Hall, the offering of two brothers to the memory of an only sister, a graduate and devoted pupil of Mrs. Willard. These will be located at Troy, New York. The third memorial has yet no abiding place. It will take shape during the World's Fair, and may before that time have been substantially expressed in an endowment for a college professorship, as a tribute to this beloved educator of the last generation.

"Poor old Madame Blavatsky is dead," says the Christian Standard, "and the head and front of Oriental Theosophy, as believed in by a few in Boston and London, is no more. But the removal of one humbug only makes room for another. After all, perhaps, humbugs are necessary, for there is always a certain percentage of the people who seem to subsist upon humbugs, as other creatures subsist upon other bugs." The intimate connection between the "old Madame and Freemasonry which she reasons out in her "Isis Unveiled," suggests that the lodge humbug may sometime follow the same course. It has been exploded again and again, but life remains in the offensive remnant.

The Patrons of Husbandry are proposing to carry a high hand in Congress. The legislative committee of the National Grange have issued an address reviewing their past work in the lobby at Washington, and declaring that much depends on securing the Speaker they want. "He can do more for or against our cause," say they, "than any other ten men in Congress." Now this secret society legislation may look very well on the grange books. But suppose other secret orders be given also their turn. "Turn about is fair play." Let the Masons have one Speaker, the Jesuits the next, then Clan-na-Gael, the Knights of Labor, then some secretly managed trust. The government would soon sink into a great lodge trust, the grave of liberty—hated of God and despised of men.

The labor lodges, which sympathized with the anarchists all through the trials and public distress of 1886, have won a victory in the Illinois Legislature. The punishment of the instigators of the massacre of May in that year depended upon a new law, known as the Merritt conspiracy law. The ruling of Judge Gary under that law was sustained by the Supreme Courts of Illinois and the United States, and the anarchists were hung. Now come the representatives of these labor lodges and secure a vote in both branches of the Legislature to repeal the Merritt law. It is amazing that men can play shuttle-cock with laws of such character. We cannot believe that Governor Fifer will approve the repeal.

The dear friend of every good cause, Mr. Blackstone, whose name was heard round the world last fall in connection with the Jewish Conference in this city, begins to see the fulfillment of his hope for the restoration of the Jews to their own land. The banishment of this race from Russia is doubtless to be in God's providence the occasion of remarkable events. The order for their expulsion is being executed with Cossack brutality, and pitiful stories come from Moscow. Last week an ordinance was submitted to the council of the empire to deprive the Jews of their seventh-day Sabbath. The multitudes who are driven out are in poverty and distress. No land welcomes them. Baron Hirsch offers $2,500,000 to send them to this country and South America. The Jews of this country refuse to receive them. They are already over-burdened with foreign poor. Now the Rothschilds are proposing a grand colonization in Palestine, and are stirring up Europe as they only can to secure the land of their fathers from the feeble grasp of the Turk. Before this decade has half gone by we may be able to read the restoration prophecies more clearly than to-day.

The term "Bibllioatry," which the speeches of Prof. Briggs of New York, and the condemnation of the Presbyterian General Assembly at Detroit are making familiar to our ears, was discussed by Joseph Cook during his late Monday lecture course. A correspondent of the Christian Intelligencer who was present, writes the following entertaining paragraph of the lecturer and his hearers: "One Monday noon I looked in upon the audience gathered to hear Joseph Cook's late-winter weekly lecture in Tremont Temple. It was the old familiar scene that I witnessed, the lecturer seated on the platform in a kind of big-father way amid children, an audience of good size before him, and behind him a sprinkling of platform-hearers. He was in a section of his subjects given to doctrine. The lecturer looked like a kind of Thor, ready to roll out a thunderbolt at anything he did not like. He always has a variety of topics to discuss. One that day was 'Biblioatry and Bible Belittlers.' His periodical, 'Our Day,' that discusses Mormonism, Jesuitism, intemperance, and other ills, is only the Tremont Temple platform extended into the reading world. In his Monday noon lectures he summons all kinds of evils before him, and he proceeds to rap them vigorously on the head with his sledge-hammer. In the theological world he does not attract so much attention as in the early years of his lecture course, but he has his hearers still. It should be said, too, that he is not giving so much attention to subjects distinctively theological. The audiences that his annual lecture course gathers in Boston, testify to the vigor and fearlessness of the thinker, and the integrity of the man. He has done an excellent work in New England."

The Nashville Advocate tells a story of the "societies," which might be repeated in every city and town of the country;—and more, for the speckled chickens of lodgery not only bring financial ruin, they make a spiritual Sodom of God's choice vineyards: "An old colored preacher was asked how his church was getting on, and his answer was: 'Mighty poor, mighty poor, brudder.' 'What is the trouble?' and he replied: 'De 'cieties. Dey is jist drawin' all the fatness and marrow out'en de body an' bones ob de blessed Lord's body. We can't do nuffin' widout de 'ciety. Dar is de Lincum Ciety, wid Sister Jones and Brudder Brown to run it; Sister Williams mus' march in front ob de Daughters of Rebecca. Den dare is de Dorcases, de Marthas, de Daughters of Ham, and de Liberian Ladies.' 'Well, you have the brethren to help in the church,' we suggested. 'No, sah, der am de Masons, de Odd Fellers, de Sons of Ham, and de Oklahoma Promised Land Pilgrims. Why, brudder, by de time de brudders and sisters pays all de dues, an' tends all de meetin's, dere is nuffin' left for Mount Pisgah church but jist de cob; de corn has all been shelled off an' frowed to dese speckled chickens.'"

SABBATH-KEEPING UNDERESTIMATED.

BY REV. WILBUR F. CRAFTS.

The Independent of April 30 says editorially, in its comments on the Sabbath-school lesson, Amos 8: 1–14: "The cheapest of all religion and the least valuable of all, is strict observance of the Sabbath. It is a duty to keep the Sabbath, but it is vastly more important not to cheat or lie, or do an injury to one's neighbor. If you doubt it, read and see how many times you are told in the New Testament to observe the Sabbath and how many times you are told not to steal or not to get angry."

Every reader must have turned, on seeing these astonishing utterances, to the top of the page to see if he had not picked up some other paper by mistake. The words quoted are not in accord with the splendid recent record of the Independent in a defense of a Sabbath observance so "strict" that not even art galleries are excepted from its suspension of labor and amusement. We do not expect such a paper to fall into the habit of careless speakers and writers, exalting the duty in hand by depreciating other duties—in this case exalting honesty by cheapening Sabbath observance.

Neither this lesson, nor the Bible as a whole, nor even the unreliable argument of silence, warrants any such statements. The fewness of references as to any duty in any part, may indicate that such references are unnecessary or untimely or unimportant. Sabbath-keeping was the one virtue that was overdone by the Jews. They had full directions in regard to it in the Old Testament. But I challenge proof that the New Testament gives more space to stealing and anger than to the Sabbath. In the Decalogue God wrote with his own finger the command against Sabbath-breaking twenty-eight times as long as the command against stealing. Surely he did not prophesy contrary to the proportion of faith, and write that longest which he wished to consider least. Stealing violates men's right to things, to minerals, vegetables, animals. Surely he does a greater wrong who by Sabbath-breaking attacks his fellows' as well as his own right to health and rights of conscience as well as the rights of God. The Lord's day is the Lord's flag. To break the Sabbath is to rend his flag; to deny that he is Lord. Such treason is surely worse than anger or theft. Though a greed-blinded world may not see it, the children in our Christian Sabbath-schools should be thus shown that Sabbath-breaking is not a trifle, but a great wrong to God and man alike.

AN OPEN LETTER TO MR. FINDEL.

RESPONSE TO THE REVIEW BY THE MASONIC HISTORIAN OF LAST WEEK.

[Concluded.]

To sum up what has been said: A Christian is one who stands in personal relation to Christ, the crucified Son of God.

This Christianity must show itself by confession. Christ himself induced St. Peter to formulate the first confession of faith, separating thereby virtually his flock from the mass of the people who would not accept Christ as he offered himself. So by confession of faith all Christians must separate from those who reject Christ, be they Jews, pagans, Mohammedans, free-thinkers, Unitarians or infidels. And as little as darkness and light can unite, as little can a Christian unite and become one with a non-Christian. He can not call wrong, right; or darkness, light; or error, truth.

I wish you to understand clearly that Christian faith claims for itself the highest position, the ne plus ultra. Now, by presupposing a moral basis common to all men and claiming this to be a platform for union, you strike a deathblow at Christianity; you put Christianity down from its unique position, placing the moral basis higher than it and pulling Christianity down to a level with all other false religions. Christianity can not allow this without ceasing to be Christianity.

Christianity cannot give up one point. It is the one and only true religion, and hence must be jealous of its position, as God, the only true God, must be jealous of his honor and glory. It is holy jealousy. As Moses, Elias, Jeremias, Daniel and all other prophets protested over against each and every aberration from the true way of God by suffering severe punishment, so a Christian must protest against each and every attempt to drag Christianity down upon a level with paganism, Mohammedanism, and all kinds of isms. It is a hard word that Christ says to the woman of Samaria: "Ye worship ye know not what: we know what we worship: for salvation is of the Jews," John 4: 22. But it had to be said. The Christians of old willingly laid down their heads upon the blocks, but they would never acknowledge the pagan religion to be true by burning one single particle of frankincense before the emperor's statue. Christians to-day can only follow their example and proclaim the absolute position of Christianity.

But if Christianity is the absolute religion there cannot be a compromise with any other religion. Then the question is either—or—; but nothing between the two. Every compromise is treason against Christ,—places Christ on one line with all the false prophets. And surely the word of the Lord will become true: "whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven."

This has brought us to the consideration of the second part: Is fellowship of the lodge a denial of Christ?

I am well aware of the fact that now and then a brother claims that secret societies receive only Christians. If a Christian is what I have claimed above then this is a false statement; it is only correct if "Christian" is used for "not a notorious sinner." You, Mr. Findel, know as well as I do that legally nothing is required than that a man declares himself to be morally upright, which is supposed to be the case if he adheres to the trio of old: God, virtue, immortality.

Hence, the essence of the lodge is deistic. But deism is a religious position. You yourself claim in your History of Masonry that the lodge has and propagates deism. But then there is an irreconciliable opposition of Christianity and the lodge. The god of deism is not the God of Christianity. Deism rejects the doctrine of Christ as God's Son and Mediator between the wrath of God and sin of man; hence deism has not the Son, and who has not the Son has neither the Father. Hence deism can give no personal relation to God. It has only the vague feeling of being subject to God as our Creator. It has not conversion, for it has no idea of sin; it knows only vice as sin, and therefore cannot uncover the abyss of misery shown by the Word of God.

If we compare the religious character of all secret orders with that which alone makes a man a Christian, we find that it is certainly not Christian. This universal religion knows nothing of Christ. The Turk, the Jew, the fire-worshiper, the red man, the Hindoo, the free-thinker have not followed the voice of the Good Shepherd. But each of these claims equal right as such on the floor of the lodge. He cannot hear Christ's absolute demand: Repent and be saved. And if one member in the lodge upholds the absolute claim of Christianity, he is silenced or turned out. He must allow Christianity to be placed upon the same level as all other religions. There are official declarations that the name of Christ must not be used in the prayers of the lodge on account of its universal character.

It might be claimed that also in Christian prayer-books we find prayers in which the name of Christ is not used. Yes, but is there one which is not offered with the understanding that it is done through our Saviour? Not a single one. But in the lodge it is forbidden to use the name of Christ. Or even if it is used—which is contrary to the rules and hence rarely the case—it is used in such a way that a Turk and free-thinker can join it. What way that is I do not know. I know it is not the Christian.

You try to make a point of the fact, that even I, a professed Christian, do not hesitate to join certain societies and companies. I know of no man of sound reasoning who has ever declared it to be wrong to have social intercourse with non-Christians—although even there a Christian will rather seek the company of those that are one with him in all respects. If we would not deal with any but Christians, not travel with any but Christians, not study, sing or read productions of art with any non-Christians—"then must we needs go out of the world." We had among our fellow-passengers Jews and Gentiles, and I showed myself as a gentleman towards them. But when religious and moral subjects came into question the line was clearly drawn and I confessed myself as a Christian, and by word and behavior protested against their position and "moral" behavior. I assure you that I would not without any consideration join every singing-club, and even so with societies for social culture. But never under any circumstances would I join a union formed for the purpose of promoting morality which would stand upon any other position than that of Christianity.

You separate Christianity and morality, religion and morality. This can never be done. The morality of the Jew differs considerably from that of the Mohammedan, and so forth. Morality is the fruit of religion, and varies as religion varies. And as little as there is a religion common to all men as little is there a morality common to all men. The only thing that can be said to be common to all men is a religious disposition, a form without contents. A pagan fills this form with the product of his reason and thence comes his morality. The free-thinker takes up what he pleases. God through Jesus Christ has restored the only true religion, and only where the Christian religion is can true morality be the result.

I know well enough the word of Christ, that whosoever is not against him is for him. It was spoken at the beginning of his career. Those that did not take the inimical position of the leaders could yet be influenced by him. This word holds good in the work of Christian missions even at this day. When Christianity is preached there will be opposition right away; others will be undecided—they are open to Christian influence. A time must come when this is no longer the case, when one must decide. So it was then. The very same Christ declared later on, that whosoever is not for him is against him. In Christian countries we have passed the time of wavering. Decision must be taken. A Christian has given himself up to Christ. To demand of him that he recognize a position of indifference in religious matters is to demand of him to give up Christ to deism.

It cannot be denied and no one will do it that there are a good many Christians on the rolls of the lodges; but it can neither be denied that many have lost Christ in the lodges and by the lodges. It is a question of principle and not of persons. And here a Christian must deny religious fellowship (exhibited by prayers, religious and moral discourses, hymns, funeral rites, special burying-grounds) to every one but a Christian. A Christian can not recognize an unbeliever or adherent of a false religion as his brother in the highest sphere. And therefore he can not join a lodge without bringing himself into danger.

This is the view of the question I take and hence my position, which is that of the whole Lutheran church. I know the combat against the lodge is hard; but such is also the combat against all worldliness. I know the masses will flock to the secret societies with its world-wide religion, thereby proving Christ's word to be true that the path of life is narrow and few are those that walk upon it. But I know in whom I believe, and for his sake I have raised my voice against the anti-Christian, world-wide plan of salvation propagated in and by the lodges. I know well enough that we can never reach an agreement in this question unless you leave the position of free-thinkerdom and give yourself up to Christ, which I wish you from all my heart to do before the end of your days. I might leave Christ and his Word, but with the help of my Saviour I will cling to him whom I know alone to have the life and the truth eternal.

I thank you for the frankness with which you have spoken. If in the above I have used any words that might seem to be a personal attack, I request you not to take them in that way; they were not intended as such. Truth sometimes has a keen edge, and he who tries to speak the truth must use it disregarding all appearance. By your frank and outspoken answer I have only been convinced more and more that there is an impassible gulf between us. I know you cannot understand how I can take such an absolutely safe position. But as Dr. Delitzsch said, he who has passed from the lower to the higher certainty knows the feelings and experiences of that position whilst that one cannot comprehend the absolute certainty of the truth found in Christ. "Sanctify us in thy truth! Thy word is truth!"

GEORGE J. FRITSCHEL,
Evangl. Lutheran Pastor.

ON THE WAY TO AFRICA.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—A busy week followed my brief call at the Cynosure office on my way to New York. My future co-laborer, Rev. J. B. Omerood, joined me at Syracuse, where I spent several days making preparations for our journey. We embarked March 18th on the City of New York, Inman Line, the queen of the ocean. Other vessels have crossed the ocean in less time, but no other has made such a uniformly fast record. Crossing from Liverpool to New York on the trip just previous this vessel made a run of 500 miles and over for five successive days, which is approximating railroad speed.

The accommodations on these great steamers are superior to the older and smaller vessels: the fare usually the same, the danger probably no greater, while one is exposed to the discomforts of the sea for one to three days less time. They are usually seven days from dock to dock. The record of quick voyages is reckoned from Queenstown, Ireland, to Sandy Hook Light Boat of the New Jersey coast, and not from dock to dock. If you have to cross the Atlantic secure a berth on one of the ocean racers if you wish the least possible discomfort.

We arrived in Liverpool in ample time to transfer to the African bound vessel, but to our disappointment we found all the berths engaged. We could do nothing but wait a full week for the next steamer. We found a good temperance hotel, and planned to use the time to some advantage by securing such supplies as we would otherwise have had to purchase on the coast at high prices. I took the influenza the second day after leaving New York and was confined to my hotel most of the time we were in Liverpool, but have felt quite well since getting into tropical lands again.

We started for the south on the S. S. Yomba, African Line, April 4th. We made our first stop at Los Palmos, Grand Canary, the most important ssland of the Canary group. A large coaling station is located here, and the place is also a popular resort for invalids and pleasure-seekers. The island is about twenty-four miles in diameter, of volcanic origin, and attains an altitude of 6,400 feet. On clear days one can see the peak of Teneriffe Island, another of the Canary group about eighty miles distant. This peak is said to be 12,500 feet high. The Canary Islands look rocky and barren from the sea, much in contrast with the Madeira Islands to the north, which are so covered with living green that one might imagine a garden of Eden planted in the sea.

But in the mountain valleys, and along the sea shore, by means of irrigation from mountain reservoirs are many gardens, and the market of Los Palmos supplies the many passing steamers with fruit and vegetables. There are no other productions of consequence. Vessels bound for West Africa, South Africa, South America, Europe, and some sailing vessels from America, call regularly at this place. The English, Dutch, Italian and Spanish flags were flying in the harbor as we entered. These islands belong to Spain, and consequently the marks of the Middle Ages are still upon people and place. No paper is published either at Grand Canary or Teneriffe, and probably a small number of the illiterate Roman Catholic population could read it if there was.

We got away from Los Palmos the evening of April 13th, and sailed along close to the shore of the Great Desert to our next port, Goree, on a small island near Cape Verd. A haze as dense as what is known as "Indian summer" hung over the sea and land, and only once did we think we could see the outlines of the shore which was probably Cape Barbas. But the haze was not so thick that we could not see as large a school of porpoises as is often seen together. They came up on both sides of the vessel, sporting alongside. It was thought by all that 1,000 would be a conservative estimate.

Goree Island does not contain more than ten acres, I would guess, and is covered with stone buildings closely built. On the mainland just opposite and about four miles distant is the newer and larger town of Dakar. From Dakar the French have built a railroad up the coast to the town of St. Louis on the Senegal river. Our next stop was at Bathurst, an English town on the Gambia river. The mouth of this river is about fourteen miles wide, but has many sand banks, making it a difficult port for large vessels to enter. The town contains about 8,000 inhabitants, all native except a few English officials and some French and English traders. The Gambia river is navigable much farther up than most African rivers; and the possession of this waterway is being contested by the French who are trying to extend their sway across the river higher up and cut off the English from the interior.

Much cargo for Los Palmos, Goree and Bathurst delayed us, and we reached Freetown four days late, arriving there April 23. We will proceed to the interior as soon as possible. Remember our undertaking in your prayers. Yours in Christ. H. W. JOHNSTON.

Freetown, Africa, April 23, '91.

HOW MASONRY BEGAN.

[From a poem "Lamentation of Freemasonry," by Charles Chisel, Esq. Published in Norwich, Conn., in 1829.]

Some centuries ago, when darkness reigned,
And superstition held mankind enchained;
When popes and cardinals were deemed divine,
And God's anointed all of royal line;
When courts of inquisition conscience ruled,
And chivalry her errant knights befooled;
When alchymists transmuted lead to gold,
And fortune-tellers o'er all Europe strolled;
When fairies knightly danced on every green,
And awful ghosts and goblins oft were seen;
When conjurers and witches did abound,
And every wonder-worker credit found;
When holy relics from afar were brought,
And pardons and indulgences were bought;
When Jesuits, and mendicants, and friars,
And sorcerers, and whoremongers, and liars,
Were all good saints, and readily believed,
And every false pretender well received;
When Bibles were not, or could not be read,
But fables substituted in their stead;
When printing was not known, to bless mankind,
Nor science had as yet illumed the mind;
Then I arose; it was a blessed time,
And young Freemasonry was in her prime.

I thought if other fables were believed,
I too might be as readily received.
It was indeed a wonder-loving age,
And wonder-working then was all the rage.
Thus did Mahomet reign o'er all the East,
Thus, in the West, arose the papal beast,
And thus, could even a dirty hermit raise
Crusades, and set all Europe in a blaze;
And gain their wealth and armies at command,
To carry war into the Holy Land.

Well, then, thought I, if mystery will do,
I'll try the art of wonder-working too.
Accordingly, a gloomy cave I sought,
And there my mysteries to perfection brought.
There I first gathered a Masonic clan:
One Frank, one Jesuit, one Mussulman,
One Moorish prince, from Afric's barb'rous coast,
One Spanish don, who royal blood could boast,
One Sir Knight Errant, with his trusty squire,
And one old baron full of martial fire,
One Popish priest, from Italy, one Turk,
Six Irishmen, armed with a bloody dirk,
To keep the lodge well tyled while Masons work,
One Jewish Rabbi, learned in the law,
One pagan, who the Scriptures never saw,
But he in full three hundred gods believed,
Which well entitled him to be received;
One prince, in Abyssinia born and bred,
And one from Congo, of a woolly head:
All these, together with some twenty more,
Of every nation, and from every shore,
Composed the first Masonic lodge; so smiled
The fates upon us; and the lodge was tyled.

To labor then we went, and formed the plan
By which to raise the glory of our clan;
Invented mysteries to make folks stare,
Invented pass-words, grips, and emblems rare,
Invented three degrees for those to rise
Who seek admittance that they may grow wise,
Invented each initiatory rite,
To soothe the candidate, or to affright.
Invented all the tools wherewith to work,
The chisels, mallet, and the bloody dirk;
The apron white, the middle to bedeck,
The cable-tow, to tie around the neck,
The slipper, and the tools of every kind,
Designed to alarm or agitate the mind;
Invented horrid oaths for men to take,
And punishments for those who do them break;
Invented offices to regulate,
And pompous titles, both from church and state;
Masters and wardens, priests and deacons grave,
Accoutred with insignia fine and brave;
And after all, remained one labor more,
Which cost more time than all that went before:
Which was to invent a pack of lies to tell,
That might befit and serve our purpose well.
To do all this, full seventy days we sate,
In conclave dark, and wearisome debate;
When all being well matured and disposed,
Our labors ended, and the lodge was closed.
Each went his way, to tell to all around,
How we possessed a mystery profound;
A mystery too great for tongue to tell,
Though every Mason understood it well.

Then we averred Freemasonry to be
Most venerable for antiquity;
Sometimes we traced it back to Solomon,
Then to the time creation was begun;
Then Adam was a Master Mason, grand,
And Eve the only cowan in the land;
With Enoch, too, a plate of gold we find,
And Noah built an ark of signal kind,
Which surely proved these holy men to be
Most deeply skilled in our great mystery.
Joseph was singularly great and good,
Therefore our secret must have understood;
And Solomon, with the two Hirams by,
Reared a vast temple towering to the sky,
Which proved them a Grand Lodge; and thus these three
Laid broad foundations for Freemasonry.
Hiram we called Abiff, the widow's son,
And had him murdered ere his work was done,
Because he kept our word; his body then
Was quickly found and raised to life again;
Whilst the three rascals who performed the deed,
Had their throats cut, as the Grand Lodge decreed.
All this the Scriptures clearly proved a lie,
But such as could not read could not deny.
The story went, and gained us great renown,
For none had sense enough to put it down.

A friend writing from Marion, Kan., says: "Let me give you a testimony which was given by a good brother of the Evangelical church the other evening. He was a Mason up to the time of a certain camp meeting. While service was in progress some rowdies were on the outside disturbing the meeting. He went out in order to quiet them. In the crowd were some brother Masons who let him know by secret signs that he was not to hinder them. This brought conviction to our friend that Masonry was wrong. He went back to the altar, bowed down and gave up the whole thing."—Free Press.

THE CONFERENCE.

THE DISCUSSION OF THE TEMPERANCE LODGES.

MARY ALLEN WEST,

editor of the Union Signal, remarked as she followed the address of Rev. Alexander Thomson, that she could not speak of secret societies from personal experience, for she had none. Because, first, she had grown up under the instruction of Jonathan Blanchard, for which she had never ceased to be thankful; and, second, she would never go into any society of a religious nature which had not Christ as its center and soul.

My belief, she continued, is that among the temperance orders the Good Templars have done much good work in Australia and England. Their reports indicate it. But at the same time I am fully convinced that without their secrecy they would have done much better. Their reason for secrecy is, they say, that it is necessary to preserve their organization, to protect men who are trying to reform, and keep them from an unfeeling world. I have not found this to be any trouble in open societies. A reformed drunkard is a patent fact. You cannot keep it hid and you ought not to try. But in the line of social purity, as you may all clearly see there is need of privacy, but not of obligated secrecy, to save the poor girls. If we would deliver them from crime and temptation we must keep their lives quiet. It would be a shame to publish them. But we need no signs or grips for this. The privacy of this work is quite different from the pledges or sworn secrecy of the secret orders. This department of the work in which I am engaged needs this careful management more than any other, and the reasons are obvious.

The success which has followed our efforts shows that there is no need of secret societies in any kind of reform. [Applause.]

W. I. PHILLIPS,

Corresponding Secretary of the N. C. A., related his personal experience in joining the Good Templar lodge. He was quite young when persuaded to join and had not yet become a Christian. On entering the order, and at the beginning of the initiation, he was asked if he believed in God. This question startled him, for he was conscious that he did not believe in God for salvation. It was certainly a question pertaining to religion and formed part of a religious ceremony, and because the answer was satisfactory to the order, it impressed him as not being the same kind of religion taught in the Sabbath-school. But when a swearing fellow was elected chaplain he was shocked again in another way, and more seriously than before. The effect upon himself, an unconverted youth, was far from salutary, and he was confident from observation that his case was the rule and not the exception.

REV. S. H. SWARTZ,

pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church, Chicago, had engaged to speak in a discussion of the afternoon, but desired to be heard at this time as he must needs be absent during the afternoon at a funeral.

He said he could not testify as Miss West had done. He had experienced some things in this line of secret societies, and could bear witness of them for Christ's sake. In his boyhood he joined the Cadets of Temperance, a kind of Sunday-school for the Sons of Temperance. He was early trained to love the temperance cause by a faithful temperance mother, and was very heartily engaged in the society, and was active among the boys. At 21 he graduated into the Sons of Temperance, and worked with them.

I am sorry to disagree with Miss West respecting the good done by the Good Templars. The Sons of Temperance was the great working organization in the early time of which I have spoken, and I was able to judge of it fairly. Its work did not abide. Its very secrecy, signs, grips, passwords, etc., covered a multitude of sins. Men high in the order were drunk every three months, but regularly came back and were reinstated. The Good Templars are about the same way. They work behind closed doors. They say it is necessary to have this secrecy in order to protect the poor, weak brothers. If the world should know they were trying to reform it would be disastrous! I have helped dig up one of these poor brothers, so carefully protected, about thirty times. The idea that men are going to be reformed by such means is a grand, magnificent humbug!

Mr. Finch used to say that all Good Templars are Prohibitionists. Why then was there not a larger Prohibition vote where that order was numerous? The reason is manifestly to be found in the non-partisan constitution of the order. As a speaker for the society said in Belvidere, the Good Templars have nothing to do with politics or religion. That accounts for their indifference toward prohibition when they come to political action.

The speaker continued, and in earnest language reproved church members who inconsistently vote in conference for the suppression of the saloon, but vote for one G. O. P. or another. He declared that open temperance organizations have made the present reform. The W. C. T. U. was the greatest lever in the overthrow of the saloon. In contrast with the work of the lodges, he described the work of Mrs. S. M. I. Henry, with whom he had been personally well acquainted. She was the means of saving scores of men on Christian principles. She had no need of a secret society to help her protect the poor brothers. She helped them to Christ, who is the light of the world.

I see, he added, no benefit arising from secret societies of any kind. When 21 I was connected with the Odd-fellows. I staid with them five years. I found it was no place for me or for any man who wants to serve the Lord Jesus Christ. I was then living in the East, and knew nothing of the work of the Association under whose auspices we are meeting. But I was led of the Holy Spirit to see the evil tendencies of the whole system. While a member of that lodge I introduced into its membership three fine young men. The lodge was one of the best in the State. It was of exceptionally good moral standing. The members were all, so far as I knew, clean men, men of good habits. I influenced these three young men to join. They were not Christian men, but outwardly upright and moral. Within eighteen months I saw them ruined. In connection with that exceptional lodge those young men became drunkards. I traced their downfall to their lodge associations. After the meetings members had a time of convivality, and they were led astray. As I look back to-day to that time, I can see that unless I had been rooted and grounded in Christ, I should also have gone over to ruin with them.

Now I am trying to do my duty to young men —to lead them out of these associations and influences into the true light and life of the Christian life. And young men are coming out of these societies and are keeping out. I am for Christ; for him always; and for him only.

ELDER J. L. BARLOW

said that he had experienced something of the secret temperance orders. He had been a member of the Sons of Temperance, of the Good Templars, and had been high in office in the Temple of Honor. His experience was that these orders had done comparatively no good, but on the contrary, much evil. He remembered old Dr. Beecher when his sermons used to shake New England, and his voice used to be terrible against the liquor power. He had been an out-and-out prohibitionist from the first. He remembered George Clark fifty years ago when he was singing for the liberty of the slave and of the poor drunkard, too. He remembered the Washingtonian movement. The temperance work was all, up to that time, under the control of the church. There was an open and solid body of temperance people, consecrated, working harmoniously and without distraction in methods or councils. But after the Washingtonians' secret temperance orders began their work. They slowly crept into influence, crowding aside the open meetings, and attempting to make it appear that outside of their ranks there was no temperance work that was of any account. These societies had wrought great evil to the cause of temperance ever since. He closed by relating some experiences as a pastor with the Good Templars in which they were discounted before the open organizations.

REV. W. W. AMES

of Menomonie, Wis., said that in his observation the Good Templar lodge was a mighty breakwater against the progress of the Prohibition party. To illustrate, he told of an incident at the National W. C. T. U. meeting in Minneapolis several years ago. An invitation came to that body from Atlanta, Georgia, that the next meeting should be held in that city. Soon after the W. C. T. U. meeting a Republican convention was held in Minneapolis; and one of the speakers, a General ———, said, "We have invited the W. C. T. U. to meet at Atlanta. I don't know as we shall make them welcome. I belong to an organization whose obligation is of such a nature that I don't dare bring temperance into politics."

Word had gone out to all Good Templar lodges that they must not bring temperance into politics. As soon as a Good Templar lodge comes into a community it creates a division among the temperance workers which is generally fatal. Now we believe in temperance as part of our religion. As men step over the threshold of tyled doors they deny Christ. The speaker referred in a convincing argument to the confession of faith in a Good Templar lodge, and showed how it could not be pleasing to God.

Miss West responded that the invitation to Atlanta was not accepted by the W. C. T. U. at Minneapolis, but it was renewed, and three years later, they did go there with all their prohibition with them. The Governor of the State welcomed the convention, and the cause for which the Union stands was grandly endorsed and promoted. It was a striking proof to her that compromises do not pay, but in the end firm adherence to truth will triumph.

REV. J. A. MATLACK,

pastor of the Baptist church of Ravenswood, Ill., spoke of the work of the Good Templars' society as it had come under his observation. He mentioned one or two places where they seemed to take the lead in promoting public temperance meetings and other efforts against the saloon. One of these places was Freeport, Ill., where the impression made on his mind was that members of this order were Prohibitionists, and were faithful to the interests of that party. He mentioned these facts since they had come under his notice, and he believed in giving all their due.

REV. E. R. WORRELL,

pastor of the Presbyterian church, Washington Heights, was thankful that Bro. Matlack had spoken freely of his experience, since he represented in some degree many who had not taken any especial interest in our discussion on either side. But there was no doubt that if the result of Good Templar work had in the cases mentioned been so beneficial, the same work, with equally good results, could have been accomplished by open means, and at great economy of time and expense. He referred to a case in Prairie City, Ill., where the farmers, in the days of the grange, resolved to form a lodge of that nature and secure the promised blessings. But some more sober and sensible men figured out the cost of the lodge business and demonstrated its inutility. They proved, moreover, that a simple, open organization could bring about the same results more surely and cheaply. So a Farmers' Protective Society was formed which was successful in meeting all the requirements of the case.

Francis Murphy worked hard after his plan of saving men from the rum curse. He got notorious drinkers to sign the pledge. He got these men, —and notorious scoffers at religion also—out on the platform to testify to the efficacy of his method of back-patting and goody-goodying them out of the pit of their sin against God and man. And what were the results? Nothing! His converts went back again to their degradation. They had no root taking deep hold on saving faith in an all-powerful Saviour. Here in Chicago he got 4,000 men to sign his pledge,— one man to every open saloon in the city. Who will venture to tell us whether Francis Murphy is doing good work in objecting to wholesome laws against the saloon? It was just such a law that put Francis Murphy into Portland jail, where he could not drink, and so probably saved him from his own vicious appetite.

Mr. Worrell continued to speak of the religious ceremonies of the temperance orders, which were of such a character that it was no interference with their spirit or effect if low-lived men were made chaplains, after the manner of Jeroboam. The evil influence of such men was fearfully destructive of the power of religion upon the hearts and lives of men.

THE CHRISTIAN'S DUTY TOWARD THE LODGE.

PROF. W. G. MOOREHEAD, D.D.,

of the United Presbyterian Theological Seminary, Xenia, Ohio, and also lecturer in the Bible Institute (Mr. Moody's) of Chicago, spoke with great earnestness and thrilling effect during the afternoon of the Conference meeting.

I have listened, he said, with great interest to the arguments which have been presented on this great theme this afternoon. We are a very busy people in Chicago, and I am one among them in this respect, and instead of attempting any very original line of thought or argument for which extended preparation would be necessary, I must depend for my suggestions upon the excellent papers and addresses that have just been presented. In agitating this secret society question we need to understand its power. This is a great undertaking. The problem is a colossal one. We are confronted, not by a theory, but by one of the most enormous facts that darkens this Western Continent. In the town of Xenia, Ohio, where is my home, we have one example. It was settled by people fled from Kentucky to avoid the contact with slavery. Among that people there was no place for a secret lodge. But now, sir,— I must confess it—there are so many secret orders among that people I cannot attempt to number them. This same enormous fact puts its gigantic form before us whatever way we turn. In the ranks of industry are we especially confronted with difficult questions which the secret society brings up. That there are wrongs in our social relations none will attempt to deny. There are wrongs of the rich against the poor; and of the intelligent against the ignorant. That capital at times oppresses labor cannot be denied; nor will it be disputed that labor also wrongs capital. Who shall arbitrate between them? Are secret societies adequate to meet the case; to settle the difficulty; to secure absolute justice and promote harmony in our complex business relations? I believe them altogether incompetent to deal with this case. Their methods only tend to exasperate and exaggerate the difficulty. Working people organize in their unions and lodges, and capitalists begin counter organizations in their trusts and syndicates and corporations to defend the rights of money. Our fathers remembered no such thing as trusts or "Knights of Labor." Then men worked together after the manner of brothers. Each recognized the rights of his neighbor. Workingmen had respect to capital, and employers for their men. Now they are divided as if in hostile armies, over against each other. So the trouble is only aggravated. These secret societies do not meet the case.

One of the chief evils of this system among workingmen is the fact that the secret society takes from a man his individual rights and privileges. When a body of men sit behind closed doors and blinds and there, shut away from public scrutiny, attempt to decide for me my relations to my fellow men in business or in any other particular, it cannot be endured. Men who boast of their "Revolutionary sires;" that the blood of '76 is in their veins, are not the men who can afford such despotic control of their affairs. The Scotch-Irish blood of many of us cannot endure it. Take away personal liberty and the individual rights of citizens and you have nothing left. This work of these secret lodges is therefore revolutionary and destructive of every American principle, and must be stopped.

Then it can be clearly shown that their methods of social and political reform are fallacious. They don't meet the case. Affairs are in a much worse condition than ten years ago. There is more corruption, more rottenness in politics, a stronger disposition to enter in social anarchy than ever. How are we to account for this? Because men are forgetting the relation that God made to exist between them. Peter saw in his house-top vision that God had made men with a spiritual likeness. None was to be rejected because unclean or common. All stand on the same footing before God. But men begin to draw lines and form castes. They shut out the black man, and the Chinaman, and the non-union man, the scab. These lodges are perpetually breaking up the true brotherhood of man as God made it, and separating the race into selfish and hostile companies. And all the while the antagonism thus fostered is increasing. What is the remedy? Why, do away with the lodge altogether. Have no more to do with them. Let above all the church of God be separate from them. As Joseph Cook said in his matchless address of a year ago, I would say to all who are out, Stay out; and to all who are inside, Come out.

Now there is only one genuine remedy for an evil thus rampant in society. The only genuine, the only possible remedy is the gospel of Jesus Christ. This is the glad tidings God has sent. His Son has come to proclaim it. This gospel is "Good will among men." No other agency can secure this genuine condition of peace and good will among all classes and conditions of men.

But I doubt very much whether we can grapple with this problem successfully, as men count success, and overthrow organized secrecy. It is an agency that Satan will continue to use in some form to the end. Then what, you ask, shall we do? Testify against the whole thing. Call on all Christian men to come out and be separate from this unclean thing of false worship and false principles. We might put the whole Westminster Confession into the Constitution of the United States; we might put the Bible back in all our schools; but men would swear to it all, and then go right on the same, following the same course of wickedness and crime. But we must testify, and plead with God's people that they separate themselves from iniquity. Come out! Come out!

I want to bear one other testimony. The great remedy for all these evils; the sifting time when they shall all be obliterated, is the personal return of our Lord Jesus Christ. In that supreme hour the works of the devil will be destroyed, and the church of God shall triumph in her Lord over every foe.

CALVIN E. PRITCHARD,

editor of the Christian Worker, and minister in the society of Friends, following Prof. Moorehead, said: I do not belong and never have belonged to any secret society. I have had some experience of their work by way of outside observation of their effect upon Christian people and upon those who want to become Christians. It is very difficult to lead any man who is filled with the spirit of a secret society into a satisfactory Christian experience. Some twenty years ago I had a case of this kind come under my observation. A good old man who lived in the neighborhood with me, seemed desirous to assist me in my work as a Christian minister. He tried hard to help me in some way; used to take me in his carriage to my appointment. One time when we were thus together he told me his Christian experience. He said that when a young man he was convicted of sin and believed he ought to give his heart to God. But he had friends—false friends they proved—who were Freemasons, and they persuaded him to join the lodge. He went on in the lodge for more than twenty years, taking degree after degree. But all the time he was in unrest; his heart was troubled, and had no peace until he was brought fully to Christ at about forty years of age. His testimony was that the lodge was altogether deceptive and could give no peace to the soul of man.

One of the evidences of the iniquity of secret lodges is their deceptive character. This old man of whom I have spoken deceived his own people and his own soul. His life was largely spent in opposition to Christ. But when he turned to his Saviour he became a strong man. There have been a number of cases where members of the Friends church were members also of the lodge, contrary to our testimony as a people. I have found in all these cases of which I had personal knowledge, that it was impossible for such men to grow in divine things.

I recall another case in which I wondered why the man did not get forward in his Christian experience. But when I learned that he was a Mason it was explained. I talked with him of the inconsistency of his position, and told him what stood in his way as a Christian man, and separated him from God. I urged him to give up his lodge. He did so, and became a bright and happy Christian.

Christian ministers, however able and popular and apparently successful, will not reach that degree of genuine success, will not perform the work which God sets for them to do, and please him in it, unless they persuade their people to be wholly separate from this iniquity, this snare and temptation of the devil in which so many are perishing.

LAURA S. HAVILAND,

whose name had been mentioned in the Conference as a queenly representative of American Motherhood, was asked to give a word of counsel and good cheer. She responded in clear, unfaltering tones, that would scarcely have been expected from a woman of 82, about as follows: When there has been so much said which strikes responsive chords in my heart I feel rather that for me it is a time for thankful meditation. We find ourselves yet in the midst of God's battle. There are many giants in our land, many Anakim. But God is on our side. Frederick Douglass used to say, speaking of his struggles for freedom, "One with God is a majority." As I look on these veterans in the cause of God, and on these young faces, it gives me courage and faith to believe God will give the victory, and the weight of 82 years sits lightly on my shoulders. But the work cannot be accomplished without the help of our Lord Jesus Christ. When I think of the men who have gone into the Christless lodges, I cry out: Why do they not say, "They have taken away my Lord and I know not where they have laid him?" Why do they not come out from such associations! O, let the ministers of Christ proclaim the truth from the housetop. Let them remember their responsibility to cry aloud and spare not. These secret orders are springing up all around us like "hemlock in the furrows." I am ashamed to say that I once belonged to the Good Templars, soon after the war when the lodges were excluding the colored man. I hoped to do something in this way to put my colored friend on a just footing. But I don't think the end justified the means. It was like Job when he kissed his hand to the moon for worship; or Naaman's excuse for bowing in the house of Rimmon. But David will bring down the giant with a stone made smooth by many prayers.

I look back forty or fifty years and behold a wonderful panorama. Every decade has its reforms, the work of one melting into that of another. It is for us to simply step into our place and work for the Master so long as God gives us the strength to work.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

ANOTHER ORIGINAL PACKAGE DECISION.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 27, 1891.

The United States Supreme Court has once more upheld the validity and constitutionality of important prohibition legislation, in passing upon an appeal case from the dicision of the U. S. Circuit Court for the district of Kansas, in which it was claimed that the Original-package law, about which there was such a stir in the Fifty-first Congress, was unconstitutional, and also that it could not go into operation until the State of Kansas had re-enacted its prohibitory law. The Court was unanimous in its support of the opinion delivered by Chief Justice Fuller, as to its conclusions, but Justices Gray, Harlan and Brewer declined to concur in all of its reasoning.

I quote from the opinion: "Intoxicating liquors are undoubtedly subjects of commerce like any other commodity, and are so recognized, but nevertheless, it has been often held that laws prohibiting the manufacture and sale of liquor within State limits does not necessarily infringe any constitutional privilege or immunity, this right being rested upon the acknowledged right of the States to control their purely internal affairs and in so doing to protect the health, morals and safety of their people by regulations that do not interfere with the powers of the general government. . . . It is earnestly contended that the original-package act, as a regulation of commerce, falls within the powers which the States are forbidden to exercise, and that the Constitution guarantees freedom of commerce among the States in all things, and that not only may intoxicating liquors be imported from one State into another without being subject to regulation under the laws of the latter, but that Congress is powerless to obviate that result. Thus the grant to the general government of a power designed to prevent embarrassing restrictions upon inter-State commerce by any State, would be made to forbid any restraint whatever. The Court does not concur in this view. In surrendering their power over external commerce, the States did not secure absolute freedom in such commerce, but only the protection from encroachment afforded by confiding its regulation exclusively to Congress. . . . The power to regulate is solely in the general government, and it is an essential part of that regulation to prescribe the regular means for accomplishing the introduction and incorporation of articles into and with the mass of property in the country or State. . . . . The law of Congress did not use terms of permission to the State to act, but simply removed an impediment to the enforcement of the State laws in respect to imported packages in their original condition, created by the absence of a specific utterance on its part. It imparted no power to the State not then possessed, but allowed imported property to fall at once upon arrival within the local jurisdiction."

The practice of occasionally inviting ministers of other denominations to occupy their pulpits, has become quite common with the Washington churches. Last Sunday Calvary Baptist church was crowded to the doors when Bishop Hurst announced as his text: "He that is faitbful in that which is least is faithful also in much." Luke 10: 10. He eloquently pleaded with Christians to be faithful in minor duties, and told them that by so doing they would find it easy to be faithful in the greater duties of life. He also exhorted his hearers to beware of speaking evil of any one, which was a wrong that might blast hope and character forever.

The regular summer outdoor campaign against intemperance was inaugurated Sunday by two rousing meetings, in spite of the disagreeable weather, in what has come to be locally known as the "temperance tent." This tent, which comfortably seats several hundred people, is moved from place to place during the summer, and meetings are held in it every evening except Saturdays, with an extra Sunday afternoon meeting. The first meeting was for the children and was under the auspices of Wilbur Band of Hope. In the evening Mrs. Henry C. Hawkins and Miss Harding, of England, delivered stirring addresses. More than one hundred have already signed the pledge as the result of this week's meetings.

THE BOSTON WEEKLY MEETINGS.

The inauguration of these meetings is a great step forward in the New England work. When such meetings are established in all our great cities, Chicago, Washington, New York, etc., our cause will begin to take the place it deserves before the people. The following is the Boston Herald's (May 22) report:

AGAINST SECRET SOCIETIES.

A meeting at the Reformed Presbyterian church last evening was addressed by Rev. J. M. Foster of Cincinnati, on "Reform on a Bible Basis." He emphasized the disloyalty of lodge oaths, their robbery of church and family, and the right and duty of the State to forbid them by law, as both Vermont and Massachusetts did after the Morgan excitement of 1826.

The following resolution was passed:

"Resolved, That we deplore the prevalence of intemperance, social vice and Sabbath desecration in our country, and since many are apprehensive that the 1,126 secret societies in Boston tend to promote, rather than diminish, irregularities by unseasonable hours and unprofitable associations in their assemblies, and by diverting time, thought and means that could be better employed in channels of Christian effort, we, therefore, approve the continuance of this discussion, as recommended by Drs. Gordon, Gray, Graham, Gifford, Grant and others, and invite the pastors and all Christian people in the city to join with us in a thorough investigation of the secret society system."

CORRESPONDENCE.

ANNUAL MEETING CORRESPONDENCE.

EX-PRESIDENT H. H. GEORGE, D.D., BEAVER FALLS, PA.:

In the mighty moral struggle that is pressing hard upon us, when men are to be tried, principles to be tested, and organizations to be sifted, secrecy will get a death blow. The Mafia at New Orleans shows the cloven foot. The labor strike is opening men's eyes. The unrest that is so widespread, is not to be settled until these secret and selfish works of wickedness shall be destroyed. It looks to me as if the "shaking time" is just at hand—when every thing in heaven and earth that can be shaken will be shaken. And that only that cannot be shaken will remain.

And never was there a more important time to press the truth than just now, in the midst of this agitation. Now is when the public mind should be informed as to what truth and sound principles are.

I hope that your Congress will be a mighty influence for good. That the Spirit of God, not only as a spirit of light and wisdom—may be poured out. And that a great and precious baptism of that Spirit as a spirit of power, may be seen, and known, and felt by the meeting.

The prince of darkness is now pushing the "secret league" in every direction, for all there is in it. The friends of the Prince of Light ought to deal out masterly strokes upon the dark empire.

REV. C. H. ABBOTT, GRAND VIEW, TENN.:

The distinct antagonism of the lodge to the church is more apparent to me in the South than in the North. I have testified here against Masonry in the pulpit, at "the store" and to the school boys individually. To my mind the essential evil of the secret lodge is the false altar. That sets at defiance the command of God, "My beloved Son, hear Him!" Masonry is aggressive because it is a religion. So far as my observation goes the lodge is a real and growing evil in Southern communities. Its influence is recognized and courted by those who are interested in the industrial development of the New South. Here, for example, is an extract from the prospectus of an "Investment Company:"

"No Southern city can boast of a more intelligent or refined society than Tallapoosa. Its residents are principally from the North, and ladies locating in Tallapoosa may rely on the choicest social companionship.

"School facilities are among the best.

"Church advantages are not inferior to any city in the land, every religious denomination being represented.

"Secret organizations are well represented, as well as several select clubs."

This is not exceptional. The lodge is a recognized inducement to business lodge lovers. In resisting this progress of error I have more faith in the work of the press than in the effort to enlist the churches to war against the lodge. The churches are too near the Laodicean stage to be relied upon to contend with so vigorous an adversary. Exposure of the lodge without note or comment with type and picture will make the reptiles squirm in their secret dens. Turn on the light.

MRS. A. E. STODDARD, PUBLISHER NATIONAL HOME GUARD, BOSTON, MASS.:

The Lord has been graciously pleased to prosper the work of my hands, undertaken, as I believe, under his direct guidance, and has given us ample proof of his blessing through the fruits vouchsafed to us. Very many have been awakened to the evils of organized secrecy through the National Home Guard, and through it a large number of books are put in circulation, and frequent calls for samples of the Christian Cynosure are received and supplied, by which we hope that chief of papers on the anti-secret line may find its way into many homes which otherwise might not have known of its existence.

C. B. KNIGHT, TREAS. THE DEMOREST HOME, MINING AND IMPROVEMENT CO., GA.:

It will be five years in June next since I met with you in your annual meeting, and you will remember that I urged the importance of bringing up the churches to the work of this reform, as I am glad to note you are doing through these conferences. When we can get our church membership right on the great anti-secret reform as well as the temperance reform, we can carry any election in the country. May God hasten the day when as one man the great Protestant denominations of our land shall strike together against the forces of evil in high as well as low places, is my earnest prayer.

I. R. B. ARNOLD, OF THE RIVER MISSION:

While we are doing what we can in the lines of reform, we are compelled to give much attention to our financial foundation in the way of paying for the floating chapel. Only two hundred and fifty dollars more are required for this. Then two hundred will finish the painting, seating, etc, etc., and put it in splendid shape for work.

Without any assistance we can do this, I think, within five months. Then our hands will be untied, and we hope to be able to do more than at present. Our meetings are largely attended, and I believe good results follow.

The floating chapel project is the best venture we have ever made, as it enables us to accommodate large audiences as soon as we arrive at a place, without the trouble of looking up a vacant lot for tent, or the expense of hiring a hall, which in most cases would not accommodate as large an audience as can be seated in the chapel. It is comfortable in any kind of weather.

We would be pleased to meet any of our reform friends at any time they may see fit to call upon us.

H. H. HINMAN, SECRETARY OF THE CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION OF KENTUCKY, BEREA, KY.:

There is not a more insidious, constant, and deadly foe to the church of Christ than the secret lodge system. It is all the more so because it has the open or tacit consent of so many good people. As Albert Barnes said of slavery, there is no power out of the church that could sustain the lodge system if it were not sustained in it.

SAMUEL A. PRATT, WORCESTER, MASS.:

Be assured that I am abundantly satisfied with the work you have done. The past year, to my mind, is the best year of its existence; better results have been secured, and I feel very much encouraged for the future of our work.

Brother J. P. Stoddard and wife have done a noble work in Boston, the fruits of which we are now feeling.

REV. J. A. RICHARDS, FORT SCOTT, KANS.:

May God bless the good work of the N. C. A. and the Christian Conference in their deliberations, and give to the public and the world a new impetus and mighty power in the defense of the Gospel of Christ, and the overthrow of the secret empire of darkness as a fearful blighting scourge upon our land and the Christian church. Oh, when will all Christian churches and ministers separate themselves from these worldly, wicked abominations, and touch not the unclean thing!

REV. WOODRUFF POST, OLEAN, N. Y.:

It were vain for me to exhort you or the Association to diligence, for of this there is any amount of evidence in the Cynosure. It might be well to exhort to continual well doing in opposing the mighty foe who sways his scepter in all the great churches of the world. Olean is no exception in both black and white denominations. Yes, I will except our rising colored church here in whose interest I am engaged for a certain period; providentially called to resurrect it and improve the church property and liquidate indebtedness; we have been careful, very, to keep out the wily foe, though we have to do so at the expense of the loss of some of the most influential of the class. This lessens our number, but increases our spiritual power; for God is with us, saving some of the "lowest" powerfully.

Times are changing, they say, since the holy and practical Christ and his apostles. Why may we not incorporate diplomacy with our religious operations, and let the door stand quite ajar to Royal Sirs, and well-plumed Knights? And why may we not en masse as a church enter their secret-chamber conclaves and thus overpower the craft and bring it into subjection to the Christ religion and faith?

You reply "Cui bono?" But are there not many of our anti-secrecy advocates who though they would protest against such absurdity, nevertheless are reticent when they should speak; are inactive when activity is all important to arrest the mighty tread of the progressing and aggressive foe!

It costs little to be a "neutral" while professedly an opponent. But to unsheath the sword and face the foe, marching steadily in the faith of God in defence of the right against "legion," demands sacrifice.

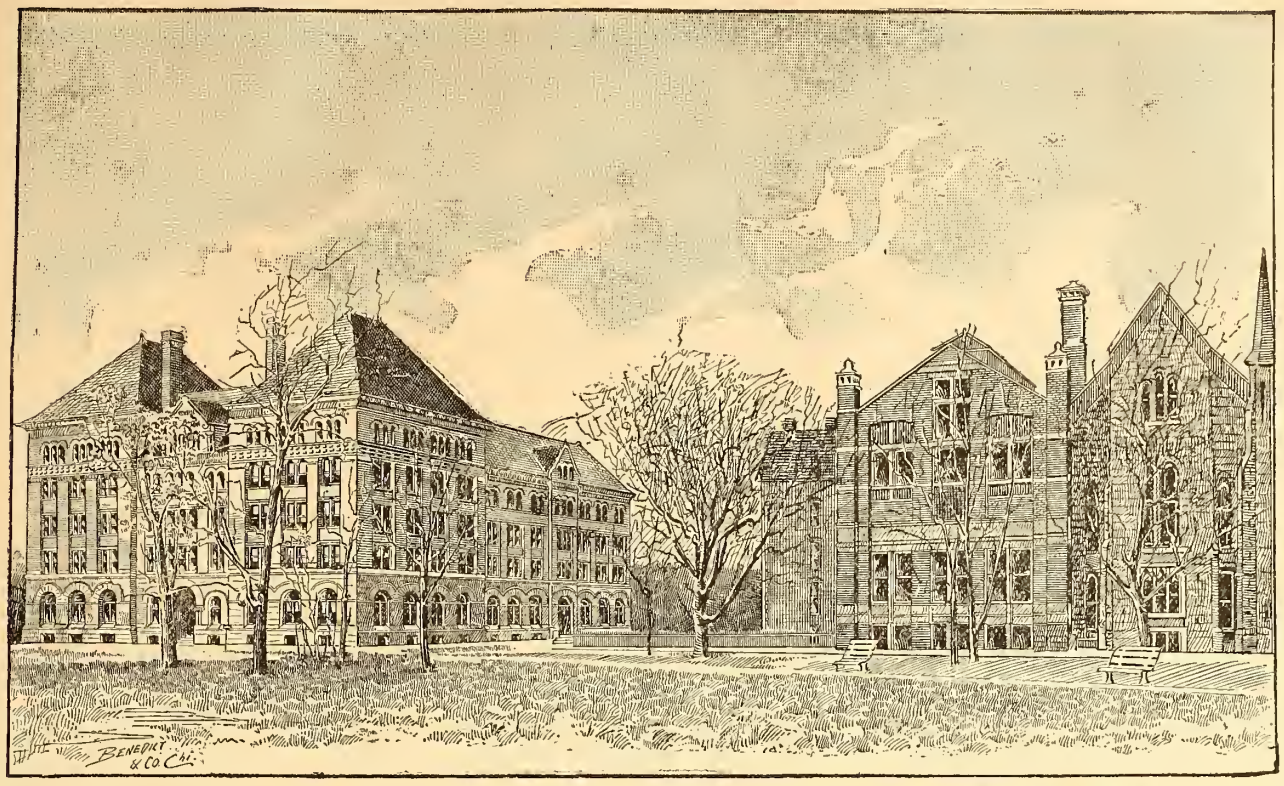
REV. ISAAC BANCROFT, EVERLY, IOWA:

When I see the enemy coming in like a flood I sometimes feel somewhat discouraged, but when I look to the promise, "The Lord God himself shall lift up a standard against him," I know that victory is our's in God's own time, and so I wait on and toil on with faith in God that silences every fear and every doubt. Trusting in God I know I shall never be discouraged or put to shame. I know that God can say to all the hosts of our enemies, Thus far shalt thou go but no farther. So I patiently wait his time and his command. How can I be impatient so long as God says, "All things work together for good to them that love God," and I am sure that I love him and that he leads me in fresh pastures beside the still waters.

LITERATURE.

ALDEN'S CYCLOPEDIA of Universal Literature. Vov. 15. Price 40c. John B. Alden, New York.

The name of the poet of the Sierras which opens this volume is quite disguised in its actual form; but everybody knows "Joaquin" Miller, and thousands admire the brilliant, dashing, breezy verses of this mountain-born poet. His name begins, that of Edgar Wilson Nye closes an interesting volume of literary biography, quite condensed and void of critical remark, in order that the reader may be compelled to use his own judgment and cultivate more carefully a literary taste by study of the selections from the writings of every author named. John Milton, first of all English poets, has the largest space (twenty-seven pages) of any author in the volume.



Scribner's Magazine for June continues the notable series on "The Great Streets of the World," and "Ocean Steamships;" Francisque Sarcey being the author of the article on "The Boulevards of Paris," and William H. Rideing of the Youth's Companion contributing the paper on "Safety on the Atlantic." The latter shows how efficient and ingenious are the precautions which are taken for the security of the passengers on the great Transatlantic lines, so effective indeed that two hundred thousand cabin passengers were carried last season between New York and European ports without a single serious accident. Evert Jansen Wendell's account of Boys' Clubs, gives accurate information as to the results of some of the more notable of these institutions in New York, where they have flourished since 1878. Wallace Goold Levison's account of "Some Photographs of Luminous Objects," will inform all amateurs how very attractive and unique photographs may be made of objects by their own light. John C. Ropes (the author of the Napoleon articles in this magazine) uses the recent death of Sherman and Johnston, two great leaders on opposing sides, as an occasion to write of "The War as We See it Now." He takes an entirely impersonal view of the subject and looks upon certain grand features of the campaigns in a more judicial manner than has heretofore been used in writing on this subject.

The Ladies' Home Journal gives us in its June number the portrait sketch of Lady Agnes Macdonald, the wife of Canada's Premier; Sister Rose Gertrude's description of "Life Among the Lepers at Molokai;" Charles J. Dumar's article on "Women as Type-setters," and William H. Rideing's "Hints on House Building." Those whose thoughts are turning toward summer outings, will find helpful suggestions in "Horseback Riding for Women," by Carl A. Nyegaard, of the New York Riding Club, and Miss Le Garde's "How to Dress for Bicycle Riding;" Helen Jay and Kate Upson Clark have treated very acceptably the two sides of the farmer vs. summer-boarder controversy, and the same breezy outdoor spirit pervades also the usual department pages.

The June Arena opens the fourth volume of this review. The editor contributes a paper of great interest on "Society's Exiles," dealing chiefly with life in the slums of Boston. The interest in this paper is enhanced by the reproduction of ten flashlight photographs taken in the North End of Boston expressly for this contribution. Other artistic features consist of an excellent picture of Julius Chambers, the editor of the New York World, who contributes a brilliant article on "The Chivalry of the Press." Camille Flammarion, the distinguished French astronomer, contributes "The Unknown." A paper of special interest in this number treats of "Irrigation in the Northwest." It is written by Mr. James Realf, Jr., who has spent many months in the Dakotas studying the irrigation problem and its possibilities.

The Literary Digest was begun in May, 1890. We believe that very few weekly papers have achieved so creditable a reputation or so substantial a circulation in a corresponding period of time. The central purpose of the Digest is to reproduce in condensed form, but with taste and skill, the best and most interesting expressions of thought and opinion to be found in current periodical literature. Published weekly by Funk and Wagnalls, 18 and 20 Astor Place, New York, at $3.00 per year.

The Publisher's Weekly of New York is responsible for the following: When Cutbert Bede's "Nearer and Dearer" was published in this country, a well-known spinster left an order for the book on the slate of a little bookshop in Boston, presided over by a confirmed bachelor, thus: "Dear Mr. ———, get nearer and dearer. Arabella ————." Mr. ———, who had not yet heard of the new book, was in a great state of mind until he learned definitely what Arabella really wanted.

CHICAGO THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.

SITUATION.—It is a well-known, although singular, fact that no other ctiy in the United States forms such a theological center as Chicago. There are five seminaries: three in the city, and two others in the immediate vicinity (Baptist, Congregational, Episcopalian, Methodist, Presbyterian), with a total attendance of over 700 students. It would seem that the city, which has been regarded as a center for the attacks of the adversary, is also becoming a stronghold of the Defenders of the Faith.

The Chicago Theological Seminary (Congregational) on Ashland Boulevard, adjoining Union Park, has a situation which is becoming yearly more attractive, as park and boulevard improvements are added to its neighborhood.

BUILDINGS.—Of the four buildings indicated in the cut, Keyes Hall and Carpenter Hall are reserved for students in the Foreign departments, and Fisk Hall, the new dormitory building, is occupied by students in the Regular and Special courses.

Fisk Hall is confessedly one of the finest buildings of its kind in the country. It contains on the first floor four lecture rooms, offices, a reception room, and a beautiful parlor, with a grand piano. The upper floors are devoted to rooms accommodating 134 students, with a gymnasium in the fifth story. The dormitory buildings furnish accommodations for at least 210 students.

THE REGULAR COURSE.—The regular course demands three Seminary terms of eight months each. The preparation required is a college course or its equivalent, involving a thorough knowledge of Greek. Those who desire can begin their elementary work in Hebrew before entering the Seminary, by corresponding with Professor Curtiss. A prize of $100 is offered for the best entrance examination in Hebrew. All other competitors who answer seventy-five per cent of the questions receive $50 each. Those who do this preliminary work read a large part of the Old Testament in Hebrew. Mr. E. T. Harper, a graduate of Oberlin and of the Seminary, has been appointed Instructor in Hebrew and the cognate languages. He has devoted two years to the study of Assyriology in Leipsic, and has spent considerable time in reading inscriptions in the British Museum. He is an enthusiastic and successful instructor, and will be a valuable addition to the Faculty.

Beginners and the advanced divisions alike study Old Testament Introduction, History of Israel, and Biblical Theology. Questions of Biblical criticism receive a careful and conservative treatment.

A very thorough course is offered in the New Testament by Professor Gilbert, the larger part of which is read during the seminary curriculum; also portions of the Septuagint, or Greek translation of the Old Testament. Introduction and New Testament Theology receive due attention.

Those who are acquainted with Prof. Scott can well understand the charm of his department in Church History.

Professor Boardman grows constantly in the esteem of his students until their graduation. He abhors all shams, has a high conception of scholarship, and gives his men a thorough knowledge of the most important truths of Systematic Theology.

Professor Fisk's bow still abides in strength. No Professor in the country teaches with more enthusiasm, or is more concerned to make theological students good preachers.

Professor Wilcox takes a wide range of subjects bearing on the life of a pastor, and discusses all the questions which are likely to perplex a novice in his first parish.

The instruction in Elocution is thorough and admirable. In addition to these advantages the students often have lectures from leading pastors and evangelists.

THE SPECIAL COURSE is provided for some men who are too old to go to college, who have been converted late in life, who have given hostages to fortune, men of gifts and experience, who, with a practical theological education which omits Hebrew and Greek, are able to do the church valuable service. The Special course is designed for such. It includes all the studies of the regular course except the exegesis of the Hebrew and Greek Scriptures. Besides, during the first year, candidates for this course enjoy a special training in Mental and Moral Philosophy, Logic and Rhetoric, English Composition and in the English Bible. Some of our most useful men are graduates of this department.

THE FOREIGN DEPARTMENTS are German, Dano-Norwegian and Swedish. The object of these departments is to train young men of foreign nationalities to preach to their own people in the tongue in which they were born, as well as in the English language.

MEANS OF SELF-HELP.—Arrangements have been made so that students' course can receive sufficient aid in case of necessity to pay in part or entirely all legitimate expenses. Work is furnished to all students who need pecuniary aid, by churches and the City Missionary Society.

With a property already valued at $850,000, with devoted friends continually seeking its future interests, and more than all, with many earnest prayers for its spiritual growth in the truth, the Seminary is advancing toward a foremost rank among the schools of its order in the country.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10cts each.

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washngton, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co.. Ill.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. M. H. Nichols, 520 Kearney St., San Francisco, Cal.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

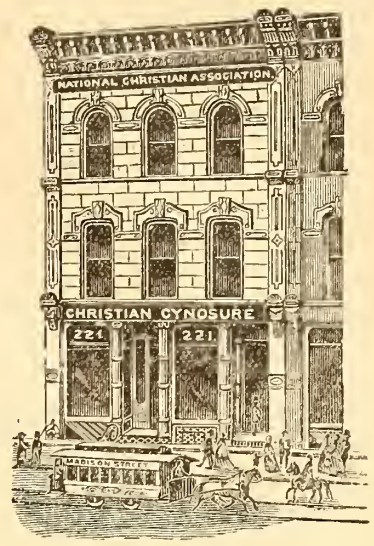
STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimbal New Market.
Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.
Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.



C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Berea, Ky
Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Annawan, Ill.

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

1. Historical Sketch—National Christian Association.
3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
5. President C. G. Finney on the duty of Christians towards the Lodge.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
18. Despotic Character of Freemasonry.
19. Freemasonry, a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Nathaniel Colver, D.D., on Masonry.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)
AND OFFICE OF
The Christian Cynosure,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. Alexander Thomson, Bartlett, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Elder J. L. Barlow, Richmond, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. E. A. Cook, Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, G. R. Milton, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell, Edgar Wylie.

The object of this Association is:
"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves Harris, Mass.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS.—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., S. A. Gilley, Marengo; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Lecompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas. Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagle ville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Rowe, Guilford; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Isaac Hyatt Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN.—Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cov 50 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison street. Chicago.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 4, 1891.

CHARLES H. SPURGEON, the great London preacher, is so well known the world over that a sketch of his life is hardly needed. We give the Home department this week largely to selections from his constant and trusty pen. We regret that we have no testimony from this greatest of living preachers against the secret orders to place with those of other great servants in the chureh of God. Mr. Spurgeon was addressed at Mentone, Italy, last year solieiting such a statement as we are confident he would be willing to make. But he had returned to London probably before the letter reached him. The excellent portrait we print through the favor of the Home Journal of New York eity. Mr. Morris Phillips of that popular paper, visited London last fall and heard Mr. Spurgeon with deepest interest, and wrote to the New York Evangelist an account of the Tabernacle and its congregation and preacher, in the glow of his admiration. The portrait, is the most attractive cut of Mr. Spurgeon we have seen, except those of an expensive class. The thanks of our readers are due the Journal for its courtesy.

THE CHICAGO THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY gives our readers a brief prospectus of its work and a view of its buildings on the 7th page. Of the latter we must say that it is a very inadequate representation of a group of handsome and commodious buildings. First, on the right is Carpenter Hall, a stone front, named after the benefactor of so many philanthropic and reform enterprises, Philo Carpenter. Next, to the left, is the Hammond Library building. To the rear of this and fronting on Warren Ave., is Keyes Hall. Fisk Hall is the new main building on the south side of Warren Ave., fronting on Ashland Boulevard. This prospectus has a place in the Cynosure under the rule we have long followed, to give similar notice to all colleges and seminaries, without respect to denomination, that endorse the reform against the lodge and aid in promoting its principles among their students. We shall be glad to have all the theological seminaries of Chicago and the country upon this list.

THE CONFERENCE REPORT is continued this week. The brief addresses of the meeting were among the best ever given on such an occasion. In them Miss West, Rev. Mr. Swartz and Prof. Moorehead were heard for the first time on our reform, and they need not fear of wearying their hearers if they speak again and again. Other addresses we expect in due time, except that of Rev. Mr. Bjork, which was in the Swedish language, and of Rev. Mr. Cunningham, which he eannot promise to reproduce for us, and no shorthand reporter had been provided. We regret this exceedingly, for this was one of the popular speeches of the Conference. If any one questions our judgment of the speaker so courteously sent as the representative of the Boston friends, let them turn to his address in the Boston Conference printed in the Cynosure of January 15th last. The reports given at the N. C. A. annual meeting should have all been printed last week, but the reports of the auditors, which was not attached to the financial statement of the year as it should have been, and of the corresponding secretary, were somehow lost among the secretaries, and cannot yet be found.

THE SCRIPTURE AND DIVORCE.

The reported speech of Professor Wilcox of Chicago Seminary on the Bible license of evils until they ean be suppressed has, we hope, not been accurately given to the publie. But there are many who eling to that idea. They were answered as to slavery last week. On the question of divoree they doubtless base their opinions on Deut. 24: 1. "When a man hath taken a wife and married her and it come to pass that she find no favor in his eyes because he hath found some uneleanness in her, let him write her a bill of divorcement and give it in her hand, and send her out of his house." Also Deut 24: 3: "If the latter husband hate her, and write her a bill of divoreement," etc., ete., whieh is divorce for hatred. This is not sanetioned by Moses, but only made the ground of forbidding the first husband to take her again. Let us now consider whether divorce is licensed in the Scripture, "Saving for the cause of fornication." Matt. 5: 32.

The Saviour's comment on the Mosaie divorce is this (Matt. 19: 8): "Moses because of the hardness of your hearts suffered you to put away your wives: but from the beginning it was not so." This is not licensing divorce till it could be put down. It is a simple record of what Moses allowed, as the same Scripture records his killing the Egyptian, breaking the tables and speaking unadvisedly with his lips. The inspired writers were not inspired actors, nor were their actions our law. If so, we might sacrifice our Isaacs as Abraham; lie like Isaac; and deceive our parents like Jacob.

Christ declared this permission of divorce by Moses to be contrary to God's law of marriage. Nay, Moses himself in the Decalogue given him by God, names but one wife, and he had but one himself. And the prophets deelare that God "hateth putting away," whieh is the Scripture for divorce, (Mal. 2: 14) under Moses' permission, which the same prophet burningly rebukes, as "dealing treacherously with the wife of thy youth." But the whole inspired Scripture is Christ's Word, and teaches indissoluble marriage and holy wedlock, as the law of our race "from the beginning." And it is not only the law for our raee, but a symbol of the union of the saved soul with God; that is Christ "the bridegroom of the bride." A woman capable of deliberate fornication is incapable of marriage; and the man who is guilty of the same vice neutralizes and destroys it, and is no more entitled to the holy assiduities of a wife, than a traitor who tramples on law is entitled to its protection. By Christ's law, the wife has her remedy of divorce.

The Bible bases the whole law of marriage as Christ does on the fact that God created but one wife for one husband, when he had the "residue of the Spirit" and might have made more had he wished. (See Mal. 2: 15.) And this whole Scripture and law of divorce, as given by our law-giver Christ, is as good against polygamy as it is against divorce. And in the face of these to make Moses' sufferance of ungodly men to put away their wives; and the cases of polygamy by patriarchs in "the times of ignorance" into license by the Word of God, is to betray ignorance of the Scriptures. But to bring these instances of human weakness and wickedness into the cover of the abominable practice of selling a license for $1,000 to keep a saloon with its known, well-defined and established character, is to > "Torture the pages of the Holy Bible

> "——To license crime.

Did Moses sell the right to cast off wives for $1,000 a head? Did he license divorce-shops which imbruted men, and made divorces necessary to save wives' throats from being cut? We sincerely hope those Congregational ministers who voted the sale of indulgences to keep grog-shops at $1,000 each will reviow and reverse their action.

MORMON CHANGES.

The Mormon hierarchy are considering three significant items of news, important to them and to the whole country.

1. The Supreme Court at Washington has decided what shall be done with the Mormon property seized under the Edmunds law, which provided that a certain sum could be used by the Mormon church and the remainder escheated to the United States. Marshal Dyer was made receiver, and bravely levied upon the Temple square with its great buildings. The final order of the court rendered last week is to the effect that the Mormon eorporation having dissolved, there exists no one legally entitled to the property as suecessor. The receiver is ordered to keep eustody of this property, pay expenses and devote the ineome under order of the Utah eourt to eharitable and lawful purposes.

2. While labor lodges are elamoring that contraet foreign labor shall not eome upon our soil, paupers are sent baek, and criminals refused a landing, it has seemed as if Mormon immigration ought also to eome under the same restriction. Secretary Foster has just deeided that this will be the policy of the government hereafter, and polygamists will therefore be debarred. Some Swedes were sent back last week. This cuts off the great supply for the increase of Mormondom.

3. Of perhaps greater significance still are the political changes impending in Utah. The lines promise to be no longer drawn between Gentile and Mormon, but between Democrat and Republican. The sale of the Salt Lake Herald, a Mormon organ, to Gentile Democrats is based on this change, and there will be a race between the two old parties which will capture the majority. The old Liberal party, which has finally fought its way to victory, will be dissolved and its leaders go into obscurity, as the new management will not anger Mormon voters by keeping them in power. This change completed and the wily leaders of the hierarchy will find a way to retrieve something from their immense losses of power, wealth and influence.

—Bro. W. B. Stoddard, Washington agent, after his brief tarry in Ohio went on to Pittsburg. He intended remaining in that city until the Reformed Presbyterian Synod was at work.

—Rev. L. G. Jordan, the Prohibition worker, called on the Cynosure Friday on his way to Pennsylvania to fill a five weeks' engagement. He attended the late Cincinnati convention, and thinks that on the whole the prohibition cause did not lose so much by being rejected by such a meeting.

—The Boston British American Citizen publishes the address of Rev. W. F. Davis, the Boston Common evangelist, on the restoration of the Jews. It is a very able presentation of a topic upon which there is yet much difference of opinion. When it is remembered that Bro. Davis was a year in Charles Street jail for preaching on the Common, it reads like a novel that he is again in his old pulpit on the old debatable ground, and that he should be preaching long sermons like this in the Citizen unmolested on this very Common. "Here is the patience and faith of the saints."

—Rev. L. M. Leonard of Indianapolis, Ind., spoke before the colored pastors of that city three or four weeks ago, explaining the difference between the secret society system and the Christian church, and urging that the servants of God maintain the truth against the lodge. He was warmly applauded; but a few of the preachers are inclined to lean upon Egypt, and court lodge favor. Their methods, we are informed, will not be popular among good people, whose conviction against secretism will grow stronger and stronger. There are between twenty and thirty colored churches, we are told, in Indianapolis.

—Bro. Thomas Hodge, for many years well-known for his reform convietions in this city, and co-operation with the National Association, has lately been parted from the wife of his youth by death. Mrs. Hodge was born in London and came with her father to this country when quite young. After between forty and fifty years of married life, during whieh time God gave to her nine children, she died May 22. She had been long in feeble health. She was a member of the West Side Christian chureh, and the funeral services were conducted by the pastor at her home in Rogers Park, just north of this city. Her nature was calm, with a delicate appreciation of those things which are "honest, just, pure, lovely and of good report." The sympathy of many friends is given Bro. Hodge in this deep bereavement.

—The Presbyterian ministers of Chicago heard at their weekly meeting Monday an excellent paper on the lodge by Rev. E. R. Worrell of the Washington Heights church, and member of the N. C. A. Board. A number of the pastors were absent at the General Assembly, but of the thirty or more present not one expressed disagreement with the paper. Hearty agreement was the general expression, and several spoke very earnestly against the orders from their personal experience. Bro. Worrell lately addressed his ehureh on the same subjeet. He is to be eongratulated on safely breaking the ice among our Chicago preaehers. Outside the Lutherans and other foreign-speaking ehurehes we are not aware that any denomination has heretofore ventured to take up this subjeet. The Cynosure readers will have the pleasure of reading this historical paper next week.

REFORM NEWS.

THE PACIFIC AGENT AGAIN AT WORK.

TENINO, Wash., May 19, 1891.

Editor Christian Cynosure,

DEAR BRO.:—I lectured on Masonry last Sabbath in Olympia. None of the pastors of churches there, except the Methodist, who is a Mason, are members of any of the lodges except the A. O. U. W. and Good Templars; but none of them see the evils growing out of these systems of iniquity.

I secured the use of a good public hall very cheap, the pastors all published my appointment and I had a fair audience. A few Masons, among the number a professor of one of the schools, were present. They gave me a respectful hearing and a small collection, somewhat more than sufficient to pay for the hall, but not enough to pay my expenses.

Bro. Geo. Couls and his wife are the friends who were so kind to me during my sickness in Tacoma. Though he lives in Tacoma he has a foundry and machine shop in Olympia. He and a few other friends gave me donations to help me on my way.

I could get no chance to lecture here, so I sowed the town with tracts and go to-day to Centralia. I will go from there to Portland and visit the principal towns of northern Oregon.

The opposition to my work is deep-seated and for the most part sullen and silent. The Masons are practicing their virtues, secrecy and silence.

M. H. NICHOLS.

A MINNESOTA LUTHERAN WELCOME.

WILLMAR, Min., May 23, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The churches of Tripolis, Svea, and Willmar receive the truth about secret societies with all readiness. There was a large gathering on Thursday last at Svea in a mission meeting in which the subject of secret societies was freely discussed; probably one of the pastors will give you some account of it. The discussion prepared the way for a large and attentive audience at the evening lecture on secret societies. Last winter one of the Lutheran churches was excommunicated from the Synod for its nonconformity to the rule that excludes members of secret lodges from church fellowship. The pastors and brethren are taking hold of the subject with such vigor that they will be sure to maintain the observance of the rule if they persist in the course they are now following.

At this place Rev. Mr. Estrem, pastor of the Norwegian Lutheran church, introduced the lecturer to the audience last evening. He most cordially and heartily sympathizes with the opposition to secret societies; and in that respect is in the same category with Moses and all the prophets and patriarchs, and Christ and the apostles. The audience gave their profound attention to the subject before them for about two hours while secret societies were exposed and denounced in sympathy with the sentiment of Judge Whitney,—"Freemasonry is the darkest and most damnable institution that ever scourged the earth, or cursed mankind."

The next lectures of the course will be at New London to-morrow, Sabbath day, where two services will, God willing, be held.

It is good to commit all our ways to the Lord and trust him who declares that he has all power in heaven and earth.

W. FENTON.

ONCE MORE IN OHIO.

UTICA, Ohio, May 26, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Mansfield, Ohio, was my first stop after leaving Pullman, Ill. Our friends in the Covenanter church there have passed through a severe trial, but I found the flag still waving. Under the leadership of their new pastor, Rev. R. G. Gault, we may expect to see them march on to victory. Bro. Gault is a brother to our co-laborer in the West, Rev. M. A. Gault, and manifests a similar zeal in advocating the reforms of the day. It was my privilege to remain with him over night. May the Lord give him abundant success in this very needy field.

Utica has always, since my knowledge of it, been a favored place for the reformer, but the lodge serpent is creeping in. There are not a few knees bowing to Baal here as elsewhere.

At the solicitation of friends I tarried to lecture, in the hope that some words of warning to the young might keep them from being ensnared into the lodge net. The evening was pleasant and a good audience, all things considered, assembled at the time appointed. While there was no special enthusiasm manifest, yet those who needed the truth on this matter were many of them present, and I trust the Spirit of God may guide them into the light.

Bro. Caleb Lyon carries well the weight of nearly four score years. His eye is seemingly not dim nor his natural force abated. I find also a welcome as ever at the home of Bro. Harvey. He watches with interest the conflicts with the powers of darkness.

Sabbath was spent very pleasantly at my former home with Bro. K. A. Orvis and family, Columbus. If renewing old acquaintances is so pleasant here, what will it be over there where so many of our loved ones have gone on before. When State agent in Ohio there were none stood more firmly by my side than Revs. Beck and Rohe of Lutheran churches in Columbus. These brethren report their churches in a prosperous condition. Bro. Beck would be glad to have a lecture against the lodge once each year. I shall hope to comply with his request to again address his people.

Bro. Orvis accompanied me to the Ohio Penitentiary and saw me safely locked in. While there I taught a Sabbath-school class, and spoke to an audience of about eight hundred. One is always sure of a good audience here. There were many who testified to their conversion with tears in their eyes. Truly, "the way of the transgressor is hard." As my dress was not like the inhabitants of the pen, they let me out. They are very rigid on the dress question there.

I was rejoiced to find the United Brethren church in Columbus in a far better condition than when I last visited them. They were then seemingly in a dying condition.

The lodgemen of the Shuey branch have set up for themselves and sued for the property. The others remain and divide services with the Free Methodists. The attendance is larger than I ever saw it before. By invitation of the pastor I spoke to an audience of nearly two hundred, Sabbath evening. The testimony meeting that followed, showed a good spiritual state. Several spoke of their lodge experiences and their reasons for leaving. Two professing Christians who did not belong to the church, were inclined to favor their lodges, but their reasoning was so poor that no one was convinced. As is usually the case with such advocates, they wanted the Gospel preached and did not want to turn aside to any side issues. As though opposing sin was not preaching the Gospel. It is remarkable how much piety some people get at times.

W. B. STODDARD.

NOTES ABOUT BOSTON.

BOSTON, Mass., May 25, 1891.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—Last Tuesday evening I spoke a second time in the Scotch Presbyterian church. The pastor, Rev. Gurin, is a true reformer.

On Thursday evening the first of a series of weekly meetings inaugurated by Secretary Stoddard, to consider the facts connected with secret orders, was held in the vestry of the First Reformed Presbyterian church. A very good audience gathered, considering the threatening rain just at the hour of meeting. The Herald gave a report of the meeting and printed the resolution adopted. It was a very great pleasure to meet Miss Flagg, your brilliant New England correspondent. She lives at Wellesley, fourteen miles out of Boston, under the shadow of the noted female seminary. Her friends were anxious lest the accident she met with would injure her. As you enter the vestry door there is a step down. She did not notice this and fell prone on the floor. It is hoped the nervous shock was the worst part of it. We had a very pleasant interview with her at the home of Bro. Stoddard the next day. She is not tall, is well built, has an intellectual forehead, eyes full of language, a countenance glowing with sympathy,—just the happy character for a reformer. I could not help feeling that her conscience has the material for a Covenanter.

On Friday evening I preached in Trinity M. E. church, E. Cambridge, Rev. Dr. Hanaford, pastor. This was a very enjoyable service. At the close the pastor gave hearty testimony to the importance of our work. He exhorted his people to carry these principles into their politics. He said, many prayed three hundred and sixty-four days in a year that these principles might obtain, and then on election day voted against them. "Brethren, vote as you pray!" Many warm congratulations were received.

Sabbath morning and afternoon I preached in the Second Reformed Presbyterian church. Sabbath evening I preached in the Summerville Presbyterian church, Rev. Dewing, pastor. It was gratifying to see such a good representation from the two Covenanter churches there. Yesterday being Memorial day we took for our theme "The Mediatorial Dominion of Christ over the Nations." It is strange that among all the sermons published in this morning's papers, not one deals with the nation's allegiance to the King of kings. How can the Gospel messenger overlook the fact of Christ's kingship, when the Scriptures are so full of it. Moses revealed him as lawgiver; David as a conquering King; Solomon as a universal and glorious King; Melchisedec as priest-king. The promise to Israel through Balaam was, "A star shall rise out of Jacob and a sceptre out of Israel." The church is called to rejoice. "Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion! behold, thy King cometh." His coming is as King: "Unto us a child is born; the government shall be on his shoulders." The Magi from the East searched for a king: "Where is he that is born King of the Jews?" Nathaniel confessed his kingship: "Thou art the King of Israel." He acknowledged his kingly authority before Pilate: "To this end was I born." His ascension was as a triumphant King: "Lift up your heads, O ye gates, and the King of glory shall come in." The seer of Patmos heard voices in heaven proclaiming: "Worthy is the Lamb to receive glory and honor and power." He will be honored as King on earth: "The kingdoms of this world have become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ."

The Brigg's controversy is creating a perfect furor of excitement in Presbyterian circles. Dr. Herrick Johnson has come out in an article calling for more candor and common sense. It is strange how many people in the church imagine the whole cause of Christ depends upon their virulently and bitterly and blindly assailing all who do not believe as they do. Let us remember that God reigns. He will take care of his cause and truth. We have time enough to cultivate the grace of patience. "When innocence is nine parts ignorance it cannot be denied that but a tithe of it can challenge a clear-eyed admiration."

J. M. FOSTER.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Bro. J. M. Foster in Boston.—Tremont Temple's new Masonic pastor.—An "elect lady."—A significant answer.

It is always a pleasure to hear and see one with whose name we have been long familiar, and this is an experience recently enjoyed by the writer. It seemed very fitting that Rev. J. M. Foster, who is known so widely as the champion of National Reform, should deliver the initial lecture in the series of weekly meetings in Boston, "to consider the relation of secret societies to the church of Christ and civil liberties," of which notice was given in the last Cynosure.

He was introduced by Rev. J. P. Stoddard, and began by remarking in a humorous way that he supposed the idea of having him speak first was the same as in sending the little elephant first to try the ice, and then the big elephant (alluding to Bro. Stoddard) would follow. There were two theories respecting civil government: the infidel theory that it is a social compact, and the Christian theory that it is of God.

After a brief account of the infidel theory and its full development in France, he spoke of the radical distinction between the State and any organized body of men,—the former alone having the power over life and death. We are all under moral government, call it by what name we will; and in the midst of this like a wheel within a wheel we find civil government. The Ten Commandments are the basis of all moral reform. They are both a civil code and a moral law. Take the First Commandment, which forbids idolatry. This would settle the vexed Chinese question. America does not belong to Americans but to God. She had no right to allow them to bring their joss houses and heathen customs with them.

(Continued on 12th page.)

THE HOME.

EARLY DEVOTION.

"Early will I seek thee."—Psalm 63: 1.

Sweetly the holy hymn
Breaks on the morning air;
Before the world with smoke is dim
We meet to offer prayer.

While flowers are wet with dews,
Dew of our souls, descend:
Ere yet the sun the day renews,
O Lord, thy Spirit send.

Upon the battle-field,
Before the fight begins,
We seek, O Lord, thy sheltering shield,
To guard us from our sins.

Ere yet our vessel sails
Upon the stream of day,
We plead, O Lord, for heavenly gales
To speed us on our way.

On the lone mountain side,
Before the morning's light,
The Man of Sorrows wept and cried,
And rose refreshed with might.

Oh, hear us then, for we
Are very weak and frail,
We make the Saviour's name our plea,
And surely must prevail.

—Charles H. Spurgeon.

SPURGEON'S TESTIMONY TO THE BIBLE.

I recollect the first time I heard the word "bibliolatry." It was a new offence to me. I asked if I had been guilty of it. I was half inclined to commit it if I had never done so. I would have never heard of that sin if a new law had not come in my way. I do not worship the Book, but I do so love it, that I can say with David, "My soul standeth in awe of thy Word." You may speak of me and my opinions as you please, and I can afford to regard it as I please; but when God speaketh, then every power is hushed to hear what he hath to say, and the whole heart trembles before the Word of the living God. It is no ordinary book. I hate the science of comparative theology. I know but one God, and all the rest are idols. I hate all comparison of sacred books. I know of only one, and all the rest are pretenders. No man who has ever read them will ever for a single second think that they can be mistaken for the Word of the living God. They have nothing of the tone, of the soul, or the majesty, or the depth of this wonderful Book of ours.

The Bible stands alone—the sole and only Book of God. It has passed through a great deal of criticism now, has it not? I do not know why it should be criticised with superfluous severity when so many other books have been allowed to escape scot-free. Had other writings been criticised in the manner of Biblical criticism, there had not been a fragment of them left. But now there is not a fragment of the Scriptures gone. I am not certain that even the passages that have been given up might not well be retained, and if they be given up they are somehow better given up than kept, and teach more in their absence than they did in their presence. No doctrine—no essential doctrine—has been jeopardized by fair criticism of the original books, nor by any other kind of criticism. I sometimes nowadays marvel at the men who are critics of such a Book as this. What a daring they exhibit! One said to me, when I spoke of Paul, "I don't agree with Paul." When I lay aside the question of inspiration and only think of Paul, "Why, man, he doth bestride this narrow world like a Colossus;" and here was an individual—I had to take off my spectacles and tried to borrow a magnifying-glass to see—he did not agree with Paul! In the age of rushlights I should not have been more surprised if the rushlight had said that it did not agree with the sun. Surely these holy books are not to be treated so. It is not for every Jack, Tom and Harry that can begin to criticise Daniel and Ezekiel and the very Christ of God. Impudence is not a rare quality nowadays. But they may pass the Book through more critical tests if they will. It is as silver tried in a furnace of earth purified seven times. They do it service after all, though I will no more thank them for the service than I thank Judas Iscariot and Pilate and Caiaphas for the death of my Lord. These enemies wrought out the purposes of God; howbeit, they meant not so, and therefore to them is no credit, however great the good that came of their unholy deeds.

I would add that not only have we confidence in the Word of God in the critic's hand, but we have, many of us, made proof of God's Word in our own daily life, and we would like to bear our testimony to it. I have tested the Word of God in great physical pain. I have had enough of sickness to be a good and sufficient witness thereto, and there is no pillow for an aching head like a promise from the Word of God. I may add that I have not been without struggles of another kind than physical; but there is nothing wanted to sustain a man, to put soul into him, but to know that he is in accordance with the mind of Christ, and that therefore he will have God on his side. To take the divine doctrines revealed in that Book, and to feed upon them, is to become like a giant refreshed with new wine. The Book is perfectly wonderful as to its results when you test them. I saw an old lady once, and when I visited her I read from her Bible. She had marked it here and there with her own seal of witness. "T and P" I saw frequently on the margin of her Bible. I asked her what she meant, and she replied, "Oh! that means 'tried and proved,' sir," and she began to tell me how in time of trouble and in time of distress a passage had opened itself to her so wonderfully, that she had taken it to the Lord in prayer, and had proved it true to herself. These are the kind of Bibles I love. I call that sort of a Bible not a reference Bible, annonated as it is, but I think of an expression from a man who said, "I want to buy a reverence Bible." He meant reference, undoubtedly; but a Bible that has been tested and proved has become a reverence Bible to those who have been made to feel that such markings might be their own. A Bible tried soon becomes a Bible proved. I hope, dear friends, you all try the Word of God every day in your own daily life. It is a splendid Book for the throne; it is equally good in the kitchen. It is a blessed Book to put into your pocket and carry with you when you are on the railway train; you will find it precious if you stay at home. In poverty or in wealth, in joy or in sorrow, the many-sided Bible only presents to you some new phase of its everlasting adaption to your state or case. Give up the Bible! We will sooner give up our lives. Doubt its inspiration some of us never can, for it has inspired us; and when a book inspires a man, that man knows that the book is inspired itself.

NOT LOST ON THE AIR.

A very interesting incident occurred in the early ministerial life of Mr. Spurgeon, and which he verifies to the person who made it public. Thirty years ago or more he was invited to preach in the vast Crystal Palace at Sydenham. Would his voice fill the immense area? Resolving to test it, he went in the morning to the Palace, and thinking for a passage of Scripture to repeat, this, as he reached the stage, came to mind: "It is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners." Pronouncing the words he felt sure that he would be heard, and then repeated the verse in a softer tone. More than a quarter of a century later Mr. Spurgeon's brother, who is also a pastor, was called to the bedside of a man, an artisan, who was near his end.

"Are you ready?" asked the pastor.

"Oh, yes!" answered the man with assurance.

"Can you tell me how you obtained this salvation of your soul?"

"It is very simple," said the artisan, his face radiant with joy. "I am a plumber by trade. Some years ago I was working under the dome of the Crystal Palace, and thought myself entirely alone. I was without God and without hope.

"All at once I heard a voice coming from heaven, which said, 'It is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners.' By the meaning of these words I was convinced of sin; Jesus Christ appeared to me as my Saviour. I accepted him in my heart as such at the same moment, and I have served him ever since."

God honors his Word. Suppose Mr. Spurgeon had used a secular sentence to try his voice? What surprises await the faithful when results are known.—Ex.

WHAT IS WANTED.

The Holy Spirit is able to make the Word as successful now as in the days of the Apostles. He can bring in by hundreds and thousands, as easily as by ones and twos. The reason why we are no more prosperous is, that we have not the Holy Spirit with us in might and power as in early times. If we had the Spirit sealing our ministry with power, it would signify very little about our talent. Men might be poor and uneducated; their words might be broken and ungrammatical; there might be none of the polished periods of Hall, or glorious thunders of Chalmers; but if the might of the Spirit attended them, the humblest evangelists would be more successful than the most learned of divines, or the most eloquent of preachers.

It is extraordinary grace, not talent, that wins the day. It is extraordinary spiritual power, not extraordinary mental power, that we need. Mental power may fill a chapel, but spiritual power fills the church; mental power may gather a congregation; spiritual power will save souls. We want spiritual power.

O! we know some before whom we shrink into nothing as to talent, but who have no spiritual power; and when they speak they have not the Holy Spirit with them. But we know others—simple-hearted, worthy men, who speak their country dialect, and who stand up to preach in their country-place, and the Spirit of God clothes every word with power. Hearts are broken, souls are saved, and sinners are born again. O Spirit of the living God! we want Thee. Thou art the life, the soul, the source of Thy people's success. Without Thee they can do nothing; with Thee they can do everything.—C. H. Spurgeon.

VAIN DEVICES.

What generally happens with a minister when God has gone? Well, instead of going to God, and humbling himself and crying to him for mercy, he resolves that he will buy a new organ. That will do the trick. The new organ, after all, blow it as they may, does not come to much. Well, then he will have sensational entertainments, a Sunday evening concert—fiddling, or something or other. If God will not help him he, is in the same plight as Saul, the son of Kish. He will try music first, and if that does not render him aid, he will go to the witch of Endor, now called "modern theology," and ask assistance there. God have mercy upon us if we ever do that!—Spurgeon.

"RUN CLOSE IN."

God soon puts away the rod when you put away your sin. If he does not stay the chastisement, you will patiently bear it, and bless him that he has forgiven you; for that is the chief thing to be thought of. As a rule, the Lord ceases to fight against the man who ceases from sin; but if he does not, prostrate yourself before him. There is a picture in a quaint old book, which represents a man with a flail trying to strike another, and the man who is assailed runs close in, so that the adversary cannot strike him. Run in upon God, and he cannot strike you. What does he say? "Let him take hold of my strength, and he shall make peace with me." That is go right up to God, who has been smiting you, and say—"Lord, I fully submit to thee. By the bowels of thy compassion, I pray thee, forgive me, and restore me thy love." He has no pleasure that you should suffer; as his dear child he would have you happy. He is grieved that you should wander away from him. Come back at once, backslider; come back even now. The Lord enable you to do so now, for Jesus' sake!—Spurgeon.

A SHARP TRICK.

Anna Mowry was left in charge of her two younger brothers one summer, while her parents went to California. She was with them in a farm-house on the Massachusetts coast, and frequently lectured them on questions of morals and manners. One evening she talked to them on the subject of honesty. "I have often read in the papers," she said, "of young men who are first led into extravagance, and then rob or defraud their employer. If a brother of mine was to be guilty of such dishonesty I would never forgive him—never! I would never acknowledge him as my brother!"

The boys had never been tempted to steal, and the suggestion that temptation and fall were possible, together with their sister's threat, startled and impressed them. The next day, while the question of honesty was still fresh in their minds, Anna came in, eager and excited.

"I hear," she said, "that a woman in the neighborhood has some fine old Satsuma ware. Her husband was a sea-captain and brought it to her fifty years ago. Come with me. I am going to try to buy a piece of it."

The house, when they reached it, was a meagre, forlorn little cottage. The woman was old; her lean, pale face lightened when she saw Anna. She was poorly clad. Here was a chance of earning money!

"Lookin' for rooms, ma'am?" she said. "I have some good ones to let."

"No," said Anna, carelessly. "We just stopped for—a glass of water."

"Why, sister!" exclaimed Rob, astonished at the deception.

She shook her head angrily at him to be silent, and when the woman left the room, she whispered, "If she knew what I came for she would charge twice as high for the ware." Then she followed her hostess, who was opening a cupboard.

"You have some nice glasses there," she said.

"Yes; cost a dollar a dozen."

"Very neat pattern, indeed."

Anna turned the cheap, ugly-shaped goblets in her hand, while her keen eye scanned the recesses of the cupboard.

"Queer-looking old china cup, that," she said. "May I see it? Thank you. What is it?"

"Some foreign kind of crockery. My husband brought it to me. I've been told it was worth considerable money."

"Ah? I shouldn't like to give much for it. It's a dingy-looking bit of china. I think I would give seventy-five cents for it—just for the oddity."

"I couldn't let it go for less than a dollar," said the woman anxiously. "My husband gave it to me, but I do need money."

Anna laid the cup down, declaring that it was "dingy," but after some higgling she bought it for a dollar. She hurried away with it, her cheeks flushed and her eyes shining.

"Cousin Belle gave twenty-five dollars for not half so good a specimen!" she cried, exultantly, when they were on the road.

"Is it worth so much?" asked Bob, gravely.

"It is worth more; but she did not know it!"

"That was a pretty sharp trick of yours, Anna," said Tom, thoughtfully, after a pause.

Anna laughed complacently. "Yes, I think so," she said.

When the lads were alone that night, Bob said, "Anna said she would not acknowledge us as brothers if we stole money. Didn't she the same as steal that cup from the old woman if it was worth twenty-five dollars? If the old woman had known it she would not have let it go for a dollar. Anna took the advantage of her ignorance. She really stole it."

"It looks like that," replied Tom.

"Well, then I guess Anna wouldn't mind sharp tricks in business if we were men, Tom, would she?"

"No," said Tom.

The seed was planted which would reach a deadly growth hereafter, and Anna's talk about dishonesty was always thought of with derision. —Youth's Companion.

TEMPERANCE.

THE ORIGINAL-PACKAGE DECISION.

The federal Supreme court's decision that the original-package law is constitutional and valid will be received with satisfaction in those States where the struggle to maintain prohibitory laws is an unceasing and stubborn one.

In announcing the decision, which was evidently carefully prepared in view of its great importance, Chief Justice Fuller paid an implied compliment to the prohibition advocates who have fought the original-package controversy to the court of last resort. The decision holds in effect that the States do not have to re-enact their prohibitory laws to attain jurisdiction over imported liquors in original packages. It affirms the constitutional power of the States to regulate or prohibit at their option the sale of intoxicating drinks, and holds that the act of Congress known as the original-package law does not conflict in any way with these domestic laws.

This latest "dry" decision will be a powerful weapon in the hands of the prohibitionists. It is hardly pertinent to question at this juncture the wisdom of State prohibitory laws or their effect upon the evils sought to be remedied. Such questions must be left for solution to each State in turn. But the original-package decision will confirm and strengthen many of the prohibition States in their war against the liquor interest.—Chicago News.

GREAT JOY IN KANSAS.

TOPEKA, Kas., May 26.—The prohibition leaders are delighted at the result of the Supreme court decision in the Rohrer original-package case holding the Wilson bill constitutional.

County Attorney Welch, who had dropped his prosecutions of the men charged with continuing to sell liquor after the passage of the Wilson bill, will now continue and the war will be waged with enthusiasm and determination.

It is difficult to tell the political effect of the decision. Secretary of State Higgins said this morning that he hoped the question would now be taken out of politics. "It is no longer a political question," said he, "and the decision of the highest tribunal in the land settles the matter so far as the approaching campaign is concerned."

Many of the Democratic and Republican leaders have become sick and tired of a campaign over a local issue, and since the people's party has ignored the question altogether it will give the new party a distinct advantage in the approaching campaign if the old parties divide on the liquor question.

Montreal is said to be now cursed with over 1,200 licensed liquor shops, and probably there are many more unlicensed ones. Toronto, a city of nearly equal population, wealth and importance, has but one hundred, and many of its best citizens feel that that is just a hundred too many.

Reports presented at the twenty-sixth anniversary of the National Temperance society lately held in New York show that the society has published eighty new publications, making a total of 1,933 now on the catalogue; 27,777,890 pages of literature have been published the last year, making 826,166,909 pages since the organization of the society. The total receipts were $54,450.18; total expenses, $53,703.29. Five colored missionaries have been kept in the field, and a large amount of literature has been distributed among the colored people of the South.

At the close of the annual session of the American Medical Association, lately held in Washington, D. C., Dr. Nathan S. Davis, of Chicago, made a call for a meeting to organize an American medical temperance association, similar to the one which has done such grand work in England. Thirty physicians responded, and a permanent organization was effected, with Dr. N. S. Davis as president; Dr. R. Quimby, of New Jersey, vice-president; Dr. T. B. Crothers, of Connecticut, secretary, and Dr. George W. Webster, of Illinois, treasurer. Three other vice-presidents are to be appointed. This movement means much for the cause of non-alcoholic medication, and for the success of the National Temperance Hospital.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE OLD TESTAMENT.

LESSON XI.—Second Quarter.—June 14.

SUBJECT.—The book of the law found.—2 Chron. 34: 14-28.

GOLDEN TEXT.—The law of thy mouth is better unto me than thousands of gold and silver.—Psa. 119: 72.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—2 Chron. 33: 1-25. T.—2 Chron. 34: 1-13. W.—2 Chron. 34: 29-33. T.—Psa. 119: 121-144. F.—Jer. 36: 14-25. S.—John 5: 32-47. S.—Heb. 10: 26-31.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. The lost book of the law. Vs. 14, 15. This chapter throws a strong light on the moral darkness which enveloped the people. All they knew of the law was through oral tradition; and in this respect the king was no better off than the masses. Two copies of the law were made by Moses; one to be deposited in the Ark of the Covenant, the other for the special use of the king. But we may well imagine that the royal copy had been lost, if not deliberately destroyed, long before the period of our lesson. Such wicked kings as Ahaz and Manasseh would make it a leading purpose to have God's law forgotten by the people, and in this they were helped by the priests whose duty it was to keep it from being lost, and yet so neglected their trust that when Josiah came to the throne not a trace of the holy volume was to be found. When the Bible has ceased to be to us a living Word from God, it has become a lost Bible; and a sure way to lose it is to neglect it. Hilkiah did not make his wonderful discovery until the forsaken temple which had been made a storehouse for rubbish, and a secret haunt of idolaters, had been cleared out and cleansed. How many Bibles are lost to-day under the rubbish of worldly cares, foolish reading and trifling talk, and can never be found again until the heart has been cleared out and cleansed. Another point should be remarked: it was lost in the temple; and so the Word of God may be lost in the churches. It can be buried up under a rubbish of false doctrines and traditions of men as in the Romish church; and though Protestantism has the glory of recovering this precious Book, and giving it once more to the people, we need to have vigilant care that it does not become spiritually lost to us. To hear sermons and read books about the Bible, is not the same thing as studying it for ourselves, and there is some danger that in the very multiplicity of commentaries and lesson helps the sacred Book itself sometimes gets crowded out of sight.

2. The royal penitent. Vs. 16–21. It seems probable that Shaphan read from Deuteronomy—perhaps the 28th chapter where blessings and curses are pronounced, according as the people should serve the Lord or forsake him for other gods. Many of these curses had already come upon them; and if a part of God's threatenings had been so accurately fulfilled, why not the whole—even to the last and most dreadful calamity of complete extinction as a nation? But conviction that does not lead the sinner to make some practical effort to escape his impending doom amounts to but little. The king was not satisfied to simply weep and rend his clothes. Tears can never wash away sin. Mere bewailing of the past is worse than useless if it stops there. The king did the wisest thing possible. He sent to inquire of the Lord. This is the only course that can bring peace to a convicted soul. He who has wounded can alone make whole.

3. The doom pronounced. Vs. 22–28. This woman prophet, Huldah, spoke with as much authority and boldness as did Jeremiah or Ezekiel, thus showing that God calls whom he will to speak his message, without respect of sex. It is strange that with such an example before us, any should be found to deny to a Christian woman the right to obey the inner voice when it calls her to the work of the ministry. Her case is not mentioned as if it was unique, from which we infer that it may not have been a solitary instance of a woman exercising the prophetic gift. Perhaps there was no prophet of the other sex then in the city, who had so high a reputation for faithfully and fearlessly speaking the words of the Lord. If so, this was certainly good reason why they should go to her; just as the fact that so many churches are deficient in fully consecrated male members is one of the best of reasons why women should be allowed to fill any position in the church to which they seem called of God. Several important lessons are suggested in her answer to the royal deputation. (1) There is a plain, fearless directness—a holy boldness in the opening sentence, which is very impressive, "Tell ye the man"—not the king—who sent you to me. This may well be a lesson for all who preach before those in high places to remember that however exalted their station, in the sight of God they are but men, and on a common level with the poorest and the humblest. (2) There may come a time when repentance is too late. Such a time had come to Israel. (3) All Josiah's prayers and tears could not avert her final doom;—they could only delay it. Yet this shows how much the character of a nation's rulers may have to do with its prosperity or ruin. (4) The penitent always find mercy. Josiah was spared from being personally involved in the coming destruction. So the sinner who cries to God for mercy will be spared in the great day of his wrath.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER (Continued from 9th page).

If we had a Josiah he would soon drive out the idolatry of the secret lodges. So the State is guardian of the Third Commandment against profanity; and this gives her the power, if she would use it, to abolish the disloyal oaths of the lodge. So of the Fourth Command. The State should say to the corporations and lodges, "You shall not run your cars nor have your parades on Sunday." So the State is keeper of the Sixth Commandment. It is just as great a crime to murder a man with alcohol, as with a rifle shot; and the saloon is murdering sixty-five thousand men every year. The murder of Morgan in 1829, Cronin by the Clan-na-Gael, the late Mafia trouble at New Orleans, and the six hundred murders known by positive evidence to have been committed by the oath-bound Mormon hierarchy, shows the need that government should extirpate such societies.

The State prohibits stealing. What about bulls and bears? A few years ago a man named Hutchinson made millions in an hour by a corner on wheat, but the rest of us were millions poorer. Yet the government allows this wholesale stealing. There is the same indictment against the lodge which takes three million dollars to distribute one million. A man has been known to pay one hundred dollars for his lodge regalia when his wife had to wear a one dollar dress. The State should be the guardian of the home, around which both saloon and lodge are winding their coils like the serpents around Laocoon.

As an illustration he referred to Gov. St. John, who, in his early manhood, took the degrees of Masonry up to the Royal Arch degree. Said his wife in a conversation with Mr. Foster, "I told my husband that it did not seem right that he should spend his evenings at the lodge, and leave me alone with the children; and that if he persisted in going I should go too." He hinted that I would not be admitted; but I said that I should take the children and the baby, and go as far as I could. Then I would sit down and wait till he came out. "And," she added, in her quiet, emphatic way, "Mr. St. John knew I would do it."

Secret, oath-bound orders are the Goliath that defies the armies of the living God, and we are waiting for the New Testament David with his sling and stone to destroy him. It is the Trojan horse that we have admitted into the walls of our temple: and it is the duty of every patriot to prepare himself for the contest, and every Christian to separate himself from the lodge.

It was a strong lecture. Mr. Foster is one of those rare speakers who never waste their ammunition, and with whom every shot tells. A brief synopsis of it with some resolutions presented by Mr. Stoddard and unanimously adopted, was given in the morning's Herald. And thus the first of this much-needed series of meetings in lodge-ridden Boston has been held. The Lord who has thus auspiciously begun the good work will not suffer it to fall to the ground. Bro. Stoddard and his wife are now conveniently and pleasantly situated for their anti-secret labors, and are strengthening their lines in every direction. The interest is growing, as shown by many indications. The Christian people of Boston are beginning to awake to the lodge danger. Last Sabbath the music of brass bands as the Grand Army marched to and from the places of worship where services were held in their especial honor, smote strangely on ears unaccustomed to hearing the Sabbath stillness invaded by such sounds.

Dr. Lorimer preached at Tremont Temple on "Our Flag"—a sermon as utterly secular and Christless as became his lodge religion. Mr. Spencer, the leader of the meetings, had prefaced the sermon with an appeal for funds, in the course of which he made some remarks that pleased the audience, and they began to cheer. Mr. Spencer promptly checked their applause by reminding them that however proper such demonstrations might be on ordinary occasions, they were utterly out of place on the Sabbath day. Dr. Lorimer, after giving the history of the American flag, proceeded to speak of the decadence of our merchant marine in strong terms: "You have been asleep, men of New England. Let us start a new movement—the New England shipping movement." "Dr. Lorimer paused here for a moment" (I quote the language of the Herald) "and was interrupted by applause, modest and undecided at first, as if expecting a rebuke. But the doctor said, 'Go ahead. You may applaud me all you want to.' Then the dam broke." He was vigorously applauded at the end of his discourse. Verily, if there is any spirituality left among the members of Tremont Temple church, they will not long endure this Masonic pastor, who can so outrage all sense of decency and fitness, and court applause for himself where only God should be thought of and worshiped!

On the lower floor of 218 Columbus Avenue, live Bro. and Sister Powers; the latter indeed an "elect lady," a most earnest and unselfish helper in the cause. The parlor meetings held at her home every Monday are due to an inspiration which came to her when on her knees at prayer; and "obedient to the heavenly vision" she at once opened her beautiful home, and only eternity can measure the good accomplished in this quiet and informal work. Though frail of body she never spares herself in her Master's cause, and in labors abundant has stood by Bro. and Sister Stoddard from the first, as their staunchest friend and helper.

I had the privilege of spending last Monday in her home and addressing the meeting in the evening on, "How I became an anti-secretist." The audience, though rather smaller than usual, made up in quality what it lacked in quantity. When I had closed, Bro. Stoddard, with his chart, gave them a bird's eye view of Masonry, which with even better cause than slavery may claim for itself the title of "the peculiar institution." A young man present whom I had noticed as paying very earnest attention, inquired the facts regarding the murder of Morgan. He said that once in conversation with a Mason, he had asked, "What would be done to a member of the lodge who exposed the secrets?" The Mason looked him in the eye and said, significantly, "Did you ever hear of Morgan?"

It is time, however, that I draw this long letter to a close. The work is going grandly forward, for God is in it. But he works by means. Rally around Bro. Stoddard and his dear wife. Breathe their names daily at your family altars, and do not let them lack for "the sinews of war."

ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

According to Sidney T. Skidmore in Lippincott's for May, "Within a quarter of a century the endowment of many of the older colleges has doubled, and the everage expenses of the students have increased in nearly the same ratio." This is nothing compared with the increase in the cost of public schools in Chicago, which has doubled in two years, while the character of the instruction has not improved, and private and parochial schools are on the increase. As a nation we are making education an expensive luxury without having much to show for it.—America.

A high Mason in Boston had his attention called to that part of the Master Mason's oath which swears the candidate not to violate the chastity of a Master Mason's wife, mother or sister, he knowing them to be such, thus tacitly giving free rein to the libertine as regards all women outside of these prescribed limits. He answered: "I could tell you volumes along that line."—National Home Guard.

—The Canadian churches, irrespective of creed, united a few months ago in organizing a great petition movement for Prohibition which, up to the point reached, has proved a remarkable success. At one of the sittings of the House of Commons, no less than two hundred petitions were presented by Members of Parliament at the request of churches in their respective constituencies.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—The membership of the United Presbyterian church is this year reported to be 106,385, of which number 12,493 were received during the year—7,482 upon profession of their faith in Jesus as the Christ, and 5,011 by certificate. The net gain has been 2,464, which exceeds the gain of the previous year by 401. 1,027 Sabbath-schools are reported, of which number 201 are in the foreign fields. There are enrolled in these schools 93,743 pupils, with 10,408 officers and teachers. These figures mark an increase during the year of 1,163 pupils and of 198 teachers and officers. 524 societies of young people are reported, with a membership of 19,026. 814 women's missionary societies are reported; which is an increase of 14 societies over the number at the close of the previous year. The total contributions as reported is $1,145,987, an increase of $11,764 over the previous year. The total contribution to the work of the Boards of the Church amounted to $211,504.

—The General Assembly of the United Presbyterian church convened in Princeton, Ind., Wednesday. The opening sermon was preached by Rev. J. A. Wilson, D.D., of Wooster, O. Rev. T. J. Kennedy, D.D., president of Amity College, College Springs, Iowa, was elected moderator. The Assembly represents fifty-nine Presbyteries; including one in Egypt and one in India. There are three on the Pacific coast.

—The sixty-second Synod of the Reformed Presbyterian church of North America began Wednesday morning in the Eighth street church, Pittsburg, with 200 delegates present. The Synod was opened by Moderator B. H. Coulter, and the entire session was devoted to prayer.

—The General Assembly of the Presbyterian church was startled on Tuesday morning when Moderator Green read a telegram, announcing the sudden death of Rev. Dr. H. J. Van Dyke, of Brooklyn, recently elected Professor of Systematic Theology in Union Seminary. Prayer was offered by the Moderator with a voice broken by emotion, and many of those present were deeply moved. A committee was appointed to draft appropriate resolutions.

—It was reported early last week that missionary establishments at Nanking, China, have been attacked and pillaged. The inmates escaped. The Methodist girls' school was set on fire and looted. The news came from Shanghai on May 24th. Late in the week the report was contradicted.

—Since Protestantism entered Mexico, about twenty-five years ago, sixty-six Protestants have given their lives for their faith.

—The financial showing for the American Board for April is a gratifying one. The receipts through donations were $47,919, and through legacies $37,646, a gain in the one case of $16,033 on the same month last year, and in the other case of $26,053. The total receipts for eight months are $68,560 in advance of last year.

—Rev. C. Meyer, a Lutheran minister, of Herndon, Kan., has distributed nearly $10,000 worth of seed wheat among the impoverished Lutherans on the Kansas frontier. He acted as the agent of the Ohio Synod, which contributed over $5,000 to the fund. He also raised some money in the eastern part of the State, and charitable farmers of Nebraska contributed considerable seed.

—The Presbyterian Board of Home Missions in New York city closed its fiscal year with an indebtedness of $100,000. The cause of the debt is in the unexpected falling off of legacies, which are about $100,000 less than last year. The contributions have advanced, and are larger than they ever were before.

—The Presbyterian General Assembly, at Detroit, passed resolutions asking that the World's Fair be kept closed on Sunday.

—A writer in the Missionary Review says that out of 3,000,000 converts in all the foreign mission fields, 30,000 have gone as workers into the field, or one out of every 100, while Protestant Christendom has sent forth but one out of every 5,000.

—The women of all St. Paul Protestant churches began a concerted movement against Sunday amusements last week, by circulating petitions on the street railways and in the business districts. Their first attack is upon the Sunday theatres. These petitions will first be presented to the theatre managers and then to the mayor.

—In the Southern Presbyterian Assembly at Birmingham, Ala., this morning a resolution was adopted declaring church fairs and festivals not proper means of raising money. A resolution was adopted calling on the World's Fair to keep its gates closed on Sunday.

—The General Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran church, which closed its sessions at Lebanon, Pa., Friday, adopted a resolution against opening the Columbian Exposition on Sunday.

—Members of the standing committees of the several Episcopal dioceses, whose duty it is to pass upon the confirmation of Dr. Brooks as bishop of Massachusetts, have been in receipt of various anonymous circulars and pamphlets mailed from Boston. These documents are written ostensibly to further the purposes of the High church party. They profess to give information regarding Dr. Brooks' opinion and standing, which information is said to be in many respects false and misleading.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

It is estimated at the Treasury Department that there will be an increase of $400,000 in the public debt for May.

A circular has been issued by the State Department, at Washington, announcing the fact that subjects of foreign countries may only take advantage of the copyright laws of the United States when their respective governments are willing to grant the same privileges to subjects of the United States when in foreign countries.

The government has lost one of its most efficient officers in the resignation of Dr. John B. Hamilton as Surgeon General of the Marine Hospital service. Dr. Hamilton has resigned to accept the position of Professor of Surgery in the Rush Medical College, Chicago.

The American University was organized at Washington Wednesday, by representatives of the Presbyterian, Protestant, Episcopal, Baptist, and Methodist Episcopal churches. Mark Hoyt was elected President, and Bishop Hurst Chancellor. Five million dollars will be asked for.

CHICAGO.

A suggestion was made by Director Lyman J. Gage that the old Lake-Front Exposition Building, which the City Council has ordered torn down, be turned over to the Columbian Exposition directory and used as a warehouse for storing exhibits which may be sent here in advance of the opening of the Fair. The suggestion will probably be acted upon favorably.

COUNTRY.

At the annual meeting of the American Peace Society in Boston, Mass., Rev. R. B. Howard submitted an elaborate report in favor of holding in Chicago during the World's Fair, a grand peace conference. It is proposed to make it the greatest gathering of the kind ever known.

Two men were killed and three fatally injured Thursday by a boiler explosion in a saw-mill at Frankfort, Ind.

The Governor of Michigan Tuesday vetoed the bill appropriating $30,000 for the entertainment of the Grand Army of the Republic, at Detroit in August.

(Continued on 16th page.)

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from May 25 to May 30, inclusive:

Rev M Matthieson, A Good, T Prall, J Howe, J S Smith, C Griffin, Mrs A Coe, Rev W Fenton, E Barnetson, G W Pritts, M H Wardner, L A Phillips, Mrs L W Hull, J Watson, A Wampler, J E Verkler, I Leadbetter, N Callender, Mrs R Schnellbacher, S Avery, Mrs M W Bingham, A Sutor, W Hamlyn, Dr H W Marsh, W Palmer, C Steck, W W Wait, D VanDeventer.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.
Wheat—Spring	1 03	@	1 04
Winter	98	@	1 04
Corn—No. 2	56¼	@	58
Oats—No. 2	45	@	47½
Rye—No. 2	86
Bran per ton	12 00	@	12 50
Hay—Timothy	10 00	@	13 00
Butter, medium to best	12	@	17½
Cheese	05	@	12½
Beans	1 75	@	2 25
Eggs	15		15½
Seeds—Timothy	1 08	@	1 30
Flax	1 17	@	1 18
Broom corn	03	@	04½
Potatoes, per bu	75	@	1 15
Hides—Green to dry flint	04½	@	07½
Lumber—Common	10 00	@	13 00
Wool	16	@	34
Cattle—Choice to extra	5 50	@	6 40
Common to good	1 75	@	5 40
Hogs	4 25	@	4 70
Sheep	2 90	@	5 15
NEW YORK.
Wheat	1 05	@	1 14½
Corn	65	@	68
Oats	47	@	60
Eggs	19½
Butter	10	@	18½
Wool	14	@	39
KANSAS CITY
Cattle	2 25	@	5 95
Hogs	3 00	@	4 45
Sheep	4 00	@	4 85

SCROFULA

Is that impurity of the blood which produces unsightly lumps or swellings in the neck; which causes running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. It is the most ancient of all diseases, and very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. If you suffer from scrofula, try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Every spring my wife and children have been troubled with scrofula, my little boy, three years old, being a terrible sufferer. Last spring he was one mass of sores from head to feet. We all took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and all have been cured of the scrofula. My little boy is entirely free from sores, and all four of my children look bright and healthy." W. B. ATHERTON, Passaic City, N. J.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass

100 Doses One Dollar

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer who will send me their Express and P.O. address. T. A. Slocum, M. C., 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

OLD AND NEW

WANTED FRIENDS

TO GAIN

NEW SUBSCRIBERS

FOR

BUDS & BLOSSOMS.

Acknowledged to be one of the BEST AND CHEAPEST Magazines. Its wealth of illustration, purity yet often thrilling statements of MISSION WORK and ADVENTURE in lower New York, make it wholesome and cheery reading. Edited by

J. F. AVERY,
Pastor Mariners' Temple. 1 Henry St

BUDS AND BLOSSOMS

AND FRIENDLY GREETINGS

WANTS to give Canvassers

$5 & $10 REWARDS.

Send three cents for specimens, etc.

Address Rev. J. F. AVERY,
1 Henry St., New York.

FIFTY YEARS and BEYOND;

OR,

Old Age and How to Enjoy It.

A most appropriate gift book for "The Old Folks at Home."

Compiled by REV. S. G. LATHROP.

Introduction by
REV. ARTHUR EDWARDS, D. D.,
(Editor N. W. Christian Advocate.)

The object of this volume is to give to that great army who are fast hasteuing toward the "great beyond" some practical hints and helps as to the best way to make the most of the remainder of that now is, and to give comfort and help ife that is to come.

'It is a tribute to the Christianity that honors one gray head and refuses to consider the oldish man burden or an obstacle. The book will aid and comfort every reader."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"The selections are very precious. Springing from such numerous and pure fountains, they can but afford a refreshing and healthful draught for every aged traveller to the great beyond."—Witness.

Price, bound in rich cloth, 400 pages, $1

Address, W. I. PHILLIP,
131 W. Madison St., Chicago Il

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

The St. Louis Sermon

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover.

Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

WILL SELL FOR

Regular Price.		Sellin Price.
	FIVE CENTS.
$ .15	"A WOMAN'S VICTORY, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp.	$ .05
$ .10	"WASHINGTON SOUVENIR." Portraits of Geo. Washington and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freemasonry. Size 18x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home.	$ .05
	SIX CENTS.
$ .10	"SECRET SOCIETIES." A Lecture delivered at OLerlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Paper, 36 pp.	$ .06
$ .20	"REASONS WHY Secret Societies caunot bc Fellowshiped by the United Presbyterian Church." By Rev. J. W. Bain. Pages 149.	$ .06
	TEN CENTS.
$ .15	"MY EXPERIENCE WITH SECRET SOCIETIES." By a Traveler. Paper, 51 pp.	$ .10
$ .25	"SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF JAMES G. BIRNEY." His relation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in history. By General William Birney. Paper, 32 pages.	$ .10
	TWENTY CENTS.
$ .30	"SONGS FOR THE TIMES," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohibition and W. C. T. U. meetings. Boards, 152 pages.	$ .20
	TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.
$ .75	"BEREA COLLEGE," Kentucky. An interesting history of the founding of that College for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 87 pages.	.25
	FIFTY CENTS.
$1.00	"NATIONAL SUICIDE AND ITS PREVENTION." The following will show the drift of the book: Measure or Standard of Value; What is Honest Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lumry. Cloth, 224 pp.	$ .50
$1.50	"HISTORY OF SECRET SOCIETIES IN FRANCE," or "THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS." By Lucien De La Hodde. Translated from the French by Gen'l. J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp.

Sent postpaid to anyaddress on of the selling price.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N
221 W. Madison St., Chics

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885.

Compiled and Arranged by John C. Underwa- Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED.

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introductio-
By Pres't. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association
221 West Madison St., Chicago.

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. ☞ A liberal discount to dealers.

The Anti-mason's Scrap-Book, consisting of 53 "Cynosure" tracts. In this book are the views of more than a score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of secret societies. Postpaid, 25 cts.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction AND MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 304 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5cts each.

Proceedings of Pittsburgh Convention. Containing official reports. Addresses by Rev. D. R. Kerr, D.D., Rev. B. T. Roberts, Rev. G. T. R. Meiser, Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, D.D., Pres. J. Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D.D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. E. Coquilette. 25 cents each.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

Patriarchs Militant Illustrated. The complete ritual of the Patriarchs Militant degree. This is an accurate copy of the Charge Book furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Odd-fellows, with the eighteen military diagrams and the unwritten (secret) work added. Paper cover. 25cts each.

Between Two Opinions: OR THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR. By Miss E. E. Flagg, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages, cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and CHURCH. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

History Nat'l Christian Association. Its origin, objects, what it has done and aims to do, and the best means to accomplish the end sought, the Articles of Incorporation, Constitution and By-laws of the Association. 25cts each.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated, "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the REPUBLIC, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

Knights of Pythias Illustrated. By a Past Chancellor. A full illustrated exposition of the three ranks of the order, with the addition of the "Amended, Perfected and Amplified Third Rank." 25cts each.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Odd-fellowship Illustrated" (old work), "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templars Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange," and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in cloth for $1.00.

United Sons of Industry Illus- TRATED. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15cts each.

IN BRIEF.

The historic old log cabin in St. Louis county, Mo., which the late General and President U. S. Grant erected with his own hands and with logs cut and hewn by himself, is about to be removed from its present site and shipped to Chicago where it will be erected for exhibition at the World's Fair. The cabin now stands on an eighty-acre tract of land about ten miles southwest of this city and five miles west of Jefferson Barracks.

Anecdotes of the late Professor Thorold Rogers' racy humor are already rife. One of these is really good. While a member of the House of Commons he took great interest in the condition of the Thames, and endeavored to induce Sir James Hogg, the chairman of the Metropolitan Board of Works, to improve the condition of the river. Finding his efforts in vain, he went to the Thames, filled a bottle with water from it, labeled the bottle "Hogg's Wash," and hung it up in the smoking-room of the House of Commons.

The French savant, M. Kunckle Herculais, president of the Ethnological Society, who was employed on the government mission of investigating the locust plague in Algiers, has met a horrible death. While examining a deposit of locusts' eggs at the village of Sideral, he was overcome with fatigue and the heat, and fell asleep on the ground. While sleeping he was attacked by a swarm of locusts. On awakening he struggled desperately to escape from the living flood. He set fire to the insect-laden bushes near him, but all his efforts proved ineffectual, and when finally the locusts left the spot, his corpse was found. M. Herculais was a member of the French Academy and author of several valuable works on insects.

President Harrison reached Washington Friday, having stood the trip, the speech-making and the hand-shaking splendidly. When nearing Washington, he summoned to the observation car all those who accompanied him and all the employes of the train, and made them a speech, his one hundred and fortieth since starting on the trip, April 14. He referred to the unprecedented excellence of the railroad service which had enabled them to travel 10,000 miles in a splendidly equipped train, without the slightest accident or a moment's delay, and thanked the employes for their faithful services. He also gave them all substantial tokens of appreciation. Mr. Wanamaker, Mr. Rusk and other gentlemen of the party did likewise.—Signal.

The Philadelphia Press says: "Enough is now known of the census returns for 1890 from the manufacturing industries of the United States, to establish the fact that Philadelphia leads all the cities of the country in the value of their annual product. This city has risen from a 'bad second' in 1880, which New York led by $150,000,000, to first place in the present census, in which Philadelphia leads by about $50,000,000. Philadelphia has not only caught up to and passed her only rival, but the rate of increase has been more than three times as great as that of New York. The value of the annual product as shown by the census of 1880 was $325,000,000 for Philadelphia and $475,000,000 for New York. The return for the present year will show in round numbers $700,000,000 for Philadelphia and $650,000,000 for New York."

The American immigration commissioners will do well to beware of immigrants sailing from such parts of Hungary known as the Bacska and the Banat, which have just had the blessing of a local police conferred upon them, to the utter disgust of the festive Magyar population which for centuries has followed the pursuit of brigandage and thieving as the only means of livelihood worthy of gentlemen. Hundreds of these have already petitioned the government for leave to emigrate to America, a request which is only too readily granted. Yesterday a band of eighteen passed through Pesth on their way to New York. They made no secret of their reasons for quitting the fatherland, nor did the local papers make attempt to dissuade them from going. The Bremen authorities have been obliged, by a new order of Chancellor Caprivi, to return to Russia several hundred subjects of the czar who were bound for Brazil, but had not sufficient money to pay for their passage. Many of them had left Russia secretly, and rather than go back and undergo the penalty some tried to escape from the escort by leaping upon the trains, and were either killed or injured.

Between the mouth of the Mississippi River and Galveston, Texas, ten or fifteen miles South of Sabine Pass, is a spot in the Gulf of Mexico which is commonly called "The Oil Ponds" by the captains of the sail craft which ply in that vicinity. There is no land within fifteen miles; but, even in the wildest weather, the water at this spot is comparatively calm, owing to the thick covering of oil which apparently rises from the bed of the gulf, which is here about fifteen to eighteen feet beneath the surface. This strange refuge is well known to sailors who run on the small vessels trading between Calcassieu, Orange, Sabine, Beaumont and Galveston. When, through stress of weather, they fail to make harbor elsewhere, they run for "The Oil Ponds," let go the anchor, and ride the gale in safety; this curious spot furnishing a good illustration of the effects of "oil upon a troubled sea."—Ex.

BEECHAM'S PILLS cure Sick-Headache.

Stomach Troubles,

Such as indigestion and loss of appetite, are extremely common. The functions of the stomach being weakened, the blood soon becomes impure, the system loses vigor, and you fall an easy prey to any prevailing epidemic. What you need to restore tone to the digestive organs is Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the best and most economical of all blood-purifiers.

"For several years I was troubled with indigestion, accompanied with pains in my side. My appetite was poor, and my health was gradually failing. Medicine recommended to me by my friends, did not have the desired effect. Finally I was advised to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and have done so, with the most beneficial results. My appetite is now good, I am free from pain, and feel once more in good health."—T. Loney, 32 Fairmount st., Cambridgeport, Mass.

"About a year ago, I found myself in failing health. I suffered indescribably from stomach trouble, blood disorder, and various weaknesses, and almost despaired of relief. Thinking Ayer's Sarsaparilla might possibly benefit me, I began taking it, and am pleased to state that a few bottles wrought an entire change in my condition. My health has been restored by its use, and I feel stronger and more vigorous than I have for many years."—Mary A. Garland, 1407 Michigan ave., Chicago, Ill.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla — FOR — Dyspepsia.

"During the summer and fall of 1887 I suffered very seriously from dyspepsia. Knowing the high standard of Ayer's medicines, I decided to try what Ayer's Sarsaparilla could do for me. It has helped me wonderfully. I regard the Sarsaparilla as invaluable in such cases."—James R. Williams, Delana, Ill.

"About a year ago I was greatly afflicted with indigestion, and suffered from headache and terrible pains in my stomach. I consulted a physician, who prescribed various remedies, but all to no purpose. I became worse instead of better, and was compelled to give up work. A friend finally advised me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I purchased a bottle, took it according to directions, and soon had the satisfaction of knowing that my health was improving. After taking two bottles of this medicine, I was able to resume work. My appetite returned, my food digested well, I was free from headache, and to-day I am as well as ever."—P. Dubé, Holyoke, Mass.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists.

Price $1. Six bottles, $5. Worth $5 a bottle.

EVERY WATERPROOF COLLAR OR CUFF

BE UP TO THE MARK

THAT CAN BE RELIED ON

Not to Split!

Not to Discolor!

BEARS THIS MARK.

TRADE CELLULOID MARK.

NEEDS NO LAUNDERING. CAN BE WIPED CLEAN IN A MOMENT.

THE ONLY LINEN-LINED WATERPROOF COLLAR IN THE MARKET.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

10,000

Another ten thousand edition of the trac

KILLED, AND NO INQUEST.

This is a large 4-page tract at 30 cen per pound, 15 cents for half pound, and 10 cents for a third of a pound. It is an illustrated account of the death of Rev. J. W. Johnston, while being initiated by the officers of Huntington Lodge, W. Va.. in January of this year. Sent postpaid at the above price. Address,

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.
221 W. Madison St Chicago

THE BEST.

EVERITT'S MAN-WEIGHT

HOE, CULTIVATOR PLOW, ETC., SINGLE AND DOUBLE WHEEL.

Will Revolutionize Hand-Power Cultivation—Makes Keeping a Horse an Unnecessary Expense in Many Cases.

This new Invention is a Great Boon to all Cultivators of the Soil, and must be Classed with the Great Inventions of the Age, yet it is so simple that the natural question with every one is, "Why did I not think of that?" And so nicely does it fill a want existing with thousands of gardeners, nurserymen, seedmen, florists, and farmers, that after the first trial they invariably conclude to "never do without it."

All other Garden Tools, Seed Drills, Rollers, etc., can be attached and run with our propeller with many times the power and greater ease than by hand power.

SINGLE WHEEL cultivator, with attachments, price $6.00. W't, 15 lbs.

DOUBLE WHEEL, with attachments, $8.00. W't, 20 lbs.

With every Double Wheel Machine the extra parts are furnished necessary to convert it into the single wheel machine, without extra charge. Thus practically giving the two machines for the price of one.

This best of all hand cultivators to every worker for the Cynosure free as follows:

Two-wheel for 15 new subscribers. ($22.50.) Single-wheel for 12 new subscribers. ($18.00.)

Two-wheel machine, 1 renewal and one new subscriber for $8.50. Same for two new subscribers.

Single wheel and same for $7.00

Express or freight extra.

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots,

WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

—o—

It contains the portraits of

Washington.
John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.
James Madison, 4th President of the United States.
Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.
Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.
Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.
John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.
Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.
William Wirt, Attorney-General.
John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.
John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.
Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.
Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.

Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, postpaid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. 25cts each.

FARM NOTES.

An experienced dairyman says the highest profit goes with the heaviest feeding, up to the limit of safety to the cow. There is reason and philosophy in this.

The good farmer is known by his garden as well as by his farm. If it is spacious, well-kept, and full of the best varieties of vegetables and fruit for family use, it signifies that the owner of that farm is thrifty and a good provider for his household.

In all your planting don't neglect to sow or drill in a good patch of corn for fodder to be fed without husking at the time when pastures are short. The best corn for fodder is mammoth sweet corn. Don't be afraid of having too much fodder. It may come mighty handy and it pays any year. A couple of acres of good, rich ground, will produce a big amount of fodder.

Prof. Tanner says: "The formation of milk is intimately connected with the reproductive powers. The secretion of milk is dependent upon the activity of the mammary glands, and these are either under the direct influence of the breeding organs or else they sympathize very closely with them. Those animals which breed with the least difficulty yield the best supplies of milk and produce the most healthy and vigorous offspring."

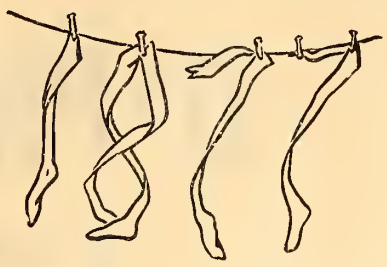
"I have planted several thousands of trees during the last ten years," says a nurseryman, "and have seldom been called upon to replace one that has died. The success is the result of a very simple but seldom failing precaution. When the tree is planted, a piece of wood not less than three inches wide and high enough to reach the lowest branches, should be driven into the ground just south of the tree. This keeps the sun off it during two-thirds of the day, and prevents the sap and bark being burned up before new roots have been formed. Any one adopting this plan will be certain to have success with his trees, no matter how poorly they look when first planted out."

DEEP AND SHALLOW CORN CULTURE.

After a thorough test of the different methods of cultivating corn, the Missouri Experiment Station gives the following average results on two plats for two years:

Deep cultivation—53.5 bushels per acre.
Shallow—66.9 bushels per acre.
Per cent of increase with shallow—25.2 bushels per acre.

Confirmatory of the above, the results of similar experiments at the Illinois station are given for an average of three plats for three years:



Shallow—81.8 bushels per acre.
Deep—74.1 bushels per acre.
Per cent increase with shallow—10.3 bushels per acre.

Shallow level culture protects the soil moisture better than any other system used. A weekly analysis of the soil of the different plats shows as an average for the season that the soil of the shallow tilled plats contained 11.6 per cent more moisture than the plats having deep tillage.

A trial of the effect of frequency or number of times of cultivation did not show any benefit in any case from tilling more than was necessary to kill the weeds and keep a thin layer of loose soil on the surface. The results of all experiments on this subject point to this conclusion.

RED AND ALSIKE CLOVERS.

These varieties, says Mrs. L. Harrison in the Prairie Farmer, are best sown together, as they help one another. The alsike, being a native of the cold climate of Sweden, does not winter-kill, and besides it acts as a mulch winter and spring to the red, and keeps the latter from heaving out. As the red clover shades the roots of the alsike, which grows close to the surface, it protects the latter from droughts. The best combination would be timothy, red clover, and alsike; the latter's stems are too fine to support the weight of its many branches, and the two former, being upright growers, serve to hold it up and prevent lodging. When mixed the usual quantity of timothy and red clover seed can be sown, and two pounds of alsike to an acre will be sufficient, as there are estimated to be 600,000 seeds in one pound of seed, or three times as many as there are in the red.

Out of Date

—washing and cleaning with soap and scrubbing. There was to much work in doing it—too much wear and tear when it was done. The birth of Pearline was the beginning of better things. It has lived long enough to prove that it can do no harm; it only needs a trial to prove that it is good.

Beware of imitations which are being peddled from door to door First quality goods do not require such desperate methods to sell them. PEARLINE sells on its merits, and is manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, New York.
203

Disloyal

SECRET OATHS

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians

CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

A Philosophical Family.

Amelia has pimples, and sores in the head,
From humors internal her nose has grown red;
She's a boil on her neck that is big as a bell,
But in other respects she is doing quite well.

And pa has dyspepsia, malaria and gout,
His hands with salt-rheum are all broken out;
He is prone to rheumatics that make his legs swell,
But in other respects he is doing quite well.

And ma has night-sweats and a troublesome cough,
That all of our doctors can't seem to drive off;
She wakes every night and coughs quite a spell,
But in other respects she is doing quite well.

There is nothing like philosophy to help one bear the ills of life, but in the case of this family what is most needed is a good supply of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It would cleanse Amelia's bad blood, cure pa's ailments, and check ma's cough. The "Golden Medical Discovery," by its action on the liver, cleanses the system of impurities. It cures humors, ulcers, boils, scrofula, salt-rheum, erysipelas, and all kinds of sores and swellings. The only guaranteed blood-purifier.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. ☞A liberal discount to dealers.

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

Masonic Salvation, as taught by its standard authors. This pamphlet is a compilation from standard Masonic works, in proof of the following proposition: Freemasonry claims to be a religion that saves men from all sin, and purifies them for heaven. 111 pages, price, postpaid, 20 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

BUSINESS.

NEW AND OLD.

The Cynosure will continue to supply all ts subscribers, new or old, who send $1.50 for the paper, with the HEALTH CALENDAR and ROPP'S COMMERCIAL CALCULATOR, as follows: The paper and the Calculator, leatherette bound, No. 1, (publisher's price 50 cents) for $1.70. Morocco bound (price $1.00) for $2.00.

The paper and Calendar (publisher's price 30 cents) for $1.65. The Calculator (No. 1.) or a Calendar free to every old subscriber sending $3.00 for renewal and a new subscriber.

The Calculator is a book of great value for every farmer, mechanic or business man.

The Calendar contains a temperance bill of fare for every day, and hundreds of good recipes. It hangs on the wall in constant sight.

NEW OFFERS.

The Cynosure and the Cosmopolitan Magazine (publisher's price $2.40) to new subscribers only $3.00. To others $3.25.

The Cynosure and Pres. C. A. Blanchard's new book "Educational Papers" for $1.70 to all subscribers.

NEWEST AND BEST.

Read the advertisement of the Manweight Cultivator on another page.

We will send the cultivator free to every one who will send us a club of 15 new subscribers at $1.50 each; or the single wheel for a club of 12 new names.

For $8.50 we will send the two-wheel cultivator and the Cynosure two years to new subscribers, or a year each to a new and an old. This gives two subscriptions for 50 cts. The single-wheel machine and the same subscriptions for $7.00. We don't pay transportation.

We would be glad to put 100 of these machines at work killing weeds and raising new subscriptions. It is an investment none will regret.

50,000

SUBSCRIBERS TO THE CYNOSURE would bring our reform to the POINT OF SUCCESS. LET US "KEEP EVERLASTINGLY AT IT."

BLACK BEAUTY is one of the most popular books of the day. It is said that about two million copies have been sold. Every boy and girl should read it, and learn to feel compassion for the dumb beasts that spend their lives in the service of man. We will give a copy free to every one of them who sends us a new subscriber.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

The measure known as the anti-truck bill, making it unlawful for any person, company, corporation, or association, to engage in or be interested in the keeping of a truck store, was signed by Governor Fifer of Illinois.

The Ohio Farmers' Union, in convention at Columbus, adopted a declaration of principles Wednesday, in which they declared themselves in favor of prohibition, and as opposed to the project of the government's loaning money at 2 per cent interest.

Burthe the principal, and in fact the only witness against the jury bribers in the case growing out of the Mafia trials in New Orleans, was arrested in East St. Louis, Ill., Thursday afternoon, and is now in jail in that city.

Negotiations have been completed by which the Indian tribes now occupying the Great Colville Reservation in Washington, are to cede to the government, 1,500,000 acres to be thrown open to settlement.

At Topeka, Kan., Wednesday, Mrs. W. A. Updegraff and her three children, aged from 15 months to 5 years, were burned to death in their home. It is thought that Mrs. Updegraff started the fire purposely.

FOREIGN.

To celebrate the visit of the Czarewitch to Siberia an imperial Russian decree has been issued authorizing the Siberian Governors to remit two-thirds of the sentences, and otherwise to ameliorate the condition of worthy convicts.

The British House of Commons, by a vote of 78 to 52, has rejected a proposal to legalize the election of women as members of the County Councils.

William Henry Smith introduced in the House of Commons a bill prepared by the government prohibiting British subjects from catching seals in Behring Sea for a certain period.

Mr. Gladstone is obliged to stay at Hawarden for another fortnight, his recent illness having left traces in his lungs and a bad cough.

The Czar and Czarina arrived at Moscow Friday. They drove to the kremlin through streets beautifully decorated with bunting, receiving enthusiastic greetings from dense crowds that lined the route.

Rumors that mines were discovered under the railway and under the route taken by the Czar are unconfirmed, but the most extreme precautions were taken. The police even removed the roof of a triumphal arch in their zeal to insure the safety of the Czar, and every window facing on the street was ordered closed while the Czar was passing.

The United States steamer Charleston, in port at Callao, reports having not seen the Itata. The chase will be resumed.

St Petersburg, May 29.—The police of Astrachan are vigorously expelling the Jewish inhabitants, giving them only a week's notice. Elsewhere similar tactics is resorted to with more or less rigor. It is estimated that 250,000 Jews will be driven within the pale or out of the country. Thirty thousand are under notice to quit Warsaw.

Judge Breckinridge, of St. Louis, of the Committee on Theological Seminaries, while in the midst of a speech before the Presbyterian General Assembly, at Detroit, Mich., Thursday afternoon, fell dead of heart disease.

One thousand Hebrews have already left the island of Corfu as a result of the recent persecution they have been subjected to by the Greek Christians of that place.

The military at Spandu, Prussia, have just forced 150 penniless Russian emigrants who were journeying to the coast with the intention of embarking for Brazil, to return to Russia.

PENSIONS OLD CLAIMS Settled Under New Law.
Soldiers, Widows, Parents, send for blank applications and information. PATRICK O'FARRELL Pension Agent, Washington, D. C.

TACOMA Lots and Acres from $50 to $50,000. Installment property. The annual increase in TACOMA realty values brings more money than stocks, bonds or mortgages. Non residents realize in 1 to 5 yrs 100 per cent. Test us. TACOMA INVESTMENT CO., Tacoma, Wash.

WALL PAPER SAMPLES SENT FREE of spring patterns with borders and ceilings to match. One half million rolls offered at wholesale prices. White blanks 4c to 6c, Gilts 8c to 35c. Embossed Gilts 10c to 50c. I will send you the most popular colorings, and guarantee to save you money. ALFRED PEATS, Wall Paper Merchant, 63-65 W. Washington-st. Chicago

DR. PRICE'S Cream Baking Powder.
Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.
A Pure Cream of Tartar Powder.
Superior to every other known.
Delicious Cake and Pastry, Light Flaky Biscuit, Griddle Cakes, Palatable and Wholesome.
No other baking powder does such work.

DONALD KENNEDY
Of Roxbury, Mass., says
Kennedy's Medical Discovery cures Horrid Old Sores, Deep Seated Ulcers of 40 years standing, Inward Tumors, and every disease of the skin, except Thunder Humor, and Cancer that has taken root. Price $1.50. Sold by every Druggist in the U. S. and Canada.

AGENTS WANTED both sexes. $25 to $50 per week EASILY MADE. SAMPLES FREE. Send for terms. W. C. Wilson, Kansas City, Mo.

Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.
LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

$3000 A YEAR! I undertake to briefly teach any fairly intelligent person of either sex, who can read and write, and who, after instruction, will work industriously, how to earn Three Thousand Dollars a Year in their own localities, wherever they live. I will also furnish the situation or employment, at which you can earn that amount. No money for me unless successful as above. Easily and quickly learned. I desire but one worker from each district or county. I have already taught and provided with employment a large number, who are making over $3000 a year each. It's NEW and SOLID. Full particulars FREE. Address at once, E. C. ALLEN, Box 420, Augusta, Maine.

DROPSY Treated free. Positively CURED with Vegetable Remedies. Have cured many thousand cases pronounced hopeless. From first dose symptoms rapidly disappear, and in ten days at least two-thirds of all symptoms are removed. BOOK of testimonials of miraculous cures sent FREE. TEN DAYS TREATMENT FURNISHED FREE by mail DR. H. H. GREEN & SONS, Specialists, Atlanta, Ga.

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St., N. Y.

WHEATON COLLEGE,
WHEATON, ILL.
A School for Men and Women.
COMMENCEMENT THURSDAY, JUNE 25TH, 1891.
Full College Courses, Preparatory School, Business School, Musical Conservatory and Art School. Fifteen Professors and Instructors.
Send for Catalogue.
CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.
EPPS'S COCOA
BREAKFAST.
"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—"Civil Service Gazette."
Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins, by Grocers, labelled thus:
JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London, England.

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY
ILLUSTRATED.
The complete illustrated ritual of the entir Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33d inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in
"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"
as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of
"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated"
Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

PASTOR KOENIGS TRADE MARK NERVE TONIC
A NATURAL REMEDY FOR
Epileptic Fits, Falling Sickness, Hysterics, St. Vitus Dance, Nervousness, Hypochondria, Melancholia, Inebrity, Sleeplessness, Dizziness, Brain and Spinal Weakness.
This medicine has direct action upon the nerve centers, allaying all irritabilities and increasing the flow and power of nerve fluid. It is perfectly harmless and leaves no unpleasant effects.
Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.
This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the
KOENIG MEDICINE CO.,
50 West Madison, cor. Clinton St., CHICAGO, ILL.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.
Price $1 per Bottle. 6 Bottles for $5.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIII., No. 39. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 11, 1891. WHOLE No. 1,102.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

Send all business letters relating to the paper to THE CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. Make all drafts and money orders payable to the Treasurer, W. I. PHILLIPS, 221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO. When possible make remittances by ex press money order. Currency by unregistered letter at sender's risk. When writing to change address on Cynosure list always give the former address.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.... 1
We Press Forward..... 8
The Power of Testimony 8
Frogs in the King's Bed-Chamber..... 8
Will the Lodges Ever Be Abolished?..... 8
The Lucerne (Catholic) Memorial..... 8
Startling Statements.... 8
Views of the Church Conferences..... 9
Personal Mention..... 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
The Secret Lodge System in its Relation to the Church of Christ.. 1
Christian Witnesses Against the Lodge..... 3
LITERATURE..... 6
SecretSocietiesCondemned 7
AGENTS AND LECTURERS.... 7
REFORM NEWS:
From the New England Agent..... 4
From the Field in Louisiana..... 5
From the Pacific Coast.. 5
Renouncing the Lodges. 5
Progress in Minnesota.. 5
CORRESPONDENCE:
The Reformed Presbyterian Synod..... 6
Pith and Point..... 6
THE N. C. A..... 7
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 4
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 9
THE HOME.....10
TEMPERANCE.....11
BIBLE LESSON.....12
RELIGIOUS NEWS.....12
NEWS OF THE WEEK.....13
HOME AND HEALTH.....14
FARM NOTES.....15
BUSINESS.....16

A peculiar phase of political chicanery was brought to light in Chicago last week. At the recent city election, some unknown man cast a ballot in the name of Geo. W. Baker, a registered voter of the Eighteenth Ward. On that occasion Mr. Baker was absent in Pennsylvania, and on his return discovered that his vote had been cast by proxy. So far as is known, the case is without precedent in the city annals of rascality.

All good people rejoice when the adherent of an evil system renounces and leaves it. He has done his duty and manifests a healthy self-respect. But when a clergyman finds himself opposing the orthodox doctrines of the church in which he has ministered faithfully for years, and has to be expelled from his ministry before he can be induced to leave it, he exhibits neither honesty, good sense nor independence of spirit.

On a recent Sunday Dr. H. W. Thomas told the members of the "People's church," in this city, that the miracles of the Old Testament are not worthy of belief. The doctor, as might have been expected when he left the orthodox church, is fast gravitating downward to the level of Robert G. Ingersoll. But Ingersoll, of the two, is the more manly in his erratic career, for he does not claim to preach Christianity. Dr. Thomas does—and fails.

Whatever other characteristics, good or bad, were found beneath the hat of "Old John Brown of Ossawatamie," he possessed the admirable trait of following his convictions and acting from principle. The more his character is studied in the light of receding years, the greater are the manifestations of his indomitable courage, his fidelity to the best interests of humanity, and the energy that would, under more favorable circumstances, have made his an immortal name in the list of the world's reformers—possibly the equal of rugged old John Knox. Whether his "soul goes marching on," as we are taught to understand, it is gratifying to know that a portion of his unswerving integrity is perpetuated in the course of one of his sons, an extensive grape-grower, who will not sell the product of his vines for wine-making purposes. We need a few more of these men of principle.

The cause of temperance has been greatly strengthened by the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court, that the original-package law of Iowa and other prohibition States is constitutional and valid. It is a great victory for the prohibitionists, and the effects of the decision upon the future work of all Temperance associations must be extremely beneficial in all parts of the country. Now let the fallacy of "high license" as a check to intemperance be thoroughly agitated and overthrown, and another grand triumph will have been achieved.

Much fault has been found by the secular press because the Presbyterian ministers in this city, last week, refused to let their discussion of secret societies be made public; but the ministers' meetings are not designed for public attendance, and their proceedings partake largely, as to privacy, of merely family affairs. In these meetings objectionable features in the work of the ministry are freely debated for the benefit of the clergy, for the purpose of reform, and ultimately for the advantage of their respective congregations. Had the discussion of Monday week been fully printed, the adherents of the lodge system would have been edified, no doubt, and so were those who heard it.

That it costs eight times as much to pay the charges on a Bible sent by mail as it does to forward a trashy paper-covered novel by the same medium is not creditable to the government of this great republic, especially as there are probably thousands of these worthless and vile books sent out for every copy of the Scriptures found in the mails. The authorities are sufficiently vigilant in other branches of postal matters, such as the interdiction of lottery and swindling correspondence passing through the mails; the reform might be advantageously extended into other departments. The freedom of the press secured by the Constitution of the United States is undoubtedly a great blessing, but the abuses to which it is liable should be officially and thoroughly restrained and corrected.

Friends of temperance will find much to interest them in the recent pamphlet report of Mary H. Hunt, superintendent for the United States and the World's W. C. T. U., which presents "A history of the first decade of the department of scientific temperance instruction in schools and colleges of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in three parts: 1. History of the first decade—1881–1891; 2. Biennial Report for the United States; 3. Work in other lands." The work performed in educating the people in the nature and effects of alcoholic beverages during the past ten years has reached most gratifying proportions. It is claimed that in 1888, under the temperance education laws of twenty-five States and ten Territories, 12,000,000 children enjoyed the benefits of this salutary system. Since then the work has been further greatly extended into other territories.

"The short and simple" story of the "original package" in Kansas is this: When the law went into effect, the agent at Topeka of a Kansas liquor house was arrested and proceeded against. He claimed that the law was unconstitutional, and that even if it was not, the Kansas law, having been enacted before the law of Congress, was null and void. He was sustained by the District Court, which argued that the Kansas law would have to be re-enacted before it would be valid. The sheriff took an appeal to the Supreme Court, and the decision of the lower court was reversed. The Supreme Court holds that the State already had the right to prohibit the liquor traffic, or whatever else might injure the health or morals of the people; and that the "original package" laws imply recognized that right, but did not create or bestow it. It doesn't take long to tell the story of this suit, but its outcome will echo down the ages as a triumph of prohibitory law.

THE SECRET LODGE SYSTEM IN ITS RELATION TO THE CHURCH OF CHRIST.

BY REV. EDWIN R. WORRELL.

[The following paper was read before the Meeting of Presbyterian Ministers, in this city, June 1, 1891.]

It is the aim of this paper to show that the church of Christ and the system of secret lodges, whose name might appropriately be "legion," for they are many, are opposed the one to the other; and that this antagonism is radical, so that true fellowship between them is impossible. It will be taken for granted that ministers of the Gospel need not to be told anything concerning the nature and objects of the Christian church. By their calling they are the fittest exponents of these. But that there should be unanimity of opinion concerning secret lodges is not to be expected. All kinds of opinions exist in the church with reference to membership in secret lodges, and none prevails, and action by the church on the question is as variant as these opinions. Here, there is opposition, there, indifference, and in a third quarter, encouragement. Several denominations esteem membership in the Masonic fraternity as sufficient cause for denying a professed Christian the right to partake of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. In another denomination, it is probable that four-fifths of the ministers have been initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry. This condition of things will not continue, for we are all to be "perfected together in the same mind and in the same judgment." (1 Cor. 1: 10.) The church is concerned with everything that concerns men. With her resides the court of final appeal in all questions of morals. It is not Liberty that enlightens the world, but Law, and that the law of God, which it is the business of the church to construe for the world under the terms of her constitution, the Bible. There is no progress in human affairs apart from such instruction; as it is written: "The isles shall wait for his law." We have seen the progress of thought concerning alcoholic beverages. Within the memory of our fathers the church gave practical endorsement to both traffic in and use of them. There was no law, and hence no transgression. But the church has spoken, and to-day the liquor dealer is outside the pale of the church; and in many places popular opinion demands of Christians what ecclesiastical law does not—total abstinence. And so concerning the system of secret socleties, the church will test them by careful investigation: support it if it be good, or bear testimony against it if it be evil. Nothing more, nothing less than this, is consistent with her duty.

The phrase "secret lodge system" may require a word in justification of its use. It is well known that numbers of secret orders prefix the word "independent" to their names, as, "Independent Order of Odd-fellows," "Independent Order of Good Templars," etc., and the claim is generally made by each that it has nothing to do with any of the others. It is true these orders have no organic connection. Each has its rules, object, and methods of work. Yet the word "system" may fairly be used, inasmuch as all these orders are related by such features as they possess in common, among which are religious ceremonies, secrecy, and the pledge of obedience exacted. Further, it is evident that while under certain circumstances there may be rivalry between them, there is no antagonism. A man may be a member of a dozen of them if the length of his purse allows, and a member of one is often a defender of all.

It is fair to ask and answer the question, "What do those who have never been initiated into secret lodges know concerning their nature?" There are several sources of information which are public, especially upon the subject of Freemasonry, which may be taken as a representative order. First, the literature of the order, such as lexicons, cyclopædias, rituals, grand-lodge reports, and works of fiction. These are printed for the good of the order, and may fairly be supposed to contain no misrepresentation of it. Public ceremonies conducted by the fraternity are another source of information—at Masonic funerals or when that order kindly lays the corner-stone of some public building or monument in which much interest centers—here again it is reasonable to suppose one can gather some correct information. These, with private statements or public addresses of adherents to the order, are all favorable, or intended to be so. Finally, there are the seceders from the order. These can add nothing to the information already possessed except to publish the secrets of the initiatory ceremonies. This has been thoroughly done in this country, by men of high character and for conscience's sake, and their statements have been abundantly corroborated. From time to time a new witness voluntarily appears in the public prints and delivers the same old testimony that has been public property since 1826, when Wm. Morgan was killed by the Freemasons for revealing their secret ceremonies. If it is safe to believe anything on evidence, the revelations of seceders from the Masonic orders are to be believed. And if it were true that the character and motive of seceders could be called in question, a comparison of their statements as to the nature of the secret ceremonies of the lodge, with the provisions of the printed rituals, monitors, etc., will furnish evidence all but tantamount to a confession from the accused of the truth of the charges made. Because of the accessibility and fullness of information concerning the Masonic order, and because of its representative character, the statements that follow bear more directly upon it than upon any other, though we believe that in a modified form they will apply to all.

Freemasonry teaches a religion that promises to save men. With the facts before us that the order has officers called prelates and priests; that it has, moreover, altars and prayers, we could say nothing less than that it is a religious order. That it makes this claim there is abundant proof. In a book entitled "The Mystic Tie," by Albert G. Mackey, it is stated: "By the exercise of the duties of Masonry the wise may increase their knowledge of God in all his best perfections, and thereby grow still more wise unto eternal salvation." On another page of the same work is found this statement: "Freemasonry is then also a religious institution; the very science which it inculcates is in itself the science of religion." In a "Lexicon of Freemasonry," by the same writer, under the word "Prayer," is this statement: "All the ceremonies of our order are prefaced and terminated with prayer, because Masonry is a religious institution." In a "Manual of the Lodge," by the same author, the candidate for initiation into the first degree of Masonry, in which he is called an "Entered Apprentice," is thus described: "Having been wandering amid the errors, and covered over with the pollutions of the outer and profane world, he comes inquiringly to our doors, seeking the new birth, and asking a withdrawal of the veil which conceals divine truth from his uninitiated sight."

Further on the statement is made: "Initiation is, as it were, a death to the world and a resurrection to a new life." The description is thus continued: "The world is left behind; the chains of error and ignorance which had previously restrained the candidate in moral and intellectual captivity are to be broken; the portal of the temple has been thrown widely open, and Masonry stands before the neophyte in all the glory of its form and beauty, to be fully revealed to him, however, only when the new birth has been completely accomplished."

Again in the Lexicon above referred to, under the heading "Immortality of the Soul," are these words: "The third or Master's degree leads to that great truth which the sublimest part of the heathen mysteries was intended to teach; and the faithful believer was assured of a future life and immortality beyond the grave."

Another fact of importance is that this religion is not for Christ, and is, therefore, against him. In Webb's Monitor, p. 285, article "Religion," we read: "So broad is the religion of Masonry, and so carefully are all sectarian tenets excluded from the system, that the Christian, the Jew, and the Mohammedan, in all their numberless sects and divisions, may and do harmoniously combine in its moral and intellectual work with the Buddhist, the Parsee, the Confucian, and the worshiper of Deity under every form." In keeping with this theory of harmony, the name of the Lord Jesus is left out of portions of the New Testament selected for use in Masonic rituals. Yet, further, the name of Christ is excluded by law from all prayers offered in Masonic lodges. Belief in the divine authority of the Bible is not required of Freemasons. To do this, says Chase, in his "Digest of Masonic Law," "is a serious innovation on the very body of Masonry." On the same point Mackey says, in his work on "Masonic Jurisprudence," "That some Masons may teach the divine authenticity of the Holy Scriptures, is true, because some Masons are Christians; but Masonry does nothing of the sort, but leaves every man to his own opinions upon that subject." Another writer says: "The position which Christian Masons assign to the Bible is a very natural, but not a necessary, one. It is thus to them as Christians but not as Masons." To show what the true position of the Bible is in the Masonic lodge, I quote from Macoy and Oliver's "Cyclopedia and Dictionary of Freemasonry:" "The Alcoran contains the revelations made to Mahommed, his doctrines and precepts. In a Masonic lodge of Mahommedans it should lay on the altar, as the Bible does in a lodge of Christions." And again, from the same authors: "It is a landmark that a 'Book of the Law' shall constitute an indispensable part of the furniture of every lodge. I say, advisedly, 'Book of the Law,' because it is not absolutely required that everywhere the Old and New Testaments shall be used. The 'Book of the Law' is that volume which, by the religion of the country, is believed to contain the revealed will of the Grand Architect of the Universe. * * * The landmark therefore, requires that a 'Book of the Law," a religious code of some kind, purporting to be an exemplar of the revealed will of God, shall form an essential part of the furniture of every lodge."

One other thing to be noted in an examination of the religion of lodges is that it has no Holy Spirit. That Divine person, who is the source of the peculiar power of the Christian church, whose abiding presence is the glory of the individual Christian, and the seal of his acceptance with God, has no recognition in the religion of secret lodges. Not by any lodge writer is the doctrine of the Holy Spirit taught. He is never appealed to in prayer nor song. This may be considered well by those who are aware of the sacredness of the subject, but it tends to show decisively that whatever may be the origin of lodge religion, it is not from our God, the Creator and Preserver of all things and Author of the Holy Scriptures.

This leads to the statement of another claim put forth by the teachers of Freemasonry. It is thus stated by Gen. Albert Pike, recently deceased, who was "Grand Commander of the Supreme Council, Sovereign Grand Inspectors-General:" "Though Masonry is identical with the ancient mysteries, it is so in this qualified sense, that it presents but an imperfect image of their brilliancy." Hear also the statement of Mr. Mackey, in his "Symbolism of Masonry," under the caption "Adonia:" "The mysteries of Adonis were principally celebrated in Phœnicia and Syria. They lasted for two days, and were commemorative of the death and restoration of Adonis. The ceremonies of the first day were funereal in their character, and consisted of the lamentations of the initiates for the death of Adonis, whose picture or image was carried in the procession. The second day was devoted to mirth and joy for the return of Adonis to life. In their spirit and mystical design these mysteries bore a very great resemblance to the third degree of Masonry, and they are quoted to show the striking analogy between the ancient and the modern initiations." Practically the same analogy is shown to exist between Freemasonry and paganism, or nature worship, by this same writer, under the words, "Aphanism," "Cabire," "Circumambulation," "Dionysius," or "Bacchus." Of the last he says: "Of all the ancient mysteries they are the most interesting to the Masonic student." The mention of the death and resurrection of Adonis and others, by these writers, in connection with the third or Master's degree, has reference to that part of the initiatory ceremonies in which the candidate, under the name of Hiram Abiff, is killed (i. e., the lodge brethren play they kill the candidate), buried, and raised again to life. This is one of many points at which there is a resemblance between paganism and Freemasonry. Let the modern institution be called identical, or analogous, with the ancient, it matters little—we are ready to admit the claim.

Thus far it has been proven that Freemasonry is a religious institution that promises salvation to its devotees. This salvation is secured without Christ, without Bible, without the Holy Spirit. This religion is historically connected, and in essence identical, with the mysteries of paganism. But some member of the lodge whom we know to be a good man denies one or all of these propositions. His difference is with his superiors in the lodge, those who taught him Masonry, and have made these statements, and not with those who quote them. But every one of them is abundantly supported by undisputed Masonic authority. The man who denies them may be sincere, but errs through ignorance.

That the teachers of Freemasonry do not intend that all who are initiated into the order shall arrive at a correct estimate of the character of their order, is thus boldly stated by Albert Pike: "The blue lodge degrees are but the outer court of the temple. Part of the symbols are there displayed to the initiate, but he is intentionally misled by false interpretations. It is not intended that he shall understand them, but it is intended that he shall imagine that he does understand them. Their true explanation is reserved for the Princes of Masonry." So it appears that within the lodge there is a people who do not know the law and are accursed by their "Princes," and the deluded initiate has an excuse for his misapprehensions.

Let no one brush aside the mass of testimony as to the un-Christian character of secret societies, because good men are members of them. Says Mr. Moody: "I do not see how any Christian, most of all a Christian minister, can go into these secret lodges with unbelievers." But it is, perhaps, as easy, as to see how good men could traffic in liquor or be habitual drinkers; or to see how good men could hold slaves. Many good men go into the lodge, but they do not all stay in. Rev. Henry R. Coleman, of Kentucky, in his Masonic Calendar for 1879, says of losses in lodge membership: "Here is the sum total of 100,000 Masons who have gone back upon their fraternal pledges within the little period of three years." Further statistics show that in the seven years, 1877 to 1884, 123,758 Master Masons left the order forever. We are not willing to let a man form his opinion of the church by selecting the weakest and most faulty representatives as examples of what the church can do for human nature. We would ask him to consider the character of the church itself, and admit that some church members are bad in spite of the perfections of the organization to which they belong. It is just as unreasonable to select good Masons and hold them up to view as warrants of the good character of the institution Masonry. These good Masons are good in spite of Masonry, not because of it.

Paganism is as easily discovered in the secret lodge system as it is in the Church of Rome, and that it is there is generally admitted. John Henry Newman, in speaking of holy water and some other elements of the Roman Catholic ritual, declares that originally they were "the very instruments and appendages of demon worship, though sanctified by adoption into the church." John Knox found a relic of sun-worship in the adoration of the host, and thus speaks of the circular shape of the wafer, which is always counted important: "If in making, the roundness of the ring be broken, then must another of his fellow cakes receive the honor to be made a god, and the crazed or cracked miserable cake that was once in hope to be made a god must be given to a baby to play withal." These man-invented religious ceremonies constitute the very essence of paganism, under whatever name or form they appear. It is the sole right of God to appoint, modify or abolish religious ceremonies, "even as Moses is warned of God, when he is about to make the tabernacle; for, 'see, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern that was shewed thee in the mount. (Heb. 8: 5.)'" Addition to that which is perfect renders it imperfect. The adoption of "appendages of demon worship" into the church does not sanctify the appendages, but does unsanctify the church, of which truth the Church of Rome is a standing witness.

There are two classes of worshipers in every false system of religion: those who know it is false, and yet adhere to because they fear the boycott; by carrying the mark of the beast in the hand they are enabled to buy and sell. The second class are those who sincerely believe it to be true; these have received the mark in the forehead. Even if this application of Scripture be counted fanciful, the classification will be found true. It is the testimony of missionaries from countries where the Roman Catholic church has long had absolute control, as Mexico and South America, that the more intelligent classes are permeated with infidel sentiments; that if there is on their part apparent submission to "mother church" it is hypocritical, while the poor and ignorant are pitifully deluded and as truly idolaters as any heathen. Can any such classification be made of adherents to the lodge? Setting aside those who scarcely know that their orders make any definite religious claims (and this number is not small), the remainder will be found to entertain the opinion that lodge religion is a farce, or that it is all sufficient for their needs. It would be hard to tell which state of mind to choose to place a young man in—whether that of having just discovered that a system of religion promising salvation was all a lie, and ready to believe the same of all, or whether he should have just accepted the lie. But if I were to mention one thing the most potent in keeping the young men of America out of the church (there are not more than five out of one hundred that are church members), I would say the Secret Lodge system.

Time prevents an examination of the un-Christian character of the lodge oaths that have been forbidden by law in some States of the Union; or to speak of the effect on the spirituality of men who take them; or to show how the lodge is robbing the church of both men and money.

In closing, a word may be permitted as to what should be done in view of these facts. Though the secret lodge system is a plant which our Heavenly Father has not planted, and hence must be rooted up, it is not our duty to root it up, for it is not "the end of the world" and we are not "the angels." Yet it will be remembered that in the parable the servants of Him who owned the field were on the watch, and before the harvest ripened they were able to discern between wheat and tares and spoke of it. We are not all reformers, but we are all witnesses. We are bound to speak the truth in love on this as on other things that affect the church of Christ. It will become a reproach to us if we are ignorant. We cannot say of secret lodges what Mr. Blaine is reported to have said of "trusts," that they are "largely private affairs." In 1871, while Chancellor of the University of New York, Dr. Howard Crosby said, in a discussion of secret societies in colleges, "We have no hesitation in writing secret societies among the quackeries of this earth, a part of the great system by which the mud-begotten try to pass themselves off as the Jove-born." And so, with other ministers, to have an opinion and to be willing to express it constitutes their duty as teachers in and defenders of the Christian church.

Elements of this secrecy are a species of robbing God. Mal 3: 8. A member of a secret order remarked to me that "they were doing more good for the needs and good of humanity in the order to which he belonged than his church." To this we replied, "Perhaps you are. If so, what are you doing? Building two rival institutions side by side. In the one, built by Christ, you meet to sing, pray and preach to the honor of Him by whose merits you expect to go to heaven. In the other you meet, support it with your time and means, and, although built by man, you say it is doing more in relieving the needy, doing more deeds of charity than the church. This is manifestly the grave sin of "robbing God." These deeds of charity,—visiting the sick, widows, and fatherless, relieving the needy,—is a work of the church, by which her light is to shine, "that men may see her good works." In the church, in the Gospel, we are provided, are "well furnished unto every good work." There is no need of our union with secret alliances to do good.—I. J. Rosenberger in Gospel Messenger.

CHRISTIAN WITNESSES AGAINST THE LODGE.

BY REV. WM. WISHART, D.D.

I most cordially concur in the sentiments expressed in the Call for the Conference, and rejoice to see so many names of enlightened and conscientious Christians annexed to the Call. Is not this a token of some awakening among the churches? Is there not some ground to hope that at no very distant day Christians generally in this land may be brought to bear a united testimony against the darkness and delusion of the lodge? It seems to me that if the churches and Christians generally could be brought to see the iniquitous character of the secret lodge system—as antagonistic to the religion of Jesus—as ensnaring to the consciences of Christian men and hazarding their eternal salvation—and as directly subversive of equal rights and republican institutions; and if as being thus enlightened they could be brought to perform their duty as witnesses for the truth of God, the kingdom of Satan would soon to a great extent be overthrown in this land, and the kingdom of Jesus Christ to the same extent be established. Now, as Christians, and especially as Christian ministers, we are called to be witnesses for God, (See Isa. 43: 12; Acts 1: 8; 20, 21.) And we are to remember that while it is the duty of a witness to declare the whole truth and nothing but the truth, he is to be most explicit and pointed in his testimony in regard to any part or point of truth that is more particularly in controversy and needs especially to be confirmed. What would you think of a witness, called to testify in a litigated case, if he would declare the truth in regard to all matters in which there is a professed agreement between the parties, but either misrepresent the facts, or withhold his testimony on the particular point in dispute? Would he not be regarded as a very unfaithful witness? In 2 Peter 1: 12, believers are commended for "being established in the present truth," where some, and we think not without good reason, suppose that the apostle has reference to such part or parts of divine truth as were then meeting with much opposition from the world. And so, in Rev. 3: 10, believers are commended for "holding fast the word of Christ's patience,"—which peculiar form of expression evidently refers to such part or parts of the great system of revealed truth as were then meeting with much opposition and required much suffering and patience on the part of the true friends of Christ in maintaining them. It is evident, then, that while the testimony of Christians should embrace the whole system of revealed truth, it should be most pointed and explicit in defense of such particular truths as are meeting with present opposition and against such errors and corruptions as at present prevail. But is it not true, that there is at present a direct conflict between the secret lodge system and the revealed will of Jesus Christ,—that there is a great controversy going on in this land between the darkness and delusion of the lodge and the light and truth of our holy religion? And are we not then called as Christian witnesses to bear a direct and explicit testimony against the darkness, idolatry, profanity, and despotism of the lodge? I believe that the secret lodge system is one of the great instrumentalities which the god of this world is at present employing, in order "to make war with the Lamb," and that by this instrumentality, perhaps more than any other, he is making effectual opposition to the mediatorial glory of Christ and the salvation of lost men. And let it be carefully observed that there is no place for a time-serving neutrality in this controversy. Those Christians who ignore this controversy, or who do not bear an explicit and positive testimony in behalf of the truth and honor of Christ, and in opposition to the folly and wickedness of the lodge, do in effect deny Christ. And what shall we say of the churches? Are they not, as well as individuals, to be witnesses for Christ? And may it not be possible that Christ is speaking to some of them as he did to the church of Pergamos: "But I have a few things against thee, because thou hast there them that hold the doctrine of Balaam, who taught Balak to cast a stumbling-block before the children of Israel, to eat things sacrificed unto idols and to commit fornication. So hast thou also them that hold the doctrine of the Nicolaitans, which thing I hate." Rev. 2: 14, 15. If we have been able to form a correct judgment in regard to the doctrine of Balaam and of the Nicolaitans, it was no worse—no more stumbling, seductive and pernicious than the doctrine of Masonry and Odd-fellowship. In fact, it was quite similar, inasmuch as it had a tendency to lead professing Christians into the sins of idolatry and uncleanness. Let churches, then, that still retain Masons, Odd-fellows and other secretists in their communion, carefully consider this language of our common Lord and Master: "He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches."

Monmouth, Ill.

WANTED.

WANTED: Men,
Not systems fit and wise,
Not faiths with rigid eyes,
Not wealth in mountain piles,
Not power with gracious smiles,
Not even the potent pen;
Wanted: Men.

Wanted: Deeds,
Not of words of winning note,
Not thoughts from life remote,
Not fond religious airs,
Not sweetly languid prayers,
Not love of cant and creeds;
Wanted: Deeds.

Men and Deeds,
Men that dare and do,
Not longings for the new,
Not pratings of the old;
Good life and action bold—
These the occasion needs;
Men and Deeds.

—Selected.

The net-work of secret orders is spreading with alarming rapidity throughout the land. Thousands of the ministers and members of the Christian church are in fellowship with the lodge system, and are being duped by its flattering inducements and delusive pretenses. Notwithstanding the principles of organized secrecy are antagonistic to the Christian church and a Christian republic, yet nearly all classes—ministers, doctors, lawyers, politicians, farmers, mechanics, tradesmen—are being swallowed up by this ravenous "beast." The rapid spread of farmers' secret orders, although not requiring such horrible, sacrilegious oaths as characterize some other orders, is contributing largely to the strength of the lodge system. There is cause for alarm. The highest interests of the church and of the nation are endangered. The pulpit, the press, and every true follower of Christ should join in an emphatic protest against the encroachments of this common enemy. It has reached gigantic proportions, and long and fierce will be its struggles to perpetuate and enlarge its influence. The Christian's duty is clear. The blessed Master who formed no secret alliances, but ever "spake openly to the world," has enjoined, through the voice of inspiration, that his followers "have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them."—Free Methodist.

The Odd-fellows are organizing "Juvenile Branch" lodges, admitting boys from eight to eighteen years of age. Boys are imitators. The high-sounding titles and mysterious mummery will charm them and delude them, we have no doubt. The tendency is evil. Boy lodges, boy brigades, boy regiments, and, with all these, boy rakes, criminals, and general toughs. Boys have no business in such places as secret societies. They should be left heart free and mind free, with no such secrets as lodge secrets to be kept from father or mother. Let them be boys while they may; they get "old" in many ways all too young.—Signs of the Times.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

A legislative farce—The Y. M. C. A.—The Roman Catholic question—Licensing a "haunted house"—A subservient legislature—The endowment orders.

Every little while our legislators, State and national, go through the farce of a secret session. How much is gained by it was illustrated the other day, when reporters were excluded from a Republican caucus on Beacon Hill, and every member thereof sworn to secrecy; and yet all the proceedings of this same oath-bound assembly were duly reported in the morning papers!

I fear the Young Men's Christian Association has outlived its usefulness, if the Chicopee Falls branch of it may be taken as a fair specimen. Being in want of funds, they recently gave the cantata of "Queen Esther;" but the pastor of the Baptist church, Rev. L. L. Hobbs, was brave enough to object to the play from his pulpit, and express his earnest hope that uone of his flock would take any part therein. The Y. M. C. A. called a meeting of the directors to discuss the matter, but they could see no harm in the decollete attire to be worn by the lady actors, and it was decided to go on with it; for, as a prominent member of the Board said, with almost amusing simplicity, "the cantata was certainly a religious one." In many places the Y. M. C. A., with its handsome halls, reading-room, and costly paraphernalia, is more like a social club of decidedly aristocratic tendcucies, than anything else. Will the Christian Endeavor Society follow in its wake? As yet it retains a fair proportion of the vim and enthusiasm with which it started, but such organizations do not seem to have within them any seed of perennial life. They live their day, be it longer or shorter; attain their period of ripeness, and then comes the next step—decay. The church alone seems to carry iu her bosom a quenchless firc from which all these outside bodies are cast off like meteors from the sun.

The State authorities of Massachusetts, a short time ago, gave $10,000 to the Carney hospital. As this is a Roman Catholic institution it has been proposed to bring a suit against them and thus settle the question whether such an appropriation to a sectarian object is valid. The School Board of New Haven recently appointed a committee of five, two of whom were Roman Catholic priests, to prepare an order of devotional exercises for the schools that would meet the general approval of both Protestants and Catholics. The Christian Secretary states that this committee drew up a ritual and unanimously approved it, in which the Virgin Mary is called the "Mother of God," and her prayers besought. This will always be the way when the Jesuit liou and the Protestant lamb seek to lie down together. But how will New Haven people like to have their children taught to pray to the Virgin Mary?—and if this is the proverbial "inch" that the devil, masked under the black robe of Jesuitism, demauds, where will our public schools be when he comes to demand the "ell?" Perhaps it is not generally kuown that Harvard, in 1750, received a bequest to provide for lectures to be given on four different subjects in rotation yearly, one of these subjects being "to expose the idolatry, errors and superstitions of Rome." It is now proposed that the lecture be discontinued as opposed to Harvard's avowed unsectarianism. One feels inclined to wonder if such scenes of drunken rowdyism among Harvard students as the papers lately reported, and this band of moral dilletanteism, are not, after all, perfectly consistent with each other.

The story is told that Boston once licensed a haunted house, but revoked the license when the mistake was discovered. Here is a hint for quite a thrilling temperance tale, if any one cares to work it up. Imagine the ghost of one slain by strong driuk, revisiting his former haunts; or the apparition of some woman murdered by her drunken husband, appearing at suitable times like "the white lady" in an old feudal castle. But is not every place where the hellish stuff is sold truly "a haunted house?"—haunted by the ghosts of wrecked lives; and echoing, had the rum-seller but ears keen enough to hear, with the groans of broken hearts that found no rest from the curse this side of the grave. Aud what worse Inferno than to be condemned to dwell forever among the spectral terrors evoked by a life given up to uurighteous gains; to be pursued by them forever through infinite mazes, a soul punished as it were with an eternal night-mare? Dante's most terrible images pale before such a doom.

Boston liquor-sellers, thanks to our subservient Legislature, can once more keep open bars, and are of course happy. The repealing of the law was thoroughly a Democratic measure, all but four out of ninety-two voting in its favor, and the Republicau members being nearly unanimous against it. The endowment orders are also happy, as our law-makers have shirked their duty, and referred the bill against them to the Legislature of '92 to settle. Like all compromise measures, it only puts the evil day a little farther off. While men, like ex-Gov. Ames, express their confidence in these schemes it will teud to delay for a whilc the bursting of the bubble, but burst it must eventually, and shatter all the rose-colored dreams of the simple-minded investors. The Boston police, I see, have lately arrested a petty swindler who used the Odd-fellows' grip as a means of securing funds from charitable brethren in the order. But how many big swindlers who have used the lodge grip for personal ends, are allowed to go scot free! Any one who has read Commissioner Merrill's sharp arraignment of the eudowment orders will see the force of this remark. Mr. Merrill sarcastically observes that "the Commonwealth, after granting its broad seals to the charters of these endowment orders, ought in fairness to make a profound and reverent apology to Mrs. Howe for destroying her pet institution of finance." Never has the inherent viciousness and dishonesty of the system becu more fully shown up than in this scathing document, which it would be well if all investors in these concerns would carefully read. The Lowell lodge of the order of Aviz recently held a very stormy meeting, hissing and hootiug the supreme officers who were present, and even threatening them with violence if they did not make arrangements to return the money paid for certificates withiu ten days. It is to be feared that such scenes, or even worse ones, will become of common occurrence, when the people awake to the folly of their misplaced confidence. ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

Christians need never fear to openly discuss the evils of secretism; which is not of God but of men. In all such discussions the honor of God is iuvolved, aud his children need only fearlessness of opinion and fraukness of expression, sustained by facts and trustworthy figures, to make their arguments convincing.

REFORM NEWS.

FROM THE FIELD IN LOUISIANA.

This Sabbath morning, May 10, at eight o'clock, I visited the prisoners in the county jail at Lake Charles, La. There were five colored and three white men behind the bars. About a dozen persons went along at the same time. The jailor talked pretty plainly to a colored man who was in the company with a bottle of whiskey for his friend inside. Yet when we got to the cells, the sheriff or turnkey took the whiskey and reached it through an aperture higher thau the short Negro whiskey-benefactor could reach. I was surprised that the officer should be accessory to feeding the fires that had before been kindled to the ruin of those men.

I soon had the attention of most of the prisoners, and read to them the Word of the Lord. Some of them drew near and listened as if glad to learn the truth, but one of them whirled away as if unwilling to hear. The whiskey man tried to drown the reading, until I turned upou him, saying: "You be still, sir, and let me read. These men inside don't have the chance as we do outside." Then he was silent, and I went ou readiug and commenting, and closed with singing and prayer

One of the prisoners, with a cheerful countenance, said to me, "Two of us have been converted since you was iu before." I had left them tracts and papers, and now furnished them another Testament, as they said there was but oue among them all. Then I went a mile and made a fifteen minutes' talk to a missiou Sunday-school at nine o'clock. From there to the African M. E. church and preached at eleven o'clock. Soon after this, as I was passing near the railroad depot, I saw a large company gathering to view the body of a mau who had been run over by the train and killed.

After a while I stepped a little to one side of the crowd, and with my Bible opened I began by saying: "Friends, this is a solemn warning to us. Will you let me engage your attention by presenting some religious truths?" Some gave good attention for half an hour while I read and preached the Word there. Yet, I was not willing to close without some Gospel temperance talk. It had been mentioned by some of the crowd, that this now dead man had been driven away from one of the saloons just before (a string of several saloons was near by). So, by the help of the Lord, I opened fire on their work of degradation aud death. With the dead man before me I had a good object lesson, from which to exhibit the terrible doings of strong drink. I think perhaps I had for hearers scores who seldom or never go into a church house. I was so glad to have the Holy Spirit help me to warn men and boys to avoid saloon habits as they would the bottomless pit of hell.

From this scene I went and preached to a colored congregation, at three o'clock. At night I was tired enough to sit and hear preaching by Dr. Hubbell, president of the college here at Lake Charles.

Three days later I gave a temperance lecture to Dr. Hubbell's congregation.

Three days later still, I lectured on reforms in the Gossport Baptist church by previous arrangement with the pastor, Elder Davis. Here I traced for a time the history of the anti-slavery reform, enlisting the attention of this colored congregation. Then I briefly sketched the temperance work in our country and the importance of Sabbath reform. Then I gave them, the best I could for twenty minutes, the importance of anti-lodge reformation. I was aware that I was treading on the tocs of some. But they stood it quite well, and most of them gave me a cordial greeting as we parted. In this house I had previously preached, and labored with penitents at the altar.

I have distributed faithfully the anti-lodge literature sent me from the C. C. office.

May 17, I preached twice at Oberlin, La. On the 23d and 24th I lectured and preached at Hickory Flats. A sort of leader among the people had joined the lodge. The next day we were riding together, and I asked him what he was going to do about his lodge, and he said he should have to leave it. I had faithfully shown the people, from the Bible standpoint, the character of the lodge system generally, aud of Masonry in particular. He said he was thankful for the information that I had given them.

C. POWERS.

FROM THE NEW ENGLAND AGENT.

WILLIMANTIC, Ct., May 30, 1891.

It is from no lack of interest that I have not written oftener of the progress in New England, but because I have been exceedingly busy and knew your space would be crowded with reports of anniversary proceedings interesting to all. I am here to spend Sabbath and (D. V.) make some calls and hold a parlor meeting at Bro. Conant's on Monday evcuing.

Bethany Missiou held an all-day service, at which I had an hour before leaving Boston to-day. This was the first mission to open a door for our work when I came to Boston in 1889, and it has never been closed; I have often spoken there and always without any restrictions, and our cause owes a debt of gratitude to the mauagement for privileges and sympathy so kindly bestowed.

Miss Richards and her assistant, Mrs. Lock, have arranged to enter an open door at the neighboring city of Lynn, and I am confident that they will be greatly missed from this room, where they have led so mauy to the Saviour, and sent them out with an inspiration for Christian work.

Miss Flagg keeps your readers informed on general New England topics, and I will give only a few among mauy tokens of God's favor upon the work. He is opening eyes and ears and hearts that were closed by prejudice, and loosening tongues that were silent for fear of persoual consequeuces, so that scarcely a day passes without accessions to the ranks of active helpers. A steady, persistent pressure of the truth is breaking the euemy's power to deceive, and the really Christian people are falling into line. Our Baptist brethren in the ministry are taking the lead, and others are coming in to fill the ranks. The indifferenee once shown is giving place to serious and prayerful eonsiderations.

Very much of the work has been done by personal eonferenee, and with small groups in private rooms, where the twos and the threes and the twenties or the thirties have gathered in His name. While this will continue (D. V.) there are tokens indicating an enlargement. Two meetings have been held in the First Reformed Presbyterian Church, which friends consider fairly successful. The first, which Miss Flagg reports, was very ably addressed by Bro. J. M. Foster, of Cincinnati, who has been doing a grand work during his stay of a month in the eity. Miss Flagg remained with us a few days, to help on the work and to gladden and cheer us by her presence. At our regular parlor meeting, on Monday evening, an aecount of God's ways in leading her, she was listened to with deep interest. Bro. A. A. Hoyt, evangelist and editor of the Independent Christian, presided, and opened the discussion with terse and appropriate remarks, the seeond evening; after which it fell to my lot to give the address. The Boston Herald gave a brief but fair report, and the resolution recommending weekly meetings was unanimously adopted, the first evening, in full. The Programme Committee of the Baptist ministers' meeting have invited me to present the subjeet at an early date, whieh I purpose to do on the first or seeond Monday in June, as may best accommodate Dr. Gordon, who is to oeeupy one of those mornings.

At the May anniversaries I have been not simply tolerated, but weleomed as an ally in the work for the Master.

Bro. A. M. Paull has already written of the meetings held in his truly Christian home at Riverside, closing his artiele with an exeellent suggestion, which I hope the New England friends especially, will read and heed. The kindness shown us by brother and sister Paull, by Bro. Orin Perry and the pastor and co-operating members of the chureh, will be greatly eherished among the pleasant memories of our work. Bro. Zephaniah Graves repeated former generous aets by sending to our home a box inseribed "Mah-hah-bone," whieh, while strengthening the outer man and eheering our hearts to be remembered, also diminished expenses. May the Lord reward him with the "hundred fold."

There has been little open opposition, but some very bitter sayings have been reported to us. A lady, to aeeommodate a personal friend, attended one of our home gatherings and beeame interested. What she heard she related to a Masonie friend. He replied by a most vehement denunciation of a man whom he had never met. The lady was convinced that the exposure was eorreet, and is now aetive in enlightening others. One feature of these regular meetings is that it gives an opportunity to "strike back," if any one desires; and when a Mason outside frets and blusters, he is kindly invited to attend and hear for himself and disprove any assertion that is false.

A reeent case promises to be of more than ordinary interest. Confering with Pastor ——, he said: "The chureh at ——, is in serious trouble over this question. I understand they have driven every pastor away who has faithfully preached against the lodge. The present pastor is looking for another field. I think he ought not to leave, and we must stand by him. You ought to go out there and show up the iniquitous system. If necessary, every secretist should be expelled, and the lodge should understand that it can't eontrol the ministry and church of Christ."

These are samples of the way in which God is carrying on the work in New England, "making the wrath of man to praise him."

We are endeavoring to obey the Master's instruetions, Mat. 10: 16 and Galatians 5: 25, 26; and to practice the strictest economy in temporalities consistent with health and a respeetable maintenanee of the work, we sometimes feel that if it should please the good Lord and the stewards of his bounties to give more means, we could do more and better work for the Master; but we know that he not only knoweth all things, but doeth all things well. The present year, thus far, has been an advance upon the past one, and we are eontent to trust the cause for support to the friends whom the Lord shall move to bestow as it has been bestowed, whether it be little or much. "There is no want to them that fear him" is not an obsolete promise, however mueh he may prove the faith and develop the patience of his people.

J. P. STODDARD.

FROM THE PACIFIC COAST.

CENTRALIA, Wash., June 1, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—After a tramp over railroad grades and country roads of about one hundred miles, and the delivery of four lectures, I returned to this place Saturday. I lectured here yesterday, in the Christian church, to a moderate-sized audienee and distributed traets at three churches. The seeret soeiety men, exeept one Odd-fellow, stood aloof from the leeture. At the Methodist church, both morning and evening, I was confronted by irate Freemasons, one of whom, Wileox by name, advised me to loeate. It was in the church, at night, after a son of Bishop Thoburn, of India, had lectured on mission work in India. This worshiper of both Baal and Christ ealled me to him, and asked me where I lived. I told him that my home was in San Francisco. He asked me whether I had a family, and I replied that I was a bachelor. He then said that I had better loeate. I told him that I doubted his eompetency to judge as to my duty; that I eonsidered myself competent to ehoose my own eourse, and intended to do so. His attitude and tone were menaeing, and the intention to bulldoze was evident. I told him I would go where I pleased and say what I pleased about Masonry, and that the order had a poor way to prevent it. "Yes," said he, "and you'll make a heap of friends by it." I said, "I value the friendship of no man nor set of men who require as the priee of their friendship that I shall surrender my right to free thought and free speech; I don't want the friendship of men who take the cut-throat oaths of Masonry and consider themselves bound by them. Masonry was eertainly devil-inspired, and the proof is that most Masons, when the idols are touched, give evidenee of being devil-possessed."

Young Thoburn had reeently joined the Odd-fellows, and the Eastern Star. He said he "went in to investigate them." He is an earnest young man, and it seems to me that after having been in India, where no real Christian stays in the lodge, and where he was ealled upon to antagonize the same religion in the heathen temples that they have here in the seeret lodges, he ought to have known better than to join these abominable fraternitics. There was, however, a marked difference between the way in whieh he treated me and the treatment accorded to me by Joselyn, the pastor of the church. Thoburn was very eordial, reeeived a copy of the Cynosure and traets gladly, and gave me a cordial invitation to visit his town and leeture. He is stationed at New Whateom.

The Methodist pastor, when approached, said: "We not only belong to the seeret orders, but defend them." This same fellow preaehed the anniversary sermon of the Odd-fellows, and seemed to think it a great honor to do so. I charged him with having two religions,—one Unitarian, the other Trinitarian—and two masters. He denied the allegation, and defied the allegator, and said that he had faithfully warned his I. O. O. F. brethren against making a religion of the order. He denied the exelusion of Christ from the lodge, and when I showed him how it was done, by the laws of Odd-fellowship, whieh lay down Christless prayers and a Christless burial service, and then interdict the use of any other, he flatly denied that anything of the kind was eontained in Grosh's Manual. I did not have the Manual with me, and the matter eould not be settled.

The Presbyterian pastor read the artiele in the Cynosure of March 12, "Presbyterianism Dry-Docked,"—and wanted to know who wrote it. He was not a member of any lodge, and professed to be ignorant of their baleful influence. He said he went straight ahead and preaehed Christ, and thought he did his duty. He did not want to announee an anti-sceresy meeting, or have anything to do with one.

The only chureh open to me there is the Christian, whieh is an exeellent building and well-located. But there were so many other things ahead of me, and I would have to wait so long, that I eoneluded to try the country.

Montesano is fifty miles west of Centralia, and is the eounty-seat of Chehalis Co. The place elaims two thousand population. There is more of the Southern element here than any plaee I have been in. This is the first part of Washington where I've seen pietures of Southern heroes, such as General Lee, on the walls. Masonry and Odd-fellowship are strong here; and I am told that a seceding Mason, who spoke against the order, when he trenehed upon their secrets, was threatened with assassination.

I spoke on Sabbath afternoon in a public hall in Elma, and preached in the M. E. church in the morning. The pastor is a young man from Arkansas, free from the lodge. But the leading members are Odd-fellows and Freemasons. I preaehed from Ephesians 2: 19–22, poured the hot-shot into secret societies and bombarded their temples of Baal. They seemed never to have heard anything of the kind before. I announced my lecture, and they came, and my audience was made almost entirely of secret society men. There were quite a number of women present. The attention was good and the demeanor respectful; but not one person present would take up a collection or give a cent.

M. H. NICHOLS.

RENOUNCING THE LODGES.

[The following verbatim copy of the renunciation of membership in St. Mark's Lodge, No. 105, A. F. & A. M., at Niagara Falls, Ont., is a manly, Christian document. On the same date Bro. Mattey also renounced further connection with Beaver Lodge, No. 6, I. O. O. F., Point St. Charles, Montreal, Quebec, in the same form and language:]

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., May 9, 1891.

TO THE SECRETARY AND MEMBERS OF ST. MARK'S LODGE No. 105, A. F. & A. M.:—Through the grace of God, and faith in the Lord Jesus, I have been led to the way of salvation, which is through Jesus Christ alone. I am therefore compelled to tender my renunciation of Freemasonry forever.

God has brought me out into the world as a witness of the light. Christ says: "No man when he hath lighted a candle putteth it in a seeret plaee, neither under a bushel, but on a eandlestick, that they which eome in may see the light." Again, "Also I say unto you, whosoever shall confess me before men, him shall the Son of man also confess before the angels of God; but he that denieth me before men shall be denied before the angels of God."

Oh, friends, this salvation of God is a blessed privilege; it is free to all; but while you are in bondage of soul God cannot deal with you. No man ean serve two masters. Now, friends, I beseech you, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, to deny yourself, take up your cross and follow Jesus Christ, because no man can go unto the Father but through Christ the Son.

With that love which is of God alone, I am enabled to love my neighbor as myself, and I do pray for you all daily at the throne of grace, believing that God will use me as an instrument in pointing you to the way of salvation.

I am yours, very respeetfully,

(Signed) JOSEPH W. MATTEY.

PROGRESS IN MINNESOTA.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Before leaving Wilmar on the 23d of May, one Mason, who seems to have inherited Masonry as a preeious legacy from his forefathers, boiled over with rage against the lecturer of the previous evening, declaring that he would rather be in hell with the Masons than in the soeiety of sueh men as I. And he pointed to Freemason preaehers for his justification. He was earnestly admonished to give up his Masonry by breaking the wicked obligations of a false oath —the only way in whieh he eould be true to God and country.

Leaving Wilmar at 4 P. M. for the train for New London, I fell into conversation with a Mason who expressed his desire to be a Christian, but said he realized the need of a change of heart before he eould make a profession of Christianity. He was found to be utterly ignorant of the real prineiples of Freemasonry, and was foreed to admit the scandalous lying and raseality of Masonic principles that he had imbibed in the lodge. But the diffieulty with him seemed to be as with all Freemasons, to retain the truth in his mind; he would slip over to the side of chureh pastors who are Freemasons, reminding one of what God has said: "Though they cry in mine ears with a loud voiee, yet will I not hear them." Ezek. 8: 18.

New London is a small village. Most of its inhabitants are Scandinavians. There is a small lake, with a dam constructed at one end, and thus is made to afford a water power for a rolling mill, which, with the wooded hills and valleys, makes a romantic or picturesque village site. Rev. L. G. Almen is the pastor of the Swedish Lutheran church, and is now on a month's mission in Manitoba. He has made a vigorous fight against the lodge, and none but the dissolute class patronize secret societies. "Men love darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil."

On Sabbath morning an attentive hearing by a large audience was given to the vicarious doctrine of the atonement, by the lecturer, which proved to be opportune on account of the anti-Lutheran or Waldenstromian doctrine that is troubling the churches. In the evening Secret Societies was the theme, and the venomous, lying Masonic beast was given the benefit of a fair exposition; which, possibly, had something to do with the remark of the son of the Odd-fellow who keeps the hotel, "They played you a mean trick this morning," referring to the fact that the stage driver to Atwater had gone without calling for the Anti-mason who had engaged a passage to Atwater in his stage. However, a pleasant ride across the country to Atwater in Rev. L. G. Almen's carriage was more than a compensation for the trick of the Odd-fellow, save the inconvenience of Rev. L. G. Almen.

At Atwater the Swedish Lutheran church, Rev. J. A. Frost, pastor, was well filled, and the Masonic and other secret lodges were well represented in the large audience. They behaved in a very becoming and decorous manner, while they were accused face to face with their self-conscious lying and false swearing spiritualized in the lodge. May God give them repentance and salvation from the lodge bondage of hell and the devil.

Next day, May 26, Rev. J. A. Frost took the writer in his buggy to Grove City. By some error the meeting was appointed for the afternoon instead of evening; hence the audience was much smaller than it would otherwise have been. Infidelity and lodgery have made serious havoc at this place. But God has a people there who love righteousness.

Litchfield was the next place visited. Here Rev. L. A. Hocanzon, the former pastor, attacked the secret empire and maintains a true and consistent position against the lodge, although Satan, by means of secretists in the church, has wrested the whole church from the denomination. The Masons, Odd-fellows, etc., were well represented in the congregation at the lecture, some of whom were put to shame, while some were made angry by the truth.

Accompanied by pastor Hocanzon and his charge I lectured at Dassel, where a large audience assembled at the evening lecture, and with the same results at Litchfield.

On Friday evening the last of the course was delivered at Cokato, where Rev. Mr. Lavine is the pastor. Here another large audience was assembled and welcomed the truth that stops the mouths of the adversaries.

At half-past 4 o'clock next morning (Saturday) pastor Lavine was left to settle with the Masons for the lecture. He will tell them that the lecturer told the truth. Trusting that God's blessing will rest upon what has been done these last ten days with these Lutheran churches and their kind people, we departed for St. Paul with a clear conscience and a light heart.

Thanks for the answered prayers of the readers of the Cynosure. W. FENTON.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THE REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN SYNOD.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 30, 1891.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The Covenanter church does not escape the general agitation which is so marked in many Christian bodies this year. The third day of her Synod has passed. The first was given to devotional exercises. God's Spirit was most earnestly invoked to guide throughout the deliberations of this court. But little routine business has yet been accomplished, except a preparation for the discussion and decision of vexed questions.

Memorials have been presented from the New York Presbytery, charging the Pittsburgh Presbytery with doing wrong in suspending seven of its ministers; and from the Pittsburgh Presbytery, charging the New York Presbytery with remissness in not doing the same thing with ministers under its jurisdiction attending the East End meeting. These memorials were referred to the Committee on Discipline, and, in accord with their report, laid on the table.

With the presentation for reference of these memorials there has been much discussion of the situation of the cases before the court. The question of who has been the instigator of the present trouble is perhaps the most important raised.

It has been charged that certain fathers in the court influenced the young suspended ministers to take the course they did, and that they are responsible for the present condition of things more than the young men; hence it was argued that they should be tried by the court first. One of the fathers referred to argued that the young men under sentence had been under the instruction of the professor bringing the charges, had been taught by him that they should vote on amendments, and that their action was caused by his teaching. It was voted to try the young men first. The time set for their hearing was Monday, June 1st. No one can, at this time, tell what the result will be; all doubtless hope for the best, as they view the best. As was to be expected, the feeling is very intense among those taking either side. Anyone desirous of hearing eloquent appeals to all that rouses men to action, could not fail of being gratified here. The old Scotch-Irish fire, wit and wisdom, are hurled like Jove's thunderbolts, and yet withal there is not the harshness one might expect under such excitement. I thought, while listening to some of the speeches, if these tremendous batteries were unitedly turned on the devil, he would immediately return home.

Whatever the result of this discussion may be, it must certainly have the effect of quickening to greater activity. May God bless the Covenanter church, and make her to continue, as in the past, to be one of the mighty agencies for carrying forward his truth. W. B. STODDARD.

PITH AND POINT.

A YEARLY CONTRIBUTOR.

Within a year past the Lord has lent me some of his money in the form of a soldier's pension. It all has to be tithed. I must remember our reform; and as Bro. C. A. Blanchard was anxious that we should state what amount we would contribute each year to the finances of the Association, therefore I authorize you to depend upon me for the sum of two dollars per year after this.

Now, a word about getting Cynosure subscribers. That kind of work is not my forte, though I should be happy to aid in that direction. It has occurred to me that it might be well to employ some good canvasser solely for that part of the work.—RUSSELL PARK, Denmark, Iowa.

GOOD TO SHOW THE WAY OF DUTY.

Good morning, brethren! I am in my 76th year and in feeble health; yet still enjoying life, thank the Lord! I have taken and read the Cynosure for many years. I think it is the best paper to show a man his duty to God and man that I ever read. May the blessing of my Heavenly Father be on your work.—J. H. CLARK, North's Mills, Pa.

CORRECTION.

Rev. A. W. Parry wishes to make a slight correction in his letter published May 28. The resolutions should read: 1. "Never to join any organization requiring an oath or affirmation as a pledge of secrecy."

The statement of principles which he prefers is: 1. Sworn secrecy is anti-Christian. 2. Anti-American. 3. "It is selfish in its benevolence; SOME have oaths that are disloyal; ALL its oaths are extrajudicial, and SOME are criminal in their penalties."

A SUGGESTION FOR A GREAT PAPER.

I endorse the suggestion of our California correspondent, N. R. I., in the 19th of Feb. number of the Cynosure, to have one grand paper, including all the reforms of the day, and especially Woman Suffrage. Miss Frances Willard has said that "Prohibition was the key to all other reforms," but I would put it that Woman Suffrage was the key to Prohibition and every other Christian reform; and I have a valuable quarter-section of farm land to put into such an enterprise, and would also help to sustain a lecturer on this field, and would go twenty miles to hear one speak.—S. SIMPSON, Garfield, Washington.

REMEMBERS BATAVIA.

I am hoping and praying some may get their eyes opened to see the evil of these secret abominations which are so demoralizing all the churches and our whole land. I am now in my seventy-ninth year; did not live far from Batavia when the Masonic lodge murdered Morgan. I have never given it any quarter since. It is the old cockatrice's egg that has hatched out the whole viperous brood that infests our land. I am no friend to secrecy in any shape or form, not even the Good Templars; I will not give it any quarter. I believe in a religion that is so pure and clean it will bear the daylight in all its doings.—MARY BARNEY, Mt. Morris, N. Y.

THE PAPER IN THE READING ROOM.

I wish to thank you for the extra numbers sent me, which I handed my friends; also for your supplying the college reading-room. How much good has been done I cannot say, but that some has been, there is no doubt. When once I get settled on a field of work, which I hope will be soon, I have a small amount for the college fund.—HENRY C. FOSTER.

A PENNY DAILY.

"The Lord loveth a cheerful giver." I am one of the poor men who are appealed to in the annual report of the Directors, in the Cynosure of May 21, and by the Lord's help I will engage to pay a penny a day, say three dollars for the coming year, and will send it at intervals to assist in the free distribution of the Cynosure and tracts. I want the Cynosure to speak for me. God prosper it and keep it Christ-like. Keep up courage, brethren.—TRY.

A TRUMPET NOTE IN THE CONFERENCE.

"My heart's desire and prayer to God is," that the Conference may be a grand success, and that it will send forth such a blast that men, everywhere throughout this land, will be aroused to the folly, the sin, and the danger of secret societies. These are institutions of darkness, and are a menace to the liberties and happiness of a free enlightened people,—therefore should be opposed by every Christian man and woman. Here is my mottoe: "Down with the lodge, and let Christ have the preeminence in all things."—GEORGE BAKER, Cong'l Minister, Kalama, Wash.

LORD, HASTEN THE DAY.

The time of the Cynosure is about expired. I don't want it to stop. It has the right ring, and is true on the Bible line. If there is any sin I abhor it is lodgery, secret organizations. May the Lord hasten the day when they will be driven from existence.—ROBERT MAY, Glidden, Iowa.

SMALL, BUT NOT TO BE DESPISED.

The paper is one of my choicest earthly blessings to guide me in this day of delusions, and I may add, counterfeits, of every kind—JACOB MARKLE.

I consider yours the best reform paper I have ever read. May God bless its teachings to many souls. I believe it declares the truth and therefore will stand any test.—ADDIE WILLIAMS, Albany, Oregon.

Having spent the winter with friends in Nebraska, I found a man out there who is with us in opposition to secret orders, and was pleased with the Cynosure; and I also believe the paper will convert him and his two sons to the Prohibition party.

Our land is in great darkness, but He who has promised will work his "strange work" in his appointed time; a a "perfect work" Paul calls it. That shall be the end of the world in that great spiritual sense, a new heaven and new earth.—IRA TODD.

I am very much pleased with the paper. I read it, and then present it to the Freemasons of our town. On the principle that the truth must win, I am sure it will do good. I wish you the highest success in your noble work.—(Rev.) J. L. WEAVER, Burgettstown, Pa.

I would not like to be without the Cynosure; am always glad for it when it arrives. I first subscribed for it in York, Pa., 1889, at the General Conference, when the Liberals left the United Brethren church. W. B. Stoddard induced me to subscribe. He was present and defended the Radical party in their action of right like a man.—J. P. HOFFMAN.

LITERATURE.

ALDEN'S MANIFOLD CYCLOPEDIA of Knowledge and Language, with Illustrations. Vol. XXVII., Revised Edition. From O'Fallon to Palmiped. Published by John B. Alden, New York, 1891.

Each successive volume of this serial work bears ample testimony to its thoroughness and value, which is due to its freshness and intelligent condensation, its variety of subjects, trustworthiness of statement, and convenience of size and form. Add to these its moderate price, and the secret of its popularity is manifest. Gradually the developments of the census of 1890 are being incorporated, increasing its importance as a statistical work.

One of the principal subjects of the June Century and a timely one in view of the current commencements, is the education of women. There is an illustrated article entitled "Women at an English University," in which Newnham College is described, with pictures of the college and portraits of Miss Clough and Miss Gladstone. The paper is by Eleanor Field, and one by Catherine Baldwin follows on the "Health of Women Students." In the Open Letters "Female Education in Germany" is discussed by Countess von Krockow. The frontispiece is a portrait of George Mifflin Dallas, formerly Vice-president of the United States. This portrait accompanies the second and last installment of the papers extracted from Mr. Dallas's journal, written while he was American Minister to the Court of the Czar Nicholas I. In the fourth installment of the Talleyrand Memoirs, Talleyrand replies directly to his accusers, and denies categorically and with emphasis that he had anything to do with the execution of the Duc d'Enghien, or with an alleged plot to assassinate Napoleon. Gen. Sherman's last speech, delivered at the Press Club dinner to Henry M. Stanley, Jan. 31, is for the first time printed in this number of the Century. This is accompanied by a picture from St. Gauden's bust from life of Sherman, and by a poem by R. W. Gilder. The new paper in the California series is by Dr. Charles B. Gillispie of Freeport, Pennsylvania, and is substantially a transcript from his California journal of 1849 and '50, being a description of a Sunday in Coloma in which the rougher life of the mines is most prominent—the auctioneering, racing, gambling, thimble-rigging, etc. The essay of most importance is another of the Present-Day Papers contributed by the Sociological Group. It is written by Prof. Sloane, of Princeton, and is on the subject of "Pensions and Socialism."

The Cosmopolitan for June is an unusually attractive number. The opening article on Japanese women, beside giving an intelligent view of the female habits, intelligence and skill of Japan, has numerous portraits of these ladies, some of them very attractive. Thomas B. Connery, former editor of the N. Y. Herald, writes in a very entertaining way of Edison, the marvelous inventor. and Stanley, the intrepid traveler. Excellent portraits of these two heroes and of a greater one, David Livingstone, adorn the article. Another biography of an equally entertaining character is that of Gustav Dore. Numerous views of his paintings are presented. "A Model Municipality" is an account of the internal management of a great city, from which our extravagant American cities are asked to learn wisdom. "The Needs of the Farmer" is a prize essay, good and sound as to advice, but Dan Beard's pencil has more originality than the writer's pen. Ex-minister S. G. W. Benjamin writes the true story of Noor Mahal, one of Moore's heroines in Lalla Rookh.

John Burrough's "Talk about Wild Flowers" in the June St. Nicholas will show botanists how to make their science "understanded of the people," and may also suggest to them a few particulars upon which fuller information is desirable. Josephine Pollard tells, in "A Free Circus," all about the baby elephant which lately walked upstairs and insisted upon sharing the apartments of a quiet colored family in New York city. In "A City Playground" Frank M. Chapman describes the sports of city children in streets, and makes a strong appeal for space, light, and air for the young city dwellers, who will one day be the strength or weakness of the nation.

Talking of patent medicines—you know the old prejudice. And the doctors—some of them are between you and us. They would like you to think that what's cured thousands won't cure you. You'd believe in patent medicines if they didn't profess to cure everything—and so, between the experiments of doctors, and the experiments of patent medicines that are sold only because there's money in the "stuff," you lose faith in everything.

And, you can't always tell the prescription that cures by what you read in the papers. So, perhaps there is no better way to sell a remedy, than to tell the truth about it, and take the risk of its doing just what it professes to do.

That's what the World's Dispensary Medical Association, of Buffalo, N. Y., does with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

If they don't do what their makers say they'll do—you get your money back.

SECRET SOCIETIES CONDEMNED

BY EMINENT EDUCATORS.

PRESIDENT F. H. M. HENDERSON, Bowdon College, Ga.:—I regard all secret societies as extremely liable to be perverted.

PRESIDENT NOAH PORTER, Yale College:—That there are serious evils connected with them cannot be questioned; that they accomplish some good is equally clear.

PRESIDENT HITCHCOCK, Amherst College:—These, at different periods, have been fruitful sources of excitement, jealousy, and heart-burning among the students.

JOSEPH MOORE, President Earlham College:—The fact that Freemasonry often thwarts every effort to enforce the law against an offender who is of the fraternity, shows it to be an obstacle to moral and civil progress.

HOWARD CROSBY, D. D., Chancellor University, New York:—Thirty years ago I was a member of a college secret society, and while I had upright fellow-members, and we encouraged literary culture, I found the association was chiefly a temptation to vice.

PROF. J. R. JACQUES, Illinois Wesleyan University:—Among college students, at an age when most susceptible, secret societies tend to breed that secretive disposition which is the very opposite of the truly candid, generous, and magnanimous character.

DR BEYSCHLAG, Professor in the University of Halle:—Never entertain the idea to join the lodge for popularity's sake. It is utterly degrading to imagine pastors, men who have to deal with Christianity, the most universal and open thing in the world, wrapped up in the mummeries of Freemasonry.

PRES. J. BLANCHARD:—There have been civil and ecclesiastical pests ever since there was a government and religion; and Freemasonry is one of those pests. The Cains of humanity have rejected Christ and worshiped nature, and Nimrods have denied justice and practiced oppression, But both are combined in the lodge.

PROF. J. R. W. SLOANE, D. D., Reformed Presbyterian Theological Seminary:—But my strongest opposition to Masonry is because of its rivalry with religion. It steps in before the church, and is a false, an idolatrous religion, a religion without a Saviour and, therefore, a delusion and a snare to all who engage in it, or rest their hope upon it.

PROF. BURT G. WILDER, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.:—I am willing to hazard my position....upon the truth of the proposition that secret societies are unknown in heaven, but that they form a prominent and essential feature of life in the other locality. Light versus darkness; openness versus mystery; mutual confidence versus suspicion and distrust.

PROF. S. C. BARTLETT, D. D., Chicago Theological Seminary:—There are certain other wide spread organizations, such as Freemasonry, which, we suppose, are in their nature hostile to good citizenship and true religion, because they exact initiatory oaths of blind compliance and concealment, incompatible with the claims of equal justice toward man and a good conscience toward God.

PROF. J. G. CARSON, D. D., Xenia, Ohio:—These associations are inconsistent with the genius of Christianity, because the secrecy which they affect, and to which they bind their members by promise or oath, is unnecessary and so unwarrantable, dangerous, and ensnaring to the conscience, and, therefore, utterly opposed to that openness and publicity which Christ enjoins on his disciples both by example and precept.

PRESIDENT C. G. FINNEY, of Oberlin, 1868:—We have, then, the implied testimony of Freemasons themselves, that the Christian church ought to have no fellowship with Freemasonry as thus revealed, and that those who adhere intelligently and determinedly to such an institution have no right to be in the Christian church. In our judgment we are forced to the same conclusion, we cannot escape from it, we wish it were otherwise, we therefore sorrowfully but solemnly pronounce this judgment."

ANTI-SECRECY TRACTS.

The following numbers are in stock, and can be had at the wholesale price of 20 cents per pound:

1. Historical Sketch—National Christian Association.
3. Address to American Pastors.
4. Freemasonry in the Family.
5. President C. G. Finney on the duty of Christians towards the Lodge.
7. To the Boys who Hope to be Men.
8. Modern Heathenism.
9. Ministers at Rival Altars.
12. Alexander Campbell's Estimate of the Lodge.
15. Secrecy and Sin.
16. Selling Dead Horses.
17. History of Masonry.
18. Despotic Character of Freemasonry.
19. Freemasonry, a Christ-excluding Religion.
22. Extracts from Masonic Oaths and Penalties as Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.
28. Nathaniel Colver, D.D., on Masonry.
33. Hon. Wm. H. Seward on Secret Societies.
37. Why a Christian should not be a Freemason (German).
39. Should Freemasons be Admitted to Christian Fellowship?
44. D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.
45. Ought a Seceding Mason to Keep his Lodge Oath?
49. John Quincy Adams on the duty of American Voters.

Chapters in American Politics.
Masonry vs. Prohibition.
Decline of the G. A. R.
Christianity and Odd-fellowship. Part 1, 4 pages; part 2, 4 pages.

The above are the only tracts in stock in large quantities. There are a few of several other numbers. Remember that these are being retailed at wholesale prices—20 cents per pound. Keep a package of Anti-masonic tracts for use in letters.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

AGENTS AND LECTURERS.

NEW ENGLAND DEPARTMENT.—Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent, 218 Columbus Ave., Hotel Howland, Boston.

WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT.—W. B. Stoddard, Agent, No. 215, 4½ St., Washington, D. C.

WESTERN DEPARTMENT.—Rev. C. F. Hawley, Wheaton, Du Page Co., Ill.

PACIFIC DEPARTMENT.—Rev. M. H. Nichols, 520 Kearney St., San Francisco, Cal.

COLLEGE AGENT, Rev. S. F. Porter Cynosure office.

STATE AGENTS.

Minnesota, E. Hanson, Minneapolis.
New Hampshire, Eld. S. C. Kimbal New Market.
Pennsylvania, Rev. J. T. Michael, 2942 Westmont Street, Philadelphia.
Alabama, Rev. G. M. Elliott, Selma.

OTHER LECTURERS.

C. A. Blanchard, Wheaton, Ill.
Rev. H. H. Hinman, Berea, Ky
Nathan Callender Montdale Pa.
J. H. Timmons, Tarentum, Pa
T. B. McCormick, Princeton, Ind.
E. Johnson, Dayton, Ind.
H. A. Day, Brighton, Mich.
J. M. Bishop, Chambersburg, Pa.
A. Mayn, Bloomington, Ind.
J. B. Cressinger, Sullivan, O.
W. M. Love, Osceola, Mo.
J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo.
Wm. Fenton, St. Paul, Minn.
J. S. Perry, Thompson, Conn.
Rev. E. Mathews, Long Island City, N. Y.
E. Barnetson, Haskinville, N. Y.
Wm. R. Roach, Pickering, Ont.
D. A. Richards, Brighton, Mich.
A. W. Parry, Annawan, Ill.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern. Table of Contents: The Antiquity of Secret Societies, The Life of Julian, The Eleusinian Mysteries, The Origin of Masonry, Was Washington a Mason? Fillmore and Webster's Deference to Masonry, A Brief Outline of the Progress of Masonry in the United States, The Tammany Ring, Masonic Benevolence, The Uses of Masonry, An Illustration, The Conclusion. 50cts each.

THE N. C. A. BUILDING
(The gift of Philo Carpenter.)
AND OFFICE OF
The Christian Cynosure,
221 WEST MADISON STREET, CHICAGO

The National Christian Association

PRESIDENT—Rev. Alexander Thomson, Bartlett, Ill.

VICE PRESIDENT—Elder J. L. Barlow, Richmond, Ill.

COR. SEC'Y and TREASURER—W. I. Phillips, 221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

REC. SECRETARY—Mrs. E. A. Cook, Chicago.

DIRECTORS—T. B. Arnold, C. A. Blanchard, E. A. Cook, J. M. Hitchcock, G. R. Milton, J. P. Richards, Alexander Thomson, E. Whipple, E. R. Worrell, Edgar Wylie.

The object of this Association is:
"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christ from being depraved, to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform.

STATE AUXILIARY ASSOCIATIONS

NEW ENGLAND.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic Conn.; Sec'y, Miss E. E. Flagg, Wellesley, Mass.; Treas., Z. Graves Harris, Mass.

CONNECTICUT.—Pres., J. A. Conant, Willimantic; Sec., David J. Ellsworth, Windsor; Treas., C. T. Collins, Windsor.

ILLINOIS—Pres., Rev. G. R. Milton, Elgin; Sec., A. H. Hiatt, Jr., Wheaton; Treas., Ezra A. Cook, Chicago.

IOWA.—Pres., S. A. Gilley, Marengo; Sec., T. P. Robb, Linton; Treas., W. L. Enlow, Birmingham.

KANSAS.—Pres., J. S. T. Milligan, Denison; Sec., S. Hart, Lecompton; Treas., J. A. Torrence, Denison.

MAINE.—Pres., Isaac Jackson, Harrison; Sec., I. D. Haines, Dexter; Treas., H. W. Goddard, West Sidney.

MASSACHUSETTS.—Pres., S. A. Pratt; Worcester.

MICHIGAN.—Pres., D. A. Richards, Brighton; Sec., H. A. Day, Brighton; Treas. Geo. Swanson, Jr., Bedford.

MINNESOTA.—Pres., S. B. Sjoblom, Fergus Falls; Cor. Sec., Wm. Fenton, St. Paul; Rec. Sec., Mrs. M. F. Morrill, St. Charles; Treas., Wm. H. Morrill, St. Charles.

MISSOURI.—Pres., B. F. Miller, Eagleville; Treas., William Beauchamp, Avalon; Cor. Sec., A. D. Thomas, Avalon.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.—Pres., Simon Rowe, Guilford; Sec., S. C. Kimball, New Market; Treas., Isaac Hyatt Gilford Village.

NEW YORK.—Pres., Prof. A. R. Dodd Houghton; Sec., Rev. W. A. Hazlett, Belmont; Treas., P. D. Miller, Newfane.

OHIO.—Pres., J. W. Martin, Mt. Parry; Rec. Sec., A. T. Vestal, Senecaville; Cor Sec. and Treas., E. Thomson, Senecaville

PENNSYLVANIA.—Pres., Nathan Callender, Montdale; Cor. Sec., E. J. Chalfant York; Treas., J. C. Young, Custer City.

WISCONSIN—Pres., J. W. Wood Baraboo; Sec., W. W. Ames, Menomonie.

REVISED ODD-FELLOWSHIP ILLUSTRATED.

The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies') degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by President J. Blanchard. The ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; per dozen, $8.00. Paper cover 50 cents; per dozen $4.00.

All orders promptly filled by the
NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison Street, Chicago.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 11, 1891.

WE PRESS FORWARD.

As our readers already know, President Blanchard, who has been our leading writer since 1868, has declined the request of the Association that he continue as responsible editor. He has been requested to act as corresponding editor, and we hope that we may be able regularly to receive wisdom, strength and inspiration from his contributions. It is probably true that without his zeal and energy the Cynosure would never have existed, the work which it has performed never have been done.

It is also a cause of regret that our Mr. Kellogg, whose tireless faithfulness has been so considerable an element in our labors for more than twenty years, must for a time be absent from the office. The health of Mrs. Kellogg makes a change of climate imperative, and he plans an immediate removal to the Pacific coast, to be absent for a year. We trust that at its expiration he may return and resume his labors with us. Meanwhile a committee of the Board of Directors will have charge of the paper, and will, so far as they are able, carry forward the great cause which it represents.

We hold it as indisputable truth that secret societies are contrary to the example of Jesus Christ; that members of such orders, who are consistent, necessarily violate his plain commands; that almost all modern secret orders reject Jesus Christ as the Saviour of men; that Freemasonry not only does this, but also mutilates the Word of God; that these orders are keeping thousands of men out of the churches of our Lord Jesus Christ; that they interfere with the administration of civil law; that they protect criminals, and thus encourage crime; that all Christians should abstain from fellowship with such orders, and that all patriots should also oppose them.

We believe that many worthy men are deceived by the avowed objects of these orders and do not understand their relation to the home, the church, and the state. We believe that we may with perfect confidence labor for the enlightening of such brethren and expect them to become our co-workers in witnessing to the truth of the Gospel and the deadly character of these substitutes and rivals thereof. We believe that the time will come when the truths above stated, now often doubted or denied, will be universally accepted. We believe that the kingdom of God is to come, and that his will is to be done on earth as now in heaven. And we cordially invite all those who are of like faith with us to a share in the toil and triumph which, under God, are to attend our labors.

THE POWER OF TESTIMONY.

At the Synod of the Reformed Presbyterian Church, in session in Pittsburgh, and at the General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church in Princeton, Indiana, reports have been presented, declaring for substance, that secret societies are evil, and that Christians should have no fellowship with them. Similar action was taken by the Conference of Christians in Chicago, and has been had in the past by sessions, associations, presbyteries, conferences, and conventions. At the same time these lodges continue to exist, and, under various forms, increase.

This latter fact leads many to say: "Of what use is all your agitation?" Men who walk by sight are disheartened when results are not speedy and visible. But we who walk by faith in God's Word understand that greatest results are wrought out by the forces which are silent and unperceived. The Revelator (Rev. 12: 10, 11) heard triumphant voices exclaiming, "Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ: for the accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accused them before our God day and night." Explaining this victory over the enemies of God and his people, the song continues: "And they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb and by the word of their testimony, and they loved not their lives unto the death."

History utters but one voice respecting the power of witness to the truth. It is God's appointment for his people. Not by might, nor by power, but by God's Spirit, are walls of Babylon beaten down, or walls of Jerusalem builded up. God honors his people's testimony to the truth. The sword they are not to take. Their weapons are not carnal, but spiritual, yet are they mighty through God to pull down strongholds. Let us be more faithful and persevering in our witness against these paganisms in Christian lands. They are of their father, the devil. They are destroying the souls of men. In due time they will perish. God will smite them and they will fall as slavery has, forever. Meantime, every sermon, every private exhortation, every prayer, and every article which bears a true witness against them has its appointed influence, and will be used for the accomplishing of the great result.

FROGS IN THE KING'S BED-CHAMBER.

If it is an evil for a Christian church to admit adherents of Freemasonry to its membership, how much greater is that evil when a majority of its members are Masons, and control the affairs of the church? Such cases are not rare, and they remind one forcibly of the plague of frogs in the land and days of Pharaoh, when the river brought forth frogs abundantly, which went up and infested the king's house, his bed-chamber and even his bed (Exodus 8: 3), as well as the houses, the ovens and kneading-troughs of his servants. There were too many frogs in the palace to make life pleasant; they usurped too many royal privileges; they made themselves unpleasantly at home, and their presence was derogatory to the dignity and comfort of the royal family. So it is with lodge rule in the church. The Gospel is hampered by it; the minister is no longer a free agent; its power is felt in all the affairs of the society; and the King's business, although it requireth haste, is sadly delayed and made subservient to unholy influences. So all Christians should earnestly pray that the frogs may be put out and kept out of the King's bed-chamber.

THE LUCERNE (CATHOLIC) MEMORIAL.

Whether the present disturbance in the Roman Catholic church over the Lucerne-Cahensley memorial will result in a more serious dissension need not now be discussed at length by Protestants, who, however, will watch the progress of events with considerable interest. If the hand of God is in this threatened rupture, it will surely reach a most important climax, inasmuch, as the Inter-Ocean editorially expresses the probable result, "any attempt on the part of his Holiness to thus impede the thorough nationalization of the foreign immigrants to this country would be certain to provoke violent hostility to his person, and to the church of which he is the spiritual head. It also would be likely to lead to a universal adoption of State laws for the inspection of sectarian schools, and for compulsory education in the English language. No measure could be more full of mischief to the Catholic Church in America than that recommended to his Holiness by the Lucerne memorialists."

The memorial urges upon the Pope the need of dividing the Catholics of the United States into camps of various nationalities, the German camps to be officered by German bishops and priests, and such discipline maintained within them as to insure a perpetuation of the use of the German language and the German modes of thought by forcing all members of the camps to educate their children in schools under the control of the German prelates and priests. The proposition also includes the Bohemian, Italian, Polish and Hungarian camps of Roman Catholics; and the aim to be accomplished is the establishment of a number of foreign speaking camps under political, social, and religious control of alien priesthoods.

Strong opposition to the memorial is being made by Archbishop Ireland, who undoubtedly voices the views of a large number of Romanists in America when he says: "The whole proceeding is an insult to American nationalism, and reveals the fact that certain Europeans imagine America to be a sort of African Congo, without autonomy of its own, and incapable of life without a constant application of European galvanic batteries. Catholics are mortified that their religion is made the occasion and the pretense of this insolent foreign intermeddling. Strange news, indeed, for American ears to hear that the Austrian and the Prussian ambassadors in Rome had been instructed by their home governments to bring to bear upon the Vatican their influence in aid of Herr Cahensley's plan of campaign."

The audacity of the proposed measure is so great as to induce a belief that if its enforcement was ever seriously contemplated, it will be withdrawn to prevent a general uprising against it.

WILL THE LODGES EVER BE ABOLISHED?

They will, most assuredly, notwithstanding their present popularity and prosperity. But their abandonment is dependent upon two conditions. There is little hope of their downfall in the prevalent corruption of public opinion, which not only tolerates them, but gives them its hearty support. The influences of a righteous people properly brought to bear upon any great evil must greatly cripple its injurious character, but those influences must be of more than human origin. Behind them must stand the power of the Holy Spirit, to accentuate and make them effective. There must be harmony between the human will and the divine will, and until this condition is reached little can be accomplished. Then will the voice of the people become the voice of God, and the era of reform be established upon the best and surest foundations. Then will the lodges be abolished. How this union of the two wills is to be effected is the problem of the ages, for the way of the Lord is not in harmony with those of unregenerated men. It is in the churches of Christ, therefore, if anywhere, that the work of reform must be carried on; it is there that the divine will should have its free course, and it is there that the strongest opposition to all existing evils should be found. If, however, the churches are derelict in their duty, another remedy must be sought. Where is it to be found? If the churches are helpless to overcome the evil that besets them, and are led captive by it, then it will require the presence of the Lord to destroy it with the hot breath of his anger—with the same blast that is to lay low the Anti-christ at his second coming. But the lodges will be abolished. In the one case the event will be life to their members. In the other it will be their eternal destruction.

STARTLING STATEMENTS.

At the third day's session of the General Assembly of the United Presbyterian churches, at Princeton, Ind., the Committee on Correspondence asked that the Assembly hear Dr. J. G. White, of the Cumberland Presbyterian church, on the secret schemes of the Romanists. Leave was granted, and Dr. White addressed the Assembly for fifteen minutes. He asserted it as one of the aims of the Romish church at present, not only to have their parochial schools supported by the State, but to get our public schools filled with Romish teachers. He affirmed also that the Romish church is filling the country secretly with books that propagate its faith, and actually corrupting the morals of the country. It was his opinion that the great battle of Romanism is to be fought in this country and mainly in this valley of the West; and within five years it would be on us in the form of bloodshed and persecution.

"These shall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them; for He is Lord of lords and King of kings; and they that are with Him are called, and chosen, and faithful."—Rev. 17: 14.

PROHIBITION CAMPAIGN—A SUGGESTION.

Bro. I. R. B. Arnold, writing from Dayton, Ky., June 4, and referring to the proposed effort to introduce a prohibition amendment into our State Constitution, asks: "Is there to be an amendment campaign in Illinois? If so, would it pay the State Committee (N. C. A.) to spend $200 or $300 to get our chapel towed into the State, or let us use that amount to help buy a steamer, and then work in the fight during the season? We can reach many more people," he adds, "and with much less expense, than lecturers can be hired and halls paid for. I simply drop this suggestion. There is plenty of work everywhere. Next winter we want to go up the Tennessee and into Alabama."

VIEWS OF THE CHURCH CONFERENCES.

The reports of committees on secret societies in the recent Synod of the Covenanters at Pittsburg, and in the General Assembly of the United Presbyterians, at Princeton, Ind., are evidences of a salutary sentiment on the subject that should have a wider range.

The Covenanters denounced secret societies as aids to Satan, and declared it to be the duty of the church to take members out of them—"the deadliest foe of the church." The character of labor organizations was questioned and was referred for a full investigation to the current committee.

The United Presbyterian report counseled the members of the church against entering secret orders, even when they are simply "beneficial," and not oath-bound.

All other Christian churches are under the strongest obligations to the cause of Christ to be equally outspoken on this question.

MISS FLAGG WRITES to the Independent Christian: "The signs multiply which point to a dark time directly before us. The strike in the coke regions, the restlessness of labor in the old world, —all show what a volcano society is living over to-day. . . . The failure of labor organizations to help the workingman, when once realized by the latter, will only precipitate the inevitable conflict." On this subject she quotes from Rev. Hugh O. Pentecost: "The men are losing faith in strikes. When they have entirely lost faith in them, mobs will attempt to accomplish what unions have failed to do." The prospect is not a pleasant one, but it is likely to demonstrate the worthlessness of lodge influence in effecting true labor reform.

THE MEMORIAL SERVICES in honor of the late Rev. Joseph Travis, at the May Street Free Methodist church on Wednesday evening, May 27, were largely attended, and full of interest. Rev. Wm. Ferries presided, and the opening devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. F. D. Christie, the pastor, and Rev. J. J. Hales. Rev. M. V. Clute made the principal address, and was followed by Rev. Messrs. S. K. J. Chesbro, T. B. Arnold, J. D. Kelsey, J. W. Sharp and B. R. Jones, editor of the Free Methodist. The tenor of their remarks indicated a high appreciation of the pure life and abundant labors of Bro. Travis, and of his loss to the church and the world. Before the meeting adjourned a collection was taken for the benefit of his widow, amounting to nearly $60.

—A twenty-minutes noon prayer-meeting, beginning at 12:45 daily, is held at this office. Members of this Association and friends who may find it convenient to attend are invited to be present. The work of the Association is made a special subject of prayer.

—The annual catalogue of the Augustana (Lutheran) College and Theological Seminary, at Rock Island, Ill., 1890–91, indicates a fair degree of prosperity in its five departments, the names of 342 students being enrolled. The courses of study are numerous, and the advantages offered, literary, musical and social, are many and attractive. Rev. Olof Olsson retains his position as president. The fall term will begin Sept. 2d.

—By permission of the Woman's Temperance Publication Association of Chicago, we shall in our next number print the first chapter of an interesting serial Temperance story, entitled, "HELPING: A Temperance Tale," by Ada M. Melville. The young readers of the Cynosure will undoubtedly enjoy it, as it appears from week to week, and learn from it not only the evils of intemperance, but valuable lessons in the art of right living.

—The late Phineas T. Barnum, as a temperance advocate, exercised a commendable degree of influence; but as the author of a pamphlet favoring Universalism he mistook his calling and made the usual muddle of theology and error. Since his death "an old acquaintance of 47 years" —none other than the Cynosure's good friend, Geo. W. Clark, of Detroit,—has written a review of the fallacies in Mr. Barnum's pamphlet, and given it to the public in a tract of 24 pages. It is an earnest and intelligent refutation of the doctrines advanced by the great showman, and should be widely circulated as a rebuke to the growing and dangerous liberalism of the age.

PERSONAL MENTION.

—The study of law has been taken up by a daughter of Congressman Breckinridge, of Kentucky.

—W. B. Stoddard has returned to Washington and resumed his duties at the N. C. A. office in that city.

—Fanny Crosby, the blind poetess, writes six hymns a week. She is a cheerful and uncomplaining soul, carrying sunshine wherever she goes.

—Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, of the Madison Square Presbyterian church in New York, has been chosen to succeed Dr. Crosby as president of the Society for the Prevention of Crime.

—Octavia Grace Ritchie is the first woman of Quebec to take a medical degree. The experiment of admitting women to the clinics of the general hospital wards is a great innovation in Canada.

—Mrs. Amanda Smith, the well-known missionary, since her return to this country, has been laboring successfully as an evangelist in Brooklyn, Boston, Philadelphia, New Orleans, and Pacific Grove, California. Her services are in great demand.

—Rev. Dr. E. P. Goodwin, of the First Congregrational church, Chicago, is to preach the sermon, and Dr. W. R. Dale, of Birmingham, England, is to deliver the opening address at the International Congregational Congress, which meets in London, July 13th.

—In California Mrs. Harrison had a reception at the Stanford mansion, at which there were 1,000 Gold of Ophir roses suspended in a canopy over her head, and at another reception the ladies stood on a balcony where a thousand callas formed a great bed around them.

—The Rev. Dr. John Hall's parishioners will not permit him to resign. They propose to keep him in his pulpit as long as he lives. Dr. Hall has therefore decided to resign the chancellorship of the New York City University instead of the pulpit of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church.

—Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts will spend June 28th in Omaha, Neb., instead of the place named in his itineracy of Sabbath Reform lectures, several weeks ago. He spoke on June 2d and 5th in Minneapolis, where, as in many towns of Minnesota, both the Mayors and Sabbath Associations are becoming more aggressive in restraining Sunday dissipation.

—Rev. Dr. I. K. Funk, of the publishing house of Funk & Wagnalls, has brought suit against the New York Evening Post for libel, laying damages at $100,000. The libel of the Post is based on false charges against Dr. Funk in connection with the publication and sale of the "Encyclopedia Britannica" and Bryce's "American Commonwealth."

OHIO—AN APPEAL.

A word to the friends of the anti-secret cause in Ohio.

DEAR FRIENDS:—This word of appeal is directly to you. I wish to inform you that Bro. C. F. Hawley, as agent for the National Christian Association, opposed to secret societies, proposes to begin his lecturing work in Ohio, which is a part of his territory, after a time, and it is desired to provide funds for the starting of the work in our midst, and for this purpose this call is now made. Will you please give attention to the request? At present we have, as a State organization, an empty treasury. Bro. Hawley will need assistance as soon as he commences his work. Will you please render what assistance you can in replenishing our treasury, so as to enable a vigorous prosecution of the lecturing work in the various localities he may visit in carrying forward the cause of moral reform? The great need of work being done in this field, I presume, will not be called in question by those who are friendly to the cause in which he is engaged. Will you consider the matter carefully and do what you may deem duty calls to be done in the matter? Any sums forwarded to the treasurer will be appropriated in the direction herein named. Let a liberal response follow, and your action in the premises be as early as may suit your convenience. Address

EVANS THOMPSON, Treasurer

Senecaville, Ohio.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 3, 1891.

Among the most noticeable of the President's visitors this week, were a large delegation of Dunkards, as the German Baptists are commonly called, who stopped to pay their respects to our civil ruler while enroute to Hagerstown, Maryland, where the National Conference of the Dunkards is now in session. Secretary Foster assisted the President in receiving them.

It is a matter for congratulation from all who believe in the peaceful arbitration of all international misunderstandings and disputes that the British government has seen fit to meet the proposals of our own government in the stopping of all sealing for the present season, except enough by the regular government lessees to provide for the three hundred natives on the Pribyloff Islands, who are entirely dependent upon the sealing industry for their livelihood. This understanding between the two governments gives all the more pleasure from the fact that by many it had been feared that it would not be had in time to prevent the existence of the peculiarly dangerous state of affairs which during several sealing seasons has existed on Behring Sea, a state of affairs whereby it may be said that the peace of the nations composing the English-speaking world was for several months in each year in eminent danger of being seriously disturbed by the indiscretion of some man who might happen to be in command of a vessel flying the flag of Great Britain or that of the United States. Happily the agreement reached has removed all danger for the present year, and it is hoped and believed by President Harrison that the arbitration of the claims which have been set up by both nations, which was some time ago agreed upon, will, before the opening of next year's sealing season, have forever and satisfactorily removed the cause for any friction between the nations so closely allied by blood and social ties, which have so many reasons for being friendly toward each other, and none deserving of the name for being enemies.

A most affecting scene occurred just previous to the death of an estimable lady in this city several days ago. For many years the lady had persisted in telling her husband, who is a musician, that when she felt that death was near she wished him to play on the organ the "Vesper Hymn," and his own rendition of the "Rock of Ages." Just before she died, she whispered to her sister to tell her husband that she was ready for him to play. He went to the organ and played the music requested, and probably no organist ever exercised his skill under more peculiar or more trying circumstances. He then returned to the bedside and took the hand of his dying wife. She looked at him calmly and said: "Fred, I must leave you now. Goodbye; God bless you." That was all; there was not a tremor on her placid face as her soul started upon its journey to God.

The Good Templars of Washington have a beautiful custom, which, if not universally followed, certainly deserves to be. It consists in holding an annual Memorial meeting at which the lives and services of the dead pioneers in the cause of temperance are vividly brought before the audience by means of speeches and portraits. At the meeting held last Saturday night the speakers honored among others, Hon. John B. Finch, Gen. Clinton B. Fisk, Hon. D. P. Holloway and Mrs. C. N. Whitney. An effective tableau was presented while the audience was singing "Cover them over with beautiful flowers," by the action of a number of ladies in literally carrying out the words of the song.

An old-fashioned Methodist silver-praise service was held in connection with a rally of the Epworth League in one of the local churches Sunday night, and the result was highly gratifying to its projectors.

The Postoffice Department, having become satisfied that the recent order issued by the heads of the two largest express companies directing their employers not to receive lottery matter for expressage is not being obeyed, proposes trying to find through the courts a way to compel these companies to stop doing business with lotteries. The sympathies and good wishes of all good people will certainly be with the Postoffice officials in this effort to kill the nefarious business, which seems only to have been crippled by exclusion from the mails. *

THE HOME.

GIVE A KIND WORD WHEN YOU CAN.

Do you know a heart that hungers
For a word of love and cheer?
There are many such about us;
It may be that one is near.
Look around you. If you find it
Speak the word that's needed so,
And your own heart may be strengthened
By the help that you bestow.

It may be that some one falters
On the brink of sin and wrong,
And a word from you might save him—
Help to make the tempted strong.
Look about you, O my brother;
What a sin is yours and mine
If we see that help is needed
And we give no friendly sign.

Never think kind words are wasted,
Bread on waters cast are they,
And it may be we shall find them
Coming back to us some day.
Coming back when sorely needed,
In a time of sharp distress,
So, my friend, let's give them freely;
Gift and giver God will bless.

—The Housewife.

THE NEW MINISTER'S WIFE.

"Well, how d'you do, Mis' Bascom? I thought I'd just drop in, on my way home from the circle. Why didn't you go to-day?"

"I declare, Mis' Stone, I felt too tired to stir out o' the house. I've been up for three or four nights with Johnny, and I'm all wore out. Did you have a good meetin'? I'd like to have been there, seein' it was the annual meetin', but I couldn't."

"Well, you don't know what you've lost, Mis' Bascom. We had an excitin' time. You know we was to elect officers to-day. Well, to begin with, we voted for president; and, of course, as has always been our custom, we elected the minister's wife. I tell you, we went for her good and strong. But mercy on us! You'd ought to seen her. She just stood right up and said she was much obliged to us for the honor we would do her, but owin' to family duties and others combined, she must refuse. Said she had not time to devote to it. Well, I must say I was some surprised, and so was the rest of 'em."

"I don' know, Mis' Stone, as I blame Mis' Hartwell one mite. She is president of the Missionary Society, secretary of the Ladies' Association, and treasurer of the Benevolent Society. I think she has about all she can attend to. I don't hold to makin' a pack-horse of the minister's wife. I think there is too much expected of her. Good land! I wouldn't be in her shoes for no amount o' money; and it ain't no sign because we've always had a minister's wife for president of the sewin' circle, that we've always got to."

"Well, you can say what you've a mind to, Mis' Bascom, I think she is the most suitable person, and Mis' Hartwell had ought to taken it. I think she is going to be rather uppish, and that won't do here in Brownsville, you know as well as I do. She looked a good deal citified, though her clothes weren't nothin' extra. Her dress was a bottle-green cashmere, and jest as plain as plain could be, but somehow it looked genteel, and was becomin'. I feel that she's not the right sort of a woman for us, and I shouldn't be surprised if Mr. Hartwell didn't get on very well, just on her account."

"Well, now, Mis' Stone, I don't think we'd better begin by findin' fault with the minister's folks. Perhaps they are jest the ones we need here, and I say, giv'em a fair chance. I've always noticed one thing in this world—it's a good deal easier to pull down than it is to build up."

"I don't know as I've really said anything against 'em, and I don't mean to; but I can't help seein' when things don't go to suit me, though I ain't obliged to tell everybody of it. I've only spoken to two or three other women besides you about it. I'll say this: Mr. Hartwell seems very much engaged in his work, and appears like a real good man. What a pity he hasn't got a wife that would be a helpmeet to him instead of a hindrance! Why, Mis' Bascom, what do you think? When we told her about givin' 'em a donation bime-by, she didn't seem at all carried away, and the consequence will be, they wont get so much, you see if they do. It put a damper on me, I know. I'd made up my mind to give five dollars, but now I don't think I shall give more'n two and a half, and that, I believe, I shall hand to Mr. Hartwell. I tell you what, that woman is a stumblin'-block, as it were, in the way of her husband."

"Why, Mis' Stone, you've no right to say so. You don't know anything about how it is, and this donation business you speak of is nothin' more nor less than a regular nuisance. I declare, if I were in Mis' Hartwell's place, I wouldn't have one nohow. If anybody had anything to give you, wouldn't you rather they would come and give it and then go off home as they'd ought to, and not row round half the night with seventy-five or a hundred more folks? You know how it is at our donations. We go to the minister's, and turn the house upside down from garret to cellar, eat all the best of the provisions we carry, daub up the carpets, tucker the minister and his wife all out, and then we go home feelin' we've done a lot of good, when, if the truth was known, I believe we've done more harm than anything else. I made up my mind last year that I'd never go to another; but I shall give something to the minister all the same; and you, Mis' Stone, as well off as you are, hadn't ought to cut down any on what you've always given, just because you don't like Mis' Hartwell over and above well. You just wait awhile; perhaps you'll change your mind about her."

"Well, perhaps I shall; I'll let you know if I do. But there, I must go. Come over, you and Mr. Bascom."

"Well, good-night, we'll be over soon. Come again."

Mr. and Mrs. Hartwell had been in Brownsville six months when the annual meeting of the sewing circle occurred. Mr. Hartwell was thoroughly engaged in his work, and had come to this new field of labor filled with enthusiasm, and determined with God's help to do all in his power for the upbuilding of church and people. He was ably seconded by his wife, Mrs. Stone to the contrary notwithstanding. Mrs. Hartwell was devoted to the interests of her husband and his people, let him go where he would. She was indeed a helpmeet, and often went beyond her strength in her zeal for doing good. She had, like her husband, come to Brownsville feeling that God had called them there, and that there was much to be done. She had gone to work with characteristic energy, but after a few months began to feel that the people were not in sympathy with her. This troubled her very much, for well she knew that in the end it would interfere with her husband's usefulness; but all she could do was to go on as she had begun, doing with her might what her hands found to do, and trust the results to God.

In time, those who had been inclined to find fault with her began to be aware that though she would not always work in their way, she had a very good way of her own. There chanced to be a good deal of sickness among the people not many months after Mr. and Mrs. Hartwell came to Brownsville, and almost the first to be taken ill was Mrs. Stone, with typhoid fever. The poor woman had a very hard time of it, and through it all no one seemed quite as kind as Mrs. Hartwell. She would come in and sit with her, and, so far as lay in her power, cheer and encourage the sick woman. She brought her delicacies to tempt the appetite, sent her flowers, and in many ways manifested her interest and sympathy. In fact, she was untiring in her attentions, and even went so far in her kindness as to take the entire care of her for a few days when the nurse was ill and obliged to leave. It was no easy matter to fill her place, there being so many others sick at the time, so Mrs. Hartwell seeing the difficulty, offered her services. She seemed an angel of mercy to Mrs. Stone, who grew to love and admire her for her Christian charity.

Mrs. Stone now had ample time for thought, and saw that she had misjudged Mrs. Hartwell. What troubled her more, was the fact that she had helped others to misjudge her also. She knew the best and first thing for her to do was to rectify this, and resolved to do so as soon as possible. When she grew strong enough to sit up part of the day, Mrs. Hartwell came in to read to her, and would often give her some little items of interesting news. Mrs. Stone enjoyed all this, and, as she said, it went a long way towards helping her get well.

The day came at last when she had the doctor's permission to go out. Her first call was on Mrs. Bascom, her nearest neighbor. Her greeting was this:

"Well, Mis' Bascom, I've come over just as soon as I was able, to tell you I've changed my mind, as you said perhaps I might."

"Why, Mis' Stone, I don't know what you mean, but I'm real glad to see you. You've been a pretty sick woman and no mistake. Why, one while I didn't know as you'd get well."

"There was a pretty long time I didn't think myself I should, but thanks to God's goodness I have. Don't you remember, Mis' Bascom, how I come in here on my way from the annual meetin' of the sewin' circle, and run on about Mis' Hartwell? And don't you know you told me to wait awhile, I might change my mind? Well, I have, I can tell you. There ain't a better woman alive to-day than she is. Why, she has been an angel of goodness to me all through my sickness, and, best of all, Mis' Bascom, I believe I'm a better Christian for havin' seen how she lives. She has done more for me than she dreams of, bless her soul! How she could overlook all I've said and done, I don't know. She knows how I've been set against her. I tried to tell her that I was sorry for it all, but she wouldn't hear a word to it; she just put her arm right round me and said, 'My dear sister, let by-gones be by-gones.' I tell you, Mis' Bascom, such forgiveness, such charity, is enough to melt the heart of a stone."

Here the poor woman broke down completely, but she soon recovered herself, and went on to say: "I haven't lived as I ought to, but I'm going to try for something better now. I'm afraid I've been more of a professor than a possessor."

"Well, Mis' Stone, I guess you ain't the only one; we don't none of us do just right. I know I don't, any way. I guess you are about as good as the average."

"Now, Mis' Bascom, don't you go to tryin' to make me think too well of myself again. You'd ought to help me see myself as I am. You know I talk too much. I've said unkind things about folks, but I hope I'm through with that now. I don't know how I can ever thank Mis' Hartwell enough for what she has done for me. I hope God may bless her according to her deserts, but I ain't goin' to throw all my obligations off on to him; there is something for me to do. Mr. Hartwell don't seem over and above rich. You know ministers ain't apt to be, thanks to the mean'ess of folks in general. There it is again? Don't that sound natural? How shall I ever learn to rule my tongue? Well, as I was sayin', I feel that I owe Mis' Hartwell a good deal, and I'm goin' to begin to pay up. I ain't goin' to wait till donation time, either, but I shall go to the bank next week, and draw out a hundred and fifty dollars and give to her. I hear they've been wantin' a horse; perhaps that will help. I hope, Mis' Bascom, my pocket-book has had new life put into it as well as my heart."

"Well, Mis' Stone, I tell you what, I guess you're in dead earnest. Folks generally are before the pocket-book gets regenerated. I say, joy go with you! There is no doubt you can be a great help to the minister's folks, and in more ways than one, too. I do believe you'll get a blessing yourself. It is sure to come when we try to do good to others."

"Well, Mis' Bascom, I pray I may; I need it. At any rate, I am goin' to try to do more and better work for the Master."

"That's good, Mis' Stone! You don't know how glad I am for you."

"Well, I'm much obliged, Mis' Bascom. Why, it's gettin' late, ain't it, and I am tired. I must go. Do run in."

"Yes, I will, and you come again. Good-by."

—Zion's Herald.

"GIVE HIM A CHEER."

"Give him a cheer." The hearty words came from the lips of some one in the crowd gathered around a building enveloped in flames, and were prompted by the momentary faltering of a brave fireman at the final effort that was needed to save a human life. Instantly hats were waving in the air, and, above the crackling and roaring of the fire, the cheering of the multitude below fell upon the ears of the wavering fireman. Electrified by the applause he renewed his efforts, beat back the flames that scorched his face, burst in the window that would not yield to the young girl's strength, and through a cloud of smoke and fire bore his unconscious burden to her weeping friends below.

"Give him a cheer," said a voice in the audience, as the young aspirant for academical honors began to hesitate in the midst of his well-prepared oration. "Give him a cheer," and as the appreciated huzza was raised the heart of the youth gathered new courage, so that he succeeded in winning the scholarship, which to him meant much more than empty honors. In this very way the applause of a sympathetic and responsive audience bears up the speaker, who otherwise would fail. Mr. Gladstone once said: "A speaker gets from his hearers in vapor that which he gives back to them in flood," and when they have got it they return it to him with interest.

"Give him a cheer." Who? Why, that young Christian who has come out from the world, and in the midst of temptation is trying to live a consecrated life. He needs more than an interest in your prayers. Give him a warm hand-shake, a word of praise, or a smile of recognition when he begins to faint and falter by the way. Let him know that you appreciate his efforts, and will be disappointed if he fails. If he does a noble thing give him a cheer by telling him he has done well. It will give him strength to meet new trials and temptations.

"Give him a cheer"—the stranger within your gates. No matter how brief a tarrying he may make, bid him welcome. Do not let him go away feeling that no one feels an interest in his welfare.

I have in mind a young girl who went through life under a cloud. She had many things to discourage her. She was misrepresented and misunderstood. No one spoke a cheering word to her, or offered to lend a hand when troubles thickened about her. People did not understand her shrinking nature. They mistook her exclusiveness for pride, until in a fit of desperation she took away the life God had given her. A little note among her effects explained the seemingly rash act. It ran thus: "I can endure this strain no longer. If I only had help to carry my burden I would try to be brave and stand up under its weight, but in all this wide world I have not a friend. No one has ever given me a cheering word, or dropped a tear of pity over my hard fate." Then over her icy form the neighbors lamented their lack of sympathy, and tears of regret in plenty fell upon the still white face now mute in death. Enough appreciative, tender words to have gladdened her whole life were wasted around her coffin and over her open grave. But what good did they do when they fell upon ears hushed in death?

"Give them a cheer." A host of weary, toiling men and women are to-day calling loudly for cheering words and helpful ministries. Do not keep the cheer that would bless them lying idly in your hearts or tremblingly unsaid upon your lips to scatter around their tombs when they are dead. Bring the flowers that you are keeping for their coffins, and strew along their paths today while they are alive to inhale their sweet fragrance.

"Give them a cheer." Words of honest praise will spoil no man. If you gain a blessing from a sermon or a prayer, it will encourage the preacher to hear you say so. If some one's holy living strengthens you and helps you on to a better life, would he not be happier to know of the unconscious influence he is exerting?

"Give him a cheer." No matter where, or when, or how you come into contact with poor, struggling human souls, lend them a hand—give them a cheer that will help them to live better, nobler lives.—Christian Weekly.

Violators of the prohibitory law are having a pretty hard time in Marshalltown, Iowa. The fumes of the 1,000 gallons of beer confiscated from Bernstein Bros. recently and poured out by the authorities had scarcely disappeared when the sheriff and a posse this morning pounced upon a Northwestern car and seized five barrels and three kegs of whisky and fifteen cases of beer, all consigned to Bernstein Bros. from a Rock Island concern. This haul will amount to several hundred dollars and the liquor will doubtless be destroyed. The officers here are showing no mercy to offenders.

TEMPERANCE.

THE "PEOPLE'S" PARTY ON PROHIBITION.

[From the "Voice" report.]

At this point Con Burckhauser made his way to the front and announced that the Local Committee was desirous of giving the delegates every opportunity possible for enjoyment while in the city. He, therefore, took pleasure in extending to them an invitation to visit one of the largest industrial establishments during the noon intermission, the Muhlhauser Brewery, where the delegates would be given an opportunity "to fill up." Burckhauser speaks very broken English, and in the confusion his remarks were not well understood. Directly word passed from delegate to delegate that his invitation was to a brewery and free beer. At once there were symptoms of an outbreak of indignation. Delegates were on their feet in all parts of the hall shouting for recognition. A delegate from Minnesota tried to protest against the insult to the Convention, but his voice was drowned before it reached the platform. Grover, of Wisconsin, managed to make himself heard in protest, but as soon as his purpose was apparent he was yelled down and strove in vain for a further hearing. The chairman and others were anxious to avert the coming storm. E. M. Davis, a member of the Reception Committee, made his way to the front and declared that Mr. Burckhauser had been misunderstood. The delegates were not invited to a brewery, but to a "broom factory." The subterfuge failed to deceive the indignant delegates, but the chairman announced the report of the Committee on Permanent Organization, and the uproar subsided somewhat. This report, which was adopted, named the following as officers of the Convention:

Chairman, Senator W. A. Peffer of Kansas; vice-presidents, Rev. Gibbard De La Matyr of Ohio; Ignatius Donnelly of Minnesota; John H. Powers of Nebraska; Hugh Cavanaugh of Ohio; R. Humphrey of Texas; J B Weaver of Iowa; secretary, W S Morgan of Arkansas; assistant secretaries, S. F. Norton, Charles Culmore, W. H. Robb, W. C. Crum, Edward Thornton, Mrs. Fannie McCormick, Emma G. Curtis and Helen M. Gougar.

MRS. GOUGAR'S VIGOROUS REBUKE.

Then transpired the most sensational episode of the entire conference. Mrs. Gougar was sitting in the meeting as a spectator. She was astounded at hearing her name reported as one of the officers. She at once sought recognition from the chairman. That obtained, she mounted the reporters' table and climbed upon the stage. Not many delegates knew her personally, and therefore could not suspect what was coming. She said:

"Mr. Chairman: It is only by your courtesy and as a matter of personal privilege that I appear upon this platform. I have noticed in the report of your Committee on Permanent Organization the name of Helen M. Gougar as one of the Assistant-Secretaries. I answer to that name. I am in attendance upon this meeting simply as a spectator. I am not a delegate, and have no representative character whatever here. I have attended this meeting, however, out of a feeling of deep interest in the matters which have brought you together. I am in the warmest sympathy with the disabilities and the hardships of the farmer and the workingman, the great industrial classes of th country. To better their condition I have labored and shall still labor. But when I come into this great meeting, and find the chief officer of its Reception Committee a saloon-keeper and a beer-brewer, and an active member of the Liquor Dealers' Association, engaged in and a representative of a traffic which is doing more harm to the industry and welfare of our citizenship than any other one influence; when I find this same man called to preside over your deliberations, as I witnessed in this hall last night, and when I see this same man, without rebuke, permitted to come upon this platform as he did a few minutes ago, and invite these delegates to come out into a brewery and 'fill up, I want to say that I indignantly repudiate the connection of my name in any way with this gathering. I am a sober Prohibition woman, and my self-respect will not permit me to countenance such an insult to such true men and women of our land as I believe most of these delegates to be. I repudiate your meeting as I hoped to see you repudiate this awful traffic."

Commingled cheers and jeers greeted Mrs. Gougar's spirited protest. When she left the platform delegates from all parts of the hall pressed forward to congratulate her. * * * *

After this episode quiet was sufficiently restored to resume business. But another great sensation was yet in store. Few had failed to note in the reading of the platform that the liquor question had been entirely ignored. Many delegates had vainly attempted to secure the floor to move to amend by the insertion of a prohibitory plank. The chairman, backed by numerous clamorous delegates, had refused to give them recognition. So persistent, however, was delegate D. R. Grover of Wisconsin, that he would not subside until pulled into his seat and held there by a stalwart sergeant-at-arms. Dutton of Iowa succeeded in gaining the platform. He began to eulogize the report, and was listened to with apparent approval until he stated that he had a resolution which he moved as an amendment to the report of the committee. The words "liquor traffic" were heard, and the storm began again. The speaker's voice was drowned. He appealed to the chair, but the chair ruled him out of order on the ground that the report was not yet properly before the conference, though speech after speech had been made to the report.

Some of the delegates were so outraged by the conduct of the conference and the chairman that they began to remove their badges. Finally, after the platform proper had been adopted and action was about to be taken on the additional resolutions, Prof. G. M. Miller, of California, climbed into a chair and demanded recognition. Word had passed through the hall as to Miller's intention, and the prohibition delegates rallied to his support. An angry tumult broke out, but Miller manfully held his place and appealed to the chair for protection. The sergeants-at-arms and police did what they could to keep the delegates in their seats and to quiet the disorder. "Platform! Platform!" was shouted from every part of the hall. Professor Miller started for the stage, cheered on by his adherents and scoffed at by his opponents. When he came to the front the confusion broke out afresh. Policemen were sent through the aisles to order the delegates to be seated, but it was many minutes before Miller could be heard. He stood his ground, however, and finally got a partial hearing. He said:

"I rise, Mr. Chairman, to move an amendment to the report of the Committee on Resolutions. I stand here as a representative of the honest sentiment of the large majority of the delegates in this hall. I stand here as a representative of one of the most magnificent and most devoted reform movements in the history of the world, an organized movement which has recorded itself by nearly one-half million of votes at the ballot-box. I stand here as a representative of the highest interests, moral and material, of the millions of homes of this great nation. I stand here as a representative of a reform sentiment which this conference cannot ignore except at its own peril. I stand here as the opponent of one of the greatest evils afflicting society that makes this meeting necessary. In behalf of those for whom I speak I demand recognition, and move to amend the report of the Committee on Resolutions by the insertion of the following:

" 'Resolved, That the manufacture, importation, exportation and transportation, wholesale and retail, of alcoholic liquors as a beverage should be prohibited.' "

Every effort was exercised to choke Mr. Miller off. By sheer determination he gained a hearing. Then effort was renewed to prevent any consideration of the resolution, but he would not give way. Finally Chairman Peffer came to his support and declared that he should be heard if it took all day. Upon his second reading, Prof. Miller, in order to make the matter as simple as possible, changed his resolution to read:

"Resolved, That we favor the prohibition of the liquor traffic for beverage purposes."

The matter being finally before the conference, Prof. Miller retired. Hundreds of delegates were claiming the floor, but Secretary Schilling, of the Committee on Resolutions, was recognized. He came to the front of the platform, and in a fiery speech denounced the introduction of the resolution. He took occasion to deny a rumor, which he said was afloat, to the effect that he himself was a brewer. He claimed the authorship of that clause in the constitution of the Knights of Labor which excluded liquor-dealers from membership, and appealed to Mr. Powderly to sustain his assertion. "This question," said he, "was before the Committee on Resolutions and had full consideration. Many of us are aware by what means and for what purpose it has been thrust in here. We were advised that the Wall street monopolists would attempt to cast a fire-brand into this conference in order to divide it, and this is the fire-brand."

Other speeches against it were made, after which the chairman submitted the motion to amend to a viva voce vote. It was overwhelmingly defeated.

BIBLE LESSON.

STUDIES IN THE OLD TESTAMENT.

LESSON XII.—Second Quarter.—June 21.

SUBJECT.—Captivity of Judah.—2 Kings 25: 1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Come, and let us return unto the Lord.—Hosea 6: 11.

[Open the Bible and read the lesson.]

DAILY READINGS.—M.—2 Kings 20: 12-19. T.—2 Kings 23: 26, 27, 31-35. W.—2 Kings 24: 1-20. T.—2 Kings 25: 13-30. F.—Jer. 13: 16-27. S.—Jer. 37: 1-21. S.—Jer. 38: 14-24.

COMMENTS BY E. E. FLAGG.

1. Jerusalem besieged.—vs. 1–3. The day of doom so long prophesied, so long delayed, at last came, and the city was besieged by the armies of Nebuchadnezzar. By examining parallel passages we shall see that among other sins which provoked God to anger was the keeping of their Hebrew servants in bondage, when his law expressly said that they should be free at the end of every seven years. Stirred up, either by the threatenings of Jeremiah, or from politic reasons, liberty was proclaimed to all who were thus unlawfully held in bonds, and then, with strange effrontery, they went back on their solemn coveneant, and reduced their unfortunate brethren again to slavery. For this God threatened them by Jeremiah (Jer. 34: 17), that a terrible liberty should be proclaimed to them, to the sword, to the pestilence, and to the famine. Israel had been given a land flowing with milk and honey, but they had forsaken God. They had offered the corn and wine and oil, that was his gift to them, on the altars of Baal, and this was their punishment—to be devoured by famine. God's laws are unchangeable. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." The nation that will not obey him shall be destroyed. We wonder that Israel never seemed to learn the lesson of God's repeated chastisement, but invariably lapsed again into idolatry as soon as his hand was withdrawn; yet our own country is pursuing the same course. How quickly have the lessons of our terrible civil war been forgotten, and expediency instead of right allowed to rule our national councils. With all Israel's wickedness, were her sins any greater than ours?

2. Jerusalem taken.—vs. 4–7. Zedekiah had been faithfully warned by the prophet Jeremiah of the sad consequences that would follow his persistent refusal to submit to Nebuchadnezzar, who was simply the rod in God's hand to punish him. Zedekiah was a weak prince, obedient to every whisper of evil counsel, and yet glad to get secret interviews with Jeremiah, though he had permitted him to be thrown into a filthy dungeon, where he would have perished had not the faithful Baruch rescued him. A perusal of the 38th chapter of Jeremiah shows his moral cowardice in a strong light. He was afraid—afraid of his people, afraid of his ministers, but not afraid to trust God; the same fear of man which makes clergymen, editors and legislators compromise the truth, contrary to their own convictions. There were two seemingly discrepant prophecies uttered by Jeremiah and Ezekiel:—one, that the king should never see Babylon; the other, that he should spend his days there. Both predictions came true, as we see in our lesson. Is not here an important suggestion regarding the so-called discrepancies of Scripture? Two seemingly irreconcilable accounts may both be true. The difficulty is not in the Bible, but in our own limited human understandings. There is but one question we need to ask, "Is it the Word of God?" This answered to our satisfaction, the only sensible as well as right and safe way is to believe all it teaches. If we reject one part and accept another we may be as badly off as if we rejected the whole; for though we may not mean to refuse any fundamental truth, how are we, with our imperfect knowledge, to discriminate between truths that are or are not fundamental?

3. The destruction of the city. vs. 8–12. The temple had been made a haunt of secret idolaters, and only fire could purify it from the taint of their unclean worships. It had been robbed to decorate the shrine of Baal, and now the hands of the heathen despoiled it of its most precious treasures, and the chief priests and doorkeepers massacred. If the Christian church is made in a similar manner a place of refuge for secret false worships, is there not danger that it will, at least spiritually, suffer the same fate? The poor of the land were left. An obscure condition is often a shield in perilous times. A tornado that fells the oak does not harm the simple flower of the field. This series of lessons began with Israel's apostasy, and this is the fitting end. There are many practical suggestions we can draw from such a clear unveiling of "God's hand in history." (1) His judgments do not fall without warning. He represents himself as rising up early and sending his prophets, yet they refused to listen. (2) The blow may be long delayed, but when it falls, like the stroke of death it is always sudden. (3) As Christians and as patriots let us work to overthrow the secret false worships which are leading us on to a similar national apostasy, and to a doom perhaps as fearful.

RELIGIOUS NEWS.

—The Methodists are to hold their second Ecumenical Conference at Washington, D. C., next October. The first was held in London, Eng., ten years ago. The sessions are to continue for twelve days. The Eastern hemisphere is to send 200 delegates, and North and South America 300 more.

—The monks and nuns in Father Ignatius' Protestant Welsh monastery have gone over in a body to the Romish church. It was not a very long step, anyway.

—There are 92 Christian churches and chapels in the city of Tokio, Japan. The first one was erected only 25 years ago. Another hopeful sign in Japan appears in the fact that Sunday is now generally observed as a day of rest.

—It is proposed to form a "John Wesley" society within the Church of England, to affirm and exercise the right and duty of laymen to preach the Gospel.

—The North African mission has in all fifty-eight missionaries engaged in its field of operations, embracing Morocco, Algeria, Tunis, Tripoli, and North Arabia.

—The Telegus are one of the finest races of India. Fourteen missionary societies are at work among these people, having 92 male, and 27 female, missionaries. Seventy-two mission stations have been established. There are 473 native preachers at work already, and there are 53,000 church members.

—Some two years ago at the People's Tabernacle, Denver, an Indian was converted and joined the church. Since then he has taken an active part in the work. Pastor Uzzell has just completed arrangements to send him to an Indian school for a five years' course of instruction, preparatory to becoming a missionary to his native tribe, the Cheyennes.—The Mennonite.

—The number of missionary stations in Africa now exceeds 500. There are 400,000 converts, and the number is increasing at the rate of about 25,000 a year. Within five years more than 200 natives have suffered martyrdom for their faith.

—The Presbyterian General Assembly will meet in Portland, Oregon, next year.

—Reports are made of 1,820 new American Sunday-schools organized last year, and 130 new churches developed from Sunday-schools organized by the American Sunday-school Union.

—The Jewish qaurter of Prague has been almost completly destroyed by fire. Hundreds of families, having lost their all, are suffering. It is believed that the fire was of incendiary origin and the outgrowth of ill-feeling toward the Israelites.

—The Methodists of Chicago have secured a large lot on Dearborn St., South side, for the erection of a permanent Wesleyan hospital. Plans adopted provide for a building to cost about $150,000. They hope to secure funds to undertake one wing of the building at once. The hospital has heretofore occupied leased buildings.

—During the Presbyterian General Assembly in Detroit, a meeting was held in defense of the Sabbath or against the open World's Fair on the Sabbath. Dr. Herrick Johnson and Prof. Elliott Shepard spoke strongly for the American Sabbath, urging that the "open fair" was only a money-making device.

—In the interests of foreign missions it should be stated that the general understanding concerning the dangers of the China inland mission work is very incorrect. Some reports have said that one-half of those who enter this special field return within two years, either to their home on earth or to the home above. Statistics show us that 539 persons have been connected with this mission during the past twenty-six years. Of this number only forty-four left the mission during the first two years, twenty-one by death.—Union Signal.

—In the Prussian Diet the bill restoring to the Catholic clergy the stipends formerly allowed by the government was adopted.

odus is evidence that state necessity rather than personal hostility prompted the Czar to his course. The plan to found a Jewish colony in the Argentine Republic seems to command a general approbation, though there are some objections raised against it.

—Hebrew, it is said, is again becoming a living language in Palestine. The thousands of Jews who are going there from different countries, being unable to communicate with each other in their ordinary languages, resort to the knowledge which they have of Hebrew in their religious services for a means of communication.

—The disposition of the Russian government to accede to the plan of Baron Hirsch and permit a gradual emigration of Jews instead of insisting upon a speedy ex-

—Mrs. Ballington Booth reports that Salvation Army factories are increasing in England, giving the unemployed work, and that one wealthy woman has given $350,000 for prison gate homes for discharged convicts.

—Missionaries have been driven out of Nanking (China) by the natives.

—Mr. Quarrier, who is carrying on Christian work in what may be called darkest Scotland, viz., the worst part of the city of Glasgow, was recently visited by some persons from the western coast, who laid upon his table $10,000 in bank notes for the building of an orphanage. They desire that no names, not even initials, should be published, and they decline to take a receipt, saying to Mr. Quarrier: "You have got the money and that is enough."

—It is stated that General Booth is to build a great Salvationist temple in London with £60,000 or £70,000, which had been left to him by the late Mrs. Bell, Glasgow.

—A new Congregational church, the forty-eighth in Chicago, was organized at Park Manor, May 29. The work was undertaken early in February by Rev. W. C. Stoudenmire, who has continued his labors on Sundays and week days up to the present time. Services are held for the present in the school-house, and they hope to build as soon as they are able.

—The Yale Student Volunteer Band is rendering valuable service in helping to enlist the societies of Christain Endeavor in missions.

—Preparations for the Christian Endeavor International convention at Minneapolis are going forward with great enthusiasm. The task of finding boarding places for 11,000 delegates is being successfully accomplished. Mr. F. B. Daniels is the chairman of the committee of arrangements. Large excursions are already arranged from New England, Connecticut, Montreal, New York, Philadelphia, the South, Southwest, etc. Half-fare or less is to be given on all lines, with exceptionally long time limits on all tickets.

—On Sunday the new Ewing Street Congregational church building was dedicated. Addresses were made by Dr. T. P. Prudden, Rev. David Beaton, Prof. S. I. Curtiss, and Dr. E. P. Goodwin. The church is a handsome structure, costing together with the grounds, $17,000. Rev. Edgar Libby is pastor. The church numbers over eighty members. The Sunday-school is very flourishing, and numbers about 350.

.—The American Board of Presbyterian Home Missions reported to the General Assembly that New England by its Scotch and Irish and Canadian immigrants has become home mission ground for Presbyterians. The old settled parts of the Eastern and Middle States are also needing aid, and the border line has now reached the Pacific. The cities are also becoming the great home mission fields. The board has 1,677 missionaries and 340 teachers, and reports over 10,000 additions last year to its churches.

—Schweinfurth, the Rockford, Ill., religious humbug, met with a warm reception from the people of Kansas City, Mo., during his recent visit. One account says: "First he was threatened with a coat of tar and feathers, and then the house in which he is a guest was surrounded by an unruly mob armed with stones and brickbats, which they threw at the house. When the man appeared on the balcony he was hooted at and finally kicked in the shins."

—The membership of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in the United States for 1890, as shown by the treasurer's report was 149,527. In addition there were 14,970 honoraries; 20,212 members of the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union, 135,440 children in the Loyal Temperance Legions, making a total of 320,149.

—The Grand Jury of Mercer county, New Jersey, has indicted the members of the Salvation Army for making loud noises on drums and tambourines. "This," says the Christian Advocate, "is contrary to the spirit of democratic freedom." Or rather the religious freedom secured to American citizens by the Federal Constitution.

—The Southern Presbyterians in session at Birmingham, Ala., have passed resolutions condemning church fairs; also Sunday opening of the Columbian Exposition.

—The appointment of Professor Charles A. Briggs to the chair of Biblical Theology in Union Theological Seminary was defeated in the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church and was non-concurred in by a vote of 440 to 59.

—At the recent (66th) annual meeting of the American Tract Society, it was reported that 166 new permanent publications were added to the list during the year, in eight languages. The society has six periodicals. They employed 151 colporteurs who worked in thirty-four States and Territories and in Ontario. Receipts for the year in the benevolent department were $151,016, and expenditures, $124,702.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

WASHINGTON.

Negotiations have been completed by which the Indian tribes now occupying the great Colville reservation in Washington are to cede to the government 1,500,000 acres, to be thrown open to settlement.

The national debt statement, issued Monday afternoon, shows that the increase of the public debt during the month of May amounted to $622,915.57. The total cash in the treasury is $697,077,366.97.

CHICAGO.

The election on Monday for eleven Circuit Court judges for Cook county, Ill., resulted in the success of the non-partisan ticket.

The Appellate Court of this district has refused to grant a new trial to O'Donnell, convicted of attempting to bribe jurors in the Cronin murder case.

A fire in Schufeldt's distillery on Wednesday morning did damage to the amount of $75,000. The origin of the fire is believed to have been accidental.

The new city directory will be out July 1. It is estimated that it will show a population of 1,250,000.

The contracts for the electricity building and drainage system of the World's Columbian Exposition have been let.

The Whisky Trust has bought the Schufeldt and Calumet distilleries. This combination now controls all the distilleries in Chicago.

One hundred and twenty-five building permits have been issued by the city this week. The value of the buildings is $800,000.

COUNTRY.

For the first time in its history the Cincinnati, Wabash and Michigan railroad, which recently passed into the control of the Big Four system, has begun running Sunday trains.

A gang of thirteen robbers, ranging in age from 14 to 19 years, has been discovered and placed under arrest at Columbus, Ind. The boys had been reading wild West stories.

(Continued on 16th page.)

SUBSCRIPTION LETTERS.

The following have made remittances of money to the Cynosure from June 1 to June 6, inclusive:

Miss Burdick, Rev. E. S. Bunce, A. H. Barkhurst, Miss O. Bonnet, T. Blomquist, Mrs. E. Conery, A. C. Lemm, J. McLeod, H. F. Dull, W. R. Fleming, W. H. Layton, J. M. Smucker, M. A. Van Horn, J. F. Hanson, Mrs. E. B. C. Washburn, W. Patterson, Jr., W. Felstead, W. W. Cromwell, O. Hoffer, C. Gunn, S. S. Grannis, Rev. E. Pfeiffer, Mrs. J. A. Milligan, R. Wait, J. B. Chance, J. A. Van Eps, Mrs. E. Morath, Mrs. M. M. Ames, Rev. A. W. Austin.

MARKET REPORTS.

CHICAGO.
Wheat—Spring	99½	@ 1	00⅝
Winter	98	@ 1	01¼
Corn—No. 2	58½	@	60
Oats—No. 2	45	@	45¾
Rye—No. 2	86
Bran per ton	13 25	@14	00
Hay—Timothy	10 00	@13	00
Butter, medium to best	12	@	17½
Cheese	05	@	12½
Beans	1 75	@ 2	25
Eggs	15		15½
Seeds—Timothy	1 08	@ 1	39
Flax	1 11½	@ 1	12
Broom corn	03	@	04½
Potatoes, per bu	75	@ 1	15
Hides—Green to dry flint	04½	@	07½
Lumber—Common	10 00	@13	00
Wool	16	@	34
Cattle—Choice to extra	6 35	@ 6	50
Common to good	1 25	@ 5	15
Hogs	4 15	@ 4	60
Sheep	3 45	@ 5	15
NEW YORK.
Wheat	1 02¾	@ 1	06¼
Corn	64⅜	@	66
Oats	50¼	@	60
Eggs	19½
Butter	10	@	15
Wool	14	@	39
KANSAS CITY
Cattle	2 50	@ 5	90
Hogs	3 00	@ 4	40
Sheep	4 00	@ 4	85

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA

COMPOUND EXTRACT OF — TRADE MARK —

The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health.

At this season nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is worthy your confidence. It is peculiar in that it strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. Give it a trial.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

ADVERTISE JUDICIOUSLY

 Our High Grade List and Bargain Book sent to any address on receipt of a 2-c stamp.

LORD & THOMAS,
NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING
45 RANDOLPH STREET,
CHICAGO.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer who will send me their Express and P.O. address.
T. A. Slocum, M. C., 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

Disloyal SECRET OATHS!

ADDRESS OF

JOSEPH COOK,

OF BOSTON,

AT THE

Conference of Christians

CHICAGO, 1890.

No better document of its size for general distribution has been printed. Joseph Cook's address is a national treatment of a national subject, and very valuable for reference.

Single Copies 5 cents, or 12 copies for 50 cents.

NAT'L CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
WM. I. PHILLIPS, Treasurer,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago

SCOTCH RITE MASONRY ILLUSTRATED.

The complete illustrated ritual of the entir Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33d inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all Masonic rites, and are fully and accurately given in

"FREEMASONRY ILLUSTRATED,"

as advertised, but the signs, grips, passwords, etc., of these three degrees are given at the close of Vol 2 of

"Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated"

Vol. 1 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3d to 18th inclusive. Vol. 2 of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated comprises the degrees from 19th to 33d inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each; in cloth, $1 each. Each volume per dozen, paper covers, $4; per dozen, cloth bound, $9.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Christian Cynosure Premium.

No. 1.—This new and handsome design, Style D., is made from select White Maple; turned frame work in imitation of Bamboo; has fine Veneer Panel Sides; Turned Balls and Lattice Work on sides as shown; has Solid Bent Handles (see cut); upholstered in Ramie or French Linen; Plush Roll and Selicia Parasol. Price, $8.00.

No. 2.—Same upholstered in Wool Plush. Price, $9.00.

No. 3.—Upholstered in Mohair Plush, Sateen Parasol lined with Selicia. Price, $10.00.

Cut shows our No. 2 Lace Cover. Price, $1.00.

State Color of Upholstering desired.

The above premium can be obtained as follows:

1ST. PROPOSITION.

A Baby Carriage free for 12 new subscribers ($18.00).

2ND. PROPOSITION.

For 8 new subscribers and $2.00 cash ($14.00).

3RD. PROPOSITION.

For 1 new subscriber and $5.50 cash ($7.00).

4TH. PROPOSITION.

For one renewal and $6.00 cash ($7.50).

THE COSMOPOLITAN,

The Cheapest Illustrated Monthly in the World.

25 CENTS A NUMBER.
$2.40 PER YEAR.

EDITION FOR DEC. '90, 100,000 COPIES.

THE COSMOPOLITAN is literally what the New York Times calls it, "AT ITS PRICE, THE BRIGHTEST, MOST VARIED AND BEST EDITED OF THE MAGAZINES."

SUBSCRIBE. SUBSCRIBE. SUBSCRIBE.

An Unusual Opportunity

FOR NEW SUBSCRIBERS FOR ONE YEAR ONLY.

THE COSMOPOLITAN, per year	$2.40
The Christian Cynosure	1.50
The price of the two publications	3.90
We will furnish both for only	3.00

This offer is only to new subscribers to both the Cosmopolitan and the Cynosure, and only for one year.

To an old subscriber to the Cynosure who is new to the Cosmopolitan	$3.25
To old subscribers to both	3.50

A Splendidly Illustrated Periodical at a Price hitherto deemed Impossible.

TRY IT FOR A YEAR.

FOR MINISTERS

THE

"STORIES OF THE GODS"

is especially adapted. They will at once derstand the references to the idolatrous systems of the nations. And the idolatrous worship of the Masonic lodge is thus more clearly seen and easily understood. Will you furnish each pastor in your place with one of these pamphlets?

PRICE, ONLY 10 CENTS.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison Street, Chicago

Standard Works

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Associat'n

221 West Madison Street, Chicago, Illinois.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. ☞ A liberal discount to dealers.

Morgan's Exposition, Abduction AND MURDER, AND OATHS OF 33 DEGREES. Composed of "Freemasonry Exposed," by Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "History of the Abduction and Murder of Morgan;" "Valance's Confession of the Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan;" "Bernard's Reminiscences of Morgan Times," and "Oaths and Penalties of 33 Degrees." 304 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Secret Societies. A discussion of their character and claims by Rev. David McDill, Pres. J. Blanchard and Rev. Edward Beecher. In cloth, 35cts each; paper covers, 15cts each.

Rituals and Secrets Illustrated. Composed of "Temple of Honor Illustrated, "Adoptive Masonry Illustrated," "United Sons of Industry Illustrated," and "Secret Societies Illustrated." $1.00 each.

Ritual of the Grand Army of the REPUBLIC, with signs of recognition, passwords, etc., and the ritual of the Machinists' and Blacksmiths' Union. (The two bound together.) 10 cents each.

United Sons of Industry Illus-TRATED. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the secret tradesunion of the above name, giving the signs, grips, passwords, etc. 15cts each.

HOME AND HEALTH.

A WELL-DRESSED WOMAN.

The woman who is always well and neatly dressed is able to exercise a greater influence for good than one who is the reverse. The well-dressed woman is attractive to the eye, and the eye is one of the main avenues to the heart. Other things being equal, her influence is more otent than her neighbor' s, whose reputation of dressing "just as it happens" at home in some indefinable way casts a shade over whatever virtue she may possess. A woman neatly dressed is ready for emergencies. The chance caller and the unexpected guest find her ready to receive them. But perhaps the greatest necessity for looking well at home exists in the home itself. To the members of our own family we owe the first duty.—Ex.

LIGHT WITHOUT MATCHES.

To obtain light instantly without the use of matches, and without the danger of setting things on fire, is an easy matter. Take an oblong vial of the clearest of glass, put into it a piece of phosphorus about the size of a pea, upon this pour some pure olive oil heated to the boiling point, the bottle to be filled about one-third full; then cork tightly. Use great care in handling the phosphorus, and never touch it with uncovered hands. To use the light, remove the cork, allow the air to enter, and then re-cork. The whole empty space in the bottle will become luminous, and the light obtained will be a good one. As soon as the light becomes dim its power can be increased by opening the bottle and allowing a fresh supply of air to enter. In very cold weather it is sometimes necessary to heat the vial between the hands to increase the fluidity of the oil, and one bottle will last all winter. This ingenious contrivance may be carried in the pocket, and is used by watchmen of Paris in all magazines where explosive or inflammable materials are stored.

NERVES.

There is no greater preventative of nervous exhaustion than regular, unhurried muscular exercise. If we could moderate our open-air exercise, a large portion of nervous diseases would be abolished. For those who cannot get a sufficient holiday, the best substitute is an occasional day in bed. Many whose nerves are constantly strained in their daily vocation have discovered this for themselves. A Spanish merchant in Barcelona told his medical man that he always went to bed for two or three days whenever he could be spared from his business, and he laughed at those who spent their holidays on toilsome mountains. One of the hardest-worked women in England, who has for many years conducted a large wholesale business, retains excellent nerves at an advanced age, owing, it is believed, to her habit of taking one day a week in bed. If we cannot avoid frequent agitation, we ought, if possible, to give the nervous system time to recover itself between the shocks. Even an hour's seclusion after a good lunch will deprive a hurried, anxious day of much of its injury. The nerves can often be overcome by strategem when they refuse to be controlled by strength of will.—Methodist Protestant.

CANNED FOOD.

So much of the food of the civilized world is stored in cans, that a few reminders now and then are useful. Keep all canned goods in a cool place. If the can is opened do not allow the contents to remain any time in the can after exposure to the air; turn it out of the tin and remember that goods canned and opened will not keep nearly as long as fresh goods will. Strain off all liquor around lobsters, salmon and all vegetables except tomatoes, and throw it away; it is well to rinse lobsters and prawns in cold water when taken out; place them in a sieve and rinse them. Do not add any acid or sauce to food while in cans. All canned vegetables are better if allowed to stand an hour or so after turned from the can before cooking. Much has been said and written about food canned in tins, but if the housekeeper is only ordinarily careful and uses her eyes and nose with care, she will never cook any canned food that is not wholesome, for if it is not good it will betray itself.—Ex.

Wonders

Are wrought by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor in restoring gray hair to its original color, promoting a new growth, preventing the hair from falling, keeping it soft, silky, and abundant, and the scalp cool, healthy, and free from dandruff or humors. The universal testimony is that this preparation has no equal as a dressing, and is, therefore, indispensable to every well-furnished toilet.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for some time and it has worked wonders for me. I was troubled with dandruff and was rapidly becoming bald; but since using the Vigor my head is perfectly clear of dandruff, the hair has ceased coming out, and I now have a good growth, of the same color as when I was a young woman. I can heartily recommend any one suffering from dandruff or loss of hair to use Ayer's Hair Vigor as a dressing."—Mrs. Lydia O. Moody, East Pittston, Me.

"Some time ago my wife's hair began to come out quite freely.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

not only prevented my wife from becoming bald, but it also caused an entirely new growth of hair. I am ready to certify to this statement before a justice of the peace."—H. Hulsebus, Lewisburgh, Iowa.

"Some years ago, after a severe attack of brain fever, my hair all came out. I used such preparations for restoring it as my physicians ordered, but failed to produce a growth of hair. I then tried, successively, several articles recommended by druggists, and all alike fell short of accomplishing the desired result. The last remedy I applied was Ayer's Hair Vigor, which brought a growth of hair in a few weeks. I think I used eight bottles in two years; more than was necessary as a restorative, but I liked it as a dressing, and have continued to use it for that purpose. I believe Ayer's Hair Vigor possesses virtues far above those of any similar preparation now on the market."—Vincent Jones, Richmond, Ind.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

PREPARED BY

DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by Druggists and Perfumers.

The St. Louis Sermon.

Are Secret Societies a Blessing or a Curse?

An Address by Rev. B. Carradine, D. D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 4, 1891.

W. McCoy writes: "That sermon ought to be in the hands of every preacher in this land, and every citizen's too."

A pamphlet of 20 pages and cover.

Sent postpaid 25 copies $1.00. Single copy 5 cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

PATENTS

Caveats, and Trade-Marks obtained, and all Patent business conducted for Moderate Fees.

Our Office is Opposite U. S. Patent Office, and we can secure patent in less time than those remote from Washington.

Send model, drawing or photo., with description. We advise, if patentable or not, free of charge. Our fee not due till patent is secured.

A Pamphlet, "How to Obtain Patents," with names of actual clients in your State, county, or town, sent free. Address,

C. A. SNOW & CO.

Opposite Patent Office, Washington, D. C.

JOHN THREE-SIXTEEN,

A New 8-page Gospel Monthly,

Devoted to the evangelization and the material prosperity of the Indians, as well as the general spread of the Gospel and the building up of believers in "the faith once for all delivered to the saints." No patent medicine advertisements allowed in its columns. It is a red-hot Anti-Romanist, Anti-Rum, Anti-World-Compromising, Anti-Fraud, and thoroughly Non-Sectarian paper.

Only Twenty-five Cents a Year.

Address: JOHN THREE-SIXTEEN CO., Vinita, Indian Territory.

WILL SELL FOR

Regular Price.		Sellin Price.
	FIVE CENTS.
$ .15	"A WOMAN'S VICTORY, or the Query of the Lodgeville Church." By Jennie L. Hardie. Paper, 21 pp.	$ .05
$ .10	"WASHINGTON SOUVENIR." Portraits of Geo. Washington and his Co-patriots, with their testimony on Freemasonry. Size 18x24 inches. Framed it is an ornament to any home.	$ .05
	SIX CENTS.
$ .10	"SECRET SOCIETIES." A Lecture delivered at Oberlin College, Jan. 9, 1890. By Prof. Henry C. King. Paper, 36 pp.	$ .06
	TEN CENTS.
$ .15	"MY EXPERIENCE WITH SECRET SOCIETIES." By a Traveler. Paper, 51 pp.	$ .10
$ .25	"SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF JAMES G. BIRNEY." His relation to the Anti-slavery movement and place in history. By General William Birney. Paper, 32 pages.	$ .10
	TWENTY CENTS.
$ .30	"SONGS FOR THE TIMES," by Geo. W. Clark. Words and Music. Intended for Prohibition and W. C. T. U. meetings. Boards, 152 pages.	$ .20
	TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.
$ .75	"BEREA COLLEGE," Kentucky. An interesting history of the founding of that College for white and black in a slave State. Cloth, 87 pages.	.25
	FIFTY CENTS.
$1.00	"NATIONAL SUICIDE AND ITS PREVENTION." The following will show the drift of the book: Measure or Standard of Value; What is Honest Money; Our National Banks; Paper Money; Land Tenure, etc. By O. F. Lumry. Cloth, 224 pp.	$ .50
$1.50	"HISTORY OF SECRET SOCIETIES IN FRANCE," or "THE CRADLE OF REBELLIONS." By Lucien De La Hodde. Translated from the French by Gen'l. J. W. Phelps. Cloth, 479 pp.

Sent postpaid to anyaddress on of the selling price.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASS'N
221 W. Madison St., Chica

EVERY WATERPROOF COLLAR OR CUFF

THAT CAN BE RELIED ON

BE UP TO THE MARK

Not to Split!

Not to Discolor!

BEARS THIS MARK.

TRADE ELLULOID MARK.

NEEDS NO LAUNDERING. CAN BE WIPED CLEAN IN A MOMENT.

THE ONLY LINEN-LINED WATERPROOF COLLAR IN THE MARKET.

BEECHAM'S PILLS act like magic on a Weak Stomach.

Secret Societies Illustrated. Containing the signs, grips, passwords, emblems, etc., of Freemasonry (Blue Lodge and to the fourteenth degree of the York rite), Adoptive Masonry, Revised Odd-fellowship, Good Templarism, the Temple of Honor, the United Sons of Industry, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, with affidavits, etc. Over 250 cuts, 99 pages, paper cover. 25cts each.

Five Rituals Bound Together. "Odd-fellowship Illustrated" (old work). "Knights of Pythias Illustrated," "Good Templars Illustrated," "Exposition of the Grange," and "Ritual of the Grand Army of the Republic," are sold bound together in cloth for $1.00.

PATRIARCHS MILITANT ILLUSTRATED

THE COMPLETE RITUAL

With Eighteen Military Diagrams

As Adopted and Promulgated by the

SOVEREIGN GRAND LODGE

OF THE

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF ODD-FELLOWS

At Baltimore, Maryland, Sept. 24th, 1885.

Compiled and Arranged by John C. Underwood, Lieutenant General.

WITH THE

UNWRITTEN OR SECRET WORK ADDED,

ALSO AN

Historical Sketch and Introduction

By Pres't. J. Blanchard, of Wheaton College.

25 cents each.

For Sale by the National Christian Association 221 West Madison St., Chicago.

The Washington Souvenir,

Size 18x24 inches, and containing the portraits of

Washington and his Com-Patriots,

WITH THEIR TESTIMONY ON

FREEMASONRY.

—o—

It contains the portraits of

Washington.
John Adams, 2nd President of the United States.
James Madison, 4th President of the United States.
Joseph Ritner, Governor of Pennsylvania.
Richard Rush, Secretary of State and of the Treasury.
Alexander Hamilton, the friend of Washington.
Samuel Adams, the Father of the Revolution.
John Hancock, President of the Continental Congress.
Samuel Dexter, Secretary of War and of the Treasury.
William Wirt, Attorney-General.
John Marshall, Chief Justice of U. S. Supreme Court.
John Quincy Adams, 6th President of the United States.
Benjamin Rush, the Father of Temperance Reform in America.
Lebbeus Armstrong, Founder of the first Temperance Society.

Framed, it is an ornament to please the eye, and a testimony to gladden the heart. Sent safely packed in a mailing tube, postpaid, for ten cents.

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,
221 W. Madison St., Chicago.

Sermon on Secret Societies. By Rev. Daniel Dow, Woodstock, Conn. The special object of his sermon is to show the right and duty of Christians to examine into the character of secret societies, no matter what object such societies profess to have. 5cts each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. J. Day Brownlee. In reply to a Masonic Oration by Rev. Dr. Mayer, Wellsville, Ohio. 5 cents each.

FARM NOTES.

SOIL FOR STRAWBERRIES.

Passing one day a piece of ground that a young man was covering four or five inches thick with an extra good article of manure, I remarked, "Getting ready for early cabbages?" "No," he replied, "for strawberries." "Is the land poor?" I enquired. "No, it is very rich," he answered. "Then why manure it that way?" I asked in surprise. "Do you want to get an immense growth of foliage and no fruit?" "Why, Mr. C.," quoting a strawberry authority, "says 'land cannot be too rich for strawberries.'" "Yes," I replied, "I have seen that statement, but if you should see him and talk with him in reference to the ground you are preparing, I think he would hedge a little." As a general rule people are not apt to get ground too rich, but it is still possible to do so. What strawberries need is the fertility that nearest approaches a virgin soil; a soil that contains the remains of plant and animal life after it has been prepared in nature's laboratory. Such soil as you find in the corners of old Virginia rail fences, in blackberry thickets, in old stumpy clearings, anywhere in fact where cropping has ceased and nature has had her own way for a time. The nearest approach to this in cultivated farms is a heavy sod of grass or clover plowed under, and subdued by growing one or two crops of potatoes or wheat.—Vick's Magazine.

FERTILIZERS FOR STRAWBERRIES.

Horse manure is one of the best fertilizers for strawberries, but sheep manure, if well rotted, is rather richer in plant food. The suckers of strawberry plants are seldom removed from the vines unless they are taken off for starting a new plot. Sometimes, when they grow very thick and appear to be more than the land can carry, they are thinned out. Strawberry plants should be planted eighteen inches apart in rows four feet apart. By this plan about seven thousand plants are needed per acre.

Tankage is a refuse product from rendering establishments. At such works they put all the bone and offal containing fat into a tank and keep it under a high pressure of steam until the oil is separated. The residue left in the tank, after taking out the oil, is evaporated to dryness and sold under the name of tankage. It is very rich in nitrogen, which is the element in manure that tends to make a very strong leaf or wood growth in plants; consequently it is very valuable for such crops as cabbage or spinach or rhubarb, where foliage is desired, while for grain or fruit crops it should be used in connection with phosphoric acid and potash. As, for instance, it would be well to apply it to land that has a good dressing of unleached wood ashes. However, wood ashes should never be mixed with tankage or any other nitrogenous fertilizer, for it starts chemical action, by which the nitrogen is thrown off in form of a gas called ammonia, or hartshorn.—Ex.

LAYERING VINES.

Grape vines will root whenever layered, if allowed to remain covered for one season. I prefer to layer grapes in June, after the new growth has started about six inches. If then the cane is covered up carefully so as not to injure the new growth, roots will be sent out from each joint, and you may get a plant for every joint layered, which may be separated the following spring. If only one plant is wanted, cover the cane early in the spring, and it will be large enough to transplant the following year. It is a good plan to put some old, well-rotted manure near the layered cane, so that its roots can reach it. This will aid it much in forming roots. But do not put manure close against the cane.—Sel.

Sarsaparilla belongs to the smilax family of plants, and is found very generally over the American continent; but the variety that is richest in medicinal properties is the Honduras root, of which the famous Ayer's Sarsaparilla is made.

STANDARD WORKS

—ON—

SECRET SOCIETIES.

FOR SALE BY THE

National Christian Association,

221 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

TERMS:—Cash with order, or if sent by express C. O. D. at least $1.00 must be sent with order as a guaranty that books will be taken. Books at retail prices sent postpaid. Books by Mail are at risk of persons ordering, unless 10 cents extra is sent to pay for registering them, when their safe delivery is guaranteed. Books at retail ordered by express, are sold at 10 per cent discount and delivery guaranteed, but not express paid. Postage stamps taken for small sums. ☞A liberal discount to dealers

ON FREEMASONRY.

Freemasonry Illustrated. A complete exposition of the seven degrees of the Blue Lodge and Chapter. Profusely illustrated. Complete work of 640 pages, in cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 75 cents. First three degrees (376 pages), in cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Knight Templarism Illustrated. A full illustrated ritual of the six degrees of the Council and Commandery. A book of 341 pages. In cloth, $1.00. Paper covers, 50 cents.

Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated. The complete illustrated ritual of the entire Scottish Rite, in two volumes, comprising all the Masonic degrees from 3rd to 33rd inclusive. The first three degrees are common to all the Masonic Rites, and are fully and accurately given in "Freemasonry Illustrated." Vol. I. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprises the degrees from 3rd to 18th inclusive. Vol. II. of "Scotch Rite Masonry Illustrated" comprised the degrees from 19th to 33rd inclusive, with the signs, grips, tokens and passwords from 1st to 33rd degree inclusive. Price per volume, paper cover, 50 cents each. In cloth, $1.00 each.

Hand-Book of Freemasonry. By E. Ronayne, Past Master of Keystone Lodge No. 639, Chicago. Gives the complete standard ritual of the first three degrees of Freemasonry. New edition, 274 pages. Bound flexible cloth covers, 50 cents.

Freemasonry Exposed. By Capt. William Morgan. The genuine old Morgan book republished. 25 cents each.

Adoptive Masonry Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of the five degrees of Female Freemasonry, by Thomas Lowe. 20 cents each.

Light on Freemasonry. By Elder D. Bernard. In cloth, $1.50 each. Paper, 75 cents each.

The Master's Carpet, or Masonry and Baal Worship Identical, explains the true source and meaning of every ceremony and symbol of the lodge. Bound in fine cloth, 420 pages, 75 cents.

Mah-Hah-Bone; comprises the Hand Book, Master's Carpet and Freemasonry at a glance. Bound in one volume. In cloth, 589 pages, $1.00.

History of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. As prepared by seven committees of citizens, appointed to ascertain the fate of Morgan. 25 cents each.

Ex-President John Quincy Adams' Letters on the Nature of Masonic Oaths, Obligations and Penalties. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 35 cents.

Hon. Thurlow Weed on the Morgan Abduction. This is the legally attested statement of this eminent Christian journalist and statesman concerning the unlawful seizure and confinement of Capt. Morgan in Canandaigua jail, his removal to Fort Niagara and subsequent drowning in Lake Ontario. 5 cents each.

The Broken Seal; or Personal Reminiscences of the Abduction and Murder of Capt. Wm. Morgan. By Samuel D. Greene. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Reminiscences of Morgan Times. By Elder David Bernard. This is a thrilling narrative of the incidents connected with Bernard's Revelation of Freemasonry. 10 cents each.

The Mystic Tie, or Freemasonry a League with the Devil. This is an account of the church trial of Peter Cook and wife, of Elkhart, Indiana, for refusing to support a reverend Freemason. 15 cents each.

Freemasonry Self-Condemned. By Rev. J. W. Bain. A careful and logical statement of reasons why secret orders should not be fellowshiped by the Christian Church. Paper covers, price, 20 cents each.

Grand Lodge Masonry. Its relation to civil government and the Christian religion. By Pres. J. Blanchard. The un-Christian, anti-republican and despotic character of Freemasonry is proved from the highest Masonic authorities. 5 cents each.

Anti-masonic Sermons and Addresses. Composed of "Masonry a Work of Darkness;" the Sermons of Messrs. Cross, William M'Nary, Dow and Sarver, the two addresses of President Blanchard, and the addresses of President H. H. George, Prof. J. G. Carson and Rev. M. S. Drury; "Thirteen Reasons Why a Christian cannot be a Freemason," "Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion," and "Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate?" 287 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Are Masonic Oaths Binding on the Initiate. By Rev. L. A. Post. 5 cents each.

Thirteen Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason. By Rev. Robert Armstrong. 5 cents each.

Freemasonry a Fourfold Conspiracy. Address of Pres. J. Blanchard. This is a most convincing argument against the lodge. 5 cents each.

Finney on Masonry. The character, claims and practical workings of Freemasonry. By Pres. Charles G. Finney, of Oberlin College. President Finney was a "bright Mason," but left the lodge when he became a Christian. This book has opened the eyes of multitudes. In cloth, 75 cents. Paper cover, 35 cents.

Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry, as proved in court in the New Berlin trials. The New Berlin trials began in the attempt of Freemasons to prevent public initiations by seceding Masons. These trials were held at New Berlin, Chenango Co., N. Y., April 13 and 14, 1831, and General Augustus C. Welsh, sheriff of the county, and other adhering Freemasons, swore to the truthful revelation of the oaths and penalties. 10 cents each.

Stearns's Inquiry into the Nature and Tendency of Freemasonry. 338 pages. Paper covers, 40 cents.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. W. P. McNary, pastor United Presbyterian church. 5 cents each.

Oaths and Penalties of the 33 Degrees of Freemasonry. To get these thirty three degrees of Masonic bondage, the candidate takes half-a-million horrible oaths. 15 cents each.

Sermon on Masonry. By Rev. James Williams, Presiding Elder of Dakota District Northwestern Iowa Conference M. E. Church—a seceding Master Mason. 10 cents each.

Masonic Oaths Null and Void: or Freemasonry Self-Convicted. This is a book for the times. The design of the author is to refute the arguments of those who claim that the oaths of Freemasonry are binding upon those who take them. 207 pages. Postpaid, 40 cents each.

Masonry a Work of Darkness, adverse to Christianity, and inimical to republican government. By Rev. Lebbeus Armstrong (Presbyterian), a seceding Mason of 21 degrees. 15 cents each.

Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois. Judge Daniel H. Whitney was Master of the lodge when S. H. Keith, a member of his lodge, murdered Ellen Slade. Judge Whitney, by attempting to bring Keith to justice, brought on himself the vengeance of the lodge, but he boldly replied to the charges against him, and afterwards renounced Masonry. 15 cents each.

Masonic Salvation, as taught by its standard authors. This pamphlet is a compilation from standard Masonic works, in proof of the following proposition: Freemasonry claims to be a religion that saves men from all sin, and purifies them for heaven. 111 pages, price, postpaid, 20 cents.

Freemasonry at a Glance illustrates every sign, grip and ceremony of the first three degrees. Paper cover, 32 pages. Single copy, six cents.

Masonic Outrages. Compiled by Rev. H. H. Hinman. Showing Masonic assault on lives of seceders, on reputation, and on free speech; its interference with justice in courts, etc. Postpaid, 20 cents.

Prof. J. G. Carson, D. D., on Secret Societies. A most convincing argument against fellowshiping Freemasons in the Christian church. 10 cents each.

Freemasonry Contrary to the Christian Religion. 5 cents each.

Bernard's Appendix to Light on Masonry. Paper covers, 25 cents each.

ON ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

Revised Odd-fellowship Illustrated. The complete revised ritual of the Lodge, Encampment and Rebekah (ladies) degrees, profusely illustrated, and guaranteed to be strictly accurate; with a sketch of the origin, history and character of the order, over one hundred foot-note quotations from standard authorities, showing the character and teachings of the order, and an analysis of each degree by ex-President J. Blanchard. This ritual corresponds exactly with the "Charge Books" furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge. In cloth, $1.00; paper cover, 50cts.

Patriarchs Militant Illustrated. The complete ritual of the Patriarchs Militant degree. This is an accurate copy of the Charge Book furnished by the Sovereign Grand Lodge of the Independent Order of Odd-fellows, with the eighteen military diagrams and the unwritten (secret) work added. Paper cover, 25cts each.

Odd-fellowship Judged by its own utterances; its doctrine and practice examined in the light of God's Word. By Rev. J. H. Brockman. This is an exceedingly interesting, clear discussion of the character of Odd-fellowship, in the form of a dialogue. In cloth 50cts; paper covers, 25cts.

Sermon on Odd-fellowship and other secret societies, by Rev. J. Sarver, pastor Evangelical Lutheran church. This is a very clear argument against secretism of all forms, and the duty to disfellowship Odd-fellows, Freemasons, Knights of Pythias and Grangers, is clearly shown by their confessed character as found in their own publications. 10cts each.

Odd-fellowship: Its History and its Work. By President J. Blanchard. A neat pamphlet with cover. Postpaid, 5 cts.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Between Two Opinions: or the Question of the Hour. By Miss E. E. Flagg, author of "Little People," "A Sunny Life," etc., etc. Everyone who loves to read a good story, chaste and elegant in expression, pure in thought, interesting in narrative, should read this book upon the power of secret societies in politics, and the remedy. 389 pages, cloth, postpaid, $1.00.

Holden with Cords. Or the Power of the Secret Empire. By E. E. Flagg, author of "A Sunny Life," etc. This is a thrillingly interesting story, accurately true to life because mainly a narration of historical facts. In cloth, $1.00; in paper, 50 cents.

Sermon on Secretism. By Rev. R. Theo. Cross, pastor Congregational church, Hamilton, N. Y. This is a very clear array of the objections to all secret societies, and to Masonry especially, that are apparent to all. 5cts each.

Narratives and Arguments, showing the conflict of secret societies with the Constitution and law of the Union and of the States. By Francis Semple. The fact that secret societies interfere with the execution and pervert the administration of law is here clearly proved. 15cts each.

Temple of Honor Illustrated. A full and complete illustrated ritual of "The Templars of Honor and Temperance," commonly called the Temple of Honor. By a Templar of Fidelity and Past Worthy Chief Templar. 25cts each.

Minutes of the Syracuse Convention. Containing addresses by Rev. B. T. Roberts, Chas. W. Green, Esq., Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Rev. D. S. Caldwell, Mrs. M. E. Gage, Elder J. R. Baird and others. 25cts each.

Eminent Men on Secret Societies. Composed of "Washington Opposed to Secret Societies," "Judge Whitney's Defence," "The Mystic Tie," "Narratives and Arguments," the "Anti-mason's Scrap-Book" and "Oaths and Penalties of Freemasonry as Proved in the New Berlin Trials." 326 pages; cloth, $1.00.

Good Templarism Illustrated. A full and accurate exposition of the degrees of the lodge, temple and coucil. 25cts each.

Pres. H. H. George on Secret Societies. A powerful address, showing clearly the duty of Christian churches to disfellowship secret societies. 10cts each.

Secret Societies, Ancient and Modern, and College Secret Societies. Composed of the two pamphlets combined in this title, bound together in cloth. $1.00 each.

Proceedings of Pittsburgh Convention. Containing official reports. Addresses by Rev. D. R. Kerr, D.D., Rev. B. T. Roberts, Rev. G. T. R. Meiser, Prof. J. R. W. Sloane, D.D., Pres. J. Blanchard, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D.D., Rev. Woodruff Post, Rev. Henry Cogswell, Prof. C. A. Blanchard and Rev. W. E. Coquilette. 25 cents each.

College Secret Societies. Their customs, character and the efforts for their suppression. By H. L. Kellogg. Containing the opinions of many prominent college presidents and others, and a full account of the murder of Mortimer Leggett. 25cts each.

Secrecy vs. the Family, State and Church. By Rev. M. S. Dury. The antagonism of organized secrecy to the welfare of the family, state and church, is clearly shown. 10cts each.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

BUSINESS.

NEW PREMIUMS FOR NEW SUBSCRIBERS.

THE BEST OFFER YET MADE.

During June and July we offer to each NEW subscriber for the Christian Cynosure the following liberal premiums:

One copy of Smith's Standard Bible Dictionary, neatly printed and bound in half-seal covers, and one copy of "The Life and Words of Christ," by Cunningham Geikie, D. D., a larger volume, equally well printed and similarly bound.

Smith's Dictionary has long been a standard publication for Bible students, and is especially rich in trustworthy biography and geography, indicating a vast amount of study and research. It contains 468 pages of closely printed, double-column pages, and, with its thousand references, will be found a useful help in studying the Scriptures.

Geikie's Life of Christ is also very rich in Biblical information, combining the history of our Lord and his disciples with reliable descriptions of the manners and customs of the times in which they lived, the worship of the Israelites, and other matters of interest for careful students. Its reputation as a literary work is excellent. It contains 826 pages.

For persons who have never taken our paper and desire to subscribe for one year, we consider this the most generous offer that has ever been made by this office. On receipt of two dollars, both books will be forwarded, with the paper, to the address of any actually new subscriber. For three dollars and the names of two new subscribers, the books will be sent free, during June and July.

We offer as a PREMIUM for subscribers to the Christian Cynosure the choice of nearly

100 BABY CARRIAGES,

from the Lowest to the Highest grades.

These carriages are manufactured by L. C. Spencer, who has carried on this business for years in the "Carpenter Building," where the Cynosure is published.

See Premium advertisement on page 13.

WIVES SHOULD HAVE IT.

A prominent county officer was handed THE CARRADINE SERMON on the cars, and after reading it through he said: "I am a Mason and Odd-fellow, and he tells some hard facts. I would not like to have my wife get hold of that. She is strongly enough opposed to them now without getting hold of such arguments."

TRACTS TELL.

I did belong to a few secret societies, but since I read your tracts, given to me by our minister, I am more than ever convinced of my great folly. GEO. E. BEAR.

NEWS OF THE WEEK (Continued from 13th page).

The Sanatarium printing office and Adventist Institution, at Battle Creek, Mich., was burned Monday. Loss, $45,000; insurance small.

John Zwald has asked to be taken into custody at Sacramento, Cal., for the murder of his two wives. He said he poisoned the first at Anoka, Minn., eleven years ago, and the second met the same fate at Wayne. Neb.

Edward Elliott, son-in-law of Julia Ward Howe, was drowned at Prospect Lake, Colorado, recently.

Wheat in the Dakotas and corn in Iowa is reported above the average acreage.

The Indiana Midland strike, which tied up the west end of that road for thirty days and was thought to have been settled, is again at fever heat.

A fund for the maintenance of General N. P. Banks, who is now an old man, is being raised in Massachusetts.

The statue of General Grant, presented to the city of Galena by H. H. Kohlsaat, of Chicago, was unveiled Wednesday afternoon with appropriate ceremonies. Hon. Chauncey M. Depew delivered the principal oration.

The gold shipments so far this year are about $60,000,000, and Europe is still crying for more.

The Connell-Hall-McLoster Company, wholesale dry goods dealers of Nashville, Tenn., assigned Thursday. The liabilities are $473,000 and the assets $725,000.

It was reported Thursday that the Chilian insurgent steamship Itata, which escaped from the custody of the United States marshal at San Diego, Cal., recently, had surendered to American men-of-war at Iquique.

The Huntingburg (Ind.) bank closed its doors Thursday morning, the result of the cashier's permitting depositors to overdraw their accounts to the extent of about $40,000. The directors intend to apply for a receiver.

—Twenty-three pauper immigrants were returned to Europe by the Federal authorities at New York Thursday.

Only five States out of the forty-four have refused to make appropriations for representation at the World's Columbian Exposition, while twenty-four, including Illinois with its $1,000,000 and two territories, have appropriated $2,775,000 toward this great national undertaking. This leaves only fifteen States to be heard from, of which at least ten are sure to make worthy appropriations. The five which have the distinction of refusing an appropriation are New York, Arkansas, Kansas, Oregon and Rhode Island.

Benson J. Lossing, the well-known historiographer, died last week, aged 78 years. His reputation as an author and illustrator rests upon his numerous historical publications, which have had a wide circulation.

The steamer Kite started from New York on its Arctic exploring expedition on Saturday. Lieutenant Peary is in charge of the exploring party, and he will try to circumnavigate Greenland.

Iowa's crop bulletin, issued last week, shows that there has been a general rainfall throughout the State, and the prospects of an abundant harvest continue good.

Three tramps attacked Joseph Brannon, a farmer's son, 19 years of age, at Washburn, Iowa, on Friday, terribly mutilating him, and escaped.

The city government of Philadelphia has sent a formal request to President Harrison for the aid of the Treasury Department in the investigation of the Keystone bank failure, now in progress.

W. B. Miller, manager of the Detroit, Michigan, gas company, it is alleged, is a defaulter in the sum of $14,000.

FOREIGN.

At Vladivostock, Russia, on June 1 the Czarewitch opened the first portion of the Trans-Siberian railroad, and laid a memorial tablet amid a scene of great enthusiasm.

—A Cairo dispatch says a plague of locusts threatens the Egyptian delta.

The United States now has a larger trade with Costa Rico than any other nation. The total value of last year's imports was $4,250,000, of which the United States furnished $1,500,000.

It is semi-officially announced that the Russian government is ready to negotiate with Baron Hirsch for the transportation of Russian Hebrews to the Argentine Republic.

A bill has been introduced into the British Parliament for a settlement of the Behring Sea controversy, and has passed its third reading in the House of Commons.

A monument is about to be erected in Geneva, Switzerland, to Dr. Merel D'Aubigne.

Sir John Macdonald, Premier of Canada for nearly half a century, died on Saturday last, and his death is deeply lamented.

At a meeting of Methodists at Cardiff, Wales, last week, resolutions were adopted condemning the Prince of Wales for playing baccarat.

The announcement that the Jewish Emigation Society has arranged for the transportation of 60.000 Polish Hebrews to London has awakened the English government to the evils that may follow such an influx of destitute foreigners.

The census of London, just completed, shows a population of 4,211,000.

Lieutenant Jacques, in command of a large force, is about leaving Bagamoyo for Lake Tanganyika. The object of Lieutenant Jacques' expedition is to suppress slavery and to establish a station at the latter place.

The hundredth anniversary of the death of Mozart will be celebrated in advance, at his native town, Salseburg, from July 15 to July 18.

At the sale in Paris of the Roederer collection of paintings, etc., Millet's pastel of the "Angelus," which he sold for $600, fetched $20,000.

Professor Gould, of Johns Hopkins University of Baltimore, who has been in Europe for the last two years in the interest of the United States Labor Bureau, has nearly completed his voluminous report, which will contain many valuable facts concerning the labor question in general and the wage problem in particular.

Advices from the city of Guatamala are to the effect that secret meetings are being held in the Altas, or upper districts of Guatamala, at which revolutionary plans are being formulated for the overthrow of the Barrillas government.

Well, Sarah, what have you been doing to make you look so young? Oh, nothing much, only been using Hall's Hair Renewer to restore the color of my hair.

DR. PRICE'S Cream Baking Powder.

Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

Kennedy's Medical Discovery cures Horrid Old Sores, Deep Seated Ulcers of 40 years standing, Inward Tumors, and every disease of the skin, except Thunder Humor, and Cancer that has taken root. Price $1.50. Sold by every Druggist in the U. S. and Canada.

$6000.00 a year is being made by John R. Goodwin, Troy, N.Y., at work for us. Reader, you may not make as much, but we can teach you quickly how to earn from $5 to $10 a day at the start, and more as you go on. Both sexes, all ages. In any part of America, you can commence at home, giving all your time, or spare moments only to the work. All is new. Great pay SURE for every worker. We start you, furnishing everything. EASILY, SPEEDILY learned. PARTICULARS FREE. Address at once, STINSON & CO., PORTLAND, MAINE.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St., N. Y.

For a Disordered Liver Try BEECHAM'S PILLS. 25cts. a Box. OF ALL DRUGGISTS.

PASTOR KOENIG'S TRADE MARK NERVE TONIC

Would rather be without bread

BISHOP'S RESIDENCE, Marquettte, Mich., Nov. 7, 1889.

The Rev. J. Kossbiel of above place writes: I have suffered a great deal, and whenever I feel now a nervous attack coming I take a dose of Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic and feel relieved. I think a great deal of it and would rather be without bread than without the Tonic.

CURED AFTER THIRTY-TWO YEARS.

MILWAUKEE, May 25, 1887.

REV. KOENIG:—I am personally acquainted with a man who (in the year 1878, then forty-four years of age) commenced to take your medicine for epilepsy, which he had had for thirty-two years. The attacks which he had formerly every four weeks diminished as soon as he took your medicine and disappeared entirely since August, 1880. The man is so healthy now that he can attend to his business without fear. By this wonderful cure a large family has been made happy, and of this he is convinced and gladly testifies.

REV. PATER AEGIDIUS.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

KOENIG MEDICINE CO.,

50 West Madison, cor. Clinton St., CHICAGO, ILL.

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

Price $1 per Bottle. 6 Bottles for $5.

Puget Sound catechism and its chief city SEATTLE, WASHINGTON Send stamp to Eshelman, Llewellyn & Co., Seattle, Wash.

PENSIONS OLD CLAIMS Settled Under New Law.

Soldiers, Widows, Parents, send for blank applications and information. PATRICK O'FARRELL Pension Agent, Washington, D. C.

WHEATON COLLEGE,

WHEATON, ILL.

A School for Men and Women.

COMMENCEMENT THURSDAY, JUNE 25TH, 1891.

Full College Courses, Preparatory School, Business School, Musical Conservatory and Art School. Fifteen Professors and Instructors.

Send for Catalogue.

CHAS. A. BLANCHARD, Pres.

Christian Cynosure.

"IN SECRET HAVE I SAID NOTHING."—Jesus Christ.

VOL. XXIII., No. 40. CHICAGO, THURSDAY, JUNE 18, 1891. WHOLE No. 1,103.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY THE

NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION,

221 West Madison Street, Chicago.

SUBSCRIPTIONS PER YEAR..... $2.00
IF PAID STRICTLY IN ADVANCE..... 1.50

☞No paper discontinued unless so requested by the subscriber, and all arrearages paid.☜

Address all letters for publication to EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE, CHICAGO. Writers' names must always be given. No manuscript returned unless requested and postage enclosed.

[Entered at the Postoffice, Chicago, Ill., as Second Class Matter.]

CONTENTS.

EDITORIAL:
Notes and Comments.... 1
College Fraternities..... 8
Personal Responsibility. 8
Masonry and Justice.... 8
Mormon Property..... 8
Burlesque Secret Orders 9
Commencement at Wheaton..... 9
Commencement at Oberlin..... 9
Personal Mention 9
CONTRIBUTIONS:
The Mafia and Similar Societies..... 1
Secrecy and Secretism.. 2
The Terms of the Compact..... 2
Suggestions for a Concentration of Reform Work 3
CORRESPONDENCE:
His Heart in the Work; A Highly Important Book; The Christian Conference Indorsed; Reform Work Needed in a New Field; Stirred Up by the Truth; Pith and Point.....5,6
OBITUARY..... 6
LITERATURE..... 7
SecretSocietiesCondemned 7
SELECTED:
Higher Criticism. 3
Enormous Influx of Aliens..... 3
"De Trouble in de Church"..... 3
The Gospel and the Gospel Only..... 3
The "Makeup" of the Sunday Newspaper..... 3
The Power of Christianity..... 3
Freemasonry—Is it Antagonistic to Christ?.. 4
NEW ENGLAND LETTER..... 4
WASHINGTON LETTER..... 4
REFORM NEWS:
Christian Workers' Annual Convention; Twelve Years as Missionary in the South... 5
AGENTS AND LECTURERS.... 7
THE N. C. A 7
THE HOME.....10
TEMPERANCE.....11
BIBLE LESSON.....12
RELIGIOUS NEWS.....12
NEWS OF THE WEEK.....13
DONATIONS 13
HOME AND HEALTH.....14
FARM NOTES... 15
BUSINESS.....16

The Roman Catholics, now that the State compulsory education law of Illinois is to remain unchanged for two years longer, will undoubtedly continue their united and persistent effort to introduce teachers into the public schools who are active members of their church, as they have been doing for years past. In this manner they propose to transform the public school into a garden for the propagation of their religious plants, and as long as they can succeed in this species of sectarian culture, they will not oppose the compulsory educational statute. Their work now lies deeper—to Romanize the schools at the State expense. Will the people permit it?

Commencement exercises of numerous colleges and universities occupy these early weeks of summer, and the reports of educational progress, generally, appear to be quite satisfactory. While there is great room for improvement in the manners and customs of many of these institutions of learning, devoted teachers and earnest students, fully conscious of the important work in which they are respectively engaged, exercise a most gratifying influence upon their companions in study, and leave a wholesome impress upon the character of their alma maters and the minds of the public. Elsewhere we print the announcements of the approaching commencements at Oberlin and Wheaton Colleges, two institutions whose high standards of Christian and literary instruction have placed them in the front rank of American educators.

A good deal has of late been said and written about "heresy hunters." From the contents of our exchange papers we conclude that the hunt need be neither long nor difficult, nor the game, when secured, of much value. The Briggs case has received due attention. Dr. Bridgman, the Baptist preacher in New York, who resigned because of his "second probation" belief, has been received into the Episcopal church, with his wife. Four of the young men on trial for heresy before the Covenanter church at Pittsburgh, were found guilty and suspended; but one of them, Rev. O. B. Milligan, refuses to vacate his pulpit, and, with 150 adherents, proposes to keep on preaching his own doctrines. But in all such cases, Christians should be able to say with Paul, "None of these things move me." Never has there been a time when personal faith and personal adherence to all the teachings of the Gospel were more necessary —when so much depended upon the right living and unswerving testimony of the saints of God. Let none be deceived by the numberless new religions and skepticisms of the day. Whatever is not of God cannot stand in the judgment, and every form of idolatry shall perish.

Public feeling in England is extremely bitter against the Prince of Wales, the great Masonic mogul, and his gambling habits, as exposed in the Cummings baccarat case. Indeed, in some quarters of the kingdom, the expressions of the people are assuming a revolutionary form, with mutterings that portend trouble of a serious character whenever he shall endeavor to ascend the throne. Better counsels will, however, undoubtedly prevail as soon as the first exasperation at his course has subsided; but his future conduct will be watched with active interest. His youthful recklessness and extravagance were bad enough, but at his present age, if ever, he should be able to exercise the discretion of a wise sovereign, with the moral convictions of a churchman, as becomes the representative of a great government involving the interests of both church and State. The popular censure of his habits was also heightened by the report that he had gone from the Cummings trial to attend the Ascot horse races. There seems to be plenty of room for reformation in his career.

The question whether the Columbian World's Fair shall be opened on Sunday or not is stirring up our Seventh Day brethren, and eliciting comments in their church papers which lead to a belief that they would prefer to have it wide open on Sundays if they cannot have it closed on Saturdays. The American Sabbath has, by the general consent of all orthodox Christians, the Romanists, our general government, State laws, and the great mass of non-religious citizens, been fixed on Sunday. It is the day honored by the resurrection of our Lord, and the occasion of his first re-union with his disciples after that event, which ended the Jewish dispensation and ushered in the new one under which we live. Unless some better reason than the perpetuation of the Jewish Sabbath is advanced, there certainly is no reason for making our weekly civil and religious rest-day any other than it now is. Our Seventh Day friends would undoubtedly object to adopting the Mosaic rites which were prescribed for the observance of the Jewish Sabbath, while they strenuously maintain the sanctity of the seventh day. As for the Columbian Exposition, it ought to be subject to the same authority and reasons that have made Sunday the Christian sanctified Sabbath.

The work of the six months' session of the Illinois State Legislature, which adjourned on Friday of last week, possesses interest for many readers as indicating the progress of the times. Altogether the session possessed the negative merit of not having done much harm to the public interests, beyond entailing upon the tax-payers the expense of a protracted legislation. Quite unexpectedly it failed to amend the compulsory education law, which is so distasteful to certain classes of religious and political partisans. For the present, therefore, the public school retains its past position, with all its benefits and errors, and the sectarian seminary must look out for its own interests, subject to State inspection. The defeat of the amendatory bill, however, was due to a disagreement between the two houses, as both parties were pledged to amend the law. The Legislature appropriated the sum of $800,000 to aid the Columbian Exposition, and $6,750,000 for other purposes, and to meet necessary State expenditures for the next two years. The aggregate is only $200,000 in excess of the amount appropriated at the previous session. Several laws designed to aid the best interests of the people were also passed. They will receive attention in future issues.

THE MAFIA AND SIMILAR SOCIETIES.

AN ESSAY READ AT A MEETING OF THE HEPWORTH LEAGUE AT VALLEY CHAPEL, FRANKLIN CO., KANSAS, BY DAMON HIGBIE.

We read with horror of the methods of the secret Mafia of New Orleans; of their way of enforcing their orders through the terrorism of assassination. We shudder at the thought of their power over the lives and fortunes of those who will not yield obedience to their mandates. We justly condemn the society. But do we ever wait to think that similar societies exist among us, and are even popular? When I say similar, I do not mean like, for then we would have other Mafias among us; but I do mean similar. Many of our popular societies enforce their orders by terrorism. They make the people afraid to disobey their mandates. For example, take almost any of our mechanics' unions. They endeavor to enforce their orders through terrorism. They have not even asked our legislators to legalize their methods. They demand that employers shall employ them instead of other laborers. They make it dangerous for an employer to disregard their orders; and also, they make it dangerous for anyone to seek employment where they forbid. They make it dangerous for anyone to learn a trade, without first getting their consent, and their consent is generally doled out very sparingly, for fear there may be competition within their own ranks. They do not ask that these demands be made the law of the land. They prefer that it should be the law of their own sweet wills. Still, these societies are popular. I record it with shame for the civilization of the nineteenth century.

In regard to what is right, each one may have his own standard; but when it comes to regulating the conduct of men toward each other, we must have a public standard of morals, and that standard is the law. We establish governments and pay taxes to fix and uphold that public standard of right doing. The majority may sometimes make mistakes; but a majority is safer than a minority, especially if this minority has the egotism to assume a right to control the majority. If a mistake or wrong is discovered in our laws, the majority should have it righted. There is no safer or better way to fix the standard of right, and enact it into law, than to let a majority of all the people decide what the law shall be; and then all should abide by that standard. In a republic, where all the people have a voice in the government, there is no excuse for a limited society to try to govern. If they cannot now get a majority of all the people to favor their idea of what is right, they ought to wait till they can.

In all matters concerning the control of the people, everything should be decided by a majority of all. There should be no secret cabals. Evil dreads the light; justice is not ashamed to be seen. A secret cabal is a dangerous thing. It may be planning evil, or it may not be, but in either case it is wrong in concealing from the public that which the public has a right to know.

If we admit that these secret societies have a right to practice the milder forms of terrorism, such as striking, boycotting, etc., which are so common in all our large cities, we will have to admit, if these means fail to control, that then the sterner terrorism of assassination is justifiable. If they have a right to punish us, to compel us to obey their orders, it follows that they have a right to make the punishment sufficient for that purpose. There is no middle place to draw the line of rectitude. The knight of labor who would enforce his orders by the boycott cannot consistently complain of the Mafia, who would enforce his by assassination. The two crimes are similar. They differ only in degree. If the one is not a crime, neither is the other.

All control of the people should be through regularly established laws. If the laborers who belong to unions think they ought to have all the best places of employment, and that the non-union laborers should be satisfied with such places as the unionists do not want, they should ask the people to make that the law of the land. If it is wrong for a non-union man to seek any place of employment that a union man would like to have, let our laws declare it to be wrong. Our laws should be the public morals. If it is wrong for a man to learn a trade, without first getting the consent of some union, let that also be prohibited by the laws. Let me predict that the labor unions of the country will never ask for such laws. They know full well that the majority of the people have too much natural justice to sanction the enactment of such partial laws. They prefer to take their chances of ruling through some kind of terrorism. It may be by strikes, or boycotts, or by creating a prejudice against those who refuse to be governed by them. Falsehood and slander are frequently resorted to, to conceal the real point at issue. The whole subject may be stated in this one sentence: "A secret cabal, knowing that it cannot rule by fair means, seeks to rule by means not fair." The main difference between these different cabals, is that some of them use fouler means of terrorism than others do.

As I have said, the majority should rule, and that rule should be through regularly established laws, instead of through the changeful passions of mobs. Mobs often execute the will of a minority, instead of a majority, of the people. While I think the people of New Orleans did wrong in resorting to mob violence, recently, I do not feel angry towards them, for I believe they did what they thought was right. They either did not wait to think, or they were not capable of judging of great moral questions. Would they be willing to establish it as a rule of right doing, or law, that a mob might kill anyone whom that mob might think ought to be killed? Of course, they would not be willing to make that the law of the land, to apply to all mobs. They might be willing to make it the law, to apply only when they themselves constitute the mob; but to apply it to mobs that might differ in opinion from themselves would be apt to make them see more clearly than they now do. Such a law would do much harm; therefore it would be wrong. It is the egotism of human nature that makes those people assume that they did right in doing what they would not willingly make legal for others to do. In upholding mobs we are traveling a dangerous road.

There are men (and their name is legion) whose moral natures are but partly developed. They are hardly capable of judging as to what is right and wrong. Such men usually imbibe what seems to them to be the popular ideas of morals; therefore it is the duty of all who clearly see the right to endeavor to make the true standard of morals the popular standard; and since our laws are the only standard of public morals that we can have, all who love their country and humanity should endeavor to popularize the idea of reverence for law. Obedience to law is the highest aim of the true patriot. It is the foundation upon which all civil society is built. A people who respect not their laws will soon be without patriotism. Their country will be the prey of domestic factions and foreign foes. Those who teach that our laws should be disregarded, and the orders of secret societies substituted for them, are undermining the patriotism of our people, and paving the way for unnumbered crimes and evils. Wherever such ideas prevail, terrorism will be resorted to. Its milder forms will first be used, but as these will fail to control, the sterner terrorism of assassination will follow, till even the Italian Mafia will be outdone. Poverty, sorrows, and crimes will as surely follow the disappearance of respect for law, as night follows the disappearance of the sun. If we respect not our laws, we will rapidly sink to the condition of savages.

SECRECY AND SECRETISM.

BY REV. S. F. PORTER.

A sermon was delivered not long ago by the Rev. F. C. Priest before a lodge of Odd-fellows at Derby Line, Vermont, in which he introduced some strange arguments to justify secretism. The early Christians hid from their murderers in the burial caves, or catacombs, of Rome, and worshiped God in secret; therefore, the secretism of the lodge is right. Again, the Infinite One who knows all things sees in secret; therefore, it is right to invent secret places and to look out from a lodge upon all the rest of mankind.

Further, the Almighty Creator of all things, who fills immensity, is necessarily a mystery to finite man; therefore, it is perfectly right and proper for Odd-fellows to get up silly performances to teach, i. e., to deceive, their initiates, and call them "mysteries."

In the further discussion of the subject, Mr. Priest takes up the three links of Odd-fellowship, representing "Friendship, Love and Truth," as if they were emblems of universal duty. Instead of this, the first (Friendship) is for those who are sworn into the lodge. And Love is for those who pay their dues; if they neglect this the link is broken, and they are loved no longer. And Truth refers to the performance of the oaths and promises given when sworn into the lodge. It is amazing with what shallow logic the devil can deceive mankind!

Let us then briefly examine the character of secrecy, which is sometimes right; and secretism, which is always wrong.

In war, when our country is invaded, it is right to deceive the enemy by secret stratagems and false movements. Because, as it is more merciful to overcome him by taking his supplies rather than by killing him, so it is more merciful still to take him prisoner by deception and false information. But when the war is over, killing is murder, taking property is robbery, deception is lying, and secrecy is secretism, without the shadow of an excuse. Is the G. A. R. surrounded by armed foes that it needs to use military secrecy for protection? If not, away with the childish pretence! Let its members be men, and not little boys to play war!

2. In the early ages of Christianity, when the followers of Christ were persecuted and murdered by law, or put to death by mob violence, duty required them to flee, and hide themselves in the dens and caves of the earth, and to inhabit desert places, where they could not be found. So it was with the Covenanters of Scotland, in their day. And so it was with the Pilgrims who fled across the billowy deep to the uninhabited shores of America to hide away from their cruel murderers.

But who is trying to kill the Odd-fellows, that they must hide away in secret places? And why do they shut out not only "the halt and the maimed and the blind," but their own wives and daughters from the exalted privileges of their secret hiding place?

3. Furthermore, there is a secrecy spoken of in the Bible (Matt. 6: 1, 6) which we call the secrecy of humility; and refers to private prayer and alms-giving. That this is not the secrecy of the various lodges is evident from the proud, high-sounding titles their officers assume: "Most Puissant Grand Commander," "Right Reverend Grand Chaplain," "Right Excellent Grand King," "Grand High Priest," etc.

4. Again, it is sometimes urged that secret orders are right and proper because the privacy of modesty is essential to pure social life. But is the lodge a bath-room, or a privy, that it shuts the door, for fear of the indecent, personal exposure of the members?

There are two prominent causes of secretism or unnecessary secrecy. 1st. Wrong doing. "Every one that doeth evil hateth the light" (Jno. 3: 20). Robbers, murderers, thieves, seducers, counterfeiters, traitors, assassins, all practice and rely on secretism as a shield of defense. And if they can get inside of a lodge where all are sworn to conceal and never reveal the wrong doing of a brother, they can afford to pay for their lodg-ing. But the government and the people must suffer, and Justice must step aside, dishonored. Witness the Clan-na-Gael in the Cronin trial, and the New Orleans trial of the Mafia.

The second prominent cause of secretism is an inordinate desire to get in advance of others. "The engine of secrecy," the man says, "is a mighty power. I must learn to work it, and I will. Then I shall succeed in my life purposes." So he takes the required obligations and enters the lodge, and becomes a member of the class who are studying the finest methods of selfishness. He soon learns all the Satanic arts of the secret conclave. He can step in ahead of a friend, or strike an enemy in the dark, and be utterly undiscovered himself.

The vows and promises of the lodge are more binding than all other obligations. In taking them he breaks his allegiance to his country; his marriage vows are shattered, if he has a wife, and he has annulled his covenant with Christ, if a Christian, by joining himself in close fellowship with unbelievers. Many years ago I united a pleasant young couple in the holy bands of matrimony. Within six months the young wife came to me in great distress, and said "her husband had joined the Odd-fellows, and left her alone one evening in the week and would give no account of it." Thus secretism separated those whom God had joined together in one.

THE TERMS OF THE COMPACT.

BY W. O. TOBEY.

The only thing that kept the recent General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church from becoming a particeps criminis of Prof. Briggs' unsound views, was the simple and decided act of standing by the terms of the compact between it and the theological seminaries. That compact was to the effect that if the Assembly does not disapprove or veto the appointment of a man to a theological chair at its first meeting after such appointment, then the election stands, and that body can thereafter do nothing to remove the incumbent of the chair.

Some able men on the floor of the Assembly endeavored to construe this compact in all sorts of ways, to evade its terms and conditions. They tried to break the force of it in every way, so as to have Prof. Briggs escape the pinch of the disapproval of the Assembly and church. But the resolute and clear-headed President Patton, Chairman of the Committee on Theological Seminaries, held the Assembly to the terms of the compact. "If we are going to veto under the terms of the compact, we must veto in the terms of the compact," he insisted. Judge S. M. Breckenridge, who was translated from the floor of the Assembly, and is now with the church triumphant, most ably and convincingly showed the right and duty of abiding by the terms of the compact. The only fair and safe course, as he, too, insisted, was to veto now: "I am confronted with the fact," he said, "that if I abandon or fail to exercise this right to disapprove, I am giving up something which the church has committed to me, and which I cannot return to it as its faithful agent ought. Piety may degenerate into weakness, and kindness into imbecility, but neither of them permits, much less requires, the betrayal of a great trust."

These were among the last words of this faithful commissioner to the Assembly, "I think I have discharged my duty; I ask you to excuse me from further —— " His lips trembled, and in a few minutes his manly voice was silenced here, to be heard in the great Assembly on high.

Among other eminent men who stood firmly by the terms of the compact, was Elder John McCook of New York, who was as a "Daniel come to judgment." Never before was a layman more effective on the floor of the Assembly. Dr. Bartlett, of Washington, also spoke with great effect, and pithily showed that in these days the church is not hunting heretics, but heretics are hunting the church.

After much debate, the Assembly voted, by an overwhelming majority, to stand by the terms of the compact, and veto the appointment of Prof. Briggs, now, while it had the right and opportunity. Thus, a great and solemn duty was discharged, in the fear of God and for the maintenance of the truth in Christ.

I cannot help drawing a contrast between the noble and worthy course of the Assembly and that of the General Conference of the United Brethren in Christ. If this latter body had only stood by the terms of the compact of half a century which said: "There shall be no connection with secret combinations," what a glory would have rested upon the once-undivided church! But, unfortunately for its united testimony for the truth, that church began to complain of the terms of the constitution as too hard. The provision for change was pronounced unreasonable and impracticable. The pinch of the testimony for the truth was evaded by all manner of specious arguments and constructions, till the foundations of the citadel were undermined. I know what it is to experience all the chagrin, sadness, and hopelessness of seeing a once glorious church abandon its position, and yield to the deceit, weakness and easy ways of those who cry peace, when there is no peace. Oh, that the immortal dying words of Judge Breckenridge could have sounded in the ears of the General Conference at York:—"Piety may degenerate into weakness, and kindness into imbecility, but neither of them permits, much less requires, the betrayal of a great trust." If such a sentiment could have prevented the stampede of the United Brethren in Christ, what a defeat would the lodge have sustained at York! But these things are too painful for me, as I look back upon the faltering and rout of a grand wing of God's noble army of truth.

SUGGESTIONS FOR A CONCENTRATION OF REFORM WORK.

BY REV. M. A. GAULT.

I find in my field an increasing number who feel, with me that the danger from the growing influence of secret lodges is more and more alarming. The recent crimes of the Mafia of New Orleans, following so soon those of the Clan-na-Gael of Chicago, are attracting the nation's attention. Thus the anti-secret issue is likely to come rapidly to the front.

I find the number of communities desiring anti-secret lectures and literature are multiplying. Many ministers and public men, who do not dare to express openly their fears on this question, are condemning secretism in private. It is encouraging that the influence of the N. C. A. is being felt throughout our land. There are few communities where its agents or literature have not penetrated. Here, in Iowa, I come in almost daily contact with the results of the self-sacrificing labors of Bro. C. F. Hawley. Generations to come will appreciate, as the present cannot, the important testimony your Association is bearing for Christ's truth.

I cannot but feel that this evil will finally be destroyed by terrible revolutions and bloodshed. God has planted in every evil system the seeds of its own dissolution. The slave aristocracy of the South destroyed itself by its own arrogance and tyranny. The rum power is hasting the same suicidal death; and the indications are that the secret empire will likewise entomb itself by its attempt to control government and stifle liberty, and thus arouse public indignation against it.

Greater wisdom is needed to carry on your agitation than any other. I have long felt that in places where prejudice will not allow the square presentation of the issue, doors might be more easily opened by an introductory lecture on some more popular reform. If your agents would include collateral reforms, the work could not be charged as a "one-idea" movement. If we would reach the masses we must carry more than one line of goods. God will not allow us to carry these reforms in segments; God's law is a unit, and if we are in full sympathy with it, we cannot give our attention to one public evil and ignore the others. We need more unity along reform lines; we are fighting too much in squads, and are in danger of being flanked by the enemy. While the W. C. T. U. and Prohibitionists, in many instances, are using the devil's tactics of secretism, by affiliating with secret labor unions, and Good Templar conclaves, I think a safer and stronger union should be effected by your N. C. A. and our National Reform Association joining hands, and lifting up Christ's moral law as a standard for the people, and then bring the secret society question and all other public questions to that standard.

St. Charles City, Iowa.

HIGHER CRITICISM.

As the German universities, years ago, unsettled the faith of the churches and weakened the ministry by the conjectures of Strauss and Bauer, so they are at present doing the same work through the guesses of Kuenen and Willhausen. As the assault on the New Testament failed, so that they themselves admitted that their theories were not founded on fact, so the assault on the Old Testament is predestined to an intellectual rag bag. It is a great pity that our professors and preachers, in place of at once putting aside those theories, which, based on diction and syntax, set themselves against the unbroken traditions of three thousand years, are treating them with a respect to which they are in no wise entitled. The attorney who should dare to come into a justice court with the claim for five dollars, and no better evidence to sustain it than the higher critics have for their theorizings, would be laughed out of court; yet on such absurdly inadequate grounds, the faith of the Christian church throughout the Anglo-Saxon world is rudely questioned and sadly shaken. The professors of theology in Germany are no doubt learned in grammar, but the man who wishes to interpret the Bible needs the historic sense, the logical faculty and earnest Christianity as well. Until the theologians of Germany are able to command the respect of the German mind, and fill up their empty churches, it seems a pity that they should be sending our American churches along the same road which their own have traveled. Empty churches are as certain a result of such trifling with the Word of God as dispersion of darkness follows the rising of the sun.—Wheaton College Record.

ENORMOUS INFLUX OF ALIENS.

A statement issued by the government bureau of statistics shows that during the ten months ended April 30, 1891, 401,230 immigrants arrived in the United States, exclusive of arrivals from the British North American possessions and Mexico; and for the four months ended April 30, 1891, 171,049. The average daily arrival for the four months in question was almost 1,500, or an immigrant every minute in the twenty-four hours. There is something wrong with our immigrant laws or the way they are enforced when this wholesale unloading of foreigners on this country is allowed to go on month after month and year after year. It is safe to say that both the law and the methods of enforcing it are both decidedly defective. It is apparent to all that the hospitality extended by the United States to the people of other countries is woefully absurd. Vigorous and practical legislation is needed to correct this and the sooner it is enacted the better it will be for the United States. That the landing each day of 1,500 men, of whatsoever sort and condition, is dangerous to our social and industrial peace has long since been demonstrated. It is fair to presume that a large proportion of this number has been unsuccessful in life in their own countries, and that they will be far from successful in this country. A greater per centage of them are ignorant, stupid or vicious and belong to a class we can ill afford to welcome to our shores. They were failures at home and they continue failures here.—Chicago Globe.

"DE TROUBLE IN DE CHURCH."

There seems to be a sort of craze for secret orders. Time and money which ought to be given to the Lord are given to these societies. Let the choice be between a prayer meeting and a meeting of one of these organizations, and many church members would neglect the church meeting for the other. An instance is still in our mind. The weekly church prayer meeting and that of a society met on successive evenings. Quite a number of church members who were not present at the prayer meeting were present at the other meeting. If we are to judge men by their fruits, then we must judge that their love of Christ is not as strong as it ought to be. The following which shows the condition of things among the colored people, shows also the condition of things among the whites:

"An old colored preacher was asked how his church was getting on, and his answer was: 'Mighty poor, mighty poor, brudder.' 'What is the trouble?' And he replied: 'De 'cieties, 'cieties. Dey is jist drawin' all de fatness an' marrow out'en de body an' bones ob de blessed Lord's body. We can't do nuffin' widout de 'ciety. Dar is de Lincum 'Ciety, wid Sister Jones an' Brudder Brown to run it; Sister Williams mus' march in front ob de Daughters ob Rebecca. Den dere is de Dorcases, de Marthas, de Daughters ob Ham, an de Liberian Ladies.' 'Well, you have the brethren to help the church,' we suggested. 'No, sah, dere am de Masons, de Odd-fellows, de Sons ob Ham, and de Oklahoma Promised Land Pilgrims. Why, brudder, by de time de brudders and sisters pays all de dues, and 'tends all de meetins', dere is nuffin' left for Mount Pisgah church but jist the cob; de corn has all been shelled off an' frowed to dese speckled chickens.'"

Much as we may wish to disguise the fact, it is a fact nevertheless that secret societies are sapping the spiritual life of our churches. "No man can serve two masters." Where one's treasure is there also will his heart be. The person who puts his time and money in outside organizations will soon find his heart somewhere else besides in the church.—Messiah's Herald, Boston.

THE GOSPEL, AND THE GOSPEL ONLY.

A distinguished minister in a most eloquent address linked the two names Koch and Booth together, and declared that they were entitled to go down to immortality hand-in-hand in view of the wonderful discoveries they had made. One had found a remedy for the lung microbe and the other for the slum microbe. Well, one of these remedies has already come to grief. How long shall we have to wait to know about the other? There is a great lesson in the booms to which we have referred. Let the public understand that disease and poverty are mediate or immediate results of sin, and there is no new remedy for sin. The only antidote that can possibly meet the case is the Gospel or Cross of Christ, and this remedy cannot even be applied with any such rapidity and effect as to bring about a social millennium within a short time. Over 1800 years of earnest effort has only touched the fringe of the world's great need. The only thing we can do is to use the remedy and patiently wait.—Christian Commonwealth.

THE "MAKE UP" OF THE SUNDAY NEWS PAPER.

The New York Mail and Express has been devoting some attention to the contents of the Sunday newspapers of New York. Eleven of these newspapers, it says, devoted 52¾ columns to crimes; 328 columns to gossip, sports and sensations; about 600 columns to news, politics, etc., and one and one half columns to religious matters. Only three of the eleven gave any space to religion, and the largest space accorded by any one paper was seven-eighths of a column. The saddest fact about the matter is that the majority of people want precisely the kind of mental pabulum afforded them by these Sunday sheets.

THE POWER OF CHRISTIANITY.

Colonel Ingersoll asserts that "the church is no longer a power in the thinking world." And yet "the thinking world" knows that never in the history of Christianity has it exerted so great a power for good as it does to-day. More men and women are imbued with its spirit, love and charity, and the Christian graces are more universal and practical than ever before, and enter into both the individual life and the life of the nations. Colonel Ingersoll and all his class of reformers are careful to keep close under its influences, and every day in the peace and good order of society reap its benefits. If Christianity or the church representing it is not a potent factor, or if heathenism is better, Colonel Ingersoll and his philosophers should be able to point to something better where Christianity has not molded the destinies of the people.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

FREEMASONRY—IS IT ANTAGONISTIC TO CHRIST?

BY REV. E. W. BRUCE.

At the Wesleyan Methodist church in this city, last Sunday evening, the pastor, Rev. E. W. Bruce, addressed a good sized audience, taking for his theme "Freemasonry and Kindred Secret Orders—their relation to the Church of Christ."

The speaker said that he was not alone in expressing belief that secret associations were evil in their tendency, and dangerous to both church and State, but such men as Joseph Cook and others of our best thinking men are outspoken in their belief on this line. The speaker said that for want of time he would only be able to discuss the character of Freemasonry, and chose that institution as it was evidently the prolific mother of all the rest and possessed more objectionable features than its progeny. He quoted only from the highest standard Masonic authorities such as Mackey, Sickels, Macoy, Chase, Webb, Morris, Steinbrenner, and from the work entitled "Ecco Orienti," published by Redding & Co., of New York.

The speaker argued that Freemasonry was antagonistic to Christianity, from four considerations:

1. It ignores the name of Christ and refuses to acknowledge the divine authenticity of the Bible.

In the charge at the opening of the fourth, or Mark Master's degree, the Scripture lesson is taken from the 2nd chapter of 1st Peter, and the name of Jesus Christ is expunged. The 7th or Royal Arch degree takes its Scripture lesson at opening from 2 Thess. 3d chapter, and twice expunges the name of Christ, and the lesson stops just short of another verse which contains the name of Christ.

Mr. Steinbrenner in his history of the chapter, page 44, says: "We cannot admit the name of the so-called Messiah to appear in any of our Scriptural quotations or ceremonies." In an address by Past Grand Master Parvin, before the Grand Lodge of Illinois, he is reported in the Masonic Trowel as saying: "A brother cannot offer a distinctively Christian prayer in a Masonic lodge without doing violence to the principles of the order."

Mr. Chase, in his Digest of Masonic Law, gives an account of a resolution presented by the Grand Lodge of Ohio, before the Supreme Council of the United States, requiring candidates to express a belief in the divine authenticity of the Bible. The resolution was referred to a committee whose report contained the following: "The Jews, the Chinese, the Turks, each reject either the New Testament or the Old, or both, and yet we see no good reason why they should not be made members. In fact, Blue Lodge Masonry has nothing whatever to do with the Bible. It is not founded on the Bible; if it was it would not be Masonry; it would be something else."

2. It is itself a system of religious faith claiming superiority to every other religious system.

Mr. Steinbrenner says: "She can and will educate the pious man to that higher religion—that religion in which all men can agree."

Mr. Mackey speaks of the candidate as "On the threshold of this new Masonic life, in darkness, helplessness and ignorance," and adds, "he comes inquiringly to our door seeking the new birth."

The same author in speaking of the common gavel, says: "We, as Masons, make use of it for the purpose of divesting our hearts and consciences of all the vices and superfluities of life, thereby fitting our minds as living stones for that spiritual building, that house not made with hands," etc.

The same author says concerning the meaning of acacian, that a Mason who lives "in strict obedience to the obligations and precepts of the fraternity is free from sin."

In harmony with their system of religious faith as taught by their authors, every Mason who dies and is buried with Masonic ceremonies, whether he is a saloon-keeper or respectable citizen, is declared to have gone to the "Grand Lodge above," etc.

3. In keeping their obligations the members of the fraternity are educated in either falsehood or deception. The secret workings of the lodge have been for years made public; and when a wife asks her husband, or a friend asks a friend, "Is it true that when you are initiated you are divested of your outer garments, blind-folded, and had a cable-tow tied around your arm, and neck, and body, in taking the three degrees?" He seeks to stop the questioning by the laugh of ridicule, or tramples upon his conscience and flatly denies what he knows to be true.

4. The penalties attached to the oaths according to the Masonic authority, "Ecco Orienti," are un-Scriptural, un-Christian, and inhuman.

The speaker here recited the penalties attached to the violation of the oaths in the three Blue Lodge degrees, according to the authority above mentioned, and added:

"In each case he is required to blasphemously to kiss an open Bible which absolutely forbids such proceedings."—Central New York News. Rome, N. Y.

NEW ENGLAND LETTER.

Summer thoughts.—The elm—"Anniversary week" only multiplied, not dying.—The British Citizen and the "baccarat scandal."—The Legislature and the endowment orders.—An astonishing statement.

Now is the time for four o'clock concerts—I mean four o'clock A. M.—but how many take the trouble to rouse up from their morning nap and listen. Yet they are well worth listening to. First, a few faint, opening trills, followed by one or two solos; then the chorus from all the tree tops, the twitterings and chirpings of sparrows and swallows and chipping-birds, that don't happen to be prima-donnas, and can't sing the grand solos, but are just as well content as if they could; for birds, unlike mortals, never make themselves miserable by aspiring to be what they are not. "Happy as the birds," we say, and happy they ought to be. How must it seem, for instance, to stand balanced on the topmost bough of some lofty elm, hovering between earth and sky? And yet if modern science should at last succeed in emulating the birds of the air by discovering some way of flying, should we be, any of us,

"Nearer the secret the wise men knew,
Nearer the dawning where dreams come true,"

than we are now? I fear not.

Speaking of elms, what the cedar was to Lebanon, the elm is to a New England landscape. It is not only one of the most majestic of trees, but it is one of the most thoroughly companionable and friendly. The pine seems like some hoary sybil, eternally weighted with a burden of prophecy, that it is always endeavoring to utter forth with the sighing winds for an interpreter; the maple, on the contrary, has a certain light, airy, fluttering grace that reminds you of a society belle, full of coquettish smiles and gay bon-mots; but the elm, with the birds resting in her branches, and the flowers springing at her feet, is more like a queenly house-mother in whom everything that is sympathetic and helpful, as well as sweet and gracious, meet together; who has heaven around her head, while her daily life is rooted in the soil of earthly, homely duties. Wellesley and vicinity are adorned with many fine specimens of this grandest of American forest trees; among them some that are old enough for the familiar legend to be attached to them that Gen. Washington once rested under their shadow. The number of trees which he is said to have thus honored during his visits to New England, equal the old houses where he spent a night, and is quite a serious reflection on the physical abilities, or rather disabilities, of the father of his country. I think in my childhood I had a dim idea of him as getting tired very easily, and perpetually sitting down under trees to rest.

An exchange thinks it isn't quite accurate to say that the glory of Boston's Anniversary week has departed, when, in fact, it is the seed from which has sprung all the great religious assemblages in Saratoga and other places outside of New England; and it also notices the fact that at these meetings topics of practical reform are fast taking the place of those exclusively theological. This should be cheering to us,—first, as Christians who believe that the Gospel is an eminently practical thing; and, secondly, to us as New Englanders. I for one am well satisfied to see my native section distanced by her Western competitors in the race for things material, if she can only keep the place she once held as the nation's mentor; its conscience in any moral question that comes to the front. But conscience! Ah me. Here are the papers telling, in black and white, how the Boston Association Club played its first Sunday game at Columbus last week, and was beaten—as it deserved to be.

The British-American Citizen was never accused of any Puritan leanings, and therefore it is not surprising that it treats the "baccarat scandal"—at least so far as the Prince of Wales is concerned—as if it was a very trivial matter for the heir to the British throne to be, at the age of fifty, proved an inveterate gambler, who even carries the paraphernalia of the card table about with him wherever he goes, "as a Mohammedan carries his praying carpet," to quote the sarcastic comment of the London News. Perhaps the Citizen only reflects the general opinion of American Britishers in Boston; but, even if so, it has some readers of New England birth and training with whom its influence would be immensely increased and strengthened if it would only have an occasional attack of the spirit of old-fashioned Puritanism.

The liquor men now say that the repeal of the bar law is increasing their sales. It will be remembered that while this repeal was pending the shoe was very decidedly on the other foot. Then it was all in the interests of temperance and the poor drunkard to have it repealed; but the haste with which they are now complying with the new law, contrasted with their dilatory action when obliged to substitute tables for bars, shows very plainly which they consider most favorable for their traffic. Gov. Russell can divide the honors (?) of its repeal with Senator Donavan, to whom he presented the quill used in signing the document. Will Massachusetts send the same kind of men to make her laws in 1892—mere tools of the bar-room, as the majority have proved? There is no question but that a strong effort will be made by the endowment orders to send those who are committed in their favor by themselves, having personal investments at stake. This partly explains why the question was so disgracefully shirked by the last Legislature. Too many of the members had themselves been seized with the mania for gambling in these concerns, and thus the question of doing away with them became less a matter of public than private interest.

The following item among the "Jottings" in the Transcript shows how public opinion is turning: "What a delicious satire on all the flummery of the secret societies is that attributed to Lord Brougham. He was attending a Chapter of the order of St. Patrick, and seeing a herald bungle through his duties, said, 'The foolish man does not know his own foolish business.'" Surely this may be said of Mr. Wellcome Arnold Greene, the Masonic author of "The Rhode Island and Providence Plantations," an extract from which was lately sent me by an anti-secret friend. It certainly contained more falsehoods to the square inch than any production of the same length that I ever before read. William Morgan is transformed into Henry Morgan; but his errors in names and dates are nothing beside his unblushing falsifications of the most well-known historical facts. "The fever"—the Anti-masonic excitement—says Mr. Arnold in closing his remarkable account, "had its run and passed away, and to-day no man knows the cause of its inception or the reason of its termination."

Masonry has certainly done all it can to make this astonishing statement a fact; but

"Truth crushed to earth shall rise again,
Th' eternal years of God are hers."

These grand lines of Bryant have been quoted thousands of times, and will be quoted thousands of times more, but they can never be worn threadbare, any more than "Now I lay me," or "The Apostles' Creed." ELIZABETH E. FLAGG.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 10, 1891.

Some very plain talk on the subject of temperance was indulged in at the anniversary meeting of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, held here Sunday afternoon, and, as far as can be learned, it is generally endorsed by the friends of the temperance cause. It seems that last year some of the big brewers and malsters of this country requested the State Department to ascertain for them the best means for introducing their products into South and Central America, and that the department at once went to work, through the U. S. Consuls, obtained the information asked for, and had it printed in book form for distribution among those who had asked for the information. Mrs. Maggie B. Platt succeeded in getting a copy of this book, and upon it she based a very stirring address.

She said: "For years the temperance people have been besieging Congress with petitions begging for a commission of inquiry into the alcoholic liquor traffic, but their petition has never been granted. The liquor men do not want the traffic investigated, because they know that if the calcium light of public investigation be turned upon their business, it would expose such festering corruption, such depths of infamy, such demoralization of homes, and degradation of human beings as would arouse a cyclone of popular indignation. . . .

"The government, through its State department, doffs its hat to the liquor interest, and says, 'Certainly, gentlemen, certainly; your request shall be complied with with pleasure,' and forthwith the machinery of the government is set in motion to drum up trade for American brewers in other lands. If that is 'cordial sympathy with all well-directed efforts,' we want no more of it. Open-handed, barefaced hostility is better than such sympathy. The United States government, which we have delighted to honor, has stooped to make of itself a drummer for the beer trade. Such business is an insult to Christian womanhood, a burning disgrace to the nation, and a blistering shame to all Christendom. This government has not made for itself a hundred years of brilliant history that it may now, at the dawn of the twentieth century, fall from its high place among the nations to the low level of a brewery and dabbler in beer. Great is the fall of this government when it neglects that which it has declared should be the first concern of all good governments,—the virtue and sobriety of its people—and at the behest of the liquor traffic sets itself to work as a drummer for the beer trade."

After finishing her address, of which I have quoted but a small portion, Mrs. Platt presented a memorial addressed to the government requesting that it desist from further efforts to aid the brewers and liquor men, as that class of men are amply able to do their own correspondence, and the work is not in the line of duties of the honorable Secretary of State, and setting forth the fact that such work was an insult, which in the name of humanity and charity, the meeting protested against, and made the prediction that if it was continued the sun of this proud nation would set in blood, and woe, and shame. The memorial was adopted by a unanimous and rising vote, as expressing the sense of the meeting, which was a large one. It was also resolved to flood the next Congress with petitions asking for a commission to investigate the alcoholic liquor traffic.

A movement is on foot to carry a crowd from this city to the Christian Endeavor convention, which is to be held at Minneapolis, Minnesota, July 9 to 12. Last year Washington sent to St. Louis 54 delegates, which formed the largest delegation from an Eastern city, and this year the expectation is to send 200 delegates. *

REFORM NEWS.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' ANNUAL CONVENTION.

ADDRESS OF THE NEW ENGLAND AGENT—"FRIGHTFUL SECRET RITES."

The Boston (Mass.) daily papers of June 5 contain a very fair synopsis of Rev. J. P. Stoddard's address before the Christian Workers' Annual Convention, in that city, on the previous day. We copy the Boston Herald's report:

Rev. J. P. Stoddard was introduced. He said: "The question of secret orders is a practical question confronting us. There are in Boston 1,126 secret societies, against 252 churches and church missions, an average of four or five lodges to every outspoken religious organization." From a colored chart Mr. Stoddard illustrated the growth and origin of these societies.

"Next to the Jesuits in order of age," said the speaker, "is the order of Freemasonry. Here," pointing to a house that was pictured at one side of the green fields at the base of the monument of orders, "is a peaceful home. Starting on this road, which leads directly from the home, the husband and wife walk on together until they reach a broad side road that branches off to Masonry. The husband follows this road, while the woman passes on to the church. She returns and gives him a glowing account of the services there, but when she asks what has been done at his lodge, she is informed that, under penalty of death, he can tell her nothing except that he has passed through the initiatory rites."

Mr. Stoddard described the passage of the candidate for Masonry through the room of preparation to the door of the inner temple, where he awaits the coming of the Grand Master from the East. Masonry demands that a man shall come to the door of the lodge seeking a new birth, which is the same as saying there is no other new birth. You may see now why the pastors of our great cities are so earnest in their endeavors to overthrow Masonry. The advance to the different degrees was very vividly delineated and illustrated with their attendant and terrible oaths. Is it any wonder, said he, that the man who has been through these frightful rites, says: "Keep back! keep back! I can tell you nothing." Mr. Stoddard stated that, as he himself had assisted at the performance of these rites more than a hundred times, he spoke with authority.

Passing to the initiation to the last degree, Mr. Stoddard illustrated, still with the aid of the chart, the figurative death and resurrection of the candidate, until, with the pronunciation of the final dictum, he is pronounced perfect, socially and religiously. He told of the total of 367 degrees of Masonry, giving the attendant text and rites, especially describing the sacramental rite.

The speaker stated that there are in the United States 547,072 Masons, and that during a recent canvass of Congress by himself, there was a majority of 56 members of secret lodges, and a minority of only 16 who belonged avowedly to any church. "There was war in heaven," said Mr. Stoddard, "and the devil was whipped and came down to earth to make war upon the children of God. The conflict, transferred to earth, is continued under the leadership of the dram-shop and the lodge. When the lodge goes up the church goes down, and when the church goes up the lodge goes down."

TWELVE YEARS A MISSIONARY IN THE SOUTH.

[The character of the Reform work in the South, and the necessity for it, is ably described in the following statement from Bro. Dillier, who for twelve years has devoted himself to Christ's service in that region, and whose wife is now again engaged in the same blessed work among these benighted people:]

I have been employed in missionary work for twelve years in the Southern mountains—the Smoky, Cumberland, and Alleghany ranges, from house to house on foot, on the top and sides, over cliffs and dim paths—here and there a house or log cabin only—with a pack containing tracts, papers and Testaments to give away, clothing and other necessaries—all on my back, from thirty to fifty pounds. These people own but very little or no property; about 40 per cent cannot read or write their own name, and were never reared to work for a living. But a goodly number are "moon-shiners," and are making whisky underhanded; others peddle it at night in the valleys, while some gamble and steal for a living; a few gather herbs, and hunt and trap, or have in charge some cattle brought to them in springtime, herding them until fall, when they are taken away to the owners in the valleys. Most of the mountain lands are owned by men in large cities, so that the mountaineers as a rule are only "squatters."

This work of love we do is a hand-to-hand missionary work.

It is unnecessary to speak of finances, as this people are too poor, and have nothing. Food and lodging, such as they have, is as free as the water; but support must be given elsewhere. Now this work is of the Lord, and we are only humble servants going in command of God, and entirely trusting, as we do, the work assigned us, for our support from the helping hands of God, according to his Word, the Bible. We are believing that the faithful of the Lord will not allow us to want while they hold some of the Lord Jesus Christ's in their charge.

After an experience of more than twelve years, with my heart full—as I was born and reared a strict Roman Catholic and in war time served three years—I found in my knapsack a Testament, which opened mine eyes to the truth; was converted Feb. 13th, 1866, in a country hotel four miles from Chicago, Ill.; suffered all but death for the cause and my Master, Jesus, more than once, and often severely.

Now for a report of the work, in short, done in the past twelve years, as found in my memorandum books from Sept. 9th, 1878, to Sept. 9th, 1890. Have traveled on cars 4,107 miles, on boat 1,332 miles, and on foot 9,453 miles. Gave away 178,425 pages of tracts and papers, 4 Bibles, 2 large and 21 small Testaments, and 10 books. Have preached in churches, school-houses, halls, private houses; in a tobacco barn, more than half filled with tobacco, drying; also in open air and in Gospel tents—in all, 727 times. Exhorted 264 times; 413 arose for prayers; 262 were converted; 11 were baptized; 3 are now preaching the Gospel; 116 sick were visited and prayed for; 7 anointed for healing, and so on. My wife went two journeys with me. She started on the 15th of August, 1878, one month before I did. It was some time in October when I caught up with her. Now listen to her own statement, as she speaks from the fullness of her heart.

JOSEPH X. DILLIER.

"DEARLY BELOVED ONES IN JESUS:—I will write just a few lines to let you know that my time is all for Jesus and his work, with my darling, beloved husband. It is a little sacrifice to what Jesus gave for us all. And you think it hard for me to give up my all for the work of Jesus! But no; it is the joy of my life to know he (my husband) is willing to be a servant in the name of One who gave his own body on the tree for us all. And I not give my dear husband? Yes, if I had ten, I would give them all in the good work of Jesus while I live. I would love to know some of you. Come and go with me, just one week, in places where I go in this city; then you would not sleep at night. Now go with my husband in the mountains and see what is to do there; and I wonder if God will not require their blood at your hands in judgment. Oh, think of it. What a mighty work is to be done by us all! I say, work while time lasts. The same Jesus that has taken care of me 22 years will do so to the end. So remember, dear friends, what you do for us you do for Jesus, and he will reward you for all in return. Yours, in hope of eternal life.

"MRS. ELLEN M. DILLIER."

Those who would like to write to Bro. Dillier or his wife, may address either at 29 Gold street, Chicago.

CORRESPONDENCE.

HIS HEART IN THE WORK.

MONTDALE, Pa.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—The Cynosure has been pregnant with better things than I can write. Still I feel so deeply on the various questions being introduced in your paper that utterance is relief.

Being the pastor of the only Baptist church which refuses lodge fellowship, and under censure by nearly all the clergy, and getting slapped in the face from week to week, I must find utterance. Many things are crowding my mind; of a few permit me to speak.

I am contemplating no retreat. Our pulpit still rings with anti-secrecy and anti-saloon doctrines, and must as long as I occupy it. Anti-secrecy is gaining with all the best element in and out of this church, and in others around us. Facts enough prove this. Our neighboring pastors, who are anti-lodge, say little. Some must praise the G. A. R. in their pulpits, with pains in the region of conscience—a sort of funeral colic, possibly.

I have just read Bro. Butler's stirring "Political Anti-secrecy." I am deeply moved by it. I cannot "do evil that good may come," for the best of all reasons. I cannot purposely do evil, and then I do not expect any real good as the result of my evil acts. I have no faith in such work. We must vote for prohibition, but must not vote for lodge-bound candidates, if we know them to be such; and then we must take all reasonable precaution.

I was present at the meeting at Oberlin, Ohio, when the American party organized in the First Congregational church. The venerable C. G. Finney (then very feeble) appeared in one of the sessions. Philo Carpenter, I. A. Hart, and many of the grandest men of our land were there. By invitation from Bro. Hart, I opened the convention with prayer. While many of these "braves" have fallen asleep, our senior editor and a few more of the reform veterans, (thank God!) still live to push on the work.

What is to be done by anti-secret Prohibitionists, is a difficult question. Must we be substantially disfranchised, or add another party to the many now on the field? Will our brethren who are right on all the living questions, organize, or "sit still" and "wait for the moving of the waters" until some one is carried in before us? I cannot vote a mixed ticket, and so must wait and see what the Lord will do for us.

Can the editor of the Cynosure give us light on "The Improved Order of Heplasephs?" I have their constitution and by-laws.

NATHAN CALLENDER.

A HIGHLY IMPORTANT BOOK.

YORK, Pa., June 8, 1891.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I see in the Cynosure the advertisement of a book entitled "History of Secret Societies and the Republican Party in France." And Gen. Phelps translated it, for the good of Americans and the United States of America.

I have examined a copy of this very valuable work, and I think all reformers should read it, to see just how dangerous military secret societies are. As we have about fifty secret armies in the United States at the present time, all of which are stronger and bolder than those of France, and some of which are five times as strong as the regular army of the United States, it seems to me that the terrible lessons to be found in this book of bloody conspiracies should be well studied by all patriotic Americans, without any loss of time.

I have several very interesting and highly important letters from Gen. Phelps in regard to this book and the secret societies of France and Europe.

The Supreme Court of the United States has declared all unauthorized military organizations treasonable. And President Harrison violated his oath of office, committed an overt act of treason, and made himself liable to impeachment, when he reviewed the Knights Templar, in the city of Washington, D. C.

The book I am writing about shows how a secret army, such as the Knights Templar, can be drawn up in order of battle in any city of Europe or the United States, without exciting the suspicion of the people or the authorities, until it is too late to resist their attack. All should read this warning book. EDWARD J. CHALFANT.

THE CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE INDORSED.

KIT, Ind., June, 1891.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—At a quarterly meeting of the United Brethren, held in Union Chapel, Wabash Circuit, Auglaize, Ind., annual conference, Saturday, May 23, 1891, a resolution was adopted, which read as follows:

"Resolved, That this quarterly conference indorse the Conference of Christians lately held in Chicago on the secrecy question, and that it has been helpful to us in our church struggle."

The resolution was discussed by T. S. Walter and Rev. William Miller, P. E. of the West District. Mr. Walker stated that he believed secret fraternities would be overthrown, and gave, as a reason for his belief, the words of Jesus—"Every plant that my heavenly Father hath not planted shall be rooted up;" and said that the very idea that God had planted the secret societies, that threaten to overthrow the government and divide the church of Christ, was revolting, even to the most humble mind. Therefore, to his mind, the time must come when they and the saloons would only be known in the history of the past.

